e He did not command them to make it so large, for he left the ordering of the proportions of the Building to their skill and choice; but he restrained them that they should make it no larger; lest they should hereafter make use of it to other purposes against himself: But those proportions differ much from those of Solomon's Temple, which was but Thirty Cubits high, only the porch was 120 Cubits high, and but 20 Cubits in breadth. Either therefore Solomon's Cubits were sacred Cubits, which were larger than the other, and these were but common Cubits. Or, the 60 Cubits of heighth are meant only of the Porch, which he would not have to be so high and magnificent as that of Solomon's was, lest they should be puffed up with it, and by degrees arrive at their former heighth and insolence. And the word rendred, breadth, may be, and is by some rendred more generally, the extension, or amplitude, or the length of it; it being improbable that the King should give orders about the breadth and none about the length of it.

4 With three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber f: and let the expences be given out of the kings house.

f As Solomon's Temple was built, 1 Kin. 6. 36. Whereof Darius was informed by some of the Jews, who also desired that it might be done in this manner.

5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored g, and † brought † Chal. go. again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place; and place them in the house of God.

g To the Jews; from whom possibly they had been taken, and were secured somewhere by those Enemies of the Jews, who had made the work of the Temple to cease by force or power. Ezra 4. 23.

6 Now therefore Tatnai, governour beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and † your companions the † Chal. their societies. Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence h:

h i. e. From hindering or discouraging the work.

7 Let the work of this house of God alone, let the governour of the Jews, and the elders of the Jews, build this house of God in his place.

8 Moreover, † I make a decree, what ye shall † Chal. by me a decree is do to the elders of the Jews, for the building of this house of God: that of the kings goods, even of made.

of the tribute beyond the river forthwith expences be given unto these men, that they be not † hindred i.

i From proceeding in their work for want of Money.

9 And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt-offerings of the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail.

10 That they may offer † sacrifices of sweet savours unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his sons.

11 Also I have made a decree, that whosoever shall alter this word, let timber be pulled down from his house, and being set up, † let him be hanged thereon, and let his house be made a dunghil for this.

12 And the God that hath caused his name to dwell there, destroy all kings and people that shall put to their hand, to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem: I Darius have made a decree, let it be done with speed.

13 Then Tatnai, governour on this side the River, Shethar-boznai, and their companions, according to that which Darius the king had sent, so they did speedily.

14 And the elders of the Jews built, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo k; and they built and finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the † commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes l, kings of Persia.

k This is a seasonable intimation that this great and unexpected success was not to be ascribed to chance, nor to the kindness or good humour of Darius, but unto God only, who by his Prophets had required and encouraged them to proceed in the work, and by his mighty power disposed Darius's heart to such kind and noble purposes and actions. l Who is thought to be either, 1. Xerxes Darius his Son and Successor, who was called also Artaxerxes, and Ahasuerus, who is here joined with his Father Darius, possibly because he favoured the Jews, and promoted their Cause with his Father, and saw to the Execution of his Fathers Decree, and was his Fathers Vice-Roy, if not made Co Emperour with his Fathers in his Life time, which was not unusual. Or, 2. Artaxerxes Longimanus, the Son of Xerxes, who was best known by the name of Artaxerxes, who is here joined with Cyrus and Darius, because though the temple was finished, as to the substance of the work, in Darius's Reign, v. 15. yet it was afterwards more fully compleated and adorned by Artaxerxes, as is evident from ch. 7. v. 20, 27. by whom Nehemiah was sent to Jerusalem with a large Commission and full Power to take care about the Building of the City, and all other things concerning the Jewish Nation and Religion.

15 And this house was finished on the third day of the month * Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

* Esth. 3. 13.

16 And the children of Israel, the priests and the Levites, and the rest of the † children of the captivity, kept the dedication of this house of God with joy.

† Chal. the sons of the transportation.

17 And offered at the dedication of this house of God, an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a sin-offering for all Israel, * twelve he-goats according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

* Ch. 8. 35.
1 Kin. 8. 63.
2 Chr. 7. 5.

18 And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem; † * as it is written in the Book of Moses.

† Chal. according to the writing.
* Numb. 3. 6. & 8. 9.

19 And the children of the captivity kept the passover * upon the fourteenth day of the sixth month.

* Exod. 12. 6.

20 For the priests and the Levites were purified together, all of them were pure, and killed the passover, for all the children of the captivity, and for their Brethren the priests, and for themselves.

21 And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen m of the land, to seek the LORD God of Israel, did eat:

m i.e. Such as had forsaken that filthy and Idolatrous Religion of the Heathens and were proselyted to the Jewish Religion: for such were allowed to eat the Passover, Exod. 12. 48. Numb. 9. 14.

22 And kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy: for the LORD had made them joyful, and turned the heart of the King of Assyria n unto them to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

n i.e. Of the King of Persia, which was now king of Assyria also, or Emperor of that vast and famous Assyrian Empire: which was first subdued by the King of Babylon who therefore is somewhere called the Assyrian; and for the same reason the Persian Monarch is here so called emphatically, to note the great Power and Goodness of God in turning the hearts of these great Monarchs, whose predecessors had been the chief persecutors and oppressors of Gods people.

CHAP. VII.

1 NOw after these things, in the reign of * Artaxerxes a king of Persia, Ezra * the son of Seraiah b, the son of Azariah, the son of Hilkiah,

* Neh. 2. 1.
* 1 Chr. 6. 14.

a The same of whom he speaks ch. 6. 14. b. i. e. His Grandson. Here are divers persons omitted for brevity sake, which may be supplied out of 1 Chr. 6. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

2 The son of Shallum, the son of Zadok, the son of Ahitub,

3 The son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth,

4 The son of Zeraiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki,

5 The son of Abishua, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the chief priest:

6 This Ezra went up from Babylon c, and he was a ready scribe d in the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given, and the King granted him all his request, according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him e.

c With the Kings consent and Commission. d i. e. A learned and expert Doctor: for in that sense the word Scribe is oft used, as Jer. 8. 8. Mat. 7. 29. & 17. 10. & 23. 2, 13. Mark 12. 28. compare with Mat. 22. 35, 36. e i. e. By the Grace and Favour of God so disposing the heart of the King.

7 And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and * the Nethinims unto Jerusalem f, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king.

* Ch. 2. 43.

f This is here related in the general, but how he procured this is particularly related hereafter.

8 And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month which was in the seventh year of the king.

9 For upon the first day of the first month † began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him.

10 For Ezra had prepared his heart g, to seek h the law of the LORD, and to do it, and to teach in Israel i statutes and judgments.

g Or, directed, &c. i. e. He had set his mind and affections upon it, and made it his chief design and business. h. i. e. To search and find out the true sense and meaning of it, and thence to learn what sins or errors were to be reformed, and what duties were to be performed. i The order of things in this verse is very observable: first he endeavours to understand Gods Law and Word, and that not for curiosity or ostentation, but in order to practice: next he conscientiously practiseth what he did understand, which made his Doctrine much more effectual: and then he earnestly desires and labours to instruct and edefie others, that they also might know and do it.

11 Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even a scribe of the words of the commandments k of the LORD and of his statutes to Israel.

k The Phrase seems emphatical, noting that he explained both the words and the things: For the Jews in the Land of their Captivity had in a great measure lost both their Language, and the Knowledge of Gods Commands, and therefore Ezra and his Companions instruct them in both: of which see more on Nehem. 8. 8.

12 Artaxerxes king of kings, ‖ unto Ezra the priest, priest, a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, and at such a time.

13 I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests, and Levites in my realm, which are minded of their own free will to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent † of the king, and of his * seven counsellors l to enquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God in which is in thine hand n:

l His chief Nobles and Officers of State: of whom see also Esth. 1. 10, 14. m i. e. To make enquiry into all abuses and deviations from your Law, and to redress them. n Which is now and always in thy hand, being the matter of thy daily study and exercise; which thou now carriest along with thee, the Interpretation whereof belongeth unto thee.

15 And to carry the silver and the gold which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, whose habitation is in Jerusalem.

* Ch. 8. 25.

16 * And all the silver and gold that thou canst find o in all the province of Babylon, with the free-will-offering of the people p, and of the priests offering willingly for the house of their God, which is in Jerusalem.

o i. e. Procure, as that word is used, Gen. 6. 8. & 26. 12. Psal. 84. 3. & 119. 162. Prov. 1. 13. & 2. 5. & 3. 13. Whatsoever thou canst get of my Subjects by way of free gift. p To wit, of Israel.

17 That thou maist buy speedily with this money, bullocks, rams, lambs, with their meat-offerings, and their drink-offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the house of your God, which is in Jerusalem:

18 And whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver, and gold, that do after the will of your God.

19 The vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, those deliver thou before the God of Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God q, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow it out of the kings treasure house.

q Towards the Reparation, or adorning, or compleating of it. See the notes on ch. 6. 14.

21 And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily.

22 Unto an hundred talents of silver, and to an hundred † measures of wheat, and to an hundred baths of wine, and to an hundred baths of oil, and salt without prescribing how much r:

r Because it was but of mean price, and of very common and necessary use in all their sacrifices, Lev. 2. 13. Mark 9. 49.

† Heb whatsoever is of the decree.

23 † Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven: for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons s?

s For the omission of any part of his Worship occasioned by my neglect. This danger and duty he discerned, partly by natural light, and principally by the Information of Ezra, ch. 8. 22. who had the Kings Ear and Heart.

24 Also we certifie unto you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute or custom upon them.

25 And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God that is in thine hand t, set magistrates and judges which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God, and teach ye them that know them not.

t i. e. Which God hath put into thy Heart, and which appears in the works of thy hand. Wisdom is sometimes ascribed to the Hands, as Psal. 78. 72. See my Latin Synopsis on Gen. 48 14. Or, by the Wisdom of God, he means the Law of God, which was said to be in his hand, v. 14.

26 And whosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king u, let judgment be executed speedily upon him, whether it be unto death, or † to banishment, or to confiscation of goods, or to imprisonment.

u To wit, concerning these matters. Or, which Law of God is by this my sanction now become my Law also, to which I expect their punctual and ready obedience. For as for the Civil Laws of the Empire, Ezra neither was skilful in them, nor was intrusted with the execution of them, which was committed to other hands.

27 Blessed be the LORD God of our Fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the kings heart, to beautifie the house of the LORD, which is in Jerusalem.

28 And hath extended mercy unto me before the king, and his counsellors, and before all the kings mighty princes: and I was strengthened as the hand of the LORD my God was upon me, and I gathered together out of Israel, chief men to go up with me.

CHAP. VIII.

1 THese are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the genealogy of them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king.

2 Of the sons of Phineas; Gershom: of the sons of Ithamar; Daniel: of the sons of David; Hattush.

3 Of the sons of Shechaniah; of the sons of * Pharosh a; Zechariah: and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males b an hundred and fifty.

* Ch. 2. 3.

a i. e. One of the Sons of Pharosh: whereby he is differenced from the other Shecaniah, v. 5. b Though the Males only be expressed here, and in the succeeding verses, yet it is more than probable they carried the Women along with them, as they did carry little ones, as it is expressed here, v. 21.

4 Of the sons of Pahath-moab; Elihoenai, the son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males.

5 Of the sons of Shechaniah; the son of Jahaziel c, and with him three hundred males.

c Either his only son, or the most eminent of his sons, and therefore so called here.

6 Of the sons also of Adin; Ebed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males.

7 And of the sons of Elam; Jeshaiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males.

8 And of the sons of Shephatiah; Zebadiah the son of Michael, and with him fourscore males.

9 Of the sons of Joab; Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males.

10 And of the sons of Shelomith; the son of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males.

11 And of the sons of Bebai; Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males.

12 And of the sons of Azgad; Johanan ‖ the son of Hakkatan, and with him an hundred and ten males.

‖ Or, the youngest son.

13 And of the last sons of Adonikam, whose names are these, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with him threescore males.

14 Of the sons also of Bigvai; Uthai, and ‖ Zabbud, and with them seventy males.

‖ Or, Zaccur, as some read.

15 And I gathered them together to the river that runneth to Ahava d; and there ‖ abode we in tents three days: and I viewed the people, and the priests, and found there none of the sons of Levie.

d Or, the river of Ahava, as it is called, v. 21. 31. By comparing of these places it seems that Ahava was the name both of the River, and of the Town or place by which it ran. Either this was that River which other Writers call Adiava, which runs to Assyria, which thence is called Adiabene: or some other River running into Euphrates. e To wit, who were simple Levites, and not Priests. And therefore the Levites, mentioned, chap. 7. 7. by anticipation, were not yet come to him.

16 Then sent I for Eliezer f, for Ariel, for Shemaiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meshullam, chief men: also for Jojarib, and for Elnathan, men of understanding g.

f To come to me, and go along with me to Jerusalem:

g Who seem to have had more knowledge than pious zeal for God, and his House and solemn Worship, which was confined to Jerusalem.

17 And I sent them with commandment g unto Iddo the chief h, at the place Casiphia i, and † I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren the Nethinims, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring unto us ministers for the house of our God.

g Which he might do, partly by virtue of that authority which he had over them by his Priesthood: and partly by that authority which he either had received, or could easily procure from the King to that purpose. h The Head of the rest, either by Ecclesiastical Order or Government, which the Persian Kings allowed to the Jews: or by some Grant or Commission from the King. i Not a place near the Caspian lake, as some guess from the likeness of the names; for that was at too great a distance for his present purpose, but some other place not far from Ahava: where he knew that there was a Colledge, or considerable company of Levites together.

18 And by the good hand of our God upon us, they brought us a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel and Sherebiah, with his sons, and with his brethren, eighteen:

19 And Hashabiah, and with him Jeshajah of the sons of Merari, his brethren, and their sons, twenty.

* See ch. 2. 43. 20 *Also of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites k, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

k The Gibeonites who were devoted to this service by Joshua and the Princes of his time, Jos. 9. 21. and are said to be appointed by David and his Princes, because they were confirmed by them in their former Office, and more particularly applied to the several services of the Temple: though this be not distinctly related in 1 Chr. 24. & 25. & 26. because his business there was to give an account only of the new constitutions and alterations made by David in those matters.

21 Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river Ahava, that we might afflict our selves before our God, to seek of him a right way l for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.

l i. e. A safe and prosperous journey: or such a way and course as might be best for us.

22 For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of Soldiers and horsemen, to help us against the enemy in the way: because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good, that seek him, but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So we fasted and besought our God for this, and he was entreated of us m.

m He gave us some assurance of his gracious Answer to our request.

24 Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah; and ten of their brethren with them n; n Or, and Sherebiah, &c. who were the Levites mentioned v. 18. who were joyntly intrusted together with the Priests with the charge of carrying these things carefully and safely. The particle, and, is oft understood.

25 And weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered.

26 I even weighed unto their hand, six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents:

27 Also twenty basons of gold, of a thousand drams, and two vessels of † fine copper, † precious as gold o.

o Heb. desirable as gold, not that it was of equal price and worth with it, but for its incomparable excellency in its kind, and for its great rarity, for which cause there were only two vessels of that sort.

28 And I said unto them, Ye are † holy unto the LORD, the vessels are † holy also, and the silver and the gold are a free will offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests, and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God.

31 Then we departed from the river of Ahava, on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem, and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way p.

p To wit, in the direct way. Whereby it may be conjectured, that God directed them to fetch a little compass and to go a more uncouth and unsuspected way, as they had begged of God, v. 21.

32 And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 Now on the fourth day was the silver, and the gold, and the vessels weighed in the house of our God, by the hand of Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest, and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas, and with them was Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of Binnui, Levites:

34 By number and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written at that time.

35 † Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity q, offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he-goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

† Heb. They that came out of the captivity, the sons of the transportation, so Gr.

q To wit, these new-comers, whom God had safely conducted hither.

36 And they delivered the kings commissions unto the kings lieutenants, and to the governours on this side the river; and they ‖ furthered the people, and the house of God r.

r In the adorning and furnishing of it with these vessels and other conveniences; and in promoting Gods Worship and service therein.

CHAP IX.

1 NOw when these things were done, the princes a came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites have not separated themselves from the people of the lands b, doing according to their abominations c, even of the Canaanite, the Hittite, the Perizzite, the Jebusite, the Ammonite, the Moabite, the Egyptian, and the Amorite.

a Who feared God, and understood that Ezra was come with large Commission from the King, and with this design, to reform all diforders, whereof this was not the least. b i. e. From the Heathen Nations round about them, which God had expressly conamanded them to do, Deut. 7, 2, 3. c To wit, either, 1. Marrying promiscuously whomsoever they liked, as the Heathens used to do: Or, 2. Imitating them in their Idolatrous or other wicked practices, into which they were drawn by their Heathenish Affinities. Although they are not charged with any other crime besides their Marriage in the following account of it.

2 For they have taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons: so that the holy seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands d: yea, the hand of the princes and rulers e hath been chief in this trespass.

d This they had done, either, 1. In the Land of their Captivity, into which these People were carried as well as others, as appears from Jer. 23. 9, &c. Or rather, 2. Since their return, as may be gathered from v. 8, 9, 10, 14. e Who should have restrained the People from this sin, by their authority and example, and by doing otherwise, made the sin more general, and involved themselves and the Nation in the guilt of it.

3 And when I heard this thing, I rent my garment, and my mantle f, and pluckt off the hair of my head, and of my beard g, and sat down astonied h.

f Both my inner and my upper garment. g In testimony of my great grief and indignation; which was usual among all those Eastern and ancient People, wherein he did not transgress that Law, Levit. 19. 27. Deut. 14. 1. because he did not shave off all the hair, but only plucked off some hairs. h partly for grief and shame at the sin; and partly for fear of some great, and dreadful Judgment which he expected and feared for it.

4 Then were assembled unto me i, every one that that trembled at the words of the God of Israel k, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away l, and I sat astonied until the evening sacrifice m.

s To joyn with me both in lamenting the sin, and in endeavouring the redress of it. k i. e. Who stood in awe of God, and of his Word, and durst not violate his commands; or who feared his threatnings against those that did so, and trembled for fear of God's Judgments upon them, and upon the whole Land for their sakes, as the following words imply. Compare Isa. 66. 2, 5. l To wit, into Captivity, and were safely returned from it, and yet were not reformed either by their former Affliction, or by their latter deliverance. m When the People used to Assemble together. See Psal. 141. 2. Acts 3. 1.

5 And at the evening sacrifice, I arose from my ‖ heaviness, n and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God, n i. e. From that mournful posture, v. 4. and put my self into the posture of a Petitioner. Or, by reason of my heaviness, or affliction. Having mourned for the sin, I considered that was not sufficient, and that God expected the confession and amendment of it, and therefore I fell to prayer.

6 And said, O my God, I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for our iniquities o are increased over our head p, and our ‖ trespasses grown up unto the heavens.

o He includes himself in the number of the transgressors not only by a Rhetorical figure called Communicatio, but guilty in this kind: and partly because the Princes and Priests, and so many of the People having done this, the guilt was now become National. p Like deep Waters, in which we are as it were drowned, and ready to perish. Compare Psal. 38. 4.

7 Since the days of our fathers, have we been in a great trespass unto this day q, and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day.

q We are not purged from the guilt and filth of our Fathers sins, but we are still feeling the sad effects of their sins in the continuing Captivity of a great number of our Brethren; and we are still repeating the same sins.

8 And now for a † little space r grace hath been shewed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant to escape s, and to give us a ‖ nail t in his holy place u, that our God may lighten our Eyes x, and give us a little reviving in our bondage y:

r It is but a little while since God hath delivered and restored us, and yet we are already returned to our former sin and folly. Or thus, we have enjoyed this favour but a little while, and now we are sinning it away, and shortening our own happiness. s That by his favour many of us should escape out of Captivity, whom he calls but a remnant, because the far greatest part of the Israelitish Nation were yet in Captivity. t i. e. Either, 1. A just and merciful Prince of our own Nation and Religion: such being compared to Nails or Pins, as Isa. 22. 23. Or rather, 2. Some kind of settlement: whereas before we were tossed and removed from place to place as our Masters pleased. It is a metaphor from Tents, which are fastened by Cords and Nails, or Pins. u i. e In this holy Land, as the Land of Judah is called, Zech. 2. 12. Or, in Jerusalem, which is called The holy City, Neh. 11. 1, 18. Dan. 9. 24. which is peculiarly mentioned, because of the Temple, which was the Nail which fastened their Tents, and gave them some ground of hopes to continue in their Land. x i. e. That he might revive and comfort our hearts. For as darkness is oft put for a state of sorrow and affliction; so light is put for joy and comfort. y For we are not quite delivered, but still wear our fetters upon us, being even here in subjection to our former Lords.

9 For we were bondmen z, yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia a, to give us a reviving b, to set up the house of our God, and † to repair the desolations thereof c, and to give us † a wall d in Judah and Jerusalem.

z i. e. In greater bondage than that in which we now are. a i. e. Hath given us to find favour in their eyes. b To recover us from the grave of dreadful calamities in which we lay like dead men and dry bones, Ezek. 37. 1, &c. c To wit, of the Temple; either to build the house where there was only an heap of the ruins of the old Temple. Or rather, 2. To frequent and celebrate the Worship of God in that place, which hath long lain like a desolate and neglected place. For the building of the House, was mentioned in the next foregoing words. d Heb. an hedge, or a fence; either, 1. The Wall built about Jerusalem. But it is probable that was not yet built, as we shall see by the following History. Besides, this fence is intimated to be as much a fence to the rest of Judah, as to Jerusalem: Or, 2. The favour and protection of the Kings of Persia, whose Edicts on their behalf were under God their security against all those enemies wherewith they were encompassed. Or, 3. The powerful and gracious Providence of God, which had brought them together, and planted them in their own Land, and watched over them from time to time.

10 And now, O our God, what shall we say after this e? for we have forsaken thy commandments, e What Apology can we make for our selves after thou hast conferred such great and high favours upon us, and we have so grossly abused them?

11 Which thou hast commanded † by thy servants the prophets, saying, The land unto which ye go to possess, it is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people f of the lands g, with their abominations, which have filled it † from one end to another, with their uncleanness.

f This notes the cause or matter of this uncleanness. The Land was not unclean in it self, but only polluted by the filthiness of its Inhabitants. g Or, of these Lands, which are round about it. This Land is as corrupt as any of the rest of the Heathen Nations.

* Exod 23. 32. Deut. 7. 3.

12 Now therefore * give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace, or their wealth for ever h: that ye may be strong i and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

h But root them out, as I have commanded you to do; which also they have abundantly deserved, both of mine, and of your hands See Deut. 7. 2. i Although you may fansie that this way of making Leagues and Marriages with them, is the only way to establish and settle you, yet I assure you it will weaken and ruin you, and the contrary course will make you stronger.

13 And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass k, seeing that thou our God † hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve l, and hast given us such deliverances as this m.

k After all our sore sufferings for our sins. l And after all thy favour shewed to us in the mitigation of thy Judgments. m So full, so sudden, and unexpected, and amazing, not only to our enemies, but also to our selves.

14 Should we again break thy commandments, n and joyn in affinity with the people of these abominations! wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant, nor escaping o?

n Was this a fit and just requital of all thy kindnesses? or was this thy end and design in these actions? or will it thou take this well from our hands? o Can we reasonably expect any thing from thee less than utter ruin?

15 O LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous p, for we remain yet escaped q, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee in our trespasses r: for we cannot stand before thee s, because of this t.

p A just and holy God, who dost hate, and wilst infallibly punish sin and sinners. Or, thou art merciful, as appears from hence, that notwithstanding all our sins, thou hast not utterly destroyed us, but left a remnant of us. The Hebrew word here rendred righteous, is oft used for merciful; as is well known to all the learned. q Or, though we remain, &c i. e. Though thou hast yet spared us in part, yet thou art righteous, and therefore wilt certainly punish and destroy us according to our deserts, if we do not repent of, and reform this great wickedness. r We are here in thy presence, and so are all our sins; we are arraigning our selves before thy Tribunal, acknowledging our selves to be vile offenders, and thee to be just, if thou destroy us. s To wit, in Judgment, as that word is oft used, as Psal. 130. 3. Compare Psal. 1. 5. we must needs fall and perish at thy presence, as the phrase is, Psal. 9. 3. t Because of this our great guilt and the aggravations of it.

CHAP X.

1 NOw when Ezra had prayed, and when he had confessed, weeping and casting himself down before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel, a very great congregation of men and women, and children a: for the people † wept very sore b.

a Awakened by the words and example of this holy Priest, and great Potentate. So inexpressible is the good, which is done by the good example, and the evil, which is done by the bad example of a great Person, or of a Minister. The fame of his great passion of grief, and of his many and publick expressions thereof in the Court before the Temple, being in an instant dispersed over all the City, brought a great company together. b Being greatly affected with Ezra's prayer, and with the common sin.

2 And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, We have trespassed c, against our God, and have taken d strange wives, of the people of the land: yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing e.

c He saith, we, either, 1. Because he was guilty in this matter. Or rather, 2. In the name of the people, and their several Families, and his own amongst the rest. For this mans name is not in the following Catalogue, but there we have his Father, Jehiel, and his Fathers Brethren, five other Sons of his Grandfather Elam, v. 26. It was therefore an evidence of his great Courage, and good Conscience, that he durst so freely, and fully discharge his duty, whereby he shewed that he honoured God more than his nearest, and dearest Relations. d To wit, into conjugal society with our selves. e In case of our repentance, and reformation. Therefore let us not sorrow like persons without hope, nor sit down in despair, but let us fall upon action, and amend our errors, and then trust to Gods mercy.

3 Now therefore let us make a covenant with our God, † to put away all the wives f, and such as are born of them g, according to the counsel of my lord h, and of those that tremble at the * commandment of our God i, and let it be done according to the law k.

* Deut. 7. 2, 3.

f Which though it may seem harsh, yet is not unjust, if it be considered; 1. That Marriages made between some prohibited Persons, as suppose, between a Father, and his Daughter, a Brother, and a Sister, are not only unlawful, but void Marriages, and ipso facto, null, by the political laws of civil Nations. And therefore these Marriages with Idolatrous, and Heathen Women, being expressly, and severely forbidden by God, might well be disannulled. And it was one of good Theodosius his laws, that those actions which were done against law, should be accounted not only unlawful, but null. 2. That there were many peculiar laws given to the Jews concerning the Marrying, and putting away of Wives, as hath been observed before in their proper places, and therefore it is not strange, if there be something more in this case, than is now usual with us. 3. Supposing the matrimonial tye had continued, yet they might be excluded from co-habitation with them, as a just punishment upon them for the wilful breach of a known, and positive law of God. g This may seem harder than the former, but many things may be said. 1. Whatsoever evil befal either them or their Children, they had all reason to accept it as the just and deserved fruit of their own sin. 2. That Children may, and sometimes do suffer, at least temporal evils, for their Parents sins, or upon occasion of them, is most evident, both by the Scripture instances, and by the laws, and usages of Nations in some cases. 3. This may seem to have been a necessary part of severity, partly as a proper punishment of the Parents sin herein, and to deter others more effectually from the like practices: partly to prevent the corruption of their other Children by the conversation, and society of this ungodly, and Idolatrous brood: and partly, lest such Children, being continually present with them, and stealing into their affections, might at last prevail with them to take their ejected Wives again. 4. These Children were only cast out of the Families, and Commonwealth of Israel, but were not utterly forsaken, and ruined, but due care was probably taken by Authority, that they should have some provision made for them, and some care taken about their Education in the Jewish Religion, &c. h Either, 1. As thou counsellest and desirest us to do. Or, 2. Let us do it in such manner as thou shalt think fit and agreeable to the Law, as it follows: for it requires great caution as being a matter of no small difficulty. i And of other serious and religious persons who may with thee consider and regulate the business. k This is meant, either, 1. Of the matter of the business, let that be done which the Law requires, let them be put away. Or, 2. Of the manner of it, which must be according to the Rules of Gods Law.

4 Arise, for this matter belongeth unto thee l; we also will be with thee; be of good courage, and do it.

l Because thou hast both skill to manage it, and Authority both from God, and from the Persian King to do it.

5 Then arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel to swear, that they should do according to this word. And they sware.

6 Then Ezra rose up before the house of God, and went into the chamber m of Johanan the son of Eliashib: and when he came thither, he did eat no bread, nor drink water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away.

m That he with the Princes and Elders, as it follows, v. 8. might consult about the Execution of their resolution.

7 And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem, unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem;

8 And that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be † forfeited, and himself separated from the congregation n of those that had been carried away.

n Either by Banishment: Or rather by Excommunication, from the Church, and People, and House, and publick Worship of God.

9 Then all the men of Judah, and Benjamin o, gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem, within three days: (it was the ninth month, on the twentieth day of the month) and all the people sat in the street of the house of God p, trembling because of this matter, and for † the great rain q.

o Not only of these two Tribes, as appears from the following Catalogue, where there are Priests and Levites; but all the Israelites, v. 25. who are thus described, partly because the greatest part of them were of these Tribes, though others were mixed with them: and partly because they all now dwelt in that Land which formerly was appropriated to those Tribes. p In that street of the City, which was next to the Temple, and within the view of it, that so they might be as in Gods presence whereby they might be awed to a more faithful and vigorous prosecution of their work. And this place they might chuse rather than the Court of the People, because they thought it might be polluted by the delinquents, who were all to come thither. q Which they took for a token of Gods displeasure amongst them.

10 And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and † have taken strange wives to encrease the trespass of Israel.

† Heb. have caused to dwell, or have brought back.

11 Now therefore make confession unto the LORD God of your fathers, and do his pleasure r, and separate your selves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives.

r You have sinfully pleased your selves, now please God by your Obedience to his command.

12 Then all the congregation answered, and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do.

|| Or, we have greatly offended in this thing.

14 Let now our rulers of all the congregations stand s, and let all them which have taken strange wives t in our cities, come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the Judges thereof u, until the fierce wrath of our God || for this matter, be turned from us x.

s Let the great Council, called the Sanhedrim, be settled, and meet to judge and determine of all particular causes. t To wit, of these heathen Nations such as were not proselyted to the Jewish Religion before their Marriage; or since revolted from it. u Who are best able to inform the great council of the quality of the persons, and of all matters of Fact and Circumstances. x i. e. Until the thing be done, and Gods Wrath thereby removed.

15 Only Jonathan the son of Asahel, and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah, † were employed about this matter y: and Meshullam, and Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

y To wit, to take due care that the business should be executed in the manner proposed, that the Officers and Delinquents of every City should come successively in convenient time and order, as these should appoint, and to take and keep an exact account of the whole transaction, and of the names of the Cities and Persons whose causes were dispatched, and to give notice to others to come in their turns, and to prepare the business for the hearing of the Judges. And these two were Priests, as their Coadjutors or helpers were Levites; that so they might inform the persons concerned, if any matter of doubt did arise.

16 And the children of the captivity did so: and Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names were separated z, and sate down in the first day of the tenth month to examine the matter.

z i. e. Sequestred themselves from all other business, and gave themselves wholly to this.

18 And among the ſons of the prieſts, there were found that had taken ſtrange wives; namely, of the ſons of Jeſhua the ſon of Jozadak, and his brethren; Maaſeiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave their hands a, that they would put away their wives; and being guilty, they offered a ram of the flock for their treſpaſs.

c Whereby he implies, that moſt of their Wives were barren. Which came to paſs by God's ſpecial Providence, partly to manifeſt his Diſpleaſure againſt ſuch Matches, and partly that the Practice of this great and neceſſary Duty might not be encumbred with too many Difficulties.

NEHEMIAH.

THis Book ſeems not to have been written by Ezra, becauſe it is written in a quite differing, and more plain and eaſie Style, and without that mixture of Chaldee or Syriack words, which is in the Book of Ezra; but by Nehemiah, chap. 1.1. who writ an Account of his own Tranſactions, as Ezra did of his. But whether this be the ſame Nehemiah, who came up with Zerubbabel, Ezra 2.2. and Nehem. 7.7. may be queſtioned; the ſame Name being oft given to divers Perſons. And for the Name of Tirſhathah, which is uſed both in Ezra 2.63. and Nehem. 7.65, 70. that ſeems to be the Title of his Office, and ſo belongs to any Governor, whether it was Zerubbabel, or Nehemiah, or any other.

CHAP. I.

1 THe words a of Nehemiah the ſon of Hachaliah. And it came to paſs in the month * Chiſleu b, in the twentieth year c, as I was in Shuſhan d the palace, a Or rather, the acts, or deeds, as the word oft ſignifies; of which he here treats. b Which is the ninth Month, containing part of November, and part of December. c Of Artaxerxes, ch. 2.1. d The Chief and Royal City of Perſia, Eſth. 3.15.

2 That Hanani, one of my brethren e, came, he and certain men of Judah, and I asked them concerning the Jews that had eſcaped f, which were left of the captivity g, and concerning Jeruſalem.

e Of my Family, or Tribe, or Nation. f Out of the Slavery which they endured in ſtrange Lands. g The Remnant of thoſe numerous Captives.

3 And they ſaid unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province h, are in great affliction and reproach i: the wall of Jeruſalem alſo * is broken down, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire k.

* 2 Kin 25.10.

h i.e. In Judea, which was now made a Province under the Perſian Monarchs: See the Notes on Ezra 5.8. i Deſpiſed and diſtreſſed by the neighbouring Nations. k i.e. The Walls and Gates continue in the ſame woful plight, in which Nebuchadnezzar left them; the Jews not being yet in a Condition to re-build them, nor having Commiſſion from the Kings of Perſia to do ſo; but only to build the Temple, and their own private Houſes: And this made their Enemies ſcorn them; who alſo would have ruined them, but for fear of offending the Perſian King.

4 And it came to paſs when I heard theſe words, that I ſat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and prayed before the God of heaven,

5 And ſaid, I beſeech thee, * O LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, * that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him, and obſerve his commandments:

* Dan. 9.4.
* Exod. 20.6.

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayeſt hear the prayer of thy ſervant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Iſrael thy ſervants, and confeſs the ſins of the children of Iſrael, which we have ſinned againſt thee: both I, and my father's houſe have ſinned.

7 We have dealt very corruptly l againſt thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the ſtatutes, nor the judgments which thou commandedſt thy ſervant Moſes.

l Or, we have wholly corrupted, to wit, our ſelves, and our Ways, and thy Worſhip.

8 Remember, I beſeech thee, the word that thou commandedſt thy ſervant Moſes, ſaying, * If ye tranſgreſs, I will ſcatter you abroad among the nations:

* Lev. 26.39. Deut. 4.25, &c.

9 But if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them; * though there were of you caſt out unto the uttermoſt part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

10 Now these are thy servants, and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive unto the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, † who desire to fear thy name: and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man m. For I was the king's cup-bearer n, m The King; who, though a God by Office, is but a Man by Nature; and therefore his Heart is wholly at thy disposal. n Whereby I had opportunity to speak to him, and some Favour and Freedom with him; which encouraged me to make this Prayer, and to hope for some Success.

CHAP. II.

1 AND it came to pass in the month * Nisan a, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes b the king, that wine was before him: and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been before-time sad in his presence.

* Esth. 3. 7.

a Which was four Months after he had heard those sad Tidings. The reason of this long Silence and Delay might be manifold, either because he thought fit that some time should be spent by himself, and possibly, others of his Brethren, in seeking God by solemn Prayer and Fasting, for God's Blessing, and the good Success of this great Affair: Or, because he could not take so long and dangerous a Journey in the depth of Winter: Or, because his Turn of attending upon the King did not come to him till that time: Or because till then he wanted a fit Opportunity to move it unto the King, by reason of the King's Indisposition, or Occasions, or multitude of Attendants, among whom there, probably, were divers Enemies to the Jews, who, he feared, might hinder this his design and desire. b Artaxerxes Longimanus, the son of the great Xerxes, who reigned both with his Father, and, after his death, alone: Whence the Years of his Reign are computed two ways; one from the Death of Xerxes, and the other from his first Entrance upon the Administration of the Kingdom, which was committed to him in the fifth Year of Xerxes, when he began the Grecian War, and left his Son King or Vice-roy in his stead, as the manner of the Persians was. It may seem doubtful, and is not much material, which way of Computation is here used. Others understand this of Artaxerxes Nemon.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad c, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid d, c His Fasting, joyned with inward Grief, had made a sensible Change in his very Countenance. d Partly, being daunted by the Majesty of the King, and the suddainness and sharpness of his Question: Partly, fearing lest there was arising some Jealousie, or ill Opinion in the King concerning him: Partly, because it was an unusual and ungrateful thing to come into the King of Persia's Presence with any badges or tokens of Sorrow, Esth. 4. 2. And principally, from his doubts or feats of Disappointment, because his Request was great, and invidious, and odious to most of the Persian Courtiers, and might be represented as dangerous, and might seem improper for a time of Feasting and Jollity.

3 And said unto the king, * Let the king live for ever e: why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the † place of my fathers sepulchres f, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

* 1 Kin. 1. 31. Dan. 2. 4 & 6. 21.

e My Sadness comes not from any Discontent with my own Condition, or any Dis-affection to the King, for whom my hearty Prayers are, that he may live for ever; but from another Cause. f Which by all Nations are esteemed sacred, and inviolable, and honourable. He saith not a word of the Temple, or of Religion; for he wisely considered, that he spake before a heathen King and Court, who cared for none of those things.

4 Then the king said unto me, For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven g.

g To direct my Thoughts and Words, and to incline the King's Heart to grant my Request.

5 And I said unto the king, If it please the king h, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight i, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my father's sepulchres, that I may build it.

h My Request, whatsoever it is, I humbly and wholly submit it to the King's good Pleasure, being resolved to acquiess in it. i I pretend no Merit, but am an humble Suppliant for thy Grace and Favour; whereof having received some Tokens, I am thereby emboldened to make this further Request.

6 And the king said unto me (the † queen also sitting by him k) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return l? So it pleased the king to send me, and I set him a time m.

k Which is here noted, partly as an unusual thing; for commonly the Kings of Persia dined alone, and their Queens seldom dined with them, as Historians note; And peradventure, because the Queen expressed some Kindness to him, and promoted his Request with the King. l This Question shewed the King's Respect and Affection to him, and that he was not willing to want his Attendance longer than was necessary. m Either that twelve Years mentioned, ch. 5. 14. and 13. 6. or rather, a far shorter time; for which Cause, among others, he built the Walls with such dispatch, even in fifty two Days, ch. 6. 15. and probably, not very long after that, returned to the King; by whom he was sent a second time, with more ample Commission, and for the King's Service, and the Government of that part of his Dominions.

7 Moreover, I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governours beyond the river, that they may convey me over n, till I come into Judah:

n That they may safely conduct me through their several Territories.

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper † of the king's forest o, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house p, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into q. And the king granted me, * according to the good hand of my God upon me.

o Of the Forest of Libanus, famous for Pleasure, and for plenty of choice Trees. p To wit, of the King's Palace, which was adjoyning to the House of God: Or, of the Tower, or Fence belonging to the House of God; to wit, for the Gates of the Courts of the Temple: For though the Temple was built, the Courts, and other Buildings belonging to the Temple might yet be unfinished. q Wherewith I may build an House in which I may dwell whilst I am there, and which I may dispose of as I see fit.

9 Then I came to the governours beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. (Now the king had sent captains of the army, and horsemen with me.)

10 When Sanballat the Horonite r, and Tobiah the servant s the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

r So called, either from his Family, or from the place of his Birth or Rule, which is supposed to be Horonaim, an eminent City of Moab, Isa. 15. 5. Jer. 48. 3. s So called, probably, from his servile Original, or Condition, from which he was advanced to his present Power and Dignity. Which also may be mentioned as one Reason, why he now carried himself so insolently and perversly towards the Jews; it being usual for Persons suddainly raised from a mean, to an high Estate, so to demean themselves.

11 So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days t.

t Resting my self after my long Journey, and enquiring into the State of the City.

12 And I arose in the night u, I and some few men with me, neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon x.

u Concealing both his Intentions and Actions as far, and as long as he could, as knowing that the Life of his Business lay in Secrecy and Expedition. x To prevent Noise, and the Notice of what I did.

13 And I went out by night y, by the gate of the valley z, even before the dragon-well a, and to the dung-port b, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

y The Foot-men which accompanied him, directing and leading him in the way. His design was to go round about the City, to observe the Compass and Condition of the Walls and Gates, that he might make sufficient provisions for the Work. z Of which see ch. 3. 13. a A Fountain, or Water so called, either from some figure of a Dragon or Serpent which was by it, or from some living Dragon which abode there when the City was desolate; for Dragons delight to be in desolate places, and nigh to Springs of Water, as divers have observed. b Through which they used to carry the Dung out of the City.

14 Then I went on to the gate of the fountain c, and to the king's pool d: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass e.

c i.e. Which led to the Fountain, to wit, of Siloah, or Gihon. d That which King Hezekiah had made: Of which see 2 Chron. 32. 3, 30. e The Way being obstructed with heaps of Rubbish.

15 Then went I up in the night by the brook f, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entred by the gate of the valley, and so returned g.

f Of Kidron: Of which see on 2 Sam. 15. 23. g Having gone round about the City.

16 And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did, neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did h the work i.

h Or, were to do, or should do, i.e. Whom he intended to employ in it. i Here following of building the Walls.

17 Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire: come and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach.

18 Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthned their hands for this good work.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian i heard it, they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? will ye rebel against the king l?

k Either the King's Lieutenant in Arabia, as Tobiah was among the Ammonites, and Sanballat among the Moabites: Or rather, an Arabian by his Birth. And it seems probable, that both he, and Sanballat, and Tobiah were chief Men, or Governors among the Samaritans, or in their Army: See ch. 4. 1, 2, 3. l Do you design to fortifie this City against the King?

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, The God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we Ezra 4. 3. his servants will arise and build: but * ye have no portion, nor right m, nor memorial n in Jerusalem.

m You have no Authority over us, nor Interest in our Church, or State, or City; but are meer Aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel: We disown and detest that Mungrel-worship and Religion which you have set up: We desire not your Favour, or Friendship, or Help in this matter: And you have nothing to do to enquire into, or meddle with our Concerns, or to hinder us in our present Undertaking. n Here is no Testimony or Monument, either of your Relation to us by Birth or Religion, or of your Kindness to us, or to this place: But we have many Memorials of your Malice and Enmity against us.

CHAP. III.

Ch. 12. 10. 1 THen * Eliashib the high priest a rose up b with his brethren the priests, and they built the sheep-gate c, they sanctified it d, and set up the doors of it; even unto the tower of Meah e they Jer. 31. 38. sanctified it, unto the tower of * Hananeel.

a Grand-child of Jeshua the first High-Priest after their Return from Babylon. b Began the Work. c Which was next to the Temple; so called, either from the Sheep-market, or the Sheep-pool of Bethesda, Joh. 5. 2. where the Sheep were washed, and then brought to the Temple to be sacrificed. d Or, they prepared, or repaired it; for so the word sometimes signifies. But our Translation seems best, both because that use of the word is most common, and because this is spoken only of this Gate; which being built by the Priests, and nighest to the Temple, and with a special Eye to the Service of the Temple, for which both Men and Things were most commonly brought in this way, and being also the first part of the Building, might be in a peculiar manner sanctified by solemn Prayer and Sacrifice; whereby it was dedicated to God's Service. And this either, 1. As it was considered in it self, or with respect to the rest of the Building, of which this was the beginning, and, in a manner, the First-fruits; and therefore in the Sanctification of it, the whole Lump and Building was sanctified. And seeing the whole City is oft called the holy City, it is not strange if the Walls and Gates of it be also holy, and said to be sanctified; and especially, this Gate Compare Deut. 20. 5. e Or, of an hundred: So called, either because it was an hundred Cubits high, or so far distant from the Sheep-gate.

f The Posterity of the ancient Inhabitants of Jericho: See Ezra 2. 34.

3 But the * fish-gate g did the sons of Hassenaah 2 Chr. 33. 14. Zeph. 1. 10. build, who also laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof h.

g Of which mention is made, 2 Chr. 33. 14. Neh. 12. 39. Zeph. 1. 10. So called, either from the Fish-market, which was near it; or because the Fish was brought in by it from the Sea, Neh. 13. 16. this Gate being North-westward from Jerusalem. h This is either here related by Anticipation, the whole Work being here mentioned together, though this part was not done till afterwards, ch. 6. 1. and 7. 1. Or, this was done to some of the Gates, but not to all; and therefore this is said to be done more compleatly and universally afterwards.

4 And next unto them repaired i Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of Koz: and next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel: and next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

i To wit, the demolished or decayed Wall, there being no Gate in this part. And so in the rest which follow.

5 And next unto them the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles put not their necks k to * the work Judg. 5. 23. of their Lord l.

k i.e. Did not submit to it, would not further it, either through Pride, or Sloth, or Carelessness, or Covetousness, or secret Compliance with the Enemies of the Jews. l Either, 1. Of Nehemiah, who was their Lord and Governor, and had given a general Command for the carrying on of this Work: Or, 2. Of God, whom they owned for their Lord, whose Work this was; partly because it had proceeded thus far by God's singular Providence and Blessing, and partly because it was done for the Defence of the City, and People, and Temple of God. And therefore they are branded to all Posterity for the Neglect of so great and pious a Work.

6 Moreover, the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the throne of the governor on this side the river l.

l i.e. Unto the place where the Governor of the Country on this side Euphrates, for and under the Persian Kings, sometimes had a Palace, or Throne, to which all Persons living in the adjacent parts were to resort for Judgment.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the gold-smiths: next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of one of the apothecaries, and they ‖ fortified m Jerusalem unto the broad wall. ‖ Or, left Jerusalem unto the broad wall.

m It is not said, they repaired, as was said of the rest; but they fortified it: Either because this part of the Wall was less demolished than the other, and therefore they needed not to repair it, but only to make it stronger by some Additions; or to note their extraordinary Care and Diligence, that they would not only repair it, and restore it to its former state, but make it stronger than ever it was; which also might be fit to be done in that part of the City. Others render it, they left, as this word commonly signifies; and so the meaning is, They omitted the building of that part of the Wall, because it remained standing; this being that space of 400 Cubits which was pulled down by Joash King of Israel, and re-built by Uzziah, who made it so strong, that the Chaldeans could not pull it down without more trouble than they thought fit to employ about it. But this Chapter gives us an Account of what they did in the Building, not of what they did not, but left as they found it.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem n.

n As Rome was anciently divided into several Quarters, or Regions, so was Jerusalem, and especially this was divided into two parts; whereof one was in the Tribe of Benjamin, and nearest to the Temple; the other in the Tribe of Judah, and more remote from it: Which accordingly had two several Rulers; this Man, and the other, v. 12. but both under the chief Governor of the City.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even over against his house o: and next unto him repaired Hattush the son of Hashabniah.

o That part of the Wall which was next to him, which his own Interest obliged him to do with Care.

11 Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the the son of Pahath-moab, repaired the † other † Heb. second measure. piece, and the tower of the furnaces.

12 And the next unto him repaired Shallum the ſon of Haloheſh, the ruler of the half part of Jeruſalem p, he and his daughters q.

14 But the dung-gate repaired Malchiah the ſon of Rechab, the ruler of part of Beth-haccerem r: he built it, and ſet up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

r A Town, or Territory, the Government whereof was divided between two Perſons.

17 After him repaired the Levites, Rehum the ſon of Bani: and next unto him repaired Haſhabiah, the ruler of the half part of Keilah, in his part.

18 After him repaired Bavai the ſon of Henadad, the ruler of the half part of Keilah.

19 And next to him repaired Ezer the ſon of Jeſhua, the ruler of Mizpah, another piece over againſt the going up to the armory y, at the turning of the wall z.

y Either to the Houſe of the Foreſt of Lebanon, which was their Armory from Solomon's days, Iſa. 22. 8. or to ſome other place, which either before or ſince that time, had been uſed as another and leſs Armory for common Occaſion. z Or, at the corner; or, which is in the corner.

Or, Zaccai. 20 After him Baruch the ſon of ‖ Zabbai, earneſtly repaired a the other piece, from the turning of the wall b, unto the door of the houſe c of Eliaſhib the high prieſt.

a Did his Work with eminent Diligence and Fervency: which is here noted to his Commendation. b Or, from the corner; as v. 19. c Unto that part of the Wall which was over againſt, or next to this Door.

21 After him repaired Meremoth the ſon of Urijah, the ſon of Koz, another piece, from the door of the houſe of Eliaſhib, even to the end of the houſe of Eliaſhib d.

d Therefore the Door was not in the middle of the Houſe, as now they commonly are, but at one end of it.

22 And after him repaired the prieſts, the men of the plain e.

e Either of the Plains of Jordan, or of the plain Country round about Jeruſalem; as it is called, ch. 12. 28. And they are thus called, becauſe they, or their Parents, either were born, or now did, or formerly had dwelt in thoſe parts; whence they came to Jeruſalem when the Service of the Temple required it.

23 After him repaired Benjamin, and Haſhub, over againſt their houſe: after him repaired Azariah the ſon of Maaſeiah, the ſon of Ananiah, by his houſe.

24 After him repaired Binnui the ſon of Henadad, another piece, from the houſe of Azariah, unto the turning of the wall, even unto the corner.

25 Palal the ſon of Uzai, over againſt the turning of the wall f, and the tower g which lieth out
* Jer. 32. 2. & 33. 1. & 37. 21. from the king's high houſe h, that was by the * court of the priſon i: after him, Pedaiah the ſon of Paroſh.

f In a part of the Wall, which jutted out as the Tower here following did; and therefore was oppoſite to, or over againſt that Turning. g Or, even the tower. h Either from the Royal Palace, or from ſome other ſmaller Houſe which the King formerly built there, either for Proſpect, or for Defence. i A place oft mentioned; of which ſee Jer. 32. 2. and 38. 7. 13.

* 2 Chr. 27. 3. ‖ Or, the tower. * Ch. 8. 3 & 12, 37.

k Or, who dwelt in Ophel; for this ſeems to be only a Deſcription of the Perſons, whoſe Work follows. l So called, becauſe by that Gate Water was brought in; either by the People, for the uſe of that part of the City; or rather, by theſe Nethinims, who were Gibeonites, for the uſes of the Temple, for which they were drawers of water, Joſh. 9. 21.

27 After them the Tekoites m repaired another piece, over againſt the great tower that lieth out, even unto the wall of Ophel.

m The ſame ſpoken of before, v. 5. who having diſpatched their firſt ſhare ſooner than their Brethren had done theirs, freely offered their help to ſupply the defects of others, who, as it ſeems, neglected that part of the Work which had been committed to them. And this their double-diligence is noted, both for the greater ſhame of their Nobles, who would not do any part of it, v. 5. and for their own greater honour, who were ſo far from being corrupted by the bad Example of their Nobles, that they were rather quickned and inflamed to greater Zeal and Induſtry in this publick and pious Work.

28 From above * the horſe-gate n repaired the 29 After them repaired Zadok the ſon of Immer, over againſt his houſe: after him repaired alſo Shemaiah the ſon of Shechaniah, the keeper of the eaſt-gate o.

o To wit, of the City, or of the Temple; which being the chief Gate, was committed to his particular Care and Cuſtody.

30 After him repaired Hananiah the ſon of Shelemiah, and Hanun the ſixth ſon of Zalaph, another piece: after him repaired Meſhullam the ſon of Berechiah, over againſt his chamber p.

p Or, chambers; the Singular Number for the Plural.

31 After him repaired Malchiah, the gold-ſmith's ſon, unto the place of the Nethinims, and of the merchants, over againſt the gate Miphkad, and to the ‖ going up of the corner.

32 And between the going up of the corner unto the ſheep-gate, repaired the goldſmiths and the merchants.

CHAP. IV.

1 BUt it came to paſs, that when * Sanballat heard
* Ch. 2. 10. that we built the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews a.

a Pretending Contempt in his Words, when he had Grief in his Heart.

2 And he ſpake before his brethren b, and the army of Samaria c, and ſaid, What do theſe feeble Jews? will they † fortifie themſelves? will they † Heb. leave to themſelves. ſacrifice? will they make an end in a day d? will they revive the ſtones out of the heaps of the rubbiſh e which are burnt f?

b Tobiah, v. 3. and Geſhem, ch. 2. 19. and others, whom he calls his brethren, becauſe of their Conjunction with him in Office and Intereſt. c Whom he deſigned hereby to incenſe againſt them, or, at leaſt, to underſtand their Minds herein. d Do they intend to begin and finiſh the Work, and keep the Feaſt of Dedication by Sacrifice, all in one Day? For if they ſpend any long time about it, they cannot think that we, and the reſt of their Neighbours will ſuffer them to do it. Thus he perſwaded himſelf and his Companions, that their Attempt was ridiculous: And this Miſtake kept him from giving them any diſturbance, till it was too late. So God infatuated him to his own Grief and Shame, and to the Advantage of his People. e Will they pick up their broken Stones out of the Ruins, and patch them together for other Materials they want. f i. e. Which Stones were burnt and broken, or conſumed to Powder, to wit, by the Chaldæans, when they took the City. See on ch. 1. 3.

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he ſaid, said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up g, he shall even break down their stone-wall h.

g He mentions the Foxes, because they were very numerous in those parts, and because, in the late Desolations, the Foxes did walk in the Mount and City of Zion, Lamen. 5. 18. wherewith he seems to upbraid them. h It is so low, that a Fox can easily get to the top of it; and so weak, and done so hastily and carelesly, that the least thrust will tumble it down.

4 Hear, O our God, for we are † despised: and turn their reproach upon their own head i, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity k.

i Let them be really as contemptible as they represent us to be. This and the following Requests may seem harsh, but they were both just, as being directed against such malicious, inveterate, and implacable Enemies to God, and to his People; and necessary for the Vindication and Defence of God's Honour, and Worship, and People. k Let them be removed from our Neighbourhood, and carried into Captivity; and there let them find no Favour, but further Severity. Or, give them for a prey to their Enemies, and let these carry them into the land of captivity.

* Psal. 109. 14, 15.

5 And * cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee l; for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders m.

l Let their Wickedness be in thy sight, so as to bring down deserved Judgments upon them, that either they may be convinced and reformed, or others may be warned by their Example. God is said to cover or hide Sin when he forbears to punish it. m i. e. They have not only provoked us Builders, but thee also: Or, they have provoked or derided the builders to their face; i. e. openly and impudently, in contempt of God, and of this Work, which is done by his Direction and Encouragement.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joyned together unto the half thereof n: for the people had a mind to work.

n Either, 1. In length; or rather, 2. In heighth; for the whole Circumference of the Wall was distributed among the Builders, who also had carried on the Work; beginning at the Sheep-gate, and ending there also, as appears from ch. 3. 1, 32. and the walls of Jerusalem are said to be made up here, v. 7.

7 But it came to pass that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that † the walls of Jerusalem were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped o, then they were very wroth, o i. e. That the Breaches which the Chaldæans had made, and left in the Walls, were well nigh stopped up.

† Heb. to make an error to it.

8 And conspired all of them together, to come, and to fight against Jerusalem, and † to hinder it.

9 Nevertheless, we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah p said, The strength of the bearers of burthens is decayed, and there is much rubbish q, so that we are not able to build the wall r:

p i. e. The Jews now dwelling in Judah; to wit, some of them, being partly terrified by their Enemies, and partly wearied with hard and continual Labours. q More than we are able suddainly to remove. r Being forced to spend our time in removing the Rubbish, and other Works imposed upon us; and therefore we must desist, at least, for a season.

11 And our adversaries said, They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them s, and cause the work to cease.

s We will come secretly and unexpectedly upon them, so as they shall neither fore-see their danger, nor be able to prevent it.

12 And it came to pass that when the Jews which dwelt by them t came, they said unto us ten times u, ‖ From all places, whence ye shall return unto us, they will be upon you x.

t Or, among them: Whereby they came to the Knowledge of their Counsels. u i. e. Very often: A certain number for an uncertain. x i. e. They will invade you every way, by which we can come to you, or you to us; and therefore do you keep Watches on every side. But these words may be otherwise rendred thus; On all parts where you shall be quiet, or at rest, (i. e. secure: For the Hebrew Schub, signifies not only to return; but also, to be quiet, or at ease, as Hebricians know: They will be upon us; i. e. upon our People and City Jerusalem, where you are. And they rather say upon us, than upon you, to manifest their Affection to them, and Conjunction with them, and that they looked upon themselves as Members of the same Body and Church with them, and took what was designed or done against them, as if it were against themselves, and therefore gave them this friendly notice. Or the place may be rendred thus, They told this (to wit, the Enemies Intentions) to us ten times, coming from all places where they dwelt or rested (Heb. you rested) the second Person being put for the third; as it is both in the Hebrew Language as Gen. 10. 19. 30 & 25. 18. and in the Hebrew Text, Psal. 22. 9. and in other Languages and Authors; of which, see my Latin Synopsis upon Gen. 10. 19. And that it is so here, we have the Consent of the Seventy, and Arabick, and of some modern and accurate Interpreters, who render it by a Verb of the third Person) about us; whence they came purposely to inform and warn us. Or thus, They told this to us ten times from all places whence they did return to us. Which Phrase of returning to us, i. e. to Jerusalem, suits very well with those Persons who came up with their Brethren from Babylon to Jerusalem, and went thence into several parts of the Country, to dwell where they thought meet; and returned now, and at other times, as they had occasion, to their Brethren at Jerusalem.

13 Therefore set I † in the lower places behind the wall y, and on the higher places z, I even set the people after their families, with their swords, their spears, and their bows.

y To stand by, and within the Walls, where they were lowest, and not yet raised to their due heighth, and therefore most liable to the Enemies Assault. z Upon the tops of the Walls, where they were finished, and the Towers which were built here and there upon the Wall; whence they might shoot Arrows, or throw Stones against their Enemies, when they made their Approaches.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the Rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the LORD which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God had brought their Counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work a.

a Our Enemies being frustrated in their Hopes, which were wholly built upon the Secrecy and Suddainness of their Attempt, we knowing this, returned to our Business.

16 And it came to pass from that time forth b, that the half of my servants c wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons d; and the rulers were behind all e the house of Judah f.

b Lest our Enemies should repeat their Enterprize. c Of my domestick Servants, and of my Guards, who should have attended upon my own Person. d i. e. All their Weapons: They stood in their Arms, prepared for Battel. e Partly to encourage them in their Work, and sometimes to assist with their own Hands: and partly to direct and command them in case of an Assault. f i. e. The Jews who were upon the Wall.

17 They which built on the wall, and they that bare burthens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon g.

g This is not to be taken properly, for they could never have done their Work with one Hand; and the next Verse tells us, the Sword was not in their Hands, but by their Sides; but figuratively; this being a proverbial Speech, such as is frequent among the Latins; as when they say of a Man pretending kindness with an evil design, He carries Bread in one hand, and a Stone in another.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded † by his side, and so built: and he that sounded the trumpet h was by me.

h To call the People together, when, and where it was fit and necessary.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: our God shall fight for us.

21 So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears, from the rising of the morning, till the stars † appeared i.

i Working very early, and very late.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant, lodge within Jerusalem k, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

k Not in the Suburbs, or adjoyning Villages; as, probably, many of them did, returning thence to their Work in the Morning.

23 So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our cloths l, ‖ saving that every one put them off for washing m.

l Neither by day, nor by night, as the manner is when we go to bed; they constantly kept themselves in a readiness for fighting. m When they were to wash and cleanse themselves from some natural or moral Impurity, which might befal them or their Garments.

CHAP. V.

1 AND there was a great cry of the people, and of their wives, against their brethren the Jews a.

a To wit, the great and rich ones, who had oppressed their Brethren.

2 For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters are many b: therefore we take up corn for them c, that we may eat and live.

b Which is in it self a Blessing, but to us is turned into a Curse. c i.e. We are forced, by our and their Necessities, to take up Corn; to wit, upon their own unreasonable terms, as is here implied, and plainly expressed in the following Relation. Others, Let us take up, &c. i.e. Seeing we do the publick Work, let Provision be made for us and our Children out of the publick Stock. But this is no Petition, but a Complaint, as will appear.

3 Some also there were that said, We have morgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth d.

d Which might easily happen, both from the multitude of the People now in and near Jerusalem, and from their building-work, which wholly took them up, and kept them from taking care of their own Families, and from the expectation and dread of their Enimies Invasion; which hindred them from going abroad to fetch in Provision, and the People round about from bringing it in to them; or from divers other Causes.

4 There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute e, and that upon our lands and vineyards.

e Which was laid upon them all: See Ezra 4. 13. and 7. 24.

5 Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren f, our children as their children: and lo, we bring into bondage g our sons and our daughters h, to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought into bondage already, neither is it in our power to redeem them i: for other men have our lands and vineyards.

f We are of the same Nature, and Nation, and Religion with them, although they treat us as if we were Beasts or Heathens, forgetting both Humanity and God's Law, Deut. 15. 7. g We are compelled to sell them for our subsistence. h Which was an Evidence of their great Necessity, because their Daughters were more tender, and weak, and unfit for Bond-service, and more exposed to Injuries than their Sons. i Which we are allowed to do, Exod. 21. 7. but have not wherewith to do it.

6 And I was very angry when I heard their cry, and these words.

† Heb. my heart consulted in me.

7 Then † I consulted with my self, and I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, Ye exact usury, every one of his brother k. And I set a great assembly against them l.

k Which was against the plain and positive Law of God, Deut. 23. 19, 20. especially in this time of publick Calamity and Dearth. l I called a publick Congregation, both of the Rulers and People, the greatest part whereof were free from this Guilt, and therefore more impartial Judges of the matter, and represented it to them, that the Offenders might be convinced, and reform this Abuse; if not for Fear of God, or Love of their Brethren, yet, at least, for the publick Shame, and the Cries of the Poor.

8 And I said unto them, We, after our ability, have * redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen m; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us n? Then held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

m I, and my Brethren, and Predecessors have used our utmost Interest and Power, both with the Kings of Persia, that our Brethren might be redeemed from that Bondage into which God had sold them for their Sins; and with particular Persons in Babylon, and Persia, and the adjacent parts, whose Bond-slaves the Jews were, and who would not part with them without a price, which we paid for them. n Do you expect that we should pay you a Price for them, as we did to the Babylonians? Or must we use as much Importunity to sollicite you for their Redemption, as we did to their Enemies?

9 Also I said, It is not good o that ye do: ought ye not to walk * in the fear of our God, because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies p?

* Lev. 25. 36.

o i.e. It is a very bad and wicked thing; as this same Phrase is used, Prov. 16. 29. and 17. 26. and 18. 5. and 19. 2. A common Figure, called Meiosis; where more is understood than is expressed. p Who are round about you, and observe all your Actions; and will loath and reproach both you for such barbarous usage of your Brethren, and Religion for your sakes: Which, if you have any Love or Respect, either to God, or your selves, you will prevent.

10 I likewise, and my brethren q, and my servants r † might exact of them money and corn s: I pray you let us leave off this usury.

q To wit, in Office; those who are employed with me in the Government of this People. r In my Name, and for my Use. s As a just Recompence for our Pains and Care for the publick Good; to which we wholly devote our selves, even to the Neglect of all our private Concerns. But I will not rigorously exact, but do freely remit my own Right; which, in those Circumstances, it is my Duty to do: and therefore you also ought to do so, seeing I lay no Burthen upon you, but what I am willing to bear a part of upon my own Shoulders.

11 Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vine-yards, their olive-yards, and their houses, also t the hundredth part u of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oyl, that ye exact of them.

t Also require not: Which is to be supplied out of the next Verse; where it is expressed in their Answer to, and Grant of this Desire. u Which they required every Month for the Use of their Moneys or Goods, according to the Custom then used, and afterwards by the Romans.

12 Then said they, We will restore them x, and will require nothing of them y; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests z, and * took an oath of them a, that they should do according to this promise.

* Jer. 34. 8, 9.

x To wit, the Lands and Houses. y For the hundredth part. z Either, 1. As Delinquents in that kind; or rather, as Witnesses; that the Oath being taken before the Priests, who acted in God's Name and Stead, the Oath might make the more deep and durable Impression upon their Consciences. See Numb. 5. 19. 1 King. 1. 8, 31, 32. a Not of the Priests last mentioned; for it doth not appear that any of them were guilty; and it is absurd to think, that they only were guilty of this Extortion; as they must be, if this them belongs to them only; but of all the Persons who were before charged with this Crime, v. 3, 4. whether Priests, or others; as is evident from the Text, and from the nature of the thing.

13 Also I shook my lap b, and said, So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour c, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and † emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the LORD. And the people did according to this promise.

b i.e. The Lap, or extream parts of my Garment; which I first folded together, and then shook it, and scattered it asunder. This was a form of Swearing then in use. c i.e. From enjoying what he hath got by his Labour.

14 Moreover, from the time that I was appointed to be their Governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year, even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years d, I and my brethren e have not eaten the bread of the governor f.

d Not that he continued so long together at Jerusalem; of which see ch. 2. 6. but that he so long governed Jerusalem by himself when he was present; and in his Absence, by a Deputy. e Either my Fellow-officers, or they whom I left in my stead; who, as they were to do my Work, so might have required my Rights. f i.e. That Allowance, which by the Laws of God and Nations, and of the King of Persia, the Governors might require for the Maintenance of their own Dignity and Office, and of the publick Service.

15 But the former governors g that had been before me, were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels of silver h, yea even their servants bare rule over the people i: but so did not I, because of the fear of God k.

g Not Ezra, who was no Governor, but only a Priest sent to teach them, and to rectifie Church-abuses; nor Zerubbabel; but others between him and Nehemiah, whom he forbears to name, because he designed not to disgrace any Person, but only to reform the Abuses. h Which they required of the People for every day, to defray their other Expences. i i.e. Ruled them with Rigour and Cruelty. Which Fault of the Servants is charged charged upon their Masters, the former Governors, because they did not restrain nor punish them. k Because I feared to break God's Commands, or to incur his Displeasure by such immoderate and unseasonable Oppressions of the People. This he speaks not to commend himself, but rather, to diminish his Praise, and to shew that this was no heroical Action, nor Work of Supererogation, to be admired, rather than imitated; but only his Duty in that case, which, for his own sake, he durst not decline; and consequently, that it was their Duty also not to relinquish even those Rights, which, in other Times and Conditions, they might lawfully require.

16 Yea, also I continued in the work of this wall l, neither bought we any land m: and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

l Over-seeing, directing and encouraging the Work-men, which was my whole Business; and this at my own Cost. m Of our poor Brethren, whose Necessities gave me abundant Opportunity of enriching my self with good Bargains. But I durst not build my House upon other Men's Ruins.

17 Moreover, there were † at my table an hundred and fifty † of the Jews and rulers n, besides those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

n Not only Jews of the inferior sort, for whom meaner provisions might suffice; but also their Rulers, such as there were in many places, for whom better provision was fit; who resorted to him upon all Occasions, either to pour out their Complaints, as here they did; or to give him notice of the Enemies Designs, or to receive his Orders and Directions.

18 Now that which was prepared for me daily, was one ox, and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days, store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this required not I the bread of the governor o, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.

o But bore it out of my own Estate; which was very considerable, his Office in the Persian Court being a Place of very great Profit, as well as Honour; and that Profit, no doubt, continued to him in this his Absence from the King. From this great and daily Expence, it seems more than probable that Nehemiah did not continue here for twelve years together, as some would think; or, at least, that he did not this all that time, but only during the great and present exigences and distresses of the Jews; which ceased in good part after the walls were built, and the hearts of all the Jews revived, and their Enemies dispirited thereby.

19 * Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people p.

p As I have done thy People good for thy sake, so do me good for thine own sake; for thou art pleased, and hast promised graciously to reward us according to our Works, and to mete to Men the same measure which they mete to others.

CHAP. VI.

1 NOw it came to pass, when Sanballat, and and Tobiah, Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies heard that I had built the wall, and that there was no breach left therein; (though at that time I had not set up the doors a upon the gates)

a Not all of them: See on ch. 3. 1, 2, 3.

2 Then Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, Come, let us meet together b in some one of the villages in the plain of Ono c. But they thought to do me mischief.

b To consult about the common Service of our Master, the King of Persia, or to make a friendly Accommodation. c A City in the Tribe of Benjamin: Of which see ch. 11. 35. and 1 Chron. 8. 12.

3 And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work d, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilest I leave it, and come down to you?

d He tells them one, but not the only, nor the principal Reason of his Refusal, because his Coming might cause the Work to cease; not only by the Neglect of it during his Absence, but by his Death, which they, by this means, might compass: Though he thought it not fit to express so much to them.

4 Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort, and I answered them after the same manner.

5 Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me, in like manner, the fifth time, with an open letter e in his hand:

e Thereby bidding open defiance to him, as before he had used secret practices; and intimating that he would do that by manifest force, which he had intended to do by suddain surprize

6 Wherein was written; It is reported among the heathen f, and ‖ Gashmu g saith it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words h.

f The neighbouring People, whom you proudly and disdainfully call Heathens, or Gentiles. g Called Geshem, v. 1. who affirmed it, and would prove it. h i. e. According to these Reports; or, that thou mayest justifie and verifie these Rumours. Others according to these things, i. e. when these things which thou art now doing, shall be finished. But the first Sense seems most agreeable to the use of the same words in the next Verse.

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah i: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together k.

i We have now a King of our own Nation, and are free from the Bondage of a foreign Yoak. k That we may impartially examine the matter; that either thy Innocency may be cleared, and false Accusations may be prevented; or if thou art guilty, the King may be informed.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us afraid l, saying, Their hands shall be weakned from the work, that it be not done. Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

l i. e. They endeavoured to do so, and actually did terrifie some Persons.

10 Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah, the son of Delaiah m, the son of Mehetabel, who was shut up n; and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple o, and let us shut the doors of the temple; for they will come to slay thee, yea, in the night will they come to slay thee.

m Probably, one of the chief of the Priests, 1 Chron. 24. 26. n In his Chamber adjoyning to the Temple, upon pretence of singular Devotion, Sequestration from the World, and special Acquaintance, and much Communion with God in his Retirements, after the manner of the Prophets; and withal, of certain Knowledge, which he had by the Spirit of God, and of Prophecy, concerning their approaching danger, from which they could be safe no where but in the Temple, which the very Heathens owned for a Sanctuary, which they might not violate. o For the danger is so near, that we cannot safely tarry here so long as to consult what to do in this juncture. His design herein was partly to discourage and disgrace Nehemiah, and thereby to strike a dread into all the People, and give a speedy and full stop to the Work; partly to prepare the way for the Enemies to assault and take the City, whilest Nehemiah was shut up, and unable to give them any Opposition; partly to justifie their Accusation of Nehemiah to the King, by his Flight upon it; and partly that there, by the help of other Priests, who were conscious of his Plot, he might either destroy him, or secure his Person, till the City, by some of his Complices, were betrayed into the Enemies hands.

11 And I said, Should such a man as I p flee? and who is there that being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life q? I will not go in.

p I the chief Governour, upon whose presence, and counsel, and conduct, the very Life and Being of the whole City and Nation in a great measure depends: I who have professed such Resolution, and Courage, and Confidence in God. I who have had such eminent experience of Gods gracious and powerful Assistances, of his calling me to this employment, and carrying me through it when our danger was greater than now it is. Shall I now dishonour God and Religion, and betray the People and City of God by my Cowardice? God forbid. This is not the counsel of God, nor of a Friend, but a Plot of mine Enemies, as it here follows. q As if I had an evil Cause or Conscience; as if I were a malefactor, who fled thither for refuge: as if I durst not trust God with my preservation, except I went into the Temple, which it is not lawful, for me, being no Priest, to do.

12 And lo, I perceived r that God had not sent him, but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.

r Partly by considering the sinful nature and pernicious consequence of this Counsel: partly by the suggestion of Gods Spirit, whose counsel and help I sought in this matter: and partly by the event which discovered that there was no such danger from the approach of the Enemy, as was pretended.

13 Therefore was he hired, that I should be afraid, and do so, and sin s, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me t.

s By going into a place forbidden to me; and that in such a time and manner, and upon such an occasion; which would have been both sinful and shameful: See on v. 11. t As a Coward, and conscious of my own Guilt; that so they might make me contemptible and odious, both to my own People, and to the King of Persia.

14 My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works, and on the prophetess Noadiah u, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

u One that falsly pretended to the Spirit of Prophecy, to deceive and destroy Nehemiah. He prays to God to remember and punish these false Prophets, because he was not yet in a capacity to do it, having such powerful Enemies round about him, and so many rich and potent Jews highly discontented for their great loss by his means, ch. 5.

15 So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul x, in fifty and two days y.

x Answering part to our August, and part to September. y To be computed, either, 1. From the time of Sanballat's sending this Letter to him: Or, as most judge, from the beginning of the Work; which, though a great thing, yet it is not at all incredible, considering, 1. That the Walls and Gates were not wholly pulled down by the Chaldæans: For to what purpose should they make that waste of time and labour? 2. That where the Walls were thrown down, yet the Materials remained, which they now used. 3. That in the building of the Walls, they minded not Curiosity, but only Strength and Safety. 4. The great numbers of the Builders, and the prudent Distribution of the Work among them, and their admirable Zeal and Diligence in the Work. 5. That there want not parallel Instances, even in Heathen Authors; for both Curtius and Arian report, that Alexander the Great built the Walls of new Alexandria, which contained above seven Miles in length, within twenty days space. 6. That there was an eminent hand of God in carrying on this Work, which their very Enemies here acknowledge.

z i.e. In their own Opinion, or themselves being Judges. For though ordinarily Men are very prone to judge partially, and still to flatter themselves with vain hopes and fancies, yet this case was so clear and remarkable, that they began to despair. Now they saw that all was lost, that their designs were broken, and that their mischief was now likely to fall upon their own heads. a By that admirable courage, and constancy, and quickness wherewith this Work was managed, notwithstanding all their difficulties and discouragements. b That it was the Work of that mighty God of Israel, whom they had great reason to fear: And withal, they took it for an ill Omen to them, and a sure Presage that God would still watch over that City and People, and crush those who should oppose or disturb them.

17 Moreover, in those days the nobles of Judah † sent many letters unto Tobiah c, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

c Corresponding with him against Nehemiah, and against their own City and Nation.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him d, because he was the son-in-law of Shechaniah the son of Ara; and his son Ichanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam, the son of Berechiah e.

d To be true to him in the prosecution of his wicked designs. e This is noted to shew the mischief of such unequal and forbidden Marriages, and how reasonable and necessary Ezra's Action was in the dissolution of them.

19 Also they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my ‖ words to him: and Tobiah sent letters to put me in fear.

CHAP. VII.

1 NOw it came to pass when the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and the porters, and the singers, and the Levites were appointed a, a i.e. When I had taken order that the Levites should be summoned from all places to celebrate the Dedication of the Wall; as it was done, ch. 12. 27.

2 That I gave my brother Hanani b, and Hananiah the ruler of the Palace c, charge over Jerusalem d: (for he e was a faithful man f, and feared God g above many h.)

b Of whom see ch. 1. 1, 2. c i.e. Of Nehemiah's Court, justly so called, because he lived in great splendor, and like a Vice-Roy, though it was wholly at his own Charge. d To preserve its Peace and Safety, and to take particular care of the shutting the Gates of the City. e To wit, Hananiah last mentioned: For it was needless to say any thing in commendation of Hanani; who had shewn his Piety and Zeal for God and his Country, in taking a tedious Journey from Jerusalem to Shushan, to inform Nehemiah of the sad Estate of Jerusalem, and to implore his helping-hand to relieve it, ch. 1. f He chose not Magistrates and Officers out of any partial or carnal Respects to his own Kindred, or acquaintance, or Favourites, but from true Piety and Prudence, such as were fittest for, and would be most faithful in their Employments. g This is added as the Ground and Reason, both why he was faithful, and why Nehemiah put such Trust and Confidence in him, because he knew that the Fear of God would keep him from yielding to those Temptations to Perfidiousness which he was likely to meet with when Nehemiah was gone; and against which, a Man destitute of God's Fear, hath no sufficient Fence. h More than most Men did, or above the common pitch of Piety.

3 And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot i; and while they k stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them, and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house l.

i i.e. Till it be clear and broad day, when Enemies approaching may be discovered, and the People of the City will be ready for the Defence, in case of an Assault. k i.e. The Watches appointed to that end, as is manifest from the following words. l i.e. Every one in his turn keeping Watch with others in that Watching-place which is next to his House.

4 Now the city was † large and great: but the people were few therein, and the houses were not built m.

m i.e. Not all, nor compleatly built; but only some sleight Buildings of Boards or Stones were made for the present use of the generality of the People.

5 And my God put into mine heart n, to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people o, that they might be reckoned by genealogy p: and I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first q, and found written therein, n This Action, though meerly prudential, he doth not ascribe to himself, or his own Wit, but to the Gift and Grace of God directing and inclining him to it. o Not only for the particular end here mentioned, but for divers other weighty purposes and matters, of which the following Chapters treat. p That so it might appear to what Families each Person belonged, and where their ancient Habitations lay; which, for a great number of them were in the City, the replenishing of which was now his design. q To wit, with Zerubbabel, as it follows, v. 7. But this following Catalogue differs in some Particulars from that, Ezra 2. of which see the Notes there.

6 * These are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity of those that had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem, and to Judah, every one unto his city;

* Ezr. 2. 1, &c.

7 Who came with Zerubbabel: Jeshua, Nehemiah, ‖ Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mizpereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah; the number, I say, of the men of the people of Israel, was this;

29 The children of ‖ Kirjath-jearim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred forty and three. ‖ Or, Kiriath-arim.
30 The men of Ramah, and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.
31 The men of Michmas, an hundred twenty and two.
32 The men of Beth-el and Ai, an hundred twenty and three.
33 The men of the other Nebo, fifty and two.
34 The children of the other * Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four. * See ver. 12.
35 The children of Harim, three hundred and twenty.
36 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty and five.
37 The children of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred twenty and one.
38 The children of Senaah, three thousand nine hundred and thirty.
39 The priests: the children of * Jedaiah of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three. * 1 Chr. 24.7.
40 The children of Immer, a thousand fifty and two.
41 The children of Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.
42 The children of Harim, a thousand and seventeen.
43 The Levites: the children of Jeshua, of Kadmiel, and of the children of ‖ Hodevah, seventy and four. ‖ Or, Hodaviah, Ezr. 2.40. or, Judah, Ezr. 3.9.
44 The singers: the children of Asaph, an hundred forty and eight.
45 The porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, an hundred thirty and eight.
46 The Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of Hasupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 47 The children of Keros, the children of Sia, the children of Padon,
50 The children of Reaiah, the children of Rezin, the children of Ne-koda, 51 The children of Gazzam, the children of Uzza, the children of Phaseah, 52 The children of Besai, the children of Meunim, the children of Nephishesim,

56 The children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha.
58 The children of Jaala, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel; 59 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of ‖ Amon. ‖ Or, Ami.
60 All the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.
61 * And these were they which went up also from Telmelah, Tel-haresha, Cherub, Addon, and Immer: but they could not shew their fathers house, nor their ‖ seed, whether they were of Israel: * Ezr. 2.59. ‖ Or, pedigree.
62 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred forty and two.
63 And of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai, which took one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite to wife, and was called after their name.
64 These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not found: therefore were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.
65 And ‖ the Tirshatha said unto them, that they should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim. ‖ Or, the governor.
66 The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore, 67 Beside their man-servants, and their maid-servants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and they had two hundred forty and five singing-men and singing-women.
68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty and six: their mules, two hundred forty and five:
69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five: six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.
70 And † some of the chief of the fathers gave unto the work: the Tirshatha r gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty basons, five hundred and thirty priests garments. † Heb part.

r i.e. The Governor, to wit, Nehemiah. So it is no wonder that the number of the Moneys, and other things here contributed, differ from that, Ezr. 2. because this is another Collection, that was made in Zorobabel's time, and this in Ezra's.

71 And some of the chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work, twenty thousand drams of gold, two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.
72 And that which the rest of the people gave, was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests garments.
73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel dwelt in their cities; and when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAP. VIII.

1 AND all * the people gathered themselves together as one man, into the street that was before the water-gate a, and they spake unto Ezra * the scribe, to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel. * Ezr. 3.1. * Ezr. 7.6.

a Of which see Nehem. 3.26.

2 And Ezra the priest b brought the law before the congregation, both of men and women, and all † that could hear with understanding c, upon the first day of the seventh month. † Heb. that understood in hearing.

b Who came twelve or thirteen years before Nehemiah to Jerusalem, and either tarried there, or went back to Babylon; being forced to do so by the King's Command, or indispensible Occasions; and then returned again with Nehemiah. c i.e. And such Children as were come to years of understanding.

3 And he read therein before the street that was before the water-gate, † from the morning until mid-day, before the men and women, and those that could understand: and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law. † Heb. from the light.
4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a † pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose, and † Heb. tower of wood.

beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah and Maaseiah on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam d.

d Partly to declare their consent and concurrence with Ezra in what he said and did: and partly that they or some of them might bear a part in the work.

5 And Ezra opened the book in the † sight of all the people (for he was above all the people) and when he opened it, all the people stood up e.

e Either in reverence to Gods Word: of which, see Num. 11. 32. Judg. 3. 20. Or that they might hear his words the more distinctly: or rather, because they observed that Ezra composed himself to prayer, or thanksgiving; which is here generally declared, but doubtless was more particularly, and largely expressed in that assembly, as appears by their answering Amen, amen, to his prayer.

6 And Ezra blessed the LORD the great God: and all the people answered, Amen, amen, with lifting up their hands: and they bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites caused the people to understand the law f: and the people stood in their place g.

f As well the words, which being Hebrew, now needed to be translated into the Chaldee or Syriack language, which was now, and henceforth the common language of that people, who together with their religion, had also in a great part lost their language; as also the sense and meaning of them: they expounded the mind and will of God in what they read, and applied it to the peoples present condition, as they saw fit, as the manner of the prophets generally was. And hence the people were so deeply affected with it. g i. e. In their several places and stations into which the company seems to have been distributed for conveniency of hearing; it being not likely that so vast a Congregation could distinctly hear one mans voice. Or, by their stations, i. e. by the several stations of the Levites, and persons last named; who seem to have had several scaffolds, by comparing this with ch. 9. 4. upon which they stood, as Ezra did upon his pulpit, v. 4.

8 So they read h in the book, in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense i, and caused them to understand the reading k.

h To wit, Ezra and his companions successively or severally. i. e. The meaning of the Hebrew words, which they expounded in the common language. k i. e. That which they read, to wit, the holy Scripture; the action being put for the object, as vision is oft put for the thing seen, and hearing for the thing heard, and fear for the thing feared. So they gave them both a translation of the Hebrew words into the Chaldee, and an exposition of the things contained in them, and of the duty incumbent upon the people by virtue of them, the declaration whereof was a great part of the Priests work. Mal. 2. 7.

9 And Nehemiah, which is ‖ the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest, the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, * This day is holy unto the LORD your God l, mourn not nor weep: for all the people wept m, when they heard the words of the law.

l To wit, as a day of feasting and thanksgiving to God, and rejoycing in his mercies: for otherwise even fasting days were holy to God in the general, though not in the sense here meant. m Out of a deep sense of their great guilt, and of their extreme danger by reason of it.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet n, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared o: for this day is holy unto our LORD p, neither be ye sorry, for the joy of the LORD is your strength q.

n Feast before the Lord, as the duty of the day obligeth you to do. o For the relief of your poor brethren, who else must mourn whilest you rejoyce. See of this duty and practice, Deut. 16. 11, 14. Esth. 9. 19. p Being the feast of trumpets, Levit. 23. 24. and the beginning of this joyful month, wherein so many days of feasting and thanks giving were to be observed. q i. e. Rejoycing in God in the manner prescribed in his word, or serving him with chearfulness, and thankfulness, which is your duty always, but now especially, will give you that strength both of mind and body, which you greatly need, both to perform all the duties required of you, and to indure and oppose all the crafty counsels, and malicious designs of your enemies against you; whereas this dejection of mind, and excessive grief, if you indulge it, will both offend God, and dump your spirits, and weaken your very bodies, and make you unfit for Gods service, or for your own necessary occasions, and so an easie prey to your enemies.

11 So the Levites stilled all the people r, saying, Hold your peace s, for the day is holy, neither be ye grieved.

r Whose passions being once raised, could not suddenly be composed. s Cease from weeping and mournful cries, and turn your lamentations into thanksgivings.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them t.

t Because they now knew Gods mind, and their own duty, which they were resolved to practise; which gave them ground of hope and trust in Gods mercy, and consequently of great and just joy.

13 And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests and the Levites u, unto Ezra the scribe, even ‖ to understand the words of the law x.

u Chusing rather to confess their ignorance for their edification, than vainly to pretend to more knowledge than they had: wherein they shew both true humility, and serious godliness, that they were more careful to learn and practise their duty than to preserve their reputation with the people. x That they might more exactly understand the meaning of some things which they had heard before, and so instruct the people in them.

14 And they found y written in the law which the LORD had commanded † by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in * booths in the feast of the seventh month.

y Upon Ezra's information, and their discourse with him.

15 And that they should publish z and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount a, and fetch olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees b, to make booths, as it is written.

z i. e. And they found this also written, which is to be supplied out of the former verse, that they should, &c. which though it be not particularly required, so as is expressed in the words here following, yet in the general is required by virtue of that precept, Levit. 23. 4. Numb. 10. 10. And according to this translation, it must be understood in the close of this verse, that they did accordingly publish and proclaim, &c. But these words may be rendred, which (as this Hebrew word is rendred here, v. 14. and most commonly) also (so the particle vau is used, Isa. 6. 1. Jer. 1. 3.) also they did publish, &c. For so they did, as is evident and acknowledged; and it seems fit that so much should be expressed; and these words being so particular, and proper to this special occasion, seem to intimate that this is rather an historical relation of what they now did, than a declaration of that which the law required them to do, which was but in very general terms, and not so exact and particular as this following precept is said to be. a The mount of Olives, which was next Jerusalem, and stored with Olive-branches, and probably with the rest here mentioned: for these trees may seem to have been planted hereabouts principally, for the use of this capital City in this very feast, which, though long neglected, should have been celebrated once every year. And therefore this place seems to be here designed as the most eminent place, but with an usual Synecdoche, this place being put for any place nearest to the several cities of Judah, where these branches were to be procured. b Of which see on Levit. 23. 34. Deut. 16. 13.

16 So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house c, and in their courts d, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water-gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim e.

c For the houses there were made flat: of which, see Deut. 22. 8. d Belonging to their own Houses: for these might be any where in the open air. e That gate of the City which led to the Tribe of Ephraim.

17. And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity, made booths, and sate under the booths: for f since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun, unto that day, had not the children of Israel done so g: and there was very great gladness.

f Or, surely, as the Hebrew chi is oft used, as hath been noted before. For the following words seem not so much to give a reason of what was said, or done concerning their dwelling in booths; as to contain the holy writers reflection upon the present celebration of this feast. g Either 1. So as to the matter or substance of the thing. So it implies that all this while while the feaſt of tabernacles was not obſerved. Which ſeems altogether improbable, conſidering how expreſly this was commanded to be celebrated, Levit. 23, &c. and what excellent Kings and Prieſts, and Prophets there had been within that time, ſuch as were perſons of great underſtanding, and moſt expert and ſtudious in Gods Word, and therefore could not be ignorant of ſo plain a duty; and withal ſo throughly pious, and careful, and zealous for God, and the obſervation of his law and worſhip, and ſome of them commended for their univerſal obedience to all Gods commands; and therefore would not be guilty of ſo groſs a neglect. Beſides that this feaſt was obſerved, is ſufficiently implied in 1 Kings 8. 2, 65. & 2 Chr. 7. 9. & is particularly expreſſed, Ezra 3. 4. Or rather, 2. So, as to the manner and circumſtances. They never kept this feaſt ſo joyfully, as the next words declare, having not only the ſame cauſes of rejoycing which they formerly had, but ſome ſpecial cauſes to increaſe their joy, to wit, the remembrance of their ſtupendious deliverance both out of the land of their Captivity, and out of the hands of their wicked and malicious Neighbours ever ſince their return, and eſpecially, now, when they were new building the walls of Jeruſalem; they never kept it ſo ſolemnly and religiouſly: for whereas at other times only the firſt and laſt day of that feaſt were celebrated with an holy convocation, Levit. 23. 35, 36. Joh. 7. 37. now there was an holy convocation, and the people aſſembled, and attended upon the reading of the law every day of this feaſt, as is noted in the next verſe.

18 Alſo day by day, from the firſt day unto the laſt day, he read in the book of the law of God h: and they kept the feaſt ſeven days, and on the eighth day was † a ſolemn aſſembly, * according unto the manner.

* Lev. 23. 36.

h Which was commanded to be done at this feaſt, Deut. 31. 10, 11, 12. though not injoyned to be done every day, as now out of a ſingular zeal they did.

CHAP IX.

1 NOw in the twenty and fourth day of this month, a, the children of Iſrael were aſſembled with faſting, and with ſackcloths, and with earth upon them.

a The next day but one after the feaſt of Tabernacles, which begun on the 14th day, and ended on the 22 day, Levit. 23. for their conſciences having then been fully awakened by the law read to them, and their hearts being full of grief for their great ſins, which they were not allowed to expreſs in that time of publick joy and triumph, now when that was paſt, they reſume their former thoughts and paſſions, and recalling their ſins to mind, ſet apart a day for ſolemn faſting and humiliation.

2 And * the ſeed of Iſrael ſeparated themſelves from all † ſtrangers b, and ſtood and confeſſed their ſins, and the iniquities of their fathers c.

* Ezra 10. 11. Chap. 13. 30.

b From all familiar, and unneceſſary ſociety with the heathens, and particularly from thoſe ſtrange Women whom ſome of them had married. For though Ezra had done this formerly, Ezra 10. as far as he had knowledge of the perſons faulty, and power to redreſs their faults; yet, it ſeems, there were ſome criminals, who were either without his knowledge, or out of his power: or, theſe were ſome new delinquents, that ſince that time had fallen into the ſame error, and ſhewed the truth of their repentance, by the forſaking of their beloved ſins, and deareſt relations. See again, Neh. 13. 3. c Which they confeſs partly as one cauſe of their preſent ſufferings: and partly becauſe they by their practices had juſtified their fathers ſins, and made them their own.

3 And they ſtood up in their places, and read in the book of the law d of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day e, and another fourth part they confeſſed f, and worſhipped the LORD their God g.

d So as they did before, giving them the ſenſe of what they read, of which, ſee on ch. 8. 7, 8. e To wit, for three hours; for there were accounted 12 hours in their day, Joh. 11. 9. Probably they began after the morning ſacrifice, at which divers religious people uſed to be preſent, but now they were all aſſembled together upon this great occaſion: and they continued their work from that time till the evening ſacrifice with which they cloſed the work of the day. f Both Gods mercies, as appears from the matter of the following prayer, and their own ſins, as is expreſſed, v. 2. this day being chiefly ſet apart for that work. g Partly by the acknowledgement and adoration of his wonderful mercy in forgiving their ſins, and ſaving them from the deſerved judgments which they either felt or feared and giving them his law, and the knowledge thereof: and partly by imploring his further grace and mercy to them.

4 Then ſtood up upon the ‖ ſtairs of the Levites h, Jeſhua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried with a loud voice i unto the LORD their God.

h Or, upon the ſcaffold, &c. i. e. Upon ſuch ſtairs, or rather ſcaffolds, or pulpits, as the Levites uſed to ſtand upon, when they taught the people. But you muſt not think that all the perſons here named ſtood in one place, and uttered the following words together; which would have cauſed great confuſion in their ſpeeches, by which means but few of the people, could have diſtinctly heard, or underſtood them, but that they ſtood upon ſeveral pulpits, each of them either teaching of that part of the Congregation which was allotted to him, or praying, or bleſſing God with them. i Thereby teſtifying their deep ſenſe of their ſins and miſeries, and their fervent and importunate deſire of God's mercy.

5 Then the Levites, Jeſhua and Kadmiel, Bani, Hathabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, ſaid k, ſtand up and bleſs the LORD your God for ever and ever l; and bleſſed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe.

k All the following words. Either therefore they all uſed the ſame words, being compoſed, and agreed upon by Ezra and themſelves; or they all prayed in the ſame manner, and to the ſame purpoſe, having agreed among themſelves concerning the matter of their confeſſions and prayers. And theſe are the words which one of them uſed; and it is implied that the reſt of their prayers were of the ſame nature. l From day to day, as long as you live, and to all eternity.

6 Thou, even thou art LORD alone, * thou haſt made heaven, the * heaven of heavens, with all their hoſt, the earth and all things that are therein, the ſeas and all that is therein, and thou preſerveſt them all, and * the hoſt of heaven m worſhippeth thee.

And it is moſt uſual, and reaſonable to underſtand all words properly, where there is no need of a figurative interpretation. And if this were underſtood of metaphorical, and objective worſhipping of God, there ſeems to be no reaſon to appropriate that to the hoſt of Heaven, to wit, the ſtars, ſeeing the hoſts of ſea and earth do in that ſenſe worſhip God no leſs than the ſtars do, namely, in giving Angels and men matter and occaſion of worſhipping and praiſing of God.

22 Moreover, thou gavest them kingdoms, and nations, and didst divide them into corners d: so they possessed the land of Sihon * and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

d Or, into a corner. But the singular number is very commonly put for the plural. This is understood, either, 1. Of the Israelites, to whom God divided by lot the Kingdoms and Nations last mentioned, and gave them all the corners, or sides or quarters (for all these the word signifies) of their land. Or, rather, 2. Of the heathen Nations, whom God in a great measure destroyed, and the remainder of them he dispersed into corners; that whereas before the Israelites came, they had large habitations and dominions, now they were cooped up into corners, some of them into one Town or City, and some into another, in the several corners of their land, as indeed we find them afterward, whilest the Israelites dwelt in a large place, and had the possession of their whole land, some few and small parcels excepted. Compare Deut. 32. 26. where the like phrase is used in the same sense.

23 Their children also multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and broughtest them into the land, concerning which, thou hadst promised to their fathers that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and thou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hand, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them † as they would.

27 * Therefore thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them, and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven: and according to thy manifold mercies thou gavest them saviours, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

† Heb. they returned to do evil.

28 But after they had rest, † they did evil again before thee, therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven, and many times didst thou deliver them, according to thy mercies.

29 And testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law; yet they dealt proudly, & hearkned not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments (which if a man do, he shall live in them f) and † withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck g, and would not hear.

Or he adds mercy, because the covenant in its self was not a sufficient ground of hope, because they having so basely broken it, God was discharged from keeping it, and therefore they fly to Gods free and rich mercy for relief. m Do not thou account it small and insufficient for our punishment, and that it is fit to continue and encrease it. n Strictly and properly so called; for from them was the beginning of all the calamities both of Judah and of Israel, as appears, from 2 King. 15. 19 and 18. 13. Or, the kings of Babylon, so called, 2 Chron. 33. 11.

33 Howbeit, thou art just in all that is brought upon us: for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly.

34 Neither hath our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers kept thy law, nor hearkned unto thy commandments, and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testifie against them.

35 For they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them o, neither turned they from their wicked works.

p In that land wherein heretofore under thee and by thy favour we were rightful lords and owners.

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto the kings whom thou hast set over us q, because of our sins: also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattel r, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress.

q We plow and sow and labour, and thou givest thy blessing to our indeavours; and yet in a great measure this is not for our selves, as formerly it was, but for our kings, to whom we pay great and heavy tributes for these things; of which see Ezra 6. 8. and 7. 24. r Pressing or forcing both us and our beasts to go and do what they please.

a Both in their own names, and in the name of all the rest. It may seem strange that Ezra doth not appear among them. But that might be because he was prevented either by death or by some sickness or other extraordinary impediment for which we have this presumption, that whereas Ezra appears and preacheth and prayeth with Jeshua and Bani &c. before the feast of Tabernacles, ch. 8. v. 4, &c. We have no mention of him, ch. 9. but the whole work of that solemn fast day was managed by them alone without any mention of Ezra, whose name would not have been omitted, if he had been then present. It is true we meet with Ezra after this at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, ch. 12, 36. and therefore he was then freed from this impediment whatsoever it was; but thence it appears that he was not dead. b This is added to distinguish him from others of that name, whereof we have one Neh. 3. 16.

33 For the shew-bread, and for the continual meat-offering, and for the continual burnt-offering l * of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the set feasts, and for the holy things m, and for the sin-offerings n, to make an atonement for Israel, and for all the work of the house of our God.

CHAP XI.

1 AND the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem a: the rest of the people also cast lots, to bring one of ten to dwell in Jerusalem b, the holy city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities.

a Which their very office in some sort obliged them to do. b That the buildings of the City might be compleated, and the Honour and Safety of it better provided for.

2 And the people blessed all the men that willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem c.

c Because they denied themselves, and their own safety and profit for the publick good: for this City was the Butt of all the malicious plots of their Enemies; and for the present it was rather chargeable than beneficial to its Inhabitants, whereas the Country did more easily and certainly afford them supplies.

3 Now these are the chief of the province d, that dwelt in Jerusalem: but in the cities of Judah dwelt every one in his possession in their cities, to wit,
* Ezr.2.43. Israel e, the priests, and the Levites, and the * Nethinims, and the * children of Solomons servants.
* Ezr.2.55.

d i.e. Of Judea, which was now made a province. e i.e. The generality of the People of Israel, whether of Judah, or Benjamin, or any other Tribe; as appears by this general enumeration of all the Inhabitants of the Land, in which either the People of Judah and Benjamin are included under the title of Israel, or they are not here mentioned; which is absurd to think, because they made up the greatest number of them. And these he calls Israel rather than Judah, partly because there were many of the other Tribes now joined and incorporated with them: and partly because none of the Tribes of Israel, except Judah and Benjamin, dwelt in Jerusalem, as appears from the sequel.

4 And at Jerusalem dwelt certain of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin f: of the children of Judah; Athaiah g the son of Uzziah, the son of Zechariah, the son of Amariah, the son

f For to these two Tribes this City anciently and most properly belonged, although some also of other Tribes dwelt in it. Of which, and other things relating to this catalogue, see 1 Chron. 9. 3, &c. g And his Family and relations with him, and under him as their head, as appears from v. 6.

5 And Maaseiah the son of Baruch, the son of Colhozeh, the son of Hazaiah, the son of Adaiah, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zechariah, the son of Shiloni.

6 All the sons of Perez that dwelt at Jerusalem, were four hundred threescore and eight valiant men h.

h Such were most proper for this place and time, because of its many Enemies round about it.

7 And these are the sons of Benjamin: Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Joed, the son of Pedaiah, the son of Kolaiah, the son of Maaseiah, the son of Ithiel, the son of Jesaiah.

8 And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine hundred twenty and eight i.

i So here were more of Benjamin, than of Judah, because the City did chiefly and most properly belong to that Tribe, as hath been noted before.

9 And Joel the son of Zichri was their overseer k: and Judah the son of Senuah, was second over the city.

k The Captain of their Thousand.

10 Of the priests: Jedaiah the son of Joiarib, Jachin.

11 Seraiah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, was the ruler of the house of God l.

l One of the chief Priests, who ruled with and under the High-Priest, See *Numb.*3.32. 1 Chr. 9.11. 2 Chr. 19.11. & 31.13.

12 And their brethren that did the work of the house †, were eight hundred twenty and two: and † of God.
Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pelatiah, the son of Amzi, the son of Zechariah, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchiah.

13 And his brethren chief of the fathers two hundred forty and two: And Amashai, the son of Azareel, the son of Ahasai, the son of Meshillemoth, the son of Immer.

14 And their brethren mighty men of valour, an hundred twenty and eight: and their overseer was Zabdiel, ‖ the son of one of the great men m. ‖ Or, the son of Haggedolim.

m i.e. Of a person then or lately eminent in Valour, or Worth, or Dignity. Or of Gedolim, or Haggedolim, a man so called.

15 Also of the Levites; Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Bunni.

17 And Mattaniah the son of Micha, the son of Zabdi, the son of Asaph, was the principal to begin the thanksgiving in prayer o: and Bakbukiah the second among his brethren, and Abda the son of Shammua, the son of Jeduthun.

22 The overseer also of the Levites at Jerusalem, was Uzzi the son of Bani, the son of Hashabiah the son of Mattaniah, the son of Micha: of the sons of Asaph, the singers were over the business of the house of God p.

p i.e. Were to take care at Jerusalem for the supply of such things as were necessary for the Temple and the service of God, from time to time, whilest others minded the outward business, v. 16. And this Office was very proper for them, both as they were Levites, to whose care those things belonged; and as they were Singers, who were not come to Jerusalem by turns, as other Levites, and as the Priests did, but were constantly to reside there, and therefore were more capable of minding this business. Besides their Employment was not so frequent, nor so great as some others were, and therefore they had more leisure for it.

23 For q it was the kings r commandment con- ‖ Or, a sure ordinance.
cerning them, that ‖ a certain portion should be for the singers, due for every day.

q Or, therefore. For the following words contain either a reason why they were set over that business; or a recompence for for it; or a provision that they might diligently attend to it. r Either, 1. David's, who made this constitution. Or rather, 2. The Kings of Persia, who is called simply the king in the next verse also: who took this care at the request and by the direction of Ezra or Nehemiah. Or this might be Nehemiah's Command, which is called the King's Command, because it was done by the Kings Deputy, or a Commissioner whom the King impowered to do what he saw fit for the House and Service of God, commanding all the People to obey him therein; as he had formerly done to Ezra 7. 18, 20, 23.

24 And Pethahiah the son of Meshezabeel, of the children of Zerah the son of Judah, was at the kings hand s in all matters concerning the people t.

s Or, on the kings part, to determine Civil Causes and Controversies between Man and Man, by the Laws of that Kingdom; which peradventure he understood better than Nehemiah, and therefore was appointed for this work, but still under Nehemiah. Or, according to the kings appointment, as the hand is used, as Numb. 4. 39. and elsewhere. t Either in civil differences between them: or in things between the King and People; as in matters of Tribute, or Grievances, &c. wherein this man possibly was chief Justitiary under Nehemiah.

25 And for the villages, with their fields, some of the children of Judah dwelt at Kirjath-arba u, and in the † villages thereof, and at Dibon, and in the villages thereof, and at Jekabzeel, and in the villages thereof.

y Or, for the Levites (to wit, those of them who were not settled in Jerusalem) there were divisions, i.e. places appointed for them, and distributed among them.

CHAP. XII.

* Ezr. 2. 1. 1 NOw these are the * priests a, and the Levites, that went up with Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua: Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra b, a i.e. The chief of the Priests, as they are called here v. 7. to wit, the heads of those Twenty four courses which David appointed by divine direction, 1 Chr. 24. And whereas there are Twenty four, and here but twenty two, and v. 12, &c. only Twenty, the reason of this difference may possibly be this, because Two of the Twenty four courses were extinct in Babylon, or at least none of them was then returned; and two of the Persons here named, v. 2, 5. to wit, Hattush and Maadiah, may be omitted in the account of the posterity of these persons, v. 12, &c. because they had no posterity. Possibly these were not the same courses which David had appointed, but others which Zerubbabel and Jeshua had constituted in imitation of that order as far as they could. b Either this was another Ezra, or if it were the same mentioned, Ezra 7. he lived to a great Age: which may well be supposed considering his great Sobriety, and abstinence from those evil practices which shorten Mens Lives, and his great piety to which God promised long Life, and withal the special providence of God continuing him so long in such a season wherein the Church of God did greatly need his help and counsel.

c In the repetition of this and some other mens names hereafter v. 14. &c. there are some small variations, which are very frequent in that language.

3 ‖ Shechaniah, ‖ Rehum, ‖ Meremoth,

4 Iddo, ‖ Ginnetho, Abijah d,

5 ‖ Miamin, ‖ Maadiah, Bilgah,

6 Shemaiah, and Joiarib, and Jedaiah,

7 ‖ Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah: these were the chief of the priests, and of their brethren e in the days of Jeshua.

e i.e. Of the Priests, who were their Brethren.

8 Moreover the Levites: Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, which was over ‖ the thanksgiving, he and his brethren.

‖ That is, the psalms of thanksgiving.

9 Also Bakbukiah, and Unni, their brethren were over against them in the watches f.

f i.e. In the places where they were appointed to stand, and wait, and perform their office, one standing over against another, as it is explained, v. 24. ward over against ward; for the Hebrew word is the same there and here. Others, according to their turns or courses, of which see 1 Chron. 25. 9.

10 And Jeshua begat Joiakim g, Joiakim also begat Eliashib h, and Eliashib begat Joiada, g Here follows a Catalogue of the Jewish High-Priests; which was the more necessary, because their times were now to be measured, not by the years of their Kings as formerly, but by their High-Priests. h Of whom see Nehem. 3. 1. & 13. 4, 5

i Generally supposed to be the same man who was High-Priest in the days of Alexander the Great, as Josephus mentions: whence a great difficulty ariseth, how Nehemiah could mention this man who seems not to have been High-Priest till many years after Nehemiah's death. But it seems not necessary that this Jaddua should be the same Person, for he might be the Father of that Jaddua, both being called by the same name. Or, if he were the same, the blessing of a very long Life might be given to this great and excellent Governour, as it was to Ezra, that famous Scribe, as was noted on v. 1. and that for the very same reason. He might also live to see Jaddua, though not to see him High-Priest, which might be many years after. Or this passage might be put into this Book by some sacred or inspired Pen man, there being some, though but few, such passages in the fore-going Books of Scripture, which were added by succeeding men of God in after times.

12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests k, the chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah: of Jeremiah, Hananiah.

k As their Fathers were Priests in the days of Jeshua, so in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the sons of those persons executed the Priesthood in their Fathers steads, some of their Fathers probably being yet living and many of them now dead.

14 Of Melicu, Jonathan: of Shebaniah, Joseph:

15 Of Harim, Adna: of Meraiath, Helkai:

16 Of Iddo, Zechariah: of Ginnethon, Meshullam:

17 Of Abijah, Zichri, of Miniamin, of Moadiah, Piltai:

18 Of Bilgah, Shammua: of Shemaiah, Jehohanan:

19 And of Joiarib, Mattenai: of Jedaiah, Uzzi:

20 of Sallai, Kallai: of Amok, Eber:

21 Of Hilkia, Hashabiah: of Jedaia, Nethaneel.

22 The Levites in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers: also the priests, to the reign of Darius l the Persian.

l Either Darius Codomannus, and then what was said concerning Jaddua, v. 11. must be in part repeated and applied here: or, Darius Nothus; and so this Jaddua, might be Father to him who was in the days of Darius Codomannus, and of Alexander the Great.

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in the Book of the * chronicles m, even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib. * 1 Chr. 9. 14, &c.

m i.e. In the publick Annals or Registers, in which the Genealogies of the several Families were set down by the Jews with great exactness, as all persons agree.

24 And the chiefs of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise, and to give thanks * according to the commandment of David the man of God, ward over against ward n. * 1 Chr. 24, & 25, & 26.

n Of which see on v. 9.

25 Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters keeping the ward, at the ‖ thresholds of the gates o.

‖ Or, treasuries; or assemblies.

o To wit, of the Temple, their watching-place being close by the Thresholds of the Gates, as it now is.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim, the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governour; and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

27 And at the dedication of the wall p of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places q, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both with thanksgivings and with singing with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

p And of the gates which are mentioned v. 30. and of the City it self within the Gates: which is here dedicated to God, and to his Honour and Service, not only upon a general account, by which we ought to devote our selves, and all that is ours, to God; but upon a more special ground, because this was a place which God himself had chosen, and sanctified by his Temple and gracious presence, and therefore did of right belong to him; whence it is oft called the holy City, as hath been observed before. And they restored to God by this dedication, withal imploring the Presence, and Favour, and Blessing of God to this City by solemn Prayers, and Praises, and Sacrifices, wherewith this Dedication was accompanied. See Deut. 20. 5. 1 Kin. 8. 63. Ezr. 6. 17. Psal. 30. title. q To which they were now retired after that great and general Assembly, ch. 8, & 9, & 10.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi.

29 Also from the house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of Geba, and Azmaveth: for the singers had built them villages round about Jerusalem r.

r That they might be near at hand for the service of God, and of his House.

30 And the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall s.

s Partly by sprinkling the water of Purification upon them, by which the Tabernacle and sacred Utensils were purified, Num. 8. and partly by solemn Prayers and Sacrifices.

31 Then I brought up the princes of Judah t upon the wall u, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand x upon the wall toward * the dung-gate:

* Ch. 2. 13. & 3. 13.

t And half of the people with them, as it is expressed afterwards, v. 38. u For the Wall was broad and strong, and so ordered that Men might conveniently walk upon it, as at this day it is in many Cities. x Towards the South and East.

32 And after them went Hoshajah, and half of the princes of Judah, 33 And Azariah, Ezra y, and Meshullam, y Not the Scribe, as is evident from v. 36. but another Ezra.

34 Judah and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah.

* Num. 10. 2. 35 And certain of the priests sons * with trumpets: namely, Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph:

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azareel, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with * the musical instruments of David the man of God, and Ezra the scribe before them.

* 1 Chr. 23. 5.

* Ch. 2. 14. & 3 15. * Ch. 3. 15. 37 And at * the fountain-gate, which was over-against them, they went up by * the stairs of the city of David z, at the going up of the wall above the house of David, even unto * the water-gate eastward.

* Ch 3. 26. & 8. 1, 3, 16.

z By which they went up to the hill of Sion, and City of David.

38 And the other company of them that gave thanks, went over-against them a, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond * the tower of the furnaces, even unto the * broad wall b:

a To wit, on the other side of the City, Northward and East-ward. b Which they made thicker and stronger than the rest of the Wall, for some special reason.

* 2 King. 14. 13. * Ch 3 6. * Ch 3 3. 39 And from above * the gate of Ephraim, and above the * old gate, and above * the fish-gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and * the Tower of Meah, even unto the sheep-gate: and they stood still in the prison gate c.

c Waiting, as also their Brethren did, that they might go together in due order into God's House, there to perfect the solemnity.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God d, and I, and the half of the rulers with me e:

d i. e. In the Courts of the Temple. e And Ezra, and the other half with him, as appears by comparing this with v. 31. 36.

41 And the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah with trumpets.

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer: and the singers † sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer.

43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced: for God had made them rejoice with great joy; the wives also, and the children rejoiced: so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off f.

f Either their loud voices and instruments were heard to a great distance: or the fame of it was spread far and near.

44 And at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings g, for the first-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them out of the fields of the cities the portions ‖ of the law h for the priests and Levites: † for Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites † that waited i.

g Such as they had lately ingaged themselves to give, or other voluntary or prescribed offerings. h i. e. The foresaid first-fruits, and Tithes, and other things which God by his Law appointed for them. i Partly for the eminent Gifts and Graces which they observed in many of them: and partly for the great benefit which they had received by their Ministry: and therefore for the competent provision which hereby was made for them, that so they might wholly wait upon their office, to the Peoples Edification and Comfort.

45 And both the singers and the Porters kept the ward of their God k, and the ward of the purification l, * according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son.

* 1 Chr. 25. & 26.

k i. e. That Ward, or Charge, or business which God had prescribed to them. l And in particular the charge of purification, i. e. of taking care that no unclean person or thing might enter into the House or Courts of the Lord: which care did certainly belong to the Porters, as is expressed 2 Chron. 23. 19. and at this time, and in some sort, as it seems to the singers, who, besides their proper imployment were also over the business of the house of God, as is affirmed ch. 11 22. Which being a general expression, may well comprehend, if it doth not principally design this, that they should take care to keep the house of God free from all pollution. And possibly as the Porters were to take care that no unclean thing might enter there, so if it should through their inadvertency enter in, the Singers were to remove it.

46 For in the days of David * and Asaph m, of old, there were chief of the singers n, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

* 1 Chr. 25. 1, &c.

m And Heman and Jeduthun, 1 Chron. 25. 1. but Asaph only is mentioned here, as the most eminent and useful in that work. n There were some overseers, whose Office it was to see that the Singers were fit for, and diligent in their work: and therefore they took care of it at this time.

47 And all Israel in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers, and the porters every day his portion, and they ‖ sanctified holy things o unto the Levites, * and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

* Num. 18. 26.

o i. e. They sequestred or set apart the First-fruits and Tithes from their own share, and devoted them to the use of the Levites, to whom they belonged. And so did the Levites by the Tithe of the Tithes. Thus they all conscientiously paid their dues to God or his Assigns, and did not prophane those things which God had sanctified, nor take them to their own common use, as divers ungodly or covetous persons had formerly used to do when they had opportunity.

and the Moabite ſhould not come into the congregation of God c for ever;

a Not now preſently after the Dedication of the Wall, and Gates, and City, but upon a certain day; as that Phraſe is very commonly uſed in Scripture without any relation to the time, or things mentioned next before it; to wit, when Nehemiah was returned again from the Perſian Court to Jeruſalem, from which he had been abſent for ſome conſiderable time; in which, ſome Errors and Abuſes had crept in, which now he endeavours to remove. b Partly becauſe it was not only the Prieſts, but alſo the Peoples duty to ſtudy and underſtand God's Law, and their own Duty; and partly, that the People hearing that this was the expreſs Mind and Will of the great God, might the more willingly yield to the following Duties, ſome of which were attended with difficulty, and required Self-denial. c i.e. Not be incorporated into the Commonwealth of Iſrael, nor be joyned with any Iſraelite in Marriage-relation, as appears from v. 3. that Practice being a plain Comment upon this Law. But of this, and the next Verſe, ſee the Notes on Deut. 23. 3, 4.

2 Becauſe they met not the children of Iſrael with bread and with water, but * hired Balaam againſt them, that he ſhould curſe them: howbeit our God turned the curſe into a bleſſing.

* Num. 22. 5. Joſh. 24. 9.

3 Now it came to paſs when they heard the law, that they ſeparated from Iſrael all the mixed multitude d.

d i.e. All the heatheniſh People, with whom they had contracted Alliances: See ch. 9. 2. and Ezra 10. 3.

4 And before † this, Eliaſhib the Prieſt e, † having the over-ſight of the chamber f of the houſe of our God, was allied unto Tobiah g:

e The High-Prieſt, ch. 3. 1. or ſome other Prieſt ſo called; there being divers Eliaſhibs in or about this time, Ezr. 10. 6, 24, 27, 36. though the firſt ſeems moſt probable, by comparing this Verſe with v. 28. and with ch. 12. 10, 11. f i.e. Of the Chambers, as appears from the following Verſe, and from v. 9. where it is called chambers; and from the nature of the thing, the High-Prieſt having the chief power over the Houſe of God, and all the Chambers belonging to it: The Singular Number for the Plural. g The Ammonite, and a violent Enemy to God's People. So this is noted as a great blemiſh to Eliaſhib, and as the cauſe of his other Miſcarriage, noted v. 5.

5 And he had prepared for him a great chamber g, where afore-time they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincenſe, and the veſſels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oyl, († which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the ſingers, and the porters) and the offerings of the prieſts.

g By removing the things which were in it, and uniting divers ſmall Chambers into one, and furniſhing it for the uſe of Tobiah, when he came to Jeruſalem: Whom he ſeems to have lodged there, that he might have more free and ſecret Communication with him, this being in a place where the People might not come.

6 But in all this time was not I at Jeruſalem h: for in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon, came I unto the king i, and † after certain days k ‖ obtained I leave of the king:

h And Eliaſhib took the occaſion of my Abſence to do theſe things, ſuppoſing that I would no more return thither. i To wit, from Jeruſalem, where he had been once and again. k Heb. in the end of days, or of a year; as that word oft ſignifies.

7 And I came to Jeruſalem, and underſtood of the evil that Eliaſhib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the houſe of God.

8 And it grieved me ſore l, therefore I caſt forth all the houſhold-ſtuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

l That ſo ſacred a place ſhould be polluted by one, who, in many reſpects, ought not to have come there; being no Prieſt, a Stranger, an Ammonite, and one of the worſt of that People: And that all this ſhould be done by the permiſſion and order of the High-Prieſt, who, by his Office, ſhould have puniſhed and reformed theſe things in others.

9 Then I commanded, and they cleanſed the chambers m; and thither brought I again the veſſels of the houſe of God, with the meat-offering, and the frankincenſe.

m By ſuch Means and Rites as were then uſual in ſuch Caſes. See Numb. 19. 9.

From the People; who either out of Covetouſneſs, reſerved them to themſelves, contrary to their own ſolemn Agreement and Covenant, ch. 10. 37. or were ſo offended at Eliaſhib's horrid and manifeſt Abuſe of ſacred things, that they abhorred the Offering and Service of God, as others did upon a like Occaſion, 1 Sam. 2. 17. and therefore neglected to bring in their Tithes, &c. which they knew would be perverted to bad uſes. o To his Poſſeſſion in the Country, being forced to do ſo for a Livelyhood.

11 Then contended I with the rulers o, and ſaid, Why is the houſe of God forſaken p? And I gathered them together q, and ſet them in their † place r.

s Partly out of the Reſpect which they had to Nehemiah, and to his Command; and partly becauſe they ſaw they would be applied to their proper Uſes, and not abuſed, as they had been.

13 And I made treaſurers over the treaſuries, Shelemiah the prieſt, and Zadok the ſcribe t, and of the Levites, Pedaiah: and † next to them was Hanan the ſon of Zaccur, the ſon of Mattaniah: for they were counted faithful u, and † their office was to diſtribute unto their brethren x.

y What I have done with an upright Heart, for thy Houſe and Service, be pleaſed graciouſly to accept, and remember for my Good, according to thy Promiſe.

15 In thoſe days ſaw I in Judah ſome treading wine-preſſes on the ſabbath, and bringing in ſheaves, and lading aſſes; as alſo wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burthens, which they brought into Jeruſalem on the ſabbath-day: and I teſtified againſt them z in the day wherein they ſold victuals.

z I proteſted againſt the Action, and admoniſhed them to forbear it.

16 There dwelt men of Tyre alſo therein, which brought fiſh a, and all manner of ware, and ſold on the ſabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jeruſalem b.

a Which they might take in the Sea near Joppa, or bring from Tyre to Joppa by Sea, and thence to Jeruſalem, which was but a ſmall Journey. b The holy City, where God's Houſe and Preſence was, and where the great Judicatories of the Nation were. So this is added as an Aggravation of their Sin, that this was done with manifeſt Contempt both to God and Men.

17 Then I contended with the nobles of Judah c, and ſaid unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and prophane the ſabbath-day?

c i.e. Their chief Men, and Rulers; whom he chargeth with this Sin, becauſe, though others did it, it was by their Countenance or Connivence, and they ſhould and might have puniſhed and reſtrained it.

18 Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us d, and upon this city? yet ye bring more wrath upon Iſrael by prophaning the ſabbath.

d Which you ſo well and ſadly remember, that I need not tell you the particulars.

19 And it came to paſs, that when the gates of Jeruſalem * began to be dark e before the ſabbath, I commanded that the gates ſhould be ſhut, and charged that they ſhould not be opened till after the ſabbath: and ſome of my ſervants ſet I at the gates f, * that there ſhould no burthen be brought in on the ſabbath-day.

h Partly because the Work they were now set upon, though common in its nature, yet was holy in design of it, and had respect unto the Sabbath; and partly because the day in which they were to do this was the Sabbath-day, for the Observation whereof they were obliged to prepare and purifie themselves.
i Either, 1. The Gates of the Temple; but a particular Command was superfluous in that Case, because it was their constant Work and Charge to do this both Sabbath-days, and every day. Or rather, 2. The Gates of the City; for of them he spake last, v. 19. and not daring to trust the common Porters of those Gates, not being able always to employ his Men in that Work, he committeth the Charge of them, for the present Season, and upon the Sabbath-days, to the Levites, to whom the Care of sanctifying the Sabbath did properly belong. k Whereby he intimates, that though he mentioned his good Works, as things wherewith God was well pleased, and which he had promised to reward, yet he neither did, nor durst trust to their Merit, or his own Worthiness; but when he had done all, he judged himself an unprofitable Servant, and one that needed God's infinite Mercy and Indulgence to pardon all his Sins; and particularly, those Infirmities and Corruptions which adhered to his good Deeds.

This and the following Punishments were justly inflicted upon them, because this Transgression was contrary both to a very plain and express Law of God, and also to their own late solemn Covenants and Promises; of which see Ezra 10. Nehem. 10. 30.

ESTHER.

THis Book was constantly received for a part of the Canon of the Scripture by the People of the Jews; whose Authority herein is the more considerable, because to them were committed the Oracles of God, Rom. 3. 2. to keep them safely, and transmit them carefully to Posterity. And it is a very strong presumption that they were true to their Trust, that our blessed Lord, and his holy Apostles, who taxed the Jews with many Faults, both greater and less, never charged them with Unfaithfulness herein; which, if the Jews had been guilty, they would certainly have done, and by their Office were obliged to do it, for the Instruction and Caution of the Christian Church, whose Faith was built no less upon the Writings of the Prophets, than upon the Doctrine of the Apostles. The Pen-man of it is, both by Jewish and Christian Interpreters, ancient and modern, thought to be Mordecai; who was both an holy Man of God, and a principal Actor in this History: And therefore, who so fit and proper for it as himself?

CHAP. I.

1 NOw it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus a, (this is Ahasuerus which reigned from India even unto Ethiopia, over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces b.)

a Qu. Who was this King? Ans. It is confessed and manifest, that this was one of the Kings of Persia; but which of them it was, is not yet agreed, nor is it of any necessity for us now to know. But it is sufficiently evident that this was either, 1. Darius Hystaspis, as divers both Jewish and Christian Writers affirm; for his Kingdom was thus vast, and he subdued India, as Herodotus reports: And one of his Wives was called Atossa, which differs little from Hadassa, which is Esther's other Name, Esth. 2. 7. Or, 2. Xerxes; whose Wife, as Herodotus notes, was called Amestris, which is not much differing from Esther; by whom all these things were transacted acted while he was potent and prosperous, before his unhappy Expedition against the Grecians. Or, 3. Artaxerxes Longimanus; to whom the Characters of Ahasuerus, represented in this Book, do not disagree. And whereas it is objected, that by this Account Mordecai must be a Man of about an hundred and forty Years old, and consequently Esther, who is called his Unkle's Daughter, ch. 2. 7. must be too old to make a Wife for the King; as for Mordecai, it may be granted, there being divers Instances of Persons of greater Age than that in sacred and prophane Historians; and for Esther, it may be said that she was his Unkle's Grand-daughter, nothing being more frequent, than for the names of sons or daughters to be given to more remote Posterity. b So seven new Provinces were added to those hundred and twenty mentioned, Dan. 6. 1.

2 That in those days, when the king Ahasuerus sate on the throne of his kingdom c, which was in Shushan the ‖ palace d, c i. e. Either was lately advanced to it; or rather, was setled in the peaceable Possession of it. d Or, the castle; or, the chief; or, royal city, as both Jewish and Christian Interpreters render it. Shushan might be the proper name of the Palace, which thence was given to the whole City. Here the Kings of Persia used to keep their Courts chiefly in Winter, as ordinarily they were in Ecbatana in Summer.

3 In the third year of his reign, he made a feast unto all his princes, and his servants; the power e of Persia and Media, the nobles and princes of the provinces being before him.

e i. e. The mighty Men; the chief Officers of State, and Commanders of all his Forces; whom, by this splendid Entertainment, he endeavoured to oblige and assure to himself.

4 When he shewed the riches of his glorious kingdom, and the honour of his excellent majesty, many days, even an hundred and fourscore days f.

f Making every day a magnificent Feast, either for all his Princes, or for some of them, who might come to the Feast successively, as the King ordered them to do. The Persian Feasts are much celebrated in Authors for their Length and Luxury.

5 And when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that were † present g in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, seven days, in the court of the garden h of the king's palace.

g Both such as constantly resided there, and such as were come thither upon their Occasions, of whatsoever Condition or Quality. h The Persian Gardens were exceeding large and pleasant.

6 Where were white, green, and ‖ blue hangings, fastened with cords of fine linen and purple, to silver rings, and pillars of marble: the beds i were of gold and silver, upon a pavement ‖ of red and blue, and white, and black marble.

i For in those Eastern Countries, and ancient Times, they did not sit at Tables, as we do, but rested or leaned upon Beds; of which we have many Testimonies, both in Scripture, as Esth. 7. 8. Amos 2. 8. and 6. 4. Job. 13. 23. and in all other Authors.

7 And they gave them drink in vessels of gold, (the vessels being divers one from another) and † royal wine in abundance, † according to the state of the king.

k i. e. According to this Law which the King had now made, that none should compel another to drink more than he pleased; which the Persians, and other loose and heathenish Nations used to do; though that practice was condemned by the wise and sober Heathens; and, among others, by this great Prince. Or, no man did compel another to drink according to the Law; i. e. as by the Laws or Orders of the Persians, prescribed and used in their Feasts, they might have done, if not restrained by this Law.

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women l, in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

l Whilest the King entertained the Men. For this was the common Custom of the Persians, that Men and Women did not feast together, but in several places.

10 On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven ‖ chamberlains m, that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king,

m Or, Eunuchs; which were much in use, and in favour in the Eastern Courts, and particularly with the Persian Emperors, as ancient Histories inform us.

11 To bring Vashti the queen before the king, with the crown royal, to shew the people and the princes her beauty: for she was † fair to look on.

12 But the queen Vashti refused to come n at the king's commandment † by his chamberlains: therefore was the king very wrath, and his anger burned in him.

n Being favoured in this Refusal by the Laws and Customs of Persia; which was, to keep Men's Wives, and especially Queens, as much as might be, from the view of other Men.

13 Then the king said to the wise men, which knew the times o, (for so was the king's manner towards all that knew law and judgment p:

o Either, 1. The Histories of former times, what Princes have done in such cases as this was: Or, 2. Things done, or to be done in time, what was just and fit to be done, or what was the Law and Judgment in these cases, as the following words explain it, and how and when things were to be done. See my Notes on 1 Chron. 12. 32. Times are oft put in Scripture, and other Authors, for the things done in them, by a common Figure called a Metonymy of the Adjunct. p To wit, to consult with them in all matters of moment.

14 And next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the * seven princes of Persia and Media, * which saw the king's face q, and which sate the first in the kingdom r.)

* Ezr. 7. 14.
* 2 Kin. 25. 19.

q Which had constant freedom of Access to the King, and familiar Converse with him: Which is thus expressed, because the Persian Kings were very seldom seen by their Subjects. r Which were his chief Counsellors and Officers, and had the Precedency from all others.

15 † What shall we do unto the queen Vashti, according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus, by the chamberlains?

16 And Memucan answered r before the king, and the Princes, Vashti the queen hath not done wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people s that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

r Who, though last named, spake first; either because the King first asked him, or because he was the chief of them all, either in Dignity, or in Reputation; or because it then was, as now it is in many places, the custom for the youngest Counsellors or Judges to deliver their Opinion first. s By giving them an Example and Encouragement to contemn and disobey their Husbands. It is a Crime of an high nature, and therefore deserves an exemplary Punishment.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's Princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

t Contempt in the Wives, and thereupon Wrath in the Husbands; and consequently, Strife in Families; which may produce great and general Mischiefs.

19 † If it please the king u, let there go a royal commandment † from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians, and the Medes, † that it be not altered x, that Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus, and let the king give her royal estate † unto another that is better than she.

† Heb. if it be good with the king. † Heb. from before him. † Heb. that it pass not away, Ch. 8 8. † Heb. unto her companion

u Which this cunning Politician knew it would do. x Which Caution was necessary for his own Security; for if the Queen should recover her State, and the King's Favour, he was most likely to fall into his Displeasure.

20 And when the king's decree which he shall make, shall be published throughout all his empire, (for it is great) all the wives shall give to their husbands honour, both to great and small.

21 And the saying † pleased the king and the princes y, and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

† Heb was good in the eyes of the king.

y Partly because their own Authority and Interest was concerned in it: And especially, by the singular Providence of God, who designed to bring about his own great Work by this small Occasion.

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, that every man should bear rule in his own house, and † that it should be published according to the language of every people z.

z That all sorts of Persons, not Men only (who by Study or Travel, many times understand divers Languages) but the Women also might understand it, and therefore be inexcusable if they did not comply with it. For which end, it was not only written in each Language, for that Writing might come but to few hands; but moreover, it was published in the several Cities and Towns by such Persons as used to publish the King's Edicts. Other, That he should speak in the language of his own people; i.e. that Men should not, in compliance with their Wives, who were oft of other Nations and Languages, inure themselves to it, and bring their Wives Language into the Family; but that Men should use their own proper Language, and cause their Wives and Children to use it; this being one sign of Dominion, and therefore frequent after this time among the Greeks and Romans, who, together with their victorious Arms, brought in their Language into other Countries, and in a great measure imposed it upon them.

CHAP. II.

1 After these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembred a Vashti, and what she had done, and what was decreed against her.

a With Grief and Shame, that in his Wine and Rage he had so severely punished, and so irrevocably rejected so beautiful and desirable a Person, and that for so small a Provocation; to which she was easily led by the Modesty of her Sex, and by the Laws and Customs of Persia.

2 Then said the king's servants b that ministred unto him, Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king:

b Who for their own Interests, were obliged to quiet the King's Mind, and procure him another amiable Consort.

3 And let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young Virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, † unto the custody of ‖ Hege the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women c, and let their things for purification d be given them.

‖ Or, Hegai, Ver. 8.

c Either, 1. Of the Virgins, who are oft called Women; as here, v. 11. 12. and elsewhere: So it is a Synecdoche. Or, 2. Of all the Women, both Virgins and Concubines: Only the Virgins he himself took care of, as requiring more Care and Caution; and the Concubines he committed to Shaashgaz, v. 14. his Deputy. d i.e. To cleanse them from all Impurities and Indecencies; to anoint, and perfume, and adorn, and every way prepare them for the King's Presence and Service; for the legal Purifications of the Jews he never regarded.

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king, be queen instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king, and he did so.

5 Now in Shushan the palace there was a certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai, the son of Jair, the the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite,

† 2 Kin 24.15. 2 Chr. 36.10. Jer. 24.1.

6 * Who e had been carried away from Jerusalem, with the captivity which had been carried away with Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away.

e This may be referred, either, 1. To Kish, Mordecai's Grand father, last mentioned: Or, 2. To Mordecai, who was then carried away, either, 1. In the Loins of his Parents, in which Sense Levi is said to be tithed in Abraham, Heb. 7. and as those Persons named, Ezra 2. are said to have been carried away by Nebuchadnezzar, Ezra 2. 1. which is not true of the most of them in their own Persons, but only as in their Fathers Loins. Or, 2. In his own Person; and then indeed, he was a Man of more than ordinary Years: But of that see the Notes on ch. 1. 1.

7 And he † brought up Hadassah (that is Esther f) his uncle's daughter, for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was † fair and beautiful, whom Mordecai (when her father and mother were dead) took for his own daughter.

f Hadassah was her Hebrew Name before her Marriage, and she was called Esther by the King after it.

8 So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai, that Esther was brought g also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

g Or, taken, and that by force, as that word oft signifies: So great was the Power and Tyranny of the Persian Kings, that they could and did take what Persons they liked to their own use.

9 And the maiden pleased him h, and she obtained kindness of him, and he speedily gave her her things for purification, with † such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her out of the king's house, and † he preferred her and her maids unto the best place of the house of the women.

h Partly, because she was very beautiful, and therefore he supposed she would be very acceptable to the King; which would be his Advantage: And partly by the Divine Power, which moveth the Hearts of Men which way he pleaseth.

10 Esther had not shewed her people, nor her kindred: for Mordecai had charged her that she should not shew it i.

i Lest the Knowledge hereof should either make her contemptible or odious, or bring some Inconvenience to the whole Nation, as things might happen. But there was also an hand of God in causing this to be concealed, for the better Accomplishment of that which he designed, though Mordecai was ignorant of it.

11 And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house, † to know how Esther did, and what should become of her.

12 Now when every maid's turn was come to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women k (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, six months with oyl of myrrh l, and six months with sweet odours m, and with other things for the purifying of the women.)

k Who were kept so long, partly for their better Purification, as it here follows; partly out of State, as that which became so great a King; and partly that being so long in safe Custody, the King might be sure that the Child begotten upon any of them was his own. l Which is useful, both for making the Skin exactly clean, and smooth and solid, and for giving Strength and Vigour to the Body. m Which was the more necessary, because the Bodies of Men and Women, in those hot Countries, did of themselves yield very ill scents, if not corrected and qualified by Art.

13 Then thus n came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired o was given her, to go with her out of the house of the women, unto the king's house.

n Thus purified and prepared, and thus as it follows. o For Ornament, or by way of Attendance.

14 In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines p: she came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that she were called by name.

p Whereof Darius Nothus is reckoned to have had three hundred and sixty.

15 Now when the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail, the uncle of Mordecai (who had taken her for his daughter) was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing q, but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women appointed: and Esther obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her r.

q To shew that she was not desirous to please the King, and that she was brought to the King without, and against her own Inclination and Choice. r i.e. Was admired by them for her Beauty.

16 So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus, into his house royal s, in the tenth month (which is the month Tebeth) in the seventh year of his reign.

s And into his Bed, as is implied. To which it is not strange, if she, though a vertuous Person, did, in those Circumstances, yield; considering the Infirmity of Humane Nature, and of that Sex, and the state of those times, when Plurality of Wives were permitted, and Concubines were owned as Wives; and these Virgins were, by this Action, made his Wives or Concubines. Besides, it is not known to us, whether Mordecai and Esther ther had not direction, or a Diſpenſation from God in this matter; it being certain, that God can diſpenſe with his own poſitive Laws.

17 And the king loved Eſther above all the women, and ſhe obtained grace and ‖ favour † in his ſight, more than all the virgins; ſo that he ſet the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen inſtead of Vaſhti.

18 Then the king made a great feaſt unto all his princes and his ſervants, even Eſther's feaſt, and he made a † releaſe to the provinces t, and gave gifts according to the ſtate of the king.

t i. e. He took off a good part of thoſe heavy Taxes which the Perſian Kings laid upon their People.

19 And when the virgins were gathered together the ſecond time u, then Mordecai ſat in the king's gate x.

u Either, 1. When Eſther with others were brought to the King's Houſe, as it was decreed above, v. 2, 3. Which is called the ſecond time, becauſe they had taken this Courſe once before, when Vaſhti was choſen Queen: But there is no mention of any ſuch former uſe; and by the manner of propoſing, it ſeems to have been a new Project. Or, 2. Since Eſther was declared Queen: For though that Point was determined, the King's Luſt was not yet ſatisfied; and therefore, being pleaſed with the former Experiment, he deſired another Collection of Virgins, whom he might make his Concubines. And this ſeems beſt to agree with the following words. For it is not probable that Mordecai ſat at the King's Gate, till Eſther was Queen; for till then, he only walked before the court of the women's houſe, as is expreſſed, v. 11. x Either, 1. Voluntarily, to learn the progreſs of Affairs: Or rather, 2. By Office, as one of the King's Guard, or Miniſters; being advanced to this Place by Eſther's Favour, though without any diſcovery of her Relation to him.

20 Eſther had not yet ſhewed her kindred, nor her people; as Mordecai had charged her: for Eſther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when ſhe was brought up with him.

21 * In thoſe days (while Mordecai ſat in the king's gate) two of the king's chamberlains, ‖ Bigthan and Tereſh, of thoſe which kept the † door y, were wroth, and ſought * to lay hand z on the king Ahaſuerus.

* See Eſt. 4. 1. ‖ Or, Bigthana, ch. 6. 2. † Heb. the threſhold. * An opportunity.

y Either, 1. of the King's Chamber; or, 2. Of his Court: and ſo they ſat in the Gate, as Mordecai did, who by that means contracting ſome familiar Acquaintance with them, might make ſome diſcovery of their Minds and Deſign. z i. e. Violent hand; to kill him, as this Phraſe is uſed, ch. 3. 6. and elſewhere.

22 And the thing was known to Mordecai, who told it unto Eſther the queen, and Eſther certified the king thereof, in Mordecai's name.

23 And when inquiſition was made of the matter, it was found out; therefore they were both hanged on a tree: and it was written in the book of the Chronicles before the king a.

a This may be referred, either, 1. To the Writing, to note that this was written in the King's Preſence, by Scribes, who were continually preſent with the King, to write all remarkable Paſſages happening in the Court from time to time: Or, 2. To the Book, which was laid up before the King, that he might more eaſily and frequently peruſe it, for his own delight or direction.

CHAP. III.

1 AFter theſe things did king Ahaſuerus promote Haman the ſon of Hammedatha the * Agagite a, and advanced him, and ſet his ſeat above all the princes that were with him b.

* See Eſth. 3. 10.

a i. e. An Amalekite, of the Royal Seed of that Nation, whoſe Kings were commonly and ſucceſſively called Agag, as hath been obſerved before. It is true, he is called a Macedonian in the Apocryphal Additions to this Book; and ſo he might be by his Birth or Habitation in that place, though by his Original, he was of another People. b Gave him the firſt Place and Seat, which was next to the King. Compare 2 King. 25. 28.

2 And all the king's ſervants that were in the king's † gate bowed, and reverenced Haman; for the king had ſo commanded concerning him: but Mordecai * bowed not, neither did him reverence c.

† Gr. court. * See Eſth. 5. 19.

c The Reaſon of which obſtinate Refuſal was, either, 1. The Quality of the Perſon, that he was not only an infamouſly wicked Man, and an Heathen, but of that Nation which God had obliged the Iſraelites to abhor and oppoſe from Generation to Generation; and therefore he durſt not ſhew outward Reſpect to a Man whom he did, and ought inwardly to contemn: Or rather, 2. The nature of the thing: For the Worſhip required was not only civil, but divine: Which, as the Kings of Perſia did undoubtedly arrogate to themſelves, and expect and receive from their Subjects and others who came into their Preſence, as is affirmed by divers Authors, ſo they did ſometimes impart this Honour to ſome of their chief Favourites, that they ſhould be adored in like manner. And that it was ſo here, ſeems more than probable, becauſe it was wholly ſuperfluous, and almoſt ridiculous to give an expreſs and particular Command to all the king's ſervants that were in the king's gate, as here it was, to pay a civil Reſpect to ſo great a Prince, which of courſe they uſed, and were ever obliged to do: And therefore a Divine Honour muſt be here intended. And that a Jew ſhould deny this Honour, or the outward Expreſſions of it, to ſuch a Perſon, is not ſtrange ſeeing the wiſe and ſober Græcians did poſitively refuſe to give this Honour to the Kings of Perſia themſelves, even when they were to make their Addreſſes to them: And one Timocrates was put to death by the Athenians for worſhipping Darius in that manner.

3 Then the king's ſervants which were in the king's gate, ſaid unto Mordecai, Why tranſgreſſeſt thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to paſs, when they ſpake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to ſee whether Mordecai his matters would ſtand d, for he told them that he was a Jew e.

d i. e. Whether he would perſiſt in his Refuſal, and what the Event of it would be. e And therefore did not deny this Reverence to Haman out of Pride, or any perſonal Grudge againſt him; much leſs out of a rebellious Mind, and Contempt of the King's Authority and Command; but meerly out of Conſcience, becauſe he was a Jew, who was obliged to give this Honour to none but to God only.

5 And when Haman ſaw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath.

6 And he thought ſcorn f to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had ſhewed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman ſought to deſtroy all the Jews g, that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahaſuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

f He thought that particular Vengeance was unſuitable to his Quality, and to the greatneſs of the Injury. g Which he attempted, partly from that implacable Hatred which, as an Amalekite, he had againſt them, partly from his Rage againſt Mordecai, and partly from Mordecai's Reaſon of this Contempt, becauſe he was a Jew: which, as he truly judged, extended it ſelf to all the Jews, and would equally engage them all in the ſame neglect and hatred of his Perſon.

7 In the firſt month (that is the month Niſan) in the twelfth year of King Ahaſuerus, * they caſt Pur, that is, the lot, before Haman, from day to day, and from month to month h, to the twelfth month i, that is the month Adar.

* Ch. 9. 24.

h The Diviners caſt Lots, according to the cuſtom of thoſe ancient, and Eaſtern People, what Day and what Month would be moſt lucky; not for his Succeſs with the King (of whoſe Compliance with his Requeſt he made no doubt) but for the moſt effectual and univerſal Extirpation of the Jews. i Wherein appears both his implacable Malice, and unwearied Diligence in ſeeking Vengeance on them with ſo much, and ſo long trouble to himſelf, and God's ſingular Providence in diſpoſing the Lot to that time, that ſo the Jews might have ſufficient ſpace of time to get the Decree reverſed, as they did.

8 And Haman ſaid unto king Ahaſuerus, There is a certain people k ſcattered abroad, and diſperſed among the people l, in all the provinces of thy kingdom m, and * their laws are divers from all people n, neither keep they the king's laws o; therefore it is not † for the king's profit to ſuffer them p.

* Ezr. 4. 13. Act. 16. 20. † Heb. meet, or equal.

k Mean and contemptible, not worthy to be named. l Who therefore, if tolerated, may poyſon all thy Subjects with their pernicious Principles; and whom thou mayeſt eaſily cruſh, without any great noiſe or difficulty. m For though many of their Brethren were returned to their own land, yet great numbers of them ſtayed behind; either becauſe they preferred their Eaſe and worldly Commodities before their ſpiritual Advantages, or becauſe they wanted conveniency or opportunity for a Remove; which might happen from divers Cauſes. n They have peculiar and fantaſtical Rites, and Cuſtoms, and Religion; and therefore are juſtly offenſive to all thy People, and may either infect them with their Conceits, or occaſion great Diſſentions and Diſtractions among them. o As is manifeſt by Mordecai's bold Contempt of thy late Edict concerning me; which being done by him as a Jew, the whole Nation are involved in his Crime, and are prepared to do ſo when they have occaſion. p To live in his Kingdom. I do not ſeek herein ſo much my own Revenge, as thy Service.

9 If it pleaſe the king, let it be written q † that they may be deſtroyed, and I will † pay ten thouſand talents of ſilver r to the hands of thoſe that have the charge of the buſineſs s, to bring it into the king's treaſuries.

q Let there be a written Edict from the King. r Whether theſe were Hebrew, or Babyloniſh, or Græcian Talents, we cannot certainly know: But whichſoever they were, it was a vaſt ſum to be paid out of his own Eſtate; which he was willing to ſacrifice to his Revenge. s Either, 1. Of this buſineſs, to wit, of deſtroying the Jews; which as ſoon as they have procured to be done, I will pay the Money into their hands, that by them it may be paid into the King's Exchequer. Or rather, 2. Of the King's Buſineſs, or of the Treaſures; as is implied in the following words. I will pay it to the King's Receivers, that they may put it into the King's Treaſures.

t That he might keep it as a Badge of his ſupream Authority under the King; and that he might uſe it for the ſealing of this Decree, which now he deſired, or of any other, as hereafter he ſhould ſee fit. Compare ch. 8. 2, 8. and Gen. 41. 42. u So he was both by Inclination, as he was an Amalekite; and eſpecially, by this malicious and deſtructive Deſign and Reſolution.

11 And the king ſaid unto Haman, the ſilver is given to thee x, the people alſo, to do with them as it ſeemeth good to thee.

x Keep it to thine own uſe, I do not deſire it, I accept thy Offer for the Deed.

12 Then were the king's ‖ ſcribes y called on the thirteenth day of the firſt month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province, according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; in the name of king Ahaſuerus was it written, and ſealed with the king's ring.

y This he did ſo ſpeedily, though it was a Year before the intended Execution, leſt the King ſhould change his Mind, either by his own Clemency, or by the Perſwaſion of others.

13 And the letters were ſent by poſts into all the king's provinces, to deſtroy, to kill, and to cauſe to periſh all Jews, both young and old, * little children and women, in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month (which is the month Adar) and to take the ſpoil of them for a prey z.

z Which was to oblige them to the greater Severity and Readineſs to execute this Edict for their own Advantage.

14 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province, was publiſhed unto all people, that they ſhould be ready againſt that day.

15 The poſts went out, being haſtened by the king's commandment a, and the decree was given in Shuſhan the palace: and the king and Haman ſat down to drink, but the city Shuſhan b was perplexed.

a Either by this Decree, made in the King's Name, or by ſome particular and ſucceeding Command, which Haman could eaſily obtain from the King. b Not only the Jews, but a greater number of the Citizens; either becauſe they were related to them, or engaged with them in worldly Concerns, or out of Humanity and Compaſſion towards ſo vaſt a number of innocent People, now appointed as Sheep for the Slaughter; or out of a fear either of ſome Sedition or Diſturbance which might ariſe by this means, or of ſome Damage which might accrue to themſelves or Friends, who happily, under this pretence, might be expoſed to Rapine or Slaughter; or of a publick Judgment of God upon them all for ſo bloody a Decree.

CHAP. IV.

1 WHen Mordecai perceived all that was done, Mordecai rent his cloths, and put on ſack-cloth with aſhes, and went out into the midſt of the city, and cried with a loud and bitter cry a:

a Partly to expreſs his deep Senſe of the Miſchief coming upon his People, partly to move the pity of others to do what they could to prevent it, and partly that by this means it might come to the Queen's Ear.

2 And came even before the king's gate; for none might enter into the king's gate, b cloathed with ſack-cloth c.

b And therefore he might not ſit there, as he had hitherto done. c Leſt it ſhould give the King any occaſion of Grief or Trouble.

3 And in every province whitherſoever the king's commandment, and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and faſting, and weeping, and wailing, and † many lay in ſack-cloth and aſhes.

4 So Eſther's maids, and her † chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved, and ſhe ſent raiment to cloath Mordecai d, and to take away his ſack-cloth from him: but he received it not.

d That ſo he might be capable of returning to his former place, if not of coming to her to acquaint her with the Cauſe of t at unuſual Sorrow.

5 Then called Eſther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, † whom he had appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, to know what it was, and why it was.

6 So Hatach went forth to Mordecai, unto the ſtreet of the city, which was before the king's gate.

7 And Mordecai told him of all that had happened unto him, and of the ſum of money that Haman had promiſed to pay to the king's treaſuries for the Jews, to deſtroy them.

8 Alſo he gave him the copy of the writing of the decree, that was given at Shuſhan to deſtroy them, to ſhew it unto Eſther, and declare it unto her, and to charge her i that ſhe ſhould go in unto the king, to make ſupplication unto him, and to make requeſt before him for her people.

i Not only in his own Name, to whom ſhe manifeſted a ſingular Reſpect, though his Relation to her was yet unknown, but alſo in the Name of the great God.

9 And Hatach came and told Eſther the words of Mordecai.

10 Again Eſther ſpake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment to ſay unto Mordecai, 11 All the king's ſervants, and the people of the king's provinces do know k, that whoſoever, whether man or woman, ſhall come unto the king into the inner court l, who is not called, there is one law of his to put him to death m, except ſuch to whom the king ſhall hold out the golden ſceptre, that he may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king theſe thirty days n.

k By common Fame of this received Cuſtom and Law. l Within which, the King's Reſidence and Throne was. m This was decreed, partly to maintain both the Majeſty and the Safety of the King's Perſon; and partly by the Contrivance of the greater Officers of State, that few or none might have Acceſs to the King but themſelves, and their Friends. And many ſuch ſevere Laws there were in the Perſian Court, which prophane Hiſtorians relate; as that if any Perſon looked upon one of the King's Concubines, or wore any of his own Cloths, or drunk of that Water which he had appropriated to himſelf, and other ſuch like things, he was puniſhed with Death. n Which gives me juſt cauſe to ſuſpect and fear, that the King's Affections are alienated from me; and therefore, that neither my Perſon nor Petition will be acceptable to him.

12 And they told to Mordecai Eſther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to anſwer Eſther, Think not with thy ſelf that thou ſhalt eſcape in the king's houſe o, more than all the Jews.

o i. e. Being, or becauſe thou art in the King's Houſe, and an eminent Member of his Family.

14 For if thou altogether holdeſt thy peace at this time, then ſhall there † enlargement and deliverance ariſe to the Jews from another place p, but thou and thy father's houſe ſhall be deſtroyed q: and who knoweth, whether thou art come to the kingdom for ſuch a time as this r?

p From another Land, and by another Means; which God can, and, I am fully perſwaded, will raiſe up. q By the righteous and dreadful Judgment of God, puniſhing thy Cowardice, and Self-ſeeking, and thy Want of Love to God, and to his and thine own People. It is probable God hath raiſed thee to this Honour for this very Seaſon; and therefore go on courageouſly, and doubt not of the Succeſs.

15 Then Eſther bad them return Mordecai this anſwer,

16 Go,

16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are †Heb. found. † present in Shushan, and fast ye s for me, and neither eat nor drink t three days, night or day: I also and my maidens u will fast likewise x, and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law y; and if I perish, I perish z.

s And pray: Which was the main business; to which, fasting was only an help, and an Hand-maid. t To wit, so as you use to do, either deliciously, or plentifully. Leave off your common Meals, Dinners by Day, and Suppers at Night, and eat and drink no more than meer Necessity requires; that so you may give your selves to constant and fervent Prayers, for which your ordinary Re-pasts will unfit you. For it is not likely that she would impose the burthen of absolute Fasting so long upon all the Jews, which very few of them were able to endure. And so the like Phrase is taken, Act. 27. 33. where he saith, This is the fourteenth day that ye have continued fasting, having taken nothing. u Which she had chosen to attend upon her Person; and were, doubtless, either of the Jewish Nation, or proselyted by her, or others means, to that Religion. x Which may belong, either, 1. To the thing only; that as they did fast, so she would: Or rather, 2. To the time of three days, and three nights; for so she might do, though she went to the King on the third day: For the Fast began at Evening, and so she might continue her Fast three whole Nights, and two whole Days, and the greatest part of the third; a part of a Day being reputed a Day in the Account of Scripture, and other Authors: Of which see on Matth. 12. 40. Yea, she might fast all that Day too; for it is probable she went not to the King till he had dined, when she supposed she might find him in the most mild and pleasant Humour, and then returned to her Apartment, where she fasted till the Evening. y Which is against the Law now mentioned. z Although my Danger be great and evident, considering the expressness of that Law, and the uncertainty of the King's Mind, and that Severity which he shewed to my Predecessor Vashti; yet, rather than neglect my Duty to God, and to his People, I will go to the King, and cast my self chearfully and resolutely upon God's Providence for my Safety and Success.

17 So Mordecai †went his way, and did accor-†Heb. passed. ding to all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAP. V.

1 NOw it came to pass on the third day a, that
* Ch. 6. 8. & 8. 15. Esther put on her * royal apparel b, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house.

a Of which see the Notes on ch. 4. 16. b That she might render her self as amiable in the King's Eyes as she could; and so obtain her Request.

2 And it was so when the king saw Esther the
* Ch. 5. 8. & 7. 3. queen standing in the court, that she * obtained favour in his sight: and the king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand c: so Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre d.

c In testimony that he pardoned her Presumption, and accepted her Person, and was ready to grant her Petition. d In token of her thankful Acceptance of the King's great Favour, and of her Reverence and Submission to his Majesty, whereof that might possibly be an usual Token; and it may be, at the King's Call and Invitation to her to come near him.

3 Then said the king unto her, What wilt thou,
* See Mar. 6. 23. queen Esther? and what is thy request? * it shall be even given thee, to the half of the kingdom.

4 And Esther answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman e come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him.

e Whom she invited, partly that by shewing such respect to the King's great Favourite, she might insinuate her self into the King's good Opinion and Affection; and partly, that if she saw fit, she might then present her Request to the King.

5 Then the king said, cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

6 And the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine f, What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

f Either, 1. At the latter end of the Feast, when they used to drink Wine more freely; whereas in the former part, most of their drink was Water: Or, 2. At her Banquet; which is so called, because it consisted not of Meats, which probably the King had plentifully eaten before at his own Table, but of Fruits and Wines; which Banquets were very frequent among the Persians.

7 Then answered Esther, and said, My petition, and my request is;

8 If I have found favour in the sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and †Heb. to do. † to perform my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do to morrow as the king hath said g.

g I will acquaint thee with my humble Request. She did not present her Petition at this time, but delayed it till the next Meeting; either through Modesty, or because she was a little daunted with the King's Presence, and had not yet good Courage to propose her Request: Or in Policy, because she would further engage the King's Affection to her, by a second Entertainment; and would also intimate to him, that her Petition was of a more than ordinary nature: And principally, by direction and disposition of the Divine Providence, which took away her Courage, or Utterance for this time, that she might have a better opportunity for it the next time, by that great Accident which happened before it.

9 Then went Haman forth that day, joyful, and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that he stood not up, nor moved for him h, he was full of indignation against Mordecai.

h Partly, lest he should seem, or be interpreted to give him that Adoration which he hitherto had justly denied him; partly because by his bloody and barbarous design and practice, he had put off all Humanity, and forfeited all Respect; and partly to shew how little he feared him, and that he had a firm Confidence in his God, that he would deliver him and his People in this great Exigency; which he was the more encouraged to hope, because God had inclined Esther's heart to that pious and valiant Resolution of interceding with the King; which, he doubted not, would meet with good Success.

10 Nevertheless, Haman refrained himself i, and when he came home, he sent and † called for †Heb. caused to come. his friends, and Zeresh his wife.

i From taking present Vengeance upon Mordecai; to which he was strongly inclined, and which he might easily have effected, either by his own, or any of his Servants hands, without any expectation or fear of Inconvenience to himself; who having obtained Licence to destroy an whole Nation, could easily get a Pardon for having killed one obscure and infamous Member of it. Herein therefore God's wise and powerful Providence appeared, in disposing Haman's Heart, contrary to his own Inclination and Interest; and making him, as it were, to put Fetters upon his own Hands.

11 And Haman told them of the glory of his riches k, and the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king.

k Partly to gratifie his own vain-glorious Humour, and partly to aggravate Mordecai's Impudence in denying him civil Respect, and to alleviate his own Vexation caused by it.

12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared, but my self; and to morrow am I invited unto her also with the king l.

l Thus he makes that matter of glorying, which was designed for, and the Occasion of his utter Ruin. So ignorant are the wisest Men, and subject to fatal Mistakes; rejoycing when they have most cause of Fear and Grief, and sorrowing for those things which tend to Joy and Comfort.

13 Yet all this availeth me nothing m, so long as

m i. e. Gives me no Content. Such Torment did his Envy and Malice bring upon him. n Enjoying that Honour and Privilege without disturbance, and denying me the Worship due to me by my Place, and by the King's Command; though this last, and the chief Cause of his Rage, he was somewhat ashamed to express. Either Mordecai was come, having laid by his Sack-cloth for this time, that he might be in a Capacity of coming thither, and so of understanding how matters proceeded. Besides, this was a private Fast, and so he was not obliged always to wear his Sack-cloth in publick, during the whole time of the Fast, though he did once come abroad with it, that the Cause of it might be publickly known, and so come to Esther's Ears.

14 Then said Zeresh his wife, and all his friends unto him, Let a † gallows be made of fifty cubits †Heb. tree. high o, and to morrow speak thou unto the king, that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleased Haman, and he caused * the
* Ch. 7. 9. gallows to be made.

o That it might be more conſpicuous to all, and thereby be more diſgraceful to Mordecai, and ſtrike all Haman's Enemies with the great dread of deſpiſing or oppoſing him.

CHAP. VI.

1 ON that night † could not the king ſleep a, and he commanded to bring the book of records of the chronicles b; and they were read before the king c.

a How vain are all the Contrivances and Endeavours of this fooliſh impotent Man againſt the wiſe and omnipotent God, who hath the hearts and hands of Kings, and all Men, perfectly at his diſpoſe; and can, by ſuch trivial Accidents (as they are accounted) change their minds, and produce ſuch momentous and terrible effects? b His mind being troubled he knew not how, nor why, he chuſeth this for a divertiſement, God putting this Thought and Inclination into him; for otherwiſe, he might have diverted himſelf, as he uſed to do at other times, with his Wives or Concubines, or Voices and Inſtruments of Muſick; which was far more agreeable to his temper. c Until the Morning, when he intended to riſe out of his Bed.

2 And it was found written, that Mordecai had told of ‖ Bigthana and Tereſh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the † door, who ſought to lay hand on the king Ahaſuerus.

3 And the king ſaid, What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then ſaid the king's ſervants that miniſtred unto him, There is nothing done for him p.

p He hath had no Recompence for this great and good Service. Which might happen either through the King's Forgetfu'neſs, or through the Envy of the Courtiers, or becauſe he was a Jew, and therefore odious and contemptible.

4 And the king ſaid, Who is in the court? (now Haman was come q into the outward court of the king's houſe r, to ſpeak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.)

q Early in the Morning, becauſe his Malice probably would not ſuffer him to ſleep; and he was impatient, till he had executed his deſired Revenge; and he was reſolved to watch for the very firſt opportunity of ſpeaking to the King, before he was engaged in other matters. r Where he waited, becauſe it was dangerous to come into the inner Court without ſpecial Licence, ch. 4. 11.

5 And the king's ſervants ſaid unto him, Behold, Haman ſtandeth in the court. And the king ſaid, Let him come in.

† Heb. in whoſe honour the king delighteth.

6 So Haman came in, and the king ſaid unto him, What ſhall be done unto the man s † whom the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman thought in his heart t, To whom would the king delight to do honour, more than to my ſelf?)

s He names none, becauſe he would have the more impartial Anſwer. And probably, he knew nothing of the difference between Haman and Mordecai. t As indeed, he had great reaſon to preſume, becauſe he had not yet forfeited that Favour which the King had ſhewed to him above all others.

† Heb in whoſe honour the king delighteth.

7 And Haman anſwered the king, For the man † whom the king delighteth to honour, † Heb. let them bring the royal apparel.

8 † Let the royal apparel u be brought † which the king uſeth to wear, and the horſe that the king rideth upon x, and the crown royal which is ſet upon his head y:

u His outward Garment, which was made of Purple, interwoven with Gold, as Juſtin and Curtius relate. x Uſually: Which was well known both by his Excellency, and eſpecially, by his peculiar Trappings and Ornaments. Compare 1 King. 1. 33. y Either, 1. upon the King's head: Or, 2. Upon the Horſe's head; which ſeems beſt to agree, 1. With that ancient Chaldee Interpreter, and other Jews, who take it thus. 2. With the ſignification and order of the Hebrew words. 3 With the following Verſes, in which there is no further mention of this Crown, but only of the Apparel, and of the Horſe, to which the Crown belonged, as one of his Ornaments. 4. With the Cuſtom of the Perſians; which ſome affirm to have been this, to put the Crown upon the head of that Horſe upon which the King rode.

9 And let this apparel and horſe be delivered to the hand of one of the king's moſt noble princes, that they may array the man withal, whom the king delighteth to honour, and † bring him on horſeback through the principal ſtreet of the city, and proclaim z before him, Thus ſhall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

z i. e. Cauſe this to be proclaimed, to wit, by ſome publick Officer appointed for that Service. Compare Gen. 41. 43.

10 Then the king ſaid to Haman, Make haſte, and take the apparel, and the horſe, as thou haſt ſaid, and do even ſo to Mordecai the Jew, that ſitteth at the king's gate: † let nothing fail of all that thou haſt ſpoken.

11 Then took Haman the apparel, and the horſe, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horſeback through the ſtreet of the city, and proclaimed a before him, Thus ſhall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

a Either himſelf, or by the Officer.

12 And Mordecai came again to the king's gate b: but Haman haſted to his houſe, mourning, and having his head covered c.

b To his former Place and Office; ſhewing that as he was not overwhelmed by Haman's Threats, and malicious Deſign, as appears by ch. 5. 9. ſo now he was not puffed up with all this Honour. Beſides, he came thither to attend the iſſue of the main Buſineſs, and to be at hand to aſſiſt or encourage the Queen, if need were; which now he was more capable of doing than hitherto he had been. c In token of his Shame and Grief for his unexpected, and great diſappointment of his Hope and Deſire, and for the great Honour done to his moſt deſpiſed and abhorred Adverſary; and this by his own hands, and with his own publick diſgrace; and for ſuch further Inconveniences as this unlucky Omen ſeemed to preſage to him.

13 And Haman told Zereſh his wife, and all his friends, every thing that had befallen him. Then ſaid his wiſe men d, and Zereſh his wife unto him, If Mordecai be of the ſeed of the Jews e, before whom thou haſt begun to fall, thou ſhalt not prevail againſt him, but ſhalt ſurely fall before him f.

d The Magicians, whom, after the Perſian manner, he had called together, to conſult with upon this great and ſtrange Emergency. e Which they were told, and was generally ſuppoſed, but they were not infallibly ſure of it. f This they concluded, either, 1. By Rules of Policy, becauſe Haman's Reputation and Intereſt was hereby ſinking, and Mordecai (whom they underſtood to be a Man of great Wiſdom and Courage, and Government of himſelf) was now got into the King's Favour, and thereby was likely to gain an Opportunity of making his Addreſſes to the King; who being of a mild Diſpoſition, might eaſily be moved to a Diſ-like (if not Revocation) of his own bloody Decree; and conſequently, to a Deteſtation of that Perſon who had procured it. Or, 2. By former Experience, and the Obſervation of God's extraordinary Actions on the behalf of the Jews, and againſt their Enemies, in this very Court and Kingdom. Or, 3. By Inſtinct and Inſpiration to their Minds; either from God, who might ſuggeſt this to them, as he did other things to other wicked Men, Balaam, Caiaphas, &c. for his own greater Glory, and the Good of his People; or from the Devil, who, by Gods permiſſion, might know this, and reveal it to them who ſought to him in their ſuperſtitious and idolatrous Methods.

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and haſted to bring Haman g unto the banquet that Eſther had prepared.

g Who was now ſlack to go thither, by reaſon of the great dejection of his own Mind, and the fear of a worſe Entertainment from the King and Queen than he had formerly received.

CHAP. VII.

1 SO the king and Haman came † to banquet with Eſther the Queen.

2 And the king ſaid again to Eſther on the ſecond day, * at the banquet of wine a, What is thy petition, queen Eſther? and it ſhall be granted thee: and what is thy requeſt? and it ſhall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.

* Ch. 5. 6.

a So it is called, to note that it was not deſigned for a Feaſt to fill their Bellies, but rather for a Banquet, to delight and pleaſe their Palates with Wine and other delicacies. See on ch. 5. 8.

3 Then Eſther the queen anſwered and ſaid, If I have found favour in thy ſight, O king, and if it pleaſe the king, let my life be given me at my petition b, and my people c at my requeſt.

b It is my humble and only Requeſt, that thou wouldſt not give me up to the Malice of that Man that deſigns to take away my Life, and will certainly do it, if thou doſt not prevent it. c And the Lives (which is eaſily ſupplied out of the fore going Branch) of my people the Jews, of whom I am deſcended.

* Ch. 3. 9.

† Heb. that they ſhould deſtroy, and kill, and cauſe to periſh.

4 For we are * ſold d, I and my people e, † to be deſtroyed, to be ſlain, and to periſh f: but if we had been ſold for bond-men, and bond-women, I had held my tongue g, although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage h.

d By the Craft and Cruelty of that Man, who offered a great Sum of Money to purchase our Destruction. e For we are all given up to his Malice and Rage, without any Exception of my own Person. f She useth variety of Expressions, to make the deeper Impression upon the King's Mind. g Because that Calamity had neither been irrecoverable, nor intolerable, nor yet unprofitable to the King; for whose Honour and Service, I should willingly have submitted my self and People to any kind of Bondage. h His ten thousand Talents, if paid into the King's Treasury, would not repair the King's Loss in the Customs and Tributes which the King receives from the Jews within his Dominions.

5 Then the king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, Who is he? and where is he i † that durst presume in his heart to do so k?

i The Expressions are short and doubled, as proceeding from a discomposed and enraged Mind. k i.e. To circumvent me, and by Subtilty to procure an irrevocable Decree, whereby not only my Estate should be so much impaired, and so many of my innocent Subjects be destroyed without Mercy, but my Queen also should be involved in the same Danger and Destruction.

6 And Esther said, † The adversary and enemy is l † this wicked Haman. Then Haman was afraid ‖ before the king and the queen.

l Of the King, and of my Person and People.

7 And the king arising from the banquet of wine in his wrath, went into the palace-garden m; and Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen: for he saw n that there was evil determined against him by the king.

m Partly as disdaining the company and sight of so ungrateful and audacious a Person, partly to cool and allay his troubled and inflamed Spirits, and partly to consider within himself the hainousness of Haman's Crime, and the Mischief which himself had done by his own Rashness, and what Punishment was fit to be inflicted upon so great a Delinquent. n By the violent Commotion of the King's Mind and Passions.

8 Then the king returned out of the palace-garden, into the place of the banquet of wine, and Haman was fallen upon the bed o whereon Esther was. Then said the king, Will he force the queen also p † before me in the house q? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they r covered Haman's face s.

o Or, by, or beside the bed, on which the Queen sat at meat, after the manner; where he was fallen upon his knees, and upon the ground, at her feet, as humble Suppliants used to do, and as the Queen did at the King's feet, ch. 8. 3. p Will he now attempt my Queen's Chastity, as he hath already attempted her Life? His Presumption and Impudence, I see, will stick at nothing. He speaks not this out of a real Jealousie, for which there was no cause in those circumstances; but from an exasperated Mind, which takes all occasions to vent it self against the person who gave the provocation; and makes the worst construction of all his words and actions. q In my own presence and Palace. r i.e. The King's and Queen's Chamberlains then attending upon him. s Partly that the King might not be offended or grieved with the sight of a Person whom he now loathed, and partly because they looked upon him as a condemned Person; for the faces of such used to be covered.

* Ch. 1. 10. † Heb. tree.

9 And * Harbonah, one of the chamberlains t, said before the king, Behold also the † gallows fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, who had spoken good for the king u, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, Hang him thereon.

t Who knew this, either by his own observation, or by the information of some of his Brethren, who were lately sent to Haman's house, ch. 6. 14. where they might easily see it, or at least, hear of it. And this he said, either out of a distaste which he had taken against Haman, for his great insolency, and barbarous cruelty; or in compliance with the King's inclinations, and the Queen's desires. u Even to the saving of the King's life, ch. 2. 21, 22, 23. and therefore deserved a better requital than this even from Haman, if he had not basely preferred the satisfaction of his own Revenge before the preservation of the King's Life.

10 So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared x for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath pacified y.

x Which stood in his own house, as was now said; and made the punishment more grievous and ignominious. y Judgment being now most justly executed upon this abominable Criminal.

CHAP. VIII.

1 ON that day did the king Ahasuerus give the house of Haman a, the Jews enemy, unto Esther the queen: and Mordecai came before the king b, for Esther had told what he was unto her c.

a With all his Goods and Estate; which being justly forfeited to the King, he no less justly bestows it upon the Queen, to compensate the danger to which Haman had exposed her. b i.e. Was, by the Queen's desire, admitted into the King's Presence, and Favour, and Family; and, as it seems, made one of the seven Princes. c i.e. How nearly he was related to her; which, till this time, she had wisely concealed; this being the fit season to declare it.

2 And the king took off his ring d which he had taken from Haman, and gave it unto Mordecai. And Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman e.

d That Ring which he had formerly given to Haman, for that present, or any further use, ch. 3. 10. he now gives to Mordecai; and with it, that Power and Authority, whereof this Ring was a sign; making him, as Haman had been, the Keeper of his Signet. e As her Steward, to manage that great Estate for her as he thought fittest.

3 And Esther spake yet again before the king, and fell down at his feet, and † besought him with tears, to put away the mischief of Haman f the Agagite, and his device that he had devised against the Jews.

† Heb. and she wept and besought him.

f To repeal that cruel Decree; of which, see ch. 3. 13.

4 Then the king held out the golden sceptre g toward Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king, g In token that he accepted her Person and Petition, and that she should stand upon her feet.

5 And said, If it please the king, and if I have found favour in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and I be pleasing in his eyes h, let it be written to reverse † the letters devised by Haman i the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, ‖ which he wrote to destroy the Jews which are in all the king's provinces:

h She useth various Expressions, that she might insinuate her self into the King's Favour, by such a full and repeated resignation and submission of her self to the King's good Pleasure. i She prudently takes off all the Envy and hatefulness of the Action from the King, and lays it upon Haman; who had, for his own wicked and selfish ends, contrived the whole business, and circumvented the King in it: Which she alledgeth as a reason why it should be repealed, because it was surreptitiously and craftily procured.

6 For how can I † endure to see the evil k that shall come unto my people? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

k My heart will sink under it, and I shall never be able to survive it.

7 Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen, and unto Mordecai the Jew, Behold, I have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged l upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

l You see how ready I have been to grant your Requests, and I do not repent of my Favour to you, and am ready to grant your further desires, as far as the Law will permit me to do.

8 Write ye also for the Jews m, as it liketh you, in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring n: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, * may no man reverse o.

* See ch. 1. 19. Dan. 6. 8, 12, 15.

m On their behalf, to the Governors and Commanders of the King's Forces, or to whom you please. n I offer you my Authority and Seal, to confirm whatsoever you shall think fit to write. o This Reason may belong either, 1. To the writing of these present Letters; and so the Sense is, These Letters will be most effectual, being no less irrevocable than the former; and coming last, will repeal the former: Or, 2. To the former Letters; as a Reason why he could not grant their Desires in recalling them, because they were irrevocable by the Law of the Medes and Persians. And this Sense, though rejected by many, seems to be the truest, because here is no mention of reversing Haman's Letters, which Esther had desired, v. 5. and the King denied, for the Reason here alledged; and because the following Letter doth not contain one word about the reversing of the former, nor doth it take away that power which was given to all Rulers to destroy all the Jews, ch. 3. 12, 13. but only gives the Jews Power and Authority to stand up in their own defence, v. 11. which, all circumstances considered, was sufficient for their preservation.

9 Then were the king's scribes called at that time in the third month (that is the month Sivan) on the three and twentieth day thereof p, and it was written (according to all that Mordecai commanded) unto the Jews q, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies, rulers of the provinces r, which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language.

p Which was above two months after the former decree. All which time God suffered the Jews to lie under the terror of this dreadful day, partly that they might be more throughly humbled for, and purged from those many and great sins under which they lay; partly and particularly that they might be convinced of their great sin and folly in neglecting the many offers and opportunities they had of returning to their native Country, and to the free and full exercise of the true Religion, which could be had no where but in Jerusalem; by which means they being now dispersed in the several parts of this vast Dominion, were like to be a very easie prey to their Enemies, whereas their Brethren in Judæa were in abetter capacity to preserve themselves: partly that their most malicious and inveterate Enemies might have an opportunity of discovering themselves to their ruine, as the event shewed: and partly for the greater illustration of Gods glorious Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness, in giving his People such an admirable and unexpected deliverance. Yet God so ordered things, that this Letter should be sent in due time before it was too late: for there were yet near nine Months to come before that appointed day. q That they might understand their Liberty, and be encouraged to use it for their own defence. r That they should publish and disperse them into all parts, that both themselves and others might take notice of the Kings Pleasure and Kindness to the Jews.

10 And he wrote in the king Ahasuerus name, and sealed it with the kings ring, and sent letters by posts on Horse-back, and riders on mules, camels, and young dromedaries s:

s Which were not employed in the sending of the former Letter: but this coming later required more care and speed, that the Jews might be eased from the torment of their present Fears, and have time to furnish themselves with necessaries for their own defence.

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews, which were in every city † to gather themselves together, and to stand for their life t, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish all the power of the people u, and province, that would assault them, both little ones, and women x, and to take the spoil of them for a prey:

t To stand up and fight for the defence of their Lives against all that should seek to destroy them. u Either Governours, or governed, without any exception either of Age, Dignity, or Sex, as it follows. x Which is here added, because it was put into the former decree; and to strike the greater terror into their enemies; and according to the Laws and customs of this Kingdom; whereby Children were punished for their Parents offences: which also in some cases was allowed and practised in sacred story. Yet we read nothing in the execution of this decree of the slaughter of Women or Children, nor is it probable that they should kill their innocent Children, who were so indulgent to their Families, as not to meddle with the spoil.

12 Upon one day, in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar, 13 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was † published unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to avenge themselves on their Enemies.

14 So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being hastened, and pressed on by the kings commandment y, and the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

y By his particular and express Command to that purpose.

15 And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king, in royal apparel of || blue and white, and with a great crown of gold z, and with a garment of fine linen, and purple; and the city of Shushan a rejoiced and was glad:

z Which the chief of the Persian Princes were permitted to wear, but with sufficient distinction from the Kings Crown. a Not only Jews but the greatest number of the Citizens, who by the Law of Nature written upon their hearts, had an abhorrency from bloody Counsels and designs, and a complacency in acts of benignity and Mercy: or for other reasons; of which see on Chap. 3. 15.

16 The Jews had light b, and gladness, and joy c, and honour d.

b Which is oft put for gladness, as 2 Sam. 22. 29. Job 18. 5, 6. Psal. 27. 1. because light is pleasant and disposeth a man to Joy, whereas darkness inclines a man to sorrow. c This explains the former Metaphor by two words expressing the same thing, to note the greatness of the Joy. d Instead of that contempt under which they had lain.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the kings commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast and a good day e: and many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews f fell upon them.

e i. e. A time of feasting, and rejoicing, and thanksgiving. f Whom possibly they had irritated by their former threatnings, and now gave this evidence of their Repentance, that they were willing to submit to that severe precept of Circumcision.

CHAP. IX.

1 NOw in the twelfth month (that is the month Adar) on the thirteenth day of the same, when the kings commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them a, (though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them.)

a In that day which was selected by Haman with great Industry and Art, as the most lucky day, and which their Enemies had oft times formerly thought of, and no doubt threatned the Jews with it.

2 The Jews gathered themselves together in their cities, throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as sought their hurt; and no man could withstand them b: for the fear of them c fell upon all people.

b Their Enemies though they did and were allowed to take up Arms against them, yet were easily conquered and destroyed by the Jews. c Who had such potent Friends at Court, and so great a God on their side, who by such unusual and prodigious Methods (whereof doubtless they had been particularly informed) had brought about such a mighty and unexpected deliverance.

3 And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants and the deputies, and † officers of the king d || helped the Jews: because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

† Heb. those which did the business that belonged to the king.

d Heb. and all them that did the Kings business; i. e. Not only the chief persons designed by the foregoing words, but all his other Ministers or Officers of what quality soever.

4 For Mordecai was great e in the kings house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai waxed greater and greater.

e i. e. The greatest in Place, and Power, and Favour with the King, both for his near relation to his beloved Queen, and for his good service done to him in preserving his Life, and managing his Affairs; and for those excellent Abilities and Vertues which he discovered in him; and especially by the disposition of the heart-ruling God.

5 Thus the Jews smote all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did † what they would unto those that hated them.

† Heb. according to their will.

6 And in Shushan the palace f the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men g.

f i. e. In the City so called, as was noted before ch. 1. 2. it not being probable either that they would make such a slaughter in the Kings palace, or that they would be suffered so to do. g Whom by long experience they knew to be their constant and inveterate Enemies, and such as would watch all opportunities to destroy them; which also they might possibly now attempt to do. Part of them also might be Friends and Allies of Haman, and therefore the avowed Enemies of Mordecai.

7 And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha,
8 And Poratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha,
9 And Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha, 10 The ten sons of Haman, the son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews, slew they; but on the spoil laid they not their hand h.

h Either because they were desirous it should come into the Kings Treasury: or because they would leave it to their Children, that it might appear that what they did that day was not done out of malice to their Persons and Families, or covetousness of their Estates, but out of meer necessity, and by that great and approved Law of Self-preservation, and that they were ready to mix Mercy with Judgment, and would not deal with their Enemies so ill as it was apparent that their Enemies intended to do against them.

11 On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace, † was brought before the king b.

b Possibly with evil design to incense the King against the Jews.

12 And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the kings provinces i? now what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: or what is thy request further? and it shall be done.

i In which doubtless many more were slain. So that I have fully granted thy Petition. And yet, if thou hast any thing further to ask, I am here ready to grant it.

13 Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan, to do to morrow also according to this days decree k, and † let Hamans ten sons be hanged upon the gallows l.

k i. e. To kill their implacable Enemies. For it is not improbable that the greatest and worst of them had politickly withdrawn or hidden themselves for that day; after which, the Commission granted to the Jews being expired, they confidently returned to their homes; where they were taken and slain by virtue of this private and unexpected decree. l They were slain before; now let their Bodies be hanged upon their Fathers Gallows, for their greater Infamy, and the terror of all others who shall presume to abuse the King in like manner, or to perswade him to execute such cruelties upon his own Subjects. This custom of hanging up the Bodies of Malefactors after their death was frequent among the Jews and Persians also, as is well known.

14 And the king commanded it so to be done; and the decree was given at Shushan, and they hanged Hamans ten sons.

15 For the Jews that were in Shushan gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan, but on the prey they laid not their hand.

16 But the other Jews that were in the kings provinces gathered themselves together, and stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand; but they laid not their hand on the prey:

17 On the thirteenth day m of the month Adar, and on the fourteenth day † of the same, rested they, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

m This belongs not to the Feast, but to the work done before it. The meaning is, This they did, i. e. they slew their Foes, at was now said, v. 16. upon the 13th day.

18 But the Jews that were at Shushan, assembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof: and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

19 Therefore n the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwalled towns o, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar, a day of gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

n To wit, because they did their whole work upon the 13th day, as was noted v. 17. to which this manifestly relates, the 18th verse coming in as it were by way of Parenthesis. o Heb. In the cities of the villages, i. e. in the lesser Cities and Villages: which are here opposed to the great City Shushan, and those who dwelt in it.

20 And Mordecai wrote these things p, and sent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far.

p Either, 1. The Letters here following. But that is distinctly mentioned in the next words. Or, 2. The History of these things which was the ground of the Feast which Mordecai knew very well ought to be had in remembrance, and to be told to their Children and Posterity, through all ages, according to the many commands of God to that purpose and the constant practice of the holy men of God in such cases.

21 To stablish this among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same q yearly:

q Because both these days had been set apart this year, the latter at Shushan, the former in other parts; and because that great work of God which was the ground of this solemnity had been done both upon the 13th, and the 14th days.

22 As the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day: that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor r.

r Which they used to give upon days of Thanksgiving; of which see Nehem. 8. 10.

23 And the Jews undertook s to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them.

s Having by this means opportunity to gather themselves together upon any occasion, the chief of them assembled together and freely, and unanimously consented to Mordecai's desire in this matter, and bound it upon themselves and Posterity.

24 Because Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and * had cast Pur (that is, the lot) to † consume them, and to destroy them.

* Ch. 3. 7.

† Heb. crush.

25 But † when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters that his wicked device which he devised against the Jews, should return upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows:

† Heb. when she came.

26 Wherefore they called these days Purim, after the name of ‖ Pur; therefore for all the words of this letter, and of that which they had seen t concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

t i. e. Both for the respect which they justly bare to Mordecai's Letter; and because they themselves had seen and felt this wonderful work of God on their behalf.

27 The Jews ordained, and took upon them, and upon their seed, and upon all such as joined themselves unto them u, so as it should not † fail, that they would keep these two days, according to their writing x, and according to their appointed time every year:

u i. e. Gentile Proselytes; who were obliged to submit to other of the Jewish Laws, and therefore to this also; the rather because they enjoyed the benefit of this days deliverance; without which the Jewish Nation and Religion had been in a great measure, if not wholly extinct in the World. x i. e. According to that writing which was drawn up by Mordecai with Esther's consent, v. 23. 29. and afterwards confirmed by the consent of all the Jews in the several places.

28 And that these days should be remembred, and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that these days of Purim should not † fail from among the Jews, nor the memorial of them † perish from their seed.

29 Then Esther the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with † all authority y, to confirm this second letter of Purim.

y The former Letter v. 20. did only recommend, but this enjoins, the observation of this solemnity; because this was not only Mordecai's Act, who yet had by the King's Grant a great Power and Authority over the Subjects of that Kingdom, and consequently over the Jews, but it was the Act of all the Jews, binding themselves and Posterity to it, v. 27. Or, with all might or efficacy, and as that word usually signifies: He pressed it with all earnestness and vehemency.

30 And he sent the letters unto all the Jews, to the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, with words of peace and truth z.

z Or, even words of peace and truth. Which may respect either, 1. The form of the writing, wherein after the custom, he saluted them with hearty wishes of their true Peace or prosperity, or of the continuance of those two great blessings of God, truth, i. e. the true Religion, and Peace, either among themselves, or with all men, that they might peaceably and quietly enjoy and profess the truth. Or, 2. The manner of his writing which was with peace, i. e. friendship and kindness to his Brethren, and truth, i. e. sincerity; which is the more noted and commended in him, because it is so unusual in such great Courtiers, as he now was. Compare ch. 10. 3. or the matter of his Writing; which was to direct and persuade them to keep both peace and truth, i. e. both to live peaceably and lovingly both both one with another, and with all their Neighbours, not insulting over them upon their confidence in Mordecai's great power, or upon this late and great success, as men naturally and commonly do, nor giving them any fresh provocations, and yet holding fast the true Religion in spight of all the artifices or hostilities of the Gentiles among whom they lived.

31 To confirm these days of Purim in their times appointed, according as Mordecai the Jew, and Esther the queen, had injoined them, and †Heb for their souls. as they had decreed † for themselves and for their seed, the matters of the fasting and of their cry ‖.

‖ For or about those great and overwhelming calamities which were decreed to all the Jews, and for the removing of which not only Esther, and the Jews in Shushan, but all other Jews in all places, as soon as they heard those dismal tidings did doubtless according to the precepts of Scripture, and the constant practice of their godly Predecessors in all Ages, fly to that last and only Refuge of seeking to God by Fasting, and earnest Prayers, and strong Cries unto God; which God was pleased graciously to hear, and in answer thereunto to give them this amazing Deliverance. And this was that which they were now to remember, to wit, the greatness of their danger, and of their rescue from it. And accordingly the Jews use to observe the first of these days with Fasting and crying, and other expressions of vehement grief and fear, and the latter with Feasting, and Thanksgiving, and all demonstrations of Joy and Triumph.

32 And the decree of Esther † confirmed these matters of Purim, and it was written in the book *.

† Who had received Authority and commission from the King to impose this upon all the Jews. * Either in the publick Registers of that Kingdom: Or rather, in the Records which the Jews kept of their most memorable passages.

CHAP. X.

1 AND the king Ahasuerus laid a tribute upon the land, and upon the isles of the sea a.

a i. e. Upon all his Dominions, whether in the main continent or in the Islands.

2 And all the acts of his power, and of his might, and the declaration of the greatness of Mordecai, whereunto the king † advanced him, † Heb. made him great. are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia?

3 For Mordecai the Jew was next unto king Ahasuerus, and great among the Jews, and accepted of the multititude of his brethren b, seeking the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed c.

b Who did not envy his greatness, as men most commonly do in such cases, but rejoiced in it, and blessed God for it, and praised and loved him for his right and sweet management of his vast power. c Or, for all his seed, to wit, the Jews, who were of the same seed and root from which he was descended. He spoke and acted with great Kindness and Friendliness to them, when they resorted to him upon any occasion.

JOB.

Some things are to be premised in the General concerning this Book before I come to the Particulars. 1. That this was no fiction or Parable, as some have dreamed, but a real History; which is sufficiently evident, both from the whole Contexture of the Book, wherein we have an exact and distinct account of the Places, Persons, and things here mentioned, with their several Circumstances, and especially the succeeding Pen-men of Holy Scripture, who mention him as a real and eminent example of Piety and Patience, as Ezek. 14. 14. Jam. 5. 11. 2. That this is a Canonical Book of Scripture, which is manifest both from the Stile and Matter of it, and from the tacite Approbation given to it by Ezekiel and James, in the places now cited, and from that quotation taken from it as such, 1 Cor. 3. 19. and from the unanimous consent of the Church both of Jews and Christians in all Ages. 3. The time in which Job lived, and these things were said and done, most probably was before Moses, and in the days of the ancient Patriarchs. This may be gathered, 1. From his long Life, which by comparing Ch. 1. with 42. 16. could not want much of 200 Years; whereas after Moses Mens lives were far shorter, as is manifest. 2. From that considerable Knowledge of God, and of the true Religion, which then remained among divers Gentiles, which after Moses his time was in a manner quite exstinguished. 3. From the Sacrifices here commonly used, whereas, after the giving of the Law, all Sacrifices were confined to the place of the Tabernacle or Temple, to which even the Gentiles were to repair when they would Sacrifice to God. 4. From the way of Gods imparting of his mind to the Gentiles at this time by Dreams and Visions, agreably to Gods Method in those ancient times; whereas afterward those discoveries were withdrawn from the Gentiles, and appropriated to the People of Israel. 5. Because there is not the least mention in this Book of the Children of Israel, neither of their grievous Afflictions in Egypt, nor of their glorious Deliverance out of it; though nothing could have been more seasonable or suitable to the matter which is here discoursed between Job, and his Friends. 4. The Pen-man of this Book is not certainly known, nor is it material for us to know: For it being agreed who is the principal Author, it is of no moment by what Hand or pen he wrote it: But most probably it was either, 1. Job himself, who was most capable of giving this exact account, who as in his Agony he wished that his Words and Carriage were written in a Book, Ch. 19. 23, 24. so possibly when he was delivered from it, he satisfied his own and others desires therein. Only what concerns his general Character, Ch. 1. 1. and the time of his Death, Ch. 42. 16, 17. was added by another Hand; the like small Additions being made in other Books of Scripture. Or, 2. Elihu, which may seem to be favoured by Ch. 32. 15, 16. Or, 3. Moses, who when he was in the Land of Midian, where he had opportunity of coming to the knowledge of this History and Discourse, and considering that it might be very useful for the Comfort and Direction of Gods Israel, who was now oppressed in Egypt, did by his own Inclination, and the Direction of Gods Spirit, commit it to Writing. And whereas the Stile seems to be unlike to that of Moses in his other Writings, that is not strange, considering the differing nature of the Books, this being almost all Poetical, and the other meerly Historical, for the most part, or plain Precepts or Exhortations. And for the Arabick words here used, it must be remembred that Moses lived 40 Years in Midian, which was a part of Arabia, in which he must needs learn that Language.

CHAP. I.

1 THere was a man 'in the land of Uz a, whose name *was Job, and that man was† perfect b and upright c, and one that feared God d, and eschewed evil e.

* Eze. 14. 14. Jam. 5. 11.
† Chap. 2. 3.

a Which was either in Edom, called, The Land of Uz, Lam. 4. 21. or in some part of Arabia, not far from the Chaldæans, and Sabæans, as this Chapter witnesseth; so called probably from Uz, one of Esau's Posterity, Gen. 36. 28. Jer. 25. 20. b Not legally or exactly, as he confesseth Ch. 9. 20. but comparatively to such as were partial in their Obedience to Gods Commands, and as to his sincere Intentions, hearty Affections, and and constant and diligent Endeavours to perform all his duties to God and Men. c Heb. right, exact, and regular in all his dealings with Men, one of an unblameable Conversation, doing to others as he would have others to deal with him. d One truly pious, and devoted to Gods Worship and Service. e i.e. Carefully avoiding all sin against God or Men.

2 And there were born unto him seven sons and three daughters.

† Or, Cattle.

3 His † substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels f, and five hundred yoke of Oxen, and five hundred she-asses g, and a very great ‖ houshold; so that this man was the greatest of all the † men of the East i.

‖ Or Husbandry.

f Camels in these parts were very numerous, as is manifest from Judg. 7. 12. 1 Chron. 5. 21. and from the plain testimonies of Aristotle, and Pliny, and very useful, and proper both for carrying of Burdens in these hot and dry Countries, as being able to endure thirst much better than other Creatures, and for service in War. g Which were preferred before He-asses, as serving for the same uses as they did, and for Breeding, and Milk also; But He-Asses also may be included in this Expression, which is of the Feminine Gender, because the greatest part of them (from which the denomination is usually taken) were She-Asses. h i.e. One of the richest. i To wit, that lived in those parts: such general Expressions being commonly understood with such limitations.

4 And his sons went and feasted k in their houses, every one his day l, and sent and called for their three Sisters to eat and to drink with them.

k To testifie and maintain their Brotherly Love. l Not every day of the Week, and of the Year; which would have been burdensom and tedious to them all; and gross Luxury and Epicurism, which holy Job would not have permitted; but each his appointed day, whether his Birth-day, or the first day of the Month, or any other set time, it matters not.

5 And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about m, that Job sent and * sanctified them n, and rose up early in the morning o, and offered Burnt-Offerings according to the number of them all: for Job said, It may be that my Sons have sinned p, and * cursed God q in their Hearts r. Thus did Job † continually s.

* Neh. 12. 30.

* 1 King. 21. 10, 13.

m When each of them had had his turn, which peradventure came one speedily, though not immediately after another. And there was some considerable interval before their next feasting-time. n i.e. He exhorted and commanded them to sanctifie themselves for the following work, to wit, by purifying themselves from all Ceremonial and Moral Pollution, as the manner then was, Exod. 19. 10. and by preparing themselves by true repentance for all their sins, and particularly such as they had committed in their time of Feasting and Jollity, and by fervent Prayers to make their Peace with God by Sacrifice. o Thereby shewing his ardent Zeal in Gods service, and his Impatience till God was reconciled to him, and to his Children. p His Zeal for Gods Glory, and his true Love to his Children made him jealous; for which he had cause enough from the Corruption of Mans Nature, the Frailty and Folly of Youth, the many Temptations which attend upon Feasting and Jollity, and the easiness of sliding from lawful to forbidden Delights. q Not in the grossest manner and highest degree, which it is not probable either that they should do, now especially when they had no provocation to do it, as being surrounded with blessings, and Comforts, which they were actually enjoying and not yet exercised with any Affliction, or that Job should suspect it concerning them, but despised and dishonoured God; for both Hebrew and Greek words signifying cursing, are sometimes used to note only reviling or detracting, or speaking evil, or setting light by a Person. Thus what is called cursing ones Father or Mother, Ex. 21. 17. is elsewhere called setting light by them, as Deut. 27. 16. Ezek. 22. 7. See also 2 Pet. 2. 11. Jud. 8. and many other places. r By slight and low Thoughts of God, by neglecting or forgetting to give God the Praise and Glory of the Mercies which by his favour they enjoyed, by taking more hearty delight in their Feasts and Jollity, than in the service and fruition of God: For these and such like Distempers of Heart are most usual in times of Prosperity and Jollity, as appears by common Experience, and by the many Divine Cautions we have against them, as Deut. 6. 11. Hos. 2. 8. and elsewhere. And these miscarriages, though inward and secret, Job calls by such an hard name as usually signifies cursing, by way of Aggravation of their sin, which peradventure they were too apt to slight as a small and trivial miscarriage. s i.e. It was his constant course at the end of every feasting time.

6 Now there was a day t, when the * Sons of God u came to present themselves before the Lord x, and † Satan came also † among them y.

* Gr. Angels of God.

t i.e. A certain time appointed by God. u i.e. The holy Angels, so called, Job 38. 7. Dan. 3. 25, 28. because of their Creation by God, as Adam also was, Luk. 3. 38. and for their great resemblance of him in Power, and Dignity, and Holiness, and for their filial affection and Obedience to him. x i.e. Before his Throne, to receive his Commands, and to give him an account of their Negotiations. Compare 1 Kin. 22. 19. Zech. 4. 14. Luk. 1 19. But you must not think that these things were really done, and that Satan was mixed with the holy Angels, or admitted into the presence of God in Heaven, to maintain such discourses as this with the blessed God, or that he had formal Commission and leave to do what follows; but it is only a parabolical Representation of that great truth, that God by his wise and holy Providence doth govern all the Actions of Men and Devils to his own ends: It being usual with the great God to condescend to our shallow capacities, and to express himself, as the Jews phrase it, In the language of the Sons of Men; i. e. In such manner as men use to speak and may understand. y Being forced to come, and give up his account.

7 And the LORD said unto Satan, Whence comest thou z? Then Satan answered the LORD and said, From * going to and fro in the Earth a, and from walking up and down in it.

* 1 Pet. 5. 8.

z God being here represented as Judge, rightly begins with an enquiry, as the ground of his further proceedings, as he did Gen. 3. 9 and 4. 9. a Where by thy permission I range about, observing with great diligence all the Dispositions and Actions of Men, and working in them and among them as far as I have Liberty and Opportunity.

8 And the LORD said unto Satan, † Hast thou considered my Servant Job b, that there is none like him in the Earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil?

b Hast thou taken notice of him, and his Spirit, and Carriage? and what hast thou to say against him?

9 Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, Doth Job fear God for nought c?

c i.e. Sincerely and freely, and out of pure Love and Respect to thee? No. It is policy, not Piety, that makes him good; he doth not serve thee, but serveth himself of thee, and is a meer mercenary, serving thee for his own ends.

10 Hast not thou made an hedge about him d, and about his house e, and about all that he hath on every side? Thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his ‖ substance is † increased in the land.

‖ Or, Cattle.

d i.e. Defended him by thy special Care and Providence from all harms and Inconveniences; which is able to oblige and win persons of the worst tempers. e His Children and Servants.

11 But put forth thine hand f now, and touch g all that he hath, † and he will curse thee to thy face h.

f To wit, in way of Justice and severity, as that Phrase is used, Isa. 5. 25. Ezek. 25. 7, 13, 16. g i.e. Afflict or destroy, as this word is used, Gen. 26. 11. Ruth 2. 9. Psal. 105. 15. Zech. 2. 8. h He who is now so forward to serve and bless thee, will then openly and boldly blaspheme thy Name, and reproach thy Providence as unjust and unmerciful to him.

12 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold all that he hath is in thy † power i, only upon himself k put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD l.

i I give thee full Power and Liberty to deal with his Wife, Children, Servants, and all his Estate, whatsoever thy Wit or Malice shall prompt thee to do. k His Person, Body, or Soul. l i.e. From that Place where God was represented as specially present, being forward and greedy to do the mischief which he had permission to do.

13 And there was a day when his Sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brothers house:

14 And there came a messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were plowing, and the Asses feeding beside them m:

m i.e. Beside the Oxen, therefore both were taken away together.

15 And † the Sabæans n fell upon them, and took them away, yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword, and I only am escaped alone to tell thee o.

n A People of Arabia who led a wandring Life, and lived by Robbery and spoiling of others, as Strabo, and other Heathen Writers note. o Whom Satan spared no less maliciously than he destroyed the rest, that Job might have speedy and certain intelligence of his Calamity.

16 While he was yet speaking p, there came also another, and said, ‖ The Fire of God q is fallen from Heaven r, and hath burnt up the Sheep and the Servants, and consumed them, and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

p Before he could have time to compose his disturbed Mind, and to digest his former loss, or indeed to swallow his Spittle, as he expresseth it, ch. 7. 19. q A terrible flame of fire sent from God in an extraordinary manner; to intimate that both God and Men were his Enemies, and all things conspired to his Ruin. r i. e. From the Air which is oft called Heaven, as hath been noted again and again, whereof Satan is the Prince, Eph. 2. 2.

17 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, The Chaldæans s made out three bands t, and † fell upon the Camels, and have carried them away, yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword, and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

s Who also lived upon the Spoil, as Xenophon and others observe. t That they might come upon them several ways, and nothing might be able to escape them.

18 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, Thy sons and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine u in their eldest brothers house:

u i. e. Feasting after their manner, and, as Job Generally feared and suspected, sinning against God, v. 5. Which was a dreadful aggravation of the Judgment.

19 And behold, there came a great wind † from the wilderness x, and smote the four corners y of the house, and it fell upon the young men z, and they are dead, and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

x Whence the fiercest Winds came, as having most power in such open places. See Jer. 4. 11. and 13. 24. y In which the chief strength of the house did consist. It smote these either all together, or rather successively, one immediately after another, being possibly a Whirl-wind, which comes violently and suddenly, whirling about in a Circle, and being driven about by the power of the Devil, which is very great. z His Sons in their Youth, and his Daughters also, as appears from the sequel.

20 Then Job arose a, and rent his ‖ mantle b, and shaved his head c, and fell down upon the ground d, and worshipped e.

‖ Or, Robe.

a From his seat whereon he was sitting in a disconsolate posture. b To testifie his deep sense of, and just sorrow for the heavy hand of God upon him, and his humiliation of himself under his hand. See Gen. 37. 34. c i. e. Caused the Hair of his Head to be shaved or cut off, which was then an usual Ceremony in mourning, of which see Ezra 9. 3. Isa. 15. 2. and 22. 12. Jer. 7. 29. and 41. 5. Mic. 1. 16. d In way of self-abhorrency, and Humiliation and Supplication unto God. e To wit, God, who is expressed in the following verse, and who is the only Object of Religious Worship: Instead of cursing God, which Satan said he would do, he adored him, and gave him the Glory of his Soveraignty, and of his Justice, and of his Goodness also, in this most severe Dispensation.

21 And said, [* naked came I out of my mothers womb f,] and [naked shall I return thither g:] [the LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away h;] [blessed be the name of the LORD i.]

* Eccles. 5. 15. 1 Tim. 6. 7.

f I brought none of these things which I have now lost with me when I came out of my Mothers Womb into the World, but I received them from the Hand and Favour of that God who hath now required his own again. I still have all that Substance wherewith I was born, and have lost only things without and beside my self. g I shall be as rich when I die as I was when I was born, and therefore have reason to be contented with my condition, which also is the common lot of all men. Thither, i. e. into my Mothers Womb, which in the former clause is understood properly, but in this figuratively, of the Earth, which is our common Mother, as it is called by many Authors, out of whose Belly we were taken, and into which we must return again Gen. 3. 19. Eccles. 12. 7. And as our Mothers Womb is called the lower parts of the Earth, Psal. 139. 15. so it is not harsh if reciprocally the lower parts of the Earth be called our Mothers Womb. Nor is it strange that the same Phrase should be taken most properly and metaphorically in the same Verse; for so it is Mat. 8. 22. Let the dead spiritually bury the dead corporally. See also Levit. 26. 21, 24. Psal. 18. 26, &c. h He hath taken away nothing but his own, and what he so gave to me that he reserved the supreme Dominion and Disposal of in his own hand. So I have no cause to murmur or complain of him. Nor have I reason to fret and rage against the Chaldæans and Sabæans, and other Creatures, who were only Gods Instruments to execute his wise and holy Counsel. i i. e. The Lord, God's Name being often put for God himself, as Psal. 44. 5. and 48. 10, and 72. 18, 19. Dan. 2. 19, 20. As Names are put for Men, Act. 1. 15. Rev. 3. 4. The sense is, I have no cause to quarrel with God, but much cause to bless and praise him, that he did give me such blessings, and suffered me to enjoy them more and longer than I deserved; and that he hath vouchsafed to afflict me, which I greatly needed for my Souls good, and which I take as a Token of his Love and Faithfulness to me, and therefore ministring more matter of Comfort than Grief to me; and that he hath left me the comfort of my Wife, and yet is pleased to continue to me the Health of my Body, and a composed Mind, and an Heart to submit to his good pleasure; and that he hath reserved and prepared such a felicity for me, whom no Chaldæans or Sabæans, no Men nor Devils can take away from me: of which see Chap. 19. 25.

22 [In all this k] [Job sinned not l,] [nor ‖charged God foolishly m.]

k i. e. Under all these pressures. Or, in all that he said or did upon these sad occasions. l To wit, in such manner as the Devil presaged that he would, and as is expressed in the following words. As Christ saith, Joh. 9. 3. Neither hath this man sinned nor his Parents, to wit, so as you imagine, in an eminent or extraordinary degree. But both here and there humane Infirmities are excepted, of which Job oft acknowledgeth himself to be guilty. Nor was the question between God and Satan, whether Job had any sin in him, but whether he was an Hypocrite, or would blaspheme God; which is here denied and disproved. m Heb. Nor imputed folly to God; i. e. so far was he from blaspheming God, that he did not entertain any dishonourable thought of God, as if he had done any thing unworthy of his infinite Wisdom, or Justice, or Goodness; but heartily approved of and acquiesced in his good pleasure, and in his righteous though sharp Proceedings against him.

CHAP. II.

1 AGain there was a day a, when * the Sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them, to present himself before the LORD.

* Gr. the Angels of God.

a Another set time some convenient space after the former calamities. Of this and the two next Verses see the Notes on Ch. 1. 6, 7, 8.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan, From whence comest thou? And * Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the Earth, and from walking up and down in it.

* Chap. 1. 7.

3 And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the Earth, * a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil? and [still b] he holdeth fast his Integrity c, although thou movedst me d against him, † to destroy him [without cause e.]

* Chap. 1. 8.

† Heb. to swallow him up. Chap. 19. 10.

b Notwithstanding all his Trials and Tribulations, and thy malicious suggestion to the contrary. c i. e. He continues to be the same perfect and upright man which he was before. All thy endeavours to pull away his Integrity, have made him only to hold it the faster. d i. e. Didst perswade me, and prevailed with me to do it. But this, as the rest of this Representation, is not to be understood properly, as if God could be moved by any of his Creatures to alter his purposes, which are all eternal and unchangeable, and especially by Satan, as if God would gratifie him by granting his desires; but the design of these words is to signifie both the Devils restless Malice in promoting mans misery, and Gods permission of it for his own wise and holy Ends. e i. e. Without any special provocation, whereby he, more than others, deserved such heavy punishments. Which also Job himself oft alledgeth for his Justification; although he doth not deny himself to be a sinner, as is apparent from Ch. 7. 20, 21, and 9. 2. and 13. 23, 26. Nor that sin deserves Judgments: Or without any such cause as thou didst alledge, which was his Hypocrisie: Or, in vain, as this word is used Prov. 1. 17, Ezek. 6. 10. and elsewhere. So it is not referred to God's destroying him, but to Satan's moving God so to do. And so this place may be thus rendred exactly according to the Hebrew, And thou hast moved me to destroy him in vain, or without effect, or to no purpose. i. e. Thou hast lost thy Design and Expectation therein, which was to take away his Integrity, which in spight of all thy Art and Malice he still holdeth fast.

4 And Satan answered the LORD, and said, skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life f:

f The design of these words is plain, which is to detract from Job, and to diminish that Honour and Praise which God gave gave to Job, by pretending that he had done no more than the meaneſt men commonly do by the Law of Self preſervation. And it is as clear that this was a proverbial Speech, then in uſe, wherein if there be ſome difficulty to underſtand it at this diſtance of time, it is no more than the common lot of many other Proverbs, the ſenſe, and eſpecially the grounds whereof are frequently unknown to perſons of other Nations, and of after Times. Moreover it is known, that in thoſe ancient times, though they had ſome money, yet the main of their Eſtate lay in Cattle, of which the skins were a conſiderable part, and their chief Traffick lay in the Exchange of one commodity for another, and, among other things it cannot be queſtioned, but that they did commonly exchange skins of one kind for skins of another ſort, according to their ſeveral Inclinations or occaſions. So the meaning may be this, As men willingly and commonly give one Skin in Exchange for another Skin, and one Commodity for another, ſo (the Hebrew Particle Vau, being oft ſo uſed as a note of compariſon, as it is Prov. 17. 3. and 25. 3, 23, 25, 27,) all that a man hath, his Houſe, Cattle, Children, will he give, and that moſt willingly for his Life: i. e. To redeem or ſave his own Life: or rather thus, Skin for Skin, might then be a Proverb like that of ours, Body for Body, when one man is ſo far obliged for another. And we have ſome ſuch Expreſſions among us, as when we ſay of a man, who doth ſome dangerous Action, His Skin, i. e. his Body will pay for it, i. e. It may coſt him his Life. And this Proverb might be taken, 1. From Sacrifices, in which there was Skin for Skin; i. e. the skin of a beaſt for, or inſtead of, the skin or body of the Man, which deſerved to be uſed as the Beaſt was, and which was ſaved or preſerved by the ſuffering of the Beaſt, which was accepted by God inſtead of the Man, and by which the Mans ſins were expiated. Or, 2. From Hoſtages or Ranſoms, wherein one man was given for, or inſtead of another. So now the ſenſe may be this, Any man will give Skin for Skin, i. e. the Skin, or Body, or Life, of another, whether Man or Beaſt, to ſave his own; yea, all that a man hath, whether Goods or Perſons, ſuch as Job hath loſt, will he give for his Life. Job is not ſo much hurt or concerned ſo long as his own skin is whole and ſafe. Others thus: Skin upon (for ſo the Hebrew particle, Behad, is ſometimes uſed, as 2 Kin. 4. 5. Amos 9. 10. As alſo the Greek particle, Anti, which anſwers to it, is underſtood Joh. 1. 16. Grace for Grace, i. e. Grace upon Grace, or all kinds or degrees of Grace) Skin and all that a man hath (ſo all theſe words belong to the price which a man pays: now follows what he hath or expecteth to have for it) will he give for his Life; i. e. in exchange for his Life, or to ſave his Life. This alſo is a plauſible Interpretation, only it is not very probable, that the ſame Hebrew particle, Behad, ſhould be uſed in two ſo differing ſenſes in the ſame verſe, in the former part to ſignifie upon, (which if this ſacred Writer had meant, he would likely have expreſſed it rather by that other Hebrew particle, Al, which is commonly ſo uſed, than by this which is ſo ambiguous, and ſeldom ſo taken, and otherwiſe uſed in this very Verſe) and in the latter to ſignifie for, or inſtead of. However the ſenſe is plainly this, This is ſo far from being an Evidence of Job's ſincere and generous Piety, that it is only an Act of deeper Hypocriſie, and meer Self-love; he is well enough contented with the loſs of his Eſtate, and Children too, ſo long as he ſleeps in a whole skin; and he is well pleaſed, that thou wiltſt accept of all theſe as a Sacrifice or Ranſom in his ſtead; and it is not true Patience and Humility which makes him ſeem to bear his Croſſes ſo ſubmiſſively, as depth of policy, that by his feigned carriage he may appeaſe thy Wrath againſt him, and prevent thoſe further Plagues, which, for his Hypocriſie and other ſins, of which he is conſcious, he fears thou wiltſt otherwiſe bring upon his own Carkaſs; as will plainly appear upon further Trial.

5 But put forth thine hand now, and [touch his bone and his Fleſh g,] and he will †curſe thee to thy face.

g Touch, i. e. ſmite him, not ſlightly, but to the quick, and to the Bones and Marrow, ſo as he may feel Pain and Anguiſh indeed, which is oft expreſſed by reaching to the Bones, as Pſal. 6. 2. and 32. 3. and 51. 8.

‖ Or, only.

6 And the LORD ſaid unto Satan, Behold he is in thine hand, [‖ but ſave his Life h.]

h Do not attempt to take away his Life, which I will not ſuffer thee to do.

7 So went Satan forth from the preſence of the LORD, and [ſmote Job with ſore boils i] [from the ſole of his Foot unto his Crown k.]

i Like thoſe inflicted upon the Egyptians, which are expreſſed by the ſame word, and threatned to Apoſtate Iſraelites, Deut. 28. 27. whereby he was made loathſom to himſelf, and to his neareſt Relations. Ch. 19. 13, 19. and a viſible monument of Divine Diſpleaſure, and filled with tiring and conſuming pains in his Body, and no leſs Torment and Anguiſh in his mind. k In all the outward parts of his Body. His Tongue he ſpared, that it might be capable of venting thoſe Blaſphemies againſt God which he expected and deſired.

8 And [he took him a Potſherd l] to ſcrape himſelf withal; and [he ſat down among the aſhes l.]

l Partly to allay the Itch which his Ulcers cauſed: and partly to ſqueeze out, or take away that purulent matter which was under them, or flowed from them, and was the great cauſe of his Torment. And this he did not with ſoft Linen Cloths, either becauſe he had not now a ſufficient quantity of them for ſo much uſe; or becauſe therein he muſt have had the help of others who abhorred to come near him, Ch. 19. 13, 14, 15. Nor with his own Hands or Fingers which were alſo ulcerous, and ſo unfit for that uſe, and beſides he loathed to touch himſelf; but with Potſherds, either becauſe they were next at hand and ready for his preſent uſe; or in token of his Repentance and deep Humiliation under Gods heavy hand, which made him decline all things which favoured of tenderneſs and delicacy. l Heb. In duſt or aſhes, as Mourners uſed to do: Of which ſee Job 42. 6. Jonah 3. 6. Mat. 11. 21.

9 Then ſaid [his Wife m] unto him, [Doſt thou ſtill retain thine Integrity n?] [† curſe God and die o.

m Whom the Devil ſpared with cruel intent to be the Inſtrument of his Temptations, and the aggravation of Job's miſery by unnatural unkindneſs to him, which is declared Ch. 19. 17. and elſewhere. n Art thou yet ſo weak to perſiſt in the practice of Piety, when it is not only unprofitable to thee, but the chief occaſion of all theſe thy inſupportable miſeries, and when God himſelf not only forſakes and leaves thee in this helpleſs and hopeleſs condition, but is turned to be thy greateſt Enemy? o Seeing thy bleſſing of God availeth thee ſo little, it is time to change thy note, Curſe God and die, i. e. reproach him to his face, and tell him of his Injuſtice, and Unkindneſs to thee, and that he loves his Enemies, and hates his Friends, and that will provoke him to take away thy Life, and ſo end thy Torments. Or, curſe God, though thou die for it: But although this word ſometimes ſignifies curſing, as Job 1. 11. and 1 King. 21. 10. yet moſt properly and generally it ſignifies bleſſing, and ſo it may very well be underſtood here as a Sarcaſtical or Ironical Expreſſion, ſuch as there are many in Scripture, as Eccleſ. 11. 9. Lam. 4. 21. and in all Authors. And ſo the ſenſe may be this, Bleſs God and die; i. e. I ſee thou art ſet upon bleſſing of God, thou bleſſeſt God for giving, and thou bleſſeſt God for taking away, and thou art ſtill bleſſing of God for thy loathſom and tormenting Diſeaſes, and he rewards thee accordingly, giving thee more and more of that kind of Mercy, for which thou bleſſeſt and praiſeſt him Go on therefore in this thy pious and generous courſe, and die as a Fool dieth, and carry this Reputation to thy Grave, that thou hadſt not common ſenſe in thee to diſcern between good and evil, between thy Friends and thy Foes. Or rather awake out of this ſtupidity and Lethargy, and give over this abſurd and unreaſonable practice, and as God gives thee no Help nor Comfort, let him loſe thy Praiſes and Service. And this being her ſenſe, it is not ſtrange he reproveth her ſo ſharply for it. And yet it ſeems hard to think that Job's Wife ſhould arrive at that height of Impudence and Impiety, as in plain terms to bid him, curſe God.

10 But he ſaid unto her, Thou ſpeakeſt [as one of the fooliſh p] women ſpeaketh: What! [Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and ſhall we not receive evil q?] In all this did not Job ſin [with his Lips r.]

p i. e. Like a raſh, and inconſiderate, and weak perſon, that doſt not underſtand, nor mind what thou ſayeſt. Or, like a wicked and moſt prophane perſon; for ſuch are frequently called Fools in Scripture, as Pſal 14. 1. and 74. 18. and every where in the Proverbs. q Shall we poor Worms give Laws to our Supreme Lord and Governour, and oblige him always to bleſs and favour us, and never to afflict us? And ſhall not thoſe great and manifold, and long continued mercies, which from time to time God hath freely and graciouſly given us compenſate for theſe ſhort afflictions? Ought we not to bleſs God for thoſe Mercies which we did not deſerve, and contentedly to bear thoſe Corrections which we deſerve, and need: and (if it be not our own fault) may get much good by. r By any reflections upon God, by any impatient or unbecoming Expreſſions.

11 Now when Job's Friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; [Eliphaz the Temanite, and and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite:] for they had made an appointment together, to come to mourn with him, and to comfort him.

s Which were Perſons then eminent for Birth and Quality, for Wiſdom and Knowledge, and for the Profeſſion of the true Religion, being probably of the poſterity of Abraham, and akin to Job, and lying in the ſame Country with him.

12 And [when they lift up their Eyes afar off t, and [knew him not u,] they lift up their voice, and wept, and they rent every one his mantle, and [ſprinkled duſt upon their head toward Heaven x.]

t To wit, at ſome convenient diſtance from him: whom they found ſitting upon the ground, either in the open Air, or within his own Houſe. u His Countenance being ſo fearfully changed and diſfigured by his Boils. x Either upon the upper part of their Heads, which looks towards Heaven: or caſt it up into the Air ſo as it ſhould fall upon their Heads; as they did Act. 22. 23. See Joſ. 7. 6. Nehem. 9. 1. Lam. 2. 10.

13 So [they ſat down with him upon the ground y] [ſeven days, and ſeven nights z,] and [none ſpake a word to him a:] for they ſaw that his Grief was very great.

y In the poſture of Mourners condoling with him. z Which was the uſual time of mourning for the Dead, Gen. 50. 10. 1 Sam. 31. 13. and therefore proper both for Job's Children who were dead, and for Job himſelf, who was in a manner dead whilſt he lived: But we muſt not fanſy that they continued in this place and poſture ſo long together, which no Laws of Religion or Civility required of them, and the neceſſities of Nature could not bear; but only that they ſpent a great, or the greateſt part of that time in ſitting with him, and ſilent Mourning over him. And ſo ſuch General Expreſſions are frequently underſtood, as Luke 2. 37. and 24. 53. Acts 20. 31. a Either, 1. About any thing. Or rather, 2. About his Afflictions and the cauſes of them. The reaſon of this ſilence was partly the greatneſs of their grief for him, and their ſurprize and aſtoniſhment at his Condition; partly becauſe they thought it convenient to give him ſome further time to vent his own Sorrows, and partly becauſe as yet they knew not what to ſay to him: for though they had ever eſteemed him to be a truly wiſe and godly Man, and came with full purpoſe to comfort him, yet the prodigious greatneſs of his Miſeries, and that Hand and Diſpleaſure of God which they manifeſtly perceived in them, made them at a ſtand, and to queſtion Job's Sincerity, ſo that they could not comfort him as they had intended, and yet were loth to grieve him with thoſe Convictions and Reproofs which they thought he greatly needed. And here they ſtuck till Job gave them occaſion to ſpeak their Minds.

CHAP. III.

1 After this [opened Job his Mouth a,] and [curſed his day b.]

a He ſpake freely and boldly, as this Phraſe is uſed, Prov. 31. 8, 9. Eph. 6. 19. and elſewhere. b To wit, his Birth-day, as is evident from v. 3. which is called ſimply a Mans day, Hoſ. 7. 5. which alſo ſome others, through the ſame Infirmity, and in the ſame Circumſtances, have curſed, as we ſee Jer. 20. 14. In vain do ſome men endeavour to excuſe this and the following Speeches of Job, who afterwards is reproved by God, and ſeverely accuſeth himſelf for them, Ch. 38. 2. and 40. 4. and 42. 3, 6. And yet he doth not proceed ſo far as to curſe or blaſpheme God, but makes the Devil a Lyar in his Prognoſticks: But although he doth not break forth into direct and downright Reproaches of God, yet he makes ſecret and indirect Reflections upon Gods Providence. His Curſe was ſinful, both becauſe it was vain, being applied to an unreaſonable thing, which was not capable of bleſſing and curſing, and to a day that was paſt, and ſo out of the reach of all Curſes; and becauſe it was applied to one of Gods Creatures, all which were and are in themſelves very good, and pronounced bleſſed by God, and ſo they are, if we do not turn them into Curſes; and becauſe it caſts a blame upon God for bringing that day, and for giving him that Life which that day brought into the World. He pronounceth that day an unhappy, woful, and curſed day, not in it ſelf, but with reſpect to himſelf.

2 And Job † ſpake, and ſaid:

* Ch. 10. 18, 19. Jer. 20. 14.

3 [*Let the day periſh wherein I was born c,] and the night in which [it was ſaid d,] There is a man-child [conceived e.]

c Let the remembrance of that day be utterly loſt. Yea, I heartily wiſh that it had never been. Such Wiſhes are apparently fooliſh and impatient, and yet have been ſometimes forced from wiſe and good men in grievous Diſtreſſes, not as if they expected any effect of them, but only to ſhew their abhorrency of Life, and to expreſs the intolerableneſs of their grief, and to give ſome vent to their paſſions. d With Joy and Triumph, as happy tidings, Compare Jer. 20. 15. e Or rather, brought forth, as this word is uſed, 1 Chron. 4. 17. For the time of conception is unknown commonly to Women themſelves, and doth not uſe to be reported among men, as this day is ſuppoſed to be.

4 [Let that day be Darkneſs f,] [let not God regard it from above g,] neither let the light ſhine upon it.

f I wiſh the ſun had never riſen upon that day to make it day, or which is all one, that it had never been, and whenſoever that day returns, I wiſh it may be black, and gloomy, and uncomfortable, and therefore execrable and odious to all men. g i. e. From Heaven, either, 1. By cauſing the Light of the Sun which is in Heaven to ſhine upon it. So it agrees both with the foregoing and following Branches of this Verſe. Or, 2. By bleſſing and favouring it, or by giving his Bleſſings to men upon it. Let it be eſteemed by all an unlucky, and comfortleſs day. Oh let not God require it, i. e. bring it again in its courſe, as other days return. In this ſenſe God is ſaid to require that which is paſt. Eccleſ. 3. 15. Compare v. 3. 6.

5 Let darkneſs [and the ſhadow of death h] [‖ ſtain it i,] let a Cloud dwell upon it, [‖ let the blackneſs of the day terrifie it k.]

h i. e. A black and dark ſhadow like that of the place of the dead, which is a Land of Darkneſs, and where the Light is Darkneſs, as Job explains this very Phraſe, Ch. 10. 21, 22. Or, ſo groſs and palpable Darkneſs that by it horrors and damps may take away mens Spirits and Lives. i i. e. Take away its beauty and Glory, and make it abominable as a filthy thing. Or, challenge it, i. e. take and keep the entire poſſeſſion of it, ſo as the Light may not have the leaſt ſhare in it. k To wit, the day, i. e. Men in it. Let it be always obſerved as a frightful and diſmal day.

6 As for that night, let [darkneſs l] ſeize upon it, [‖ let it not be joined unto the days of the year m,] [let it not come into the number of the Months n.]

l i. e. Conſtant and extraordinary Darkneſs, without the leaſt glimmering of Light from the Moon or ſtars. m i. e. Reckoned as one or a part of one of them. The night is diſtinguiſhed from the artificial day, but it is a part of the natural day, which conſiſts of 24 hours. Or rather, let it not rejoice among the days, &c. Joy here, and terror v. 5. are poetically and figuratively aſcribed to the day or night, with reſpect to men, who either rejoice or are affrighted in it. Let it be a ſad, and as it were a funeral day. n i. e. To be one of thoſe Nights which go to the making up of the Months.

7 Lo, [let that night be ſolitary o,] let [no joyful voice p] come therein:

o i. e. Deſtitute of all Society of Men meeting and feaſting together, which commonly was done at night, Suppers being the moſt ſolemn Meals among divers ancient Nations. See Mark 6. 21. Luk. 14. 16. John 12. 2. Rev. 19. 9, 17. p Neither of the Bride and Bridegroom, nor any that celebrate their Nuptials or any other merry Solemnity.

8 Let them curſe it [that curſe the day q,] [who are ready to raiſe up ‖ their mourning r.]

q i. e. Their day, to wit, their Birth-day: for the Pronoun is here omitted for the meeters ſake; For this and the following Chapters are written in verſe, as all grant. So the Senſe is, when their Afflictions move them to curſe their own Birth-day, let them remember mine alſo, and beſtow ſome Curſes upon it. Or, the day of their diſtreſs and trouble, which ſometimes is called ſimply the day, as Obad. 12. Or, the day of the Birth or death of that perſon whoſe Funerals are celebrated by the hired Mourners, who in their ſolemn Lamentations uſed to curſe the day that gave them ſuch a Perſon, whom they ſhould ſo ſuddenly loſe, and therefore it had been better never to have enjoyed him, and to curſe the day in which he died as an unlucky, and execrable day. Or, the day, i. e. the Day-light: which to ſome perſons is an hateful thing, and the Object of their Curſes, namely to lewd Perſons and Thieves, to whom the morning Light is even as the ſhadow of death, Ch. 24. 17. as alſo to perſons oppreſſed with deep Melancholy, as it is here implied, v. 20. So the Senſe is this, They who uſe to curſe the day only, but generally love and bleſs the night, yet let this night be as abominable and execrable to them as the day-time generally is. r Who are brim full of ſorrow, and always ready to pour out their Cries, and Tears, and Complaints, and with them Curſes, as men in great paſſions frequently do. Or, ſuch Mourning-Men, or Mourning-Women, whoſe common Employment it was, and who were hired to mourn, and therefore were always ready to do ſo upon funeral occaſions; of which ſee 2 Chron. 35. 25. Jer. 9. 17, 18, 20. Ezek. 30. 2. Joel 1. 15. Amos 5. 16. Matth. 9. 23. And this Senſe ſuits with the uſe of the laſt word in Hebrew Writers, of which a plain and pertinent Inſtance is given by the learned Mercer. But becauſe that word is commonly uſed in another ſenſe for the Leviathan, both in this Book and elſewhere in Scripture, as Pſal. 74. 14. and 104. 26. Iſa. 27. 1. And becauſe this very Phraſe of raiſing the Leviathan is uſed afterward, Ch. 41. 25. others render the words thus, Who are prepared, or ready to raiſe the Leviathan. It is evident that the Leviathan was a great and dreadful Fiſh or Sea-Monſter, though there be ſome diſagreement about its kind or quality, and that the raiſing of or endeavouring to catch the Leviathan was a dangerous and terrible work, as is plain from Job 41. And therefore thoſe Sea-men, who have been generally noted for great ſwearers and curſers, eſpecially when their paſſions of Rage or Fear are raiſed, being now labouring to catch this Sea-monſter, and finding themſelves and their Veſſel in great danger from him, they fall to their old trade of Swearing and Curſing, and curſe the day wherein they were born, and the day in which they ventured upon this moſt hazardous and terrible work. Others underſtand this Leviathan myſtically, as it is uſed

Iſa.

Iſa. 27. 1. for the great Enemy of God's Church and People; called there alſo the Dragon, to wit, the Devil, whom the Magicians both now do, and formerly did uſe to raiſe with fearful Curſes and Imprecations. Not as if Job did juſtifie this practice; but only it is a raſh and paſſionate wiſh, that they who pour forth ſo many Curſes undeſervedly, would beſtow their deſerved Curſes upon this day.

9 [Let the ſtars of the twilight thereof be dark s,] [let it look for light, but have none t,] neither let it ſee [† the dawning of the day u:]

s Let the ſtars, which are the glory and beauty of the Night, to render it amiable and delightful to Men, be covered with thick darkneſs; and that both in the Evening-twilight, as is here expreſſed, when the Stars begin to ariſe, and ſhine forth; and alſo in the further progreſs of the Night, even till the Morning begins to dawn; as the following words imply. t Let its Darkneſs be aggravated with the diſappointment of its hopes and expectations of Light. He aſcribes Senſe or Reaſoning to the Night by a poetical Fiction, uſual in all Writers. u Heb. the eye-lids of the day, i. e. the Morning-ſtar, which uſhers in the Day, and the beginning, and conſequently the progreſs of the Morning-light, and the Day following. Let this whole natural day, conſiſting of Night and Day, be blotted out of the Catalogue of Days, as he wiſhed before.

x To wit, the Night, or the Day; to which thoſe things are aſcribed, which were done by others in them; as is frequent in Poetical Writings, ſuch as this is. Or he, i. e. God; whom, in modeſty and reverence, he forbears to name. Yet he doth not curſe God, or his Birth, as the Devil preſaged; but only wiſheth that the Day of his Birth might have manifeſt Characters of a Curſe impreſſed upon it. x That it might either never have conceived me, or, at leaſt, never have brought me forth. y Which word is here fitly ſupplied both out of ch. 1. 21. and 31. 18. where it is expreſſed; and by comparing other places where it is neceſſarily to be underſtood, though the womb only be mentioned; as Job 10. 19. Pſal. 58. 3. Iſa. 48. 8. Jer. 1. 5. z Becauſe it did not keep me from entring into this miſerable Life, and ſeeing, i. e. feeling, or experiencing (as that word is oft uſed) thoſe bitter Sorrows under which I now groan.

11 [Why died I not from the womb? a] [why did I not give up the ghoſt when I came out of the belly b?] a i. e. As ſoon as ever I was born, or come out of the Womb. b The ſame thing, expreſſed in other words; which is an Elegancy uſual both in the Hebrew, and in other Languages.

12 [Why did the knees prevent me c?] or [why the breaſts that I ſhould ſuck d?]

c Why did the Midwife or Nurſe receive me, and lay me upon her knees, and did not ſuffer me to fall upon the bare ground, and there to lie in a neglected and forlorn condition, till merciful Death had taken me out of this miſerable World, into which the cruel kindneſs of my Mother and Midwife hath betrayed me? d Why did the breaſts prevent me (which may be fitly underſtood out of the former Member) to wit, from periſhing through hunger; or ſupply me, that I ſhould have what to ſuck? Seeing my Mother had not a miſcarrying Womb, but did unhappily bring me forth, why had ſhe not dry Breaſts? Or, Why were there any Breaſts for me, which I might ſuck? Thus Job moſt unthankfully and unworthily deſpiſeth and traduceth theſe wonderful and ſingular Mercies of God towards poor helpleſs Infants, becauſe of the preſent Inconveniences which he had by means of them.

13 For now ſhould I have [lien ſtill, and been quiet e,] I ſhould have ſlept; then had I been at reſt; e Free from all thoſe torments of my Body and Mind, which now oppreſs me.

14 [With kings f] and counſellors of the earth, [which *built deſolate places for themſelves g:]

* Ch. 15. 28.

f I had then been as happy as the proudeſt Monarchs, who, after all their great Atchievments and Enjoyments, go down into their Graves; where I alſo ſhould have been ſweetly repoſed. g Which, to ſhew their great Wealth and Power, or to leave behind him a glorious Name, re-built ruined Cities, or built new Cities and Palaces, and other Monuments, in places where before there was meer Solitude and Waſteneſs.

15 Or with princes that had gold, who filled their houſes with ſilver:

* Pſal. 58. 8.

16 Or * as an [hidden h] [untimely birth i,] [I had not been k;] as infants [which never ſaw light l.]

h Undiſcerned, and unregarded. i Born before the due time, and therefore extinct. k To wit, in the Land of the Living, of which he here ſpeaketh. l Being ſtifled and dead before they were born.

17 For [there m] [the wicked ceaſe from troubling n:] and [there the † weary be at reſt o.]

m i. e. In the Grave; which, though not expreſſed, yet is clearly implied in the fore-going Verſes. n The great Oppreſſors and Troublers of the World ceaſe from all thoſe Vexations, Rapines and Murthers, which here they procured. o Thoſe who were here moleſted and tired out with their Tyrannies, now quietly ſleep with them, or by them.

18 There the priſoners reſt [together p,] [they hear not the voice of the oppreſſor q.]

p. i. e. One as well as another: They who were kept in the ſtrongeſt Chains, and cloſeſt Priſons, and condemned to the moſt hard and miſerable Slavery, reſt as well as thoſe who were Captives in much better circumſtances. Or, in like manner, (as this word oft ſignifies) as thoſe Oppreſſors and Oppreſſed do. q Or, Exacter, or Task-maſter, who urgeth and forceth them, by cruel threatnings and ſtripes, to greater diligence in the Works to which they are condemned: See Exod. 3. 7. and 5. 6, 10, 13. Job meddles not here with their eternal ſtate after death, or the Sentence and Judgment of God againſt wicked Men, of which he ſpeaks hereafter; but only ſpeaks of their freedom from worldly Troubles, which is the only matter of his Complaint, and preſent Diſcourſe.

19 [The ſmall and great r] [‖ are there s,] and the ſervant is free from his maſter.

20 [Wherefore is light given t] to him that is in miſery, and life [unto the bitter in ſoul u?]

t Heb. Wherefore (for what cauſe, or uſe, or good) doth he (i. e. God, though he forbear to name him, out of that holy fear and reverence which ſtill he retained towards him) give light; Either the Light of the Sun, which the Living only behold, Eccleſ. 6. 5. and 7. 11. Or the Light of Life; as may ſeem both by the next words, and by comparing Pſal. 56. 13. and becauſe Death is oft ſet forth by the name of Darkneſs, as Life by the name of Light. Theſe are ſtrong Expoſtulations with God, and quarrelling with his Providence, and with his Bleſſings: But we muſt conſider, that Job was but a Man, and a Man of like Paſſions and Infirmities with other Men, and now in grievous Agonies; being not only under moſt violent, and yet continual torments of Body, but alſo under great diſquietments of Mind, and the deep ſenſe of God's Diſpleaſure; and was alſo left to himſelf, that he might ſee what was in his heart, and that all ſucceeding Ages might have in him an illuſtrious Example of Man's Infirmity, and the neceſſity of God's Grace to help them in time of need. And therefore it is no wonder if his Paſſions boyl up, and break forth in ſome indecent and ſinful Expreſſions. u Unto ſuch, to whom Life it ſelf is very bitter and burthenſom. Why doth he obtrude his Favours upon thoſe who abhor them?

x i. e. Deſire and pray for it with as much earneſtneſs as Men dig for Treaſure. But it is obſervable, that Job durſt not lay violent hands upon himſelf, nor do any thing to haſten or procure his Death; but, notwithſtanding all his Miſeries and Complaints, he was contented to wait all the days of his appointed time, till his change came, ch. 14. 14.

25 For e † the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me f, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me.

e This is another Reaſon why he is weary of his Life, and why he repents that ever he was born, becauſe he never enjoyed any ſolid and ſecure Comfort. f Heb. I feared a fear, (i. e. a Danger or Miſchief, in one kind or other; the Act being here put for the Object, as Joy and Love are oft put for the things rejoyced in, or loved; and here Fear, for the thing feared. Or, I feared with fear, i. e. I feared greatly) and it came. Even in the time of my Peace and Proſperity, I was full of Fears, conſidering the variety of God's Providences, the courſe and changeableneſs of this vain World, the Infirmities and Contingences of Humane Nature and Life, God's Juſtice, and the Sinfulneſs of all Mankind. And theſe Fears of mine were not in vain, but are juſtified by my preſent Calamities. So that I have never enjoyed any ſound Tranquillity ſince I was born; and therefore it hath not been worth my while to live, ſince all my Days have been evil, and full of Vexation and Torment; either by the fear of Miſeries, or by the ſufferance of them.

26 I was not in ſafety, neither had I reſt, neither was I quiet g: yet trouble came h.

g Three Expreſſions noting the ſame thing, which alſo was ſignified in the next fore-going Verſe; to wit, that even in his proſperous days, he never was ſecure, or at reſt, from the Torment of Fear and Anxiety. Others, I did not miſ behave my ſelf in Proſperity, abuſing it by Preſumption, and Security, and Voluptuouſneſs, whereby I might have provoked God thus to afflict me; but I lived ſoberly and circumſpectly, walking humbly with God, and working out my Salvation with Fear and Trembling, little expecting that God would be ſo fierce an Enemy againſt me. h Heb And trouble came, as I feared it would. So between Fear and Calamity, my whole Life hath been miſerable, and I had reaſon to repent of it.

CHAP. IV.

1 THen Eliphaz the Temanite a anſwered and ſaid, a Who ſpake firſt, becauſe poſſibly he was the eldeſt, or of greateſt Authority or Zeal.

2 If we aſſay † to commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved b? but † who can withold himſelf from ſpeaking c?

b Or, (without a Note of Interrogation) thou wilt be grieved: Our Words will undoubtedly vex thee, and not comfort thee, as we intended and deſired to do. We muſt not uſe Words of Comfort, but of ſharp Reproof, which will be irkſome to thee; and this makes me deſire to be ſilent, if it were poſſible. c When he hears ſuch unreaſonable and ungodly Words coming from ſuch a Perſon as thou art, whereby thou doſt accuſe thy Maker, and reproach his Providence, and contemn his Bleſſings. No Man who hath any Reſpect to God, or Love to thee, can forbear reproving thee.

d Teaching them thoſe Leſſons which thou haſt not learned, and wilteſt not practiſe; to wit, patiently to bear Afflictions, and to ſubmit to God's Will and Providence in all things; which thou moſt ſhamefully refuſeſt to do. e By adminiſtring Supports, and Comforts, and Counſels to ſuch as were unable to bear their Burthens, or to do their Duty.

4 Thy words have upholden him that was falling f, and thou haſt ſtrengthened the † feeble knees g.

f Ready to ſink under their Preſſures, or to fall from God, or into Sin (as that word is uſed, 1 Cor. 10. 12. Gal. 6. 2. and elſewhere) through Deſpondency and Diſtruſt of God's Providence and Promiſe, or through Impatience. g Such as were weak-hearted, and fainting under their Tryals: See Iſa. 35. 3. Dan. 5. 6. Heb. 12. 12.

5 But now it h is come upon thee, and thou fainteſt i; it toucheth thee k, and thou art troubled.

h i.e. The Evil which thou didſt fear, ch. 3. 25. and which was come upon thoſe whom thou didſt ſo comfort. i Thou alloweſt in thy ſelf what thou wouldſt not bear in others: What in them was a Vice, in thee, it ſeems, is become a Vertue. Thou art wiſe for others, but not for thy ſelf; a good Phyſician to cure others, but not thy ſelf; quick-ſighted to ſee the Faults of others, but blind to thine own. k It is now come to be thine own Caſe.

6 Is not this thy fear, thy confidence, the uprightneſs of thy ways, and thy hope k?

k So the Senſe is, We now plainly ſee what was the nature and Complexion of thy Fear of God; thy Confidence in him, the Uprightneſs of thy Ways, and thy Hope in God's Mercy; which thou didſt make ſhew and boaſt of, and for which thou waſt become ſo famous. Thy preſent Carriage diſcovereth to thy ſelf and others, that it was but meer Talk and Appearance, and there was nothing ſound and ſincere in it. In thy Proſperity it was eaſie to make a ſplendid Profeſſion of Religion, but Men are beſt known by Affliction; and this now ſheweth of what Metal thou art made: For now thou doſt caſt off thy Fear of God, and all thy Confidence and Hope in him; and haſt let go that Integrity of thy Ways, which hitherto thou didſt ſeem to hold faſt; whereas true Piety is uniform, and conſtant, and ſtedfaſt in all Varieties of Conditions, and under all Tryals and Temptations. But this Tranſlation removes the and from its proper place, and changeth the Order of the Words, which is this in the Hebrew, thy hope, and the uprightneſs of thy ways: Which Words may be reſtored to their own Order, and with that Variation our Tranſlation may ſtand; and this ſeems to be the true Senſe. And ſo here are four diſtinct Queſtions; Is not this thy fear? Is not this thy confidence? Is not this thy hope? Is not this the uprightneſs of thy ways? But others make only two Queſtions, and render the words either thus; Is not (or rather, Was not) thy fear (of God) thy confidence? And the uprightneſs of thy ways thy hope? i.e. Did not thy Fear of God, and the Integrity of thy Life, of which thou didſt make ſuch eminent Profeſſion, proceed only from the Love of thy ſelf, and of this preſent World; and from thy Confidence and Hope, that God would bleſs and proſper thee for it? For now when God withdraws his Favour and Bleſſings from thee, thy Religion is vaniſhed, and thou haſt caſt off all Fear and Reverence of God, as thy impious Speeches ſhew. Or thus; Would not thy fear be thy confidence, and the uprightneſs of thy ways thy hope? i.e. If thou hadſt indeed that Fear and Integrity to which thou pretendeſt, it would give thee good Ground of Hope and Confidence in the midſt of all thy Diſtreſſes, and thou wouldſt not ſo faint and ſink under thy Calamities, as now thou doſt, for want of a ſolid Foundation of true Piety. But both theſe Tranſlations, beſides other Inconveniences, ſtumble at the ſame Stone, and pervert the Order of the Words in the Hebrew Text; of which, ſee before; which is not to be allowed, without ſome kind of Neceſſity; which is not in this Caſe.

7 Remember, I pray thee l, who ever periſhed m, being innocent n? or where were the righteous cut off o?

l Give me one Example hereof out of all thy Experience, or Reading. m i.e. Was ſo utterly undone, as thou art, ſo miſerably afflicted by ſuch unparallell'd and various Judgments from God and Men, all conſpiring againſt thee. n Who had not, by his Wickedneſs, provoked ſo merciful a God to do that which is ſo unuſual, and, in ſome ſort, unpleaſing to himſelf. Therefore thou art guilty of ſome great, though ſecret Crimes, and thy Sin hath now found thee out, and hath brought down theſe ſtupendious Plagues upon thee. o By the Sickle of Divine Vengeance, before his time; which is like to be thy Caſe. His Judgment herein was raſh and falſe, but not without ſome appearance of Truth; for God had made many Promiſes, not only of ſpiritual and eternal, but alſo of temporal Bleſſings, to all that ſhould faithfully ſerve and obey him; which accordingly he did, from time to time, confer upon them; as we ſee by the Examples of Noah, Lot, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob; and doubtleſs, many others, which had lived in, or before their Days. And this was God's uſual Method under all the Times of the Old Teſtament, as we ſee by the People of Iſrael, who were generally, either in an happy and flouriſhing, or in an afflicted and miſerable State, according to their Obedience to God, or their Apoſtacy from him. And therefore it is nor ſtrange that they fell into this Miſtake: But allowing for this Miſtake, and the Conſequence of it, his uncharitable Opinion of Job, the Method which he uſeth with Job is commendable, and to be imitated by others, in their dealing with Perſons in Sickneſs or Affliction: For he doth not flatter him in his Sins, nor immediately and unſeaſonably apply Comforts to him; but endeavours to convince him of his Sins, and to bring him to Repentance, as the only regular way to his Remedy.

8 Even as I have ſeen p, * they that plow iniquity, and ſow wickedneſs q, reap the ſame r.

* Pſal 7.14. Prov.22.8. Hoſ.10.13.

p As thou haſt never ſeen any Example of a righteous Man cut off, ſo on the contrary, I have ſeen many Examples of wicked Men cut off for their Wickedneſs. Or, As far as I have obſerved: Or, But as I have ſeen, or experienced. q They that deſignedly and induſtriouſly work Wickedneſs, firſt plotting and preparing themſelves for it, and then continuing to purſue sue and execute it, as Husband-men first plough up and prepare the Ground, and then cast in the Seed. Compare Prov. 22. 8. Hos. 10. 13. r i. e. Iniquity, or such Trouble or Injury (for so also the Hebrew word Aven signifies) as they cause to others. Or, the fruit of their Iniquity, the just Recompence and Punishment of it, which is oft called Sin, or Iniquity; as, Gen. 4. 7. Num. 12, 11. and 16. 26. and 32. 23. Compare Gal. 6. 7, 8.

† That is, by his anger; as, Isa. 30. 33. Exod. 15. 8. Ch. 1. 19. & 15. 30. Isa. 11. 4.

9 By the blast of God s they perish, and † by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.

s To wit, of his nostrils, as it here follows, i. e. by his Anger; which, in Men, shews it self in the Nostrils, by hot and frequent Breathings there; and therefore, by an Anthropopathy, is ascribed to God, by a secret, and oft undiscerned, but mighty and powerful Judgment of God; by which they are blasted, and blown away as Chaff by the Wind, as the Phrase is, Psal. 1.

* Psal. 34. 10. & 35. 17. * Psal. 58. 6.

10 The roaring of * the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion t, and * the teeth of the young lions are broken u.

t Understand vanisheth, or perisheth, out of v. 9. or, is restrained, or suppressed, as may be gathered out of the following Branch of this Verse. u Which is true literally; the Lions, when taken, having most commonly their teeth broken, as ancient and modern Writers relate. But this is here mystically meant of wicked and powerful Tyrants, who are oft and fitly compared to Lions, Ezek. 32. 2. and 38. 13. 2 Tim. 4. 17. who, though for a time they persecute and oppress other Men, yet in due time they are restrained, and broken, and crushed in pieces by the mighty Power of God appearing against them in some eminent Judgments. Possibly he may secretly accuse Job, or his Children, or both, that being Persons of great Wealth and Power in those Parts, they had wickedly abused it to ruin their Neighbours, and therefore were justly cut off.

11 The old lion perisheth for lack of prey x, and the stout Lion's whelps are scattered abroad y.

x Because they cannot go abroad to seek it, and their young ones either cannot find, or do not bring it to them: See Psal. 59. 14, 15. and 109. 10. y Gone from their Dens several ways, to hunt for Prey, and can find none.

12 Now z a thing a was ‖ secretly brought to me b, and mine ear received c a little thereof d.

z And, or Moreover, I will further convince thee by a Vision which I had, relating to such matters as these. That here follows a Relation of a Vision, is apparent from the punctual description of all its Circumstances. To think, as some do, this was but a Fiction and Artifice which Eliphaz used, that his Words might have more Authority with Job, or that this was a Diabolical Delusion, seems to be both uncharitable and unreasonable; partly because Eliphaz, though under a mistake concerning Job's Case, was, doubtless, a wise and good Man, and therefore would not needlessly make himself a Lyar for Job's Conviction; and partly from the matter of this Vision, which is no way suitable to the Nature or Designs of the Devil; but holy, and agreeable to the Divine Majesty and Purity, and useful for Men's Instruction, and Humiliation, and Reformation. It was therefore a divine Vision, which in that Age and State of the Church, before the holy Scriptures were written, was the usual way of God's discovery of his Mind to those that sought to him. a Heb. a word, to wit, from God; as Prov. 13. 13. a Doctrine or Message. b Heb. was stolen, or brought by stealth into me; i. e. privately and secretly, as the Word of God used to come to the Prophets, being spoken in their ear; as it was to Samuel, 1 Sam. 9. 15. and the like to Moses, so as Pharaoh, though present, could not hear nor observe it, Exod. 11. 1. with a low and still Voice, a secret Whisper. This is opposed to the more publick Delivery of God's Word, by the Prophets to the People; which was done by crying aloud, Isa. 58. 1. c i. e. I heard. d Or, a parcel thereof; i. e. of God's Word; not of that particular Word which God had now delivered to Eliphaz, which doubtless God would so speak, that he to whom he directed his Speech might hear it all, and Eliphaz certainly would be so careful, not to lose a Syllable of it; but a parcel of God's Word in general, which this indeed was. And withal, this may be a modest and humble Expression, arising from a deep sense of his own Infirmity, and the small measure of his Knowledge in divine things, whereof he knew only some little fragments and parcels; as Paul said, We know but in part, 1 Cor. 13. 9. As if he had said, Many, I doubt, have more familiar Acquaintance with God, and more full Revelations from God, than I can pretend to; but a little of that Treasure God hath been pleased to impart to me.

13 * In thoughts e from the visions of the night e, when deep sleep falleth on men f, e In the midst of my Thoughts; or, by reason of my Thoughts, my perplexing Thoughts. The word properly signifies a Branch, and thence a Thought; as 1 King. 18. 21. which proceeds from the Mind, as Branches from a Tree; and a perplexing Thought, which is entangled like the Branches of a Tree. These Thoughts were the occasion of the following Fear. e This may belong either to the Thoughts last mentioned, or to the Fear following; both which did arise from the Visions of the Night, i. e. from the great importance, and the terribleness of such Visions, whereof probably he had had former Experience, and now had an Expectation of another of them, which God had raised and wrought in him, to prepare him the better for the reception of it. Visions differed from Dreams herein, that God imparted his Mind to a Man in Dreams when he was asleep, but in Visions when they were awake. And these Visions sometimes happened by day, as Luk. 1. 22. Act. 10. 17. and 26. 19. but most frequently by night: Whence we read of Vision, or Visions of the night; as Gen. 46. 2. Job 20. 8. and 33. 15. And such this was, which made it the more terrible. f In the dead of the Night, when Men usually are in a deep Sleep; though Eliphaz was not now asleep, as appears from the nature of the Vision, and from the following words.

14 Fear † came upon me g, and trembling, which made † all my bones to shake.

g Either caused by the Apparition following, or sent by God to humble him, and to prepare him for the more diligent Attention to, reverent Reception of, and ready Compliance with the divine Message.

15 Then h a spirit i passed before my face, the hair of my flesh k stood up l.

h Heb. And, or For, as this Particle is oft used. So this was the reason of the fore-going Thoughts and Fear. i An Angel in some visible shape, otherwise he could not have discerned it nor would have been affrighted at it. k i. e. Of my Body, as Flesh is taken, Gen. 2. 24. Psal. 16. 9. and 119. 120. l Through that excessive Horrour, caused by so glorious, unusual and terrible a Presence. Which God useth to excite in Men, upon such occasions, to convince them, that it was not a vain Imagination or Illusion, but a real Vision and Revelation, and that from God.

16 It stood still m, but I could not discern the form thereof n: an image was before mine eyes o, ‖ there was silence p, and I heard a voice, saying,

m Having passed by him to and again, he made a stand, as one that had some Business with him, and addressed himself to speak to him. n To wit, exactly and distinctly, so as to know what or who it was. o I saw some corporeal or visible Resemblance, though in a confused manner. p The Spirit, which possible, had made some noise with his motion, now standing still, made no noise: All other persons and things about me were silent, and I also kept in my Voice and Breath, as much as I could, that I might distinctly hear what I perceived the Spirit was speaking to me. In the Hebrew, the words run thus, Silence, and a voice (i. e. a silent, or still, or low Voice, by a very common Figure, called Hendiadys) I heard.

17 Shall mortal man be more just than God q? shall a man r be more pure than his Maker s?

q The Sense is, Thou, O Job, dost presumptuously accuse God for dealing rashly and unrighteously with thee, in sending thee into the World upon such hard terms, and punishing an innocent and righteous Man with such unparallell'd Severity; but consider things calmly within thy self, If God and thou come to a Tryal before any equal Judge, canst thou think that thou wilt'st go away justified, and the great God shall be condemned? No righteous Man will punish another without cause, or more than he deserves; and therefore if God do so with thee, as thy words imply, he is less just than a Man: Which is blasphemous and absurd to imagine. r A great and mighty Man, as this word signifies, a man eminent for Wisdom, or Justice, or Power, or any other perfections, such as thou art thought by thy self or others to be; who therefore might expect more favour than a poor, miserable and contemptible Man; which the word enosch, used in the former Branch, signifies. So he anticipates this Objection which Job might make. s An unanswerable Argument against Job; He made thee, and that for himself, and his own Glory; and therefore hath an unquestionable Right to deal with thee, and dispose of thee, the Work of his Hands, as he sees fit: Woe to him that striveth with his Maker, Isa. 45. 9. Besides, he made Man just and pure; If any Man have any thing of Justice or Purity in him, it is derived from God, the undoubted and only Fountain of it; and therefore it must necessarily be in God in a far more eminent degree.

* Ch. 15. 15. & 25. 4. 2 Pet. 2. 4. ‖ Or, not in his angels, in whom he put light.

18 Behold t, he * put no trust in his servants u; ‖ And his angels he charged with folly x:

t This deserves thy serious Consideration. These and the following words seem to be the words of Eliphaz, explaining the former Vision, and applying it to Job's Case, and enforcing it by further Arguments. u i. e. In his Angels, as appears both by the next words of this Verse, where they are called, by way of Explication and Restriction, his Angels; and by the next Verse, where Men are opposed to them. They are called his Servants by way of Eminency, that general Name being here appropriated to the chief of the kind, as is very usual in all Authors in like cases; and withal, to intimate that soveraign Dominion which the great God hath over the glorious Angels, and much more over Men, by virtue whereof he hath an unquestionable authority to treat them according to his good Pleasure. And these God is said to put no trust in, because he could not be confident that they, if left to themselves, and destitute of the Succours of his Power and Grace, would continue to be loyal, and faithful, and serviceable to him, and would not revolt from him, him, as some of their Brethren had done. And for this cause God was pleased, after some time of Trial, to give some special and further Grace, either by Christ, or otherwise, whereby they should be infallibly confirmed in the State of Grace and Felicity. x Or, with vanity, i.e. He discerned Folly and Vanity in the Angelical Natures, when he had first made them; which, although he saw and pronounced them, no less than the visible Creatures, Gen. 1. to be very good in themselves, and free from the least degree or tincture of Sin; yet comparing them with himself, and considering them in themselves alone, he saw something of Folly and Vanity in their very Natures, because they were Creatures, and therefore subject to manifold Changes; and, among others, to fall from God, or into Sin; as it appeared by the sad Experience of some of them. Seeing therefore the Angels, which so far exceed Mankind in Wisdom, and Strength, and Purity, and Justice, and all other Perfections, do fall incomparably short of God in these things, it is most absurd, as well as impious, to think that Man is more just or pure than God; as was said, v. 17. and as thou, O Job, seemest to surmise. Others, Nor (Heb. And not; the negative Particle being repeated out of the former Branch of the Verse, as it is, Psal 9. 18. Prov. 17. 26. and elsewhere) in his angels, in whom (both which Particles are frequently understood, as hath been proved before) he put light, or splendor; to wit, singular Wisdom and Purity, beyond what he put in Man.

19 How much less y on them z that dwell in * houses of clay a, whose foundation is in the dust b, which are crushed c before the moth d?

* 2 Cor. 5. 1.

y Understand, doth he put trust in them, &c. Or, how much more, understand, doth he charge folly on them, &c. Either of these Supplements are natural and easie, being fetched out of the former Verse, and necessary to make the Sense compleat. The Sense is, What strange Presumption then is it, for a foolish and mortal Man to pretend to an higher Privilege than the Angels do, to make himself more just than God, or to exalt himself above or against God, as thou dost? z i.e. On Men, as it follows; who, though they have immortal Spirits, yet those Spirits dwell in mortal Bodies; which are great Debasements, and Clogs, and Incumbrances, and Snares to them. a And which are here called houses, (because they are the Receptacles of the Soul, and the places of its setled and continual abode) and houses of clay, and earthly houses, 2 Cor. 5. 1. partly because they were made of clay, or earth, Gen. 2. 7. 1 Cor. 15. 47. and partly to note their great Frailty and Mutability; whereas the angels are free Spirits, unconfined to such Carcases, and dwell in celestial, and glorious and everlasting Mansions. b Whose very foundation, no less than the rest of the Building, is in the dust; who, as they dwell in Dust and Clay, so they had their Foundation or Original from it, and they must return to it, Eccles. 12. 7. and, as to their Bodies, lie down and sleep in it, Dan. 12. 2. as in his long home, Eccles. 12. 5. and the only continuing City which he hath in this World. c Heb. they crush them; i.e. they are, or will be crushed. The Active Verb used impersonally; as it is, ch. 7. 3. and 34. 20. Prov. 6. 30. Luk. 12. 20. d i.e. Sooner than a Moth is crushed, which is easily done by a gentle touch of the fingers: An Hyperbolical Expression. So the Hebrew word, liphne, commonly signifying Place, doth here note Time; as it is used, Gen. 27. 7. and 29. 26. and 36. 31. Or, at the face, or appearance of a moth. No Creature is so weak and contemptible, but one time or other it may have the Body of Man in its power; as the Worms, the Moths Cousin-Germans, have in the Grave. But he instanceth in a Moth, rather than a Worm, because it is the weaker of the two, and because it better agrees with the similitude of an House, in which Moths commonly are more frequent, and powerful, and mischievous than Worms. How then canst thou think, O Job, to contend with thy Maker, that must become a Prey to such small and impotent Creatures?

20 They are † destroyed from morning to evening e: they perish for ever f without any ‖ regarding it g.

e Either, 1. Speedily, between Morning and Evening; like the Grass, they flourish in the Morning, and in the Evening are cut off, Psal. 90. 5, 6. Or rather, 2. All the day long, as the Phrase is, 2 Cor. 11. 25. There is not a moment wherein Man is not sinking, and drawing on towards Death and Corruption. f As to humane Appearance, and the course of Nature, as many such like passages are to be understood in this Book; or in reference to this present and worldly Life, which, when once lost, is never recovered, Job 16. 22. Psal. 39. 13. g Heb. without putting the Heart to it, the word Heart being understood here, as also ch. 23. 6. and 34. 23. Isa. 41. 20. as may appear, by comparing 1 Sam. 9. 20. 2 Sam. 18. 3. Isa. 41. 22. and 57. 1. where the same Phrase is used, and the word Heart expressed. The meaning is either, 1. Yet few or no Men that survive them lay it to Heart, as they should do. Or, 2. They perish beside the Expectation of all Men, when both themselves and others thought their Mountain was so strong, that it could not be removed. Or rather, 3. This is so common a thing for all Men, though never so high and great, to perish in this manner, that no man heeds it, but passeth it by as a general Accident, not worthy of Observation. Others, no man procuring, or furthering it: Heb. without any Man's putting the hand to it; i.e. They perish of themselves, without any violent hand.

21 * Doth not their excellency h which is in them go away i? they * die, even without wisdom k.

* Psal. 39 11. & 49. 14. * Ch. 36. 12.

h Whatsoever is really, or by common Estimation, excellent in Men; all their natural, and moral, and civil Accomplishments; as high Birth, great Riches, Power and Wisdom, &c. i These are so far from preserving Men from perishing, as one would think they should do, that they perish themselves together with those Houses of Clay, in which they are lodged. Or, go away (i.e. die and perish, as that Phrase is oft used; as, Gen. 15. 15. Jos. 23. 14. Job 10 21. Psal. 58. 9. Eccles. 12. 5. Matt. 26. 24) with (as Beth is oft used) them; it doth not survive them. k Either, 1. Like Fools: Wise Men and Fools die alike, Eccl. 2. 16. Or, 2. They never attain to perfect Wisdom, to that Wisdom which Man once had; much less to that Wisdom which is in God, which Job conceiteth he hath; otherwise he would not so boldly censure the Counsels and Works of God, as unrighteous or unreasonable, because his human and narrow Capacity cannot fully understand them. Moreover, as folly is oft put for Unrighteousness and Wickedness, so is Wisdom for Justice and Goodness; which is so known, that it is needless to prove it: And so by Wisdom here, may be meant that perfect Justice and Purity which Job arrogated to himself, and which Eliphaz here denies to all Men, v. 17, &c.

a i.e. Invite, or make Proclamation, as this word is oft used; as, Deut. 20. 10. Judg. 12. 1. Jer. 2. 2. and 3. 12. and 7. 2. Call them all, as it were, by their Names: Consult the whole Catalogue of them; all which thou didst ever know, or hear of. b To wit, of the Saints; as it follows. c i.e. Comply with thee: Answer thy Desires or Expectations. Try if there be any one Saint, that will defend or allow thee in these bold Expostulations with God. Or, as it is in the Hebrew, If there be any that doth answer thee; i.e. whose Opinion, or Disposition and Carriage is answerable, or like to thine: So answering is sometimes used; as, Prov. 27 19. Eccles. 10. 19. Thou wilt find many Fools, or wicked Men, as it follows, v. 2. to answer or imitate thee in their Speeches and Carriages, but not one of the Saints like thee; which deserves thy serious Consideration, and gives thee just Cause to question thine Integrity. d Either, 1. The Angels, who are sometimes called Saints; as, Job 15. 15. Dan. 8. 13. Zech. 14. 5. because they are eminently and perfectly holy: Or rather, 2. Holy Men; as appears, both from the Word, which most commonly is so used; and from the Opposition of the foolish Man to these, v. 2. and because the Example of Men was more proper and effectual for Job's Conviction, than of Angels. e Or, look: Look about thee; view them all, and see if thou canst find one like thee.

2 For wrath f killeth the foolish man g, and ‖ envy h slayeth the silly one i.

f Either, 1. The Wrath of God: Or rather, 2. A Man's own Wrath, Fretting, and Impatience, and Indignation; which kills Men, partly naturally, as it preys upon a Man's Spirit, and wasteth him inwardly, and so hastens his Death: Of which see Prov. 14. 30. and 17. 22. partly morally, as it prompts him to those rash, and furious, and wicked Actions which may procure his Death; and partly meritoriously, as it provoketh God to cut him off, and to bring upon him those further and severe stroaks which he mentions in the following words. g Either, 1. The rash and inconsiderate Man, who doth not ponder things impartially; but like a mad Man, rageth against God, and torments himself, and all that hear him: Or, 2. The ungodly Man, who is frequently called a Fool in Scripture-language, and who is here opposed to the Saints, v. 1. h He taxeth Job, who spoke with great Envy at those that were never born, or were in their Graves, ch. 3. 10, 12, &c. i Properly, the Man, who, for want of true Wisdom, is soon deceived with false Opinions, and Appearances, and present things: Which is thy Case, O Job! The Sense of the Verse may be this; I perceive, O Job! that thou art full of Envy at wicked Men, who at present are, or seem to be in an happier Condition than thou; and of Wrath against God, who denies thee that Mercy, and loads thee with Afflictions: And this shews thee to be a foolish and weak Man; for those Men, notwithstanding their present Prosperity, are doomed to great and certain Misery; as it here follows. And so this Verse coheres with the following, as well as the fore-going Verses.

3 * I have seen k the foolish l taking root m: but suddenly n I cursed o his habitation p.

* Psal. 37. 35.

k I have oft observed it in my Experience. Having severely rebuked Job for his Transports of Passion, and intemperate Speeches against God, he now returns to his former Argument, and proves, that such dreadful and destructive Judgments of God do not befal the Righteous, but the Wicked; as he observed, ch. 4. 7, 8. Withal, he answers an Objection concerning the present and seeming Prosperity of the wicked; which he confesseth, that he himself had sometimes observed. l i.e. The wicked Man, who is quite destitute of true, i.e. of spiritual and heavenly Wisdom. m Not only prosperous for the present, but, as it seemed, firm and secure for the future; being being ſtrongly fortified with power and riches, and Children too, ſo as there was no appearance nor danger of a change. n In a moment, beſides and before mine, and his own, and all other mens expectation. o Either 1. I judged that he was a curſed creature notwithſtanding all his proſperity, and I foreſaw and foretold it, by the Rules of Scripture, or the Direction of God's Spirit, that he would certainly ſooner or later be ſtript of all his bleſſings, & have God's curſe fall heavily upon him. Or rather 2. I ſaw and perceived by the event which followed his proſperity, that he was a man accurſed of God. For he ſpeaks not in theſe words of what his eſtate conſtantly was even in the midſt of his happineſs, though even then he was really accurſed; but of what it was by a ſudden change. p Or, as the Hebrew word ſignifies, his pleaſant or commodious habitation, perſons or things in it, or belonging to it, being comprehended in that word by an uſual Metonymy.

* Pſ.119.155. 4. * His Children q are far from ſafety r, and they are cruſhed in the gate s; neither is there any to deliver them t.

q Whoſe greatneſs and happineſs he deſigned in all his enterpriſes, ſuppoſing that his family was and would be eſtabliſhed for ever. r †i.e. Are expoſed to great dangers and calamities in this life, and can neither preſerve themſelves nor the great inheritance which their Fathers got and left for them. Thus to be far from peace, Lam. 3. 17. Is to be involved in deſperate troubles. s i.e. In the place of judicature; To which they are brought for their offences, and where they will find ſevere judges and few or no friends; partly becauſe being wickedly educated and truſting to their own greatneſs they were inſolent and injurious to all their neighbours: and partly becauſe thoſe many perſons whom their powerful fathers defrauded or oppreſſed do ſeek for juſtice and the recovery of their rights, which they eaſily obtain againſt ſuch perſons as plainly declared by their Actions, that they neither feared God, nor reverenced Man, and therefore were hated by all ſorts of Men. t They can find no advocates nor aſſiſtants who are either able or willing to help them: But like Iſhmael, as their hand was formerly againſt every Man, ſo now every Mans hand is againſt them.

5. Whoſe harveſt u the hungry x eateth up, and * Chap. 18. 9. taketh it even out of the thorns y, and the * robber z ſwalloweth up a their ſubſtance.

u Which they now juſtly and confidently expect to reap after all their coſt and labour for that end, but are ſadly and ſuddenly diſappointed; Which is a great aggravation of their miſery. x i.e. The poor, whoſe neceſſities make them greedy and ravenous to eat it all up; And from whom he can never recover it, nor any thing in recompence of it. y i.e. Out of the fields, notwithſtanding the ſtrong thorn-hedges wherewith it is incloſed and fortified, and all other dangers or difficulties which may be in their way; They will take it, though they be ſcratched and wounded by the thorns about it. z So called from their long hair, which ſuch perſons nouriſhed, either becauſe of their wild and ſavage kind of life; which made them neglect the trimming of their hair and body: Or that they might look more terribly, and ſo affright all thoſe who ſhould indeavour to oppoſe them: Or, the thirſty, as the word may ſignifie, from another root. And ſo it anſwers well to the hungry in the former branch. a Greedily, and ſo as there is no Hope of Recovering it.

b Or, For, or rather, Becauſe. So the following words may contain a reaſon why he ſhould ſeek unto God, as he exhorts him. v. 8. Or, Surely, as that particle is oft uſed. And ſo it is a note of his proceeding to another argument. c. Or, iniquity; As this word oft ſignifies, and of this the following ſentence is true. And ſo this firſt branch ſpeaks of ſin, and the next branch of trouble, which is the fruit of ſin: And both ſin and trouble are ſaid to come from the ſame ſpring. But this word ſignifies alſo affliction or miſery or trouble, as Pſal. 90. 10. Prov. 12. 21. Which ſeems moſt proper here, both becauſe it is ſo explained by the following words trouble; and again trouble, v. 7. the ſame thing being repeated in ſeveral words, as is uſual in holy Scripture, and becauſe the great thing which troubled Job, and the chief matter of theſe diſcourſes was Job's afflictions, not his ſins. d It ſprings not up by chance, as herbs which grow of their own accord out of the earth: Or, it comes not from men or creatures here below, but it comes from a certain and an higher cauſe, even from God, and that for Mans ſins, and therefore thou ſhouldeſt ſeek to him for redreſs, as it follows v. 8.

‖ Or, labour. † Heb. the ſons of the burning coals lift up to fly. 7. Yet man is born unto ‖ trouble e, as † the ſparks fly upwards f.

e i.e. He is ſo commonly expoſed to many and various troubles, as if he were born to no other end: Affliction is become in ſome ſort natural and proper to Man, and it is together with ſin tranſmitted from Parents to Children, as their moſt certain, and conſtant inheritance; God having allotted this portion to mankind for their ſins. And therefore thou takeſt a wrong courſe in complaining ſo bitterly of that which thou ſhouldeſt patiently bear as the common lot of mankind, and thy right method is to ſeek unto God who inflicts it, and who only can remove it. f i.e. As naturally, and as generally, as the ſparks of fire fly upward, which do ſo univerſally and conſtantly. Heb. and the ſparks, &c. But the particle and is oft uſed comparatively for as, as Ch. 12. 11. & 14. 12. & 34. 3. Prov. 25. 24. Mark 9. 49.

8. I would g ſeek unto God, h and unto God would I commit my cauſe i.

g If I were in thy condition; And therefore I would adviſe thee to the ſame courſe. h To wit, by prayer and humiliation and ſubmiſſion, imploring his pardon, and favour, and help, and not repine at him and accuſe his providence, as thou doeſt. i. e. Commend my afflicted condition to him by fervent prayer, and reſign my ſelf and all my concerns to him, and humbly hope for relief from him. Or, propound my matters, i. e. Make known my afflictions and requeſts to him, Or, put or diſpoſe my words, i. e. Pray to him and pour out my complaints before him.

9. * Which doth great things † k and unſearchable; l marvelous things m † without number. * Ch. 9, 10. Pſal. 72. 18. & 40 5. & 145. 3. Rom. 11. 33. † Heb. and there is no ſearch. † Heb. till there be no number.

k Here Eliphaz enters upon a diſcourſe of the infinite perfection and greatneſs of God's nature and works; which he doth partly as an Argument to enforce the Exhortation to ſeek and commit his cauſe to God, v. 8. becauſe God was infinitely able either to puniſh him yet far worſe, if he continued to provoke him, or to raiſe him from the duſt, if he humbly addreſſed himſelf to him: and partly that by a true repreſentation of God's Excellency and Glory, & of that vaſt diſproportion which was betwen God & Job, he might both convince Job of his great ſin in ſpeaking ſo boldly and irreverently of him, and prevent his relapſe into the ſame miſcarriage. l Either ſuch things as we may not boldly and curiouſly ſearch into, Deut. 29. 29. Rom. 11. 33. Col. 2. 18. or ſuch as by ſearching we cannot find out, Job 11. 7. ſuch as we cannot thoroughly underſtand either the works themſelves, or God's way and manner of doing them, or God's deſigns or ends in doing them. And therefore, O Job! thou art guilty of great impiety and folly to cenſure the waies and works of God as unreaſonable, Ch. 3. v. 11, 20. becauſe thou doſt not fully underſtand the nature and uſe of them. m Which (though common, as the following words are, and therefore neglected and deſpiſed, yet) are juſt matter of wonder even to the wiſeſt Men.

10. Who giveth rain n upon the earth, and ſendeth waters o upon the † fields p. † Heb. out-places.

n He beginneth with this ordinary and obvious work of God, in which he implies that there is ſomething unſearchable and wonderful, as indeed there is in the riſe of it from the Earth, in the ſtrange hanging of that heavy body in the Air, and in the diſtribution of it as God ſees fit, Amos 4. 7. and how much more in the ſecret Counſels, and hidden paths of Divine Providence, which Job took the liberty to cenſure. o Either Fountains and Rivers, which is another great and wonderful work of God: Or rather Rain-water, as the following words imply: the ſame thing being repeated in other words after the manner. p Or, upon all places abroad, i. e. which have no covering to keep out the Rain.

11. * To ſet up on high thoſe that be low q; that * 1 Sam. 2. 7. Pſal. 113. 7. thoſe which mourn may be exalted to ſafety r.

q Theſe words contain either 1. a declaration of God's end in giving Rain, which is to enrich thoſe who were poor, or mourning for the drought, by ſending Rain, and making their Lands fruitful: Or rather 2. another example of God's great and wonderful works. And the Infinitive Verb is here put for the Indicative; He ſetteth up, &c. which is very frequent in the Hebrew, as Pſal. 56. 13. Zech. 3. 4. & 12. 10. He giveth this inſtance to comfort and encourage Job to ſeek to God, becauſe he can raiſe him out of his greateſt depths, and uſeth to raiſe others in the like condition. r Notwithſtanding all the craft and power of their enemies.

12. * He diſappointeth the devices of the crafty s, * Neh. 4. 15. Pſal. 33. 10. Iſ. 8. 10. ‖ Or, cannot perform any thing. ſo that their hands ‖ cannot perform their enterpriſe t.

s Such as are cunning to work evil, and to cover it with fair pretences, as Hypocrites uſe to do, and as Job's friends charged him with doing; God breaks the hopes and deſigns of ſuch men; as he hath now blaſted thy expectation, and taken away thy outward happineſs, which was the thing thou didſt deſign in taking up the Profeſſion of Religion. t Or, any thing: or, what is ſolid or ſubſtantial: or, wiſdom, i. e. their wiſe counſel, or crafty deſign. They cannot execute their cunning contrivances.

13. * He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs u; * 1 Cor. 3. 19. and the counſel of the froward x is carried headlong y.

u Wicked men who are wiſe to do evil, and wiſe in the opinion of the world, he not only deceiveth in their hopes and counſels, but turns them againſt themſelves; as we ſee in Achitophel, Haman, &c. x Or perverſe, or wreſtlers: ſuch as wind and turn every way, as Wreſtlers do, and will leave no means untried to accompliſh their counſels. y i. e. Is tumbled down and broken, and that by their own precipitation and haſte. Their malice cannot have the patience to proceed wiſely and leiſurely againſt God's Church and People, but makes them eager and venturous, and ſo to make more haſte than good ſpeed in their wicked deſigns.

14. * They ‖ meet with darkneſs in the day time z, * Deut. 28. 29. chap. 12. 25. Amos 8. 9. ‖ Or, run into. and grope a in the noon day as in the night.

z i. e. In plain things they run into groſs miſtakes and errors, and commonly chuſe thoſe counſels and courſes which are worſt for themſelves. Darkneſs oft notes miſery, but here ignorance or error, as it is alſo uſed, Ch. 12. 25. & 37. 19. and elſewhere. a Like blind men to find their way, not knowing what to do.

15. But he ſaveth the poor b from the Sword, from their mouth c, and from the hand of the mighty.

b Or helpleſs; who therefore flee to God for refuge. c Or from the Sword, which cometh out of their mouth, i. e. from all their cenſures, ſlanders, threatnings, deceitful inſinuations, falſe-ſwearings of witneſſes, unrighteous ſentences of corrupt Judges; whereby their good names, or eſtates, or lives may be expoſed to the utmoſt hazards. And this is fitly oppoſed to the Sword of the hand, implied plied in the next branch of the verſe. Or, from the Sword by their mouths, i. e. by thoſe wicked mens own words againſt the godly, which God wonderfully over-ruleth to the working out of their deliverance.

* Pſal. 107. 42. * 16. * So the poor hath hope d, and iniquity e ſtoppeth her mouth f.

d So this poor man obtaineth what he in ſome meaſure hoped or expected from God, to whom he committed his cauſe; and other poor men will be encouraged by his example to place their hope in God; e i. e. wicked men. The abſtract for the concrete, as pride, deceit, injuſtice, are put for proud, deceitful and unrighteous men, Jer. 13. 9. 2 Pet. 3. 13. f i. e. They are ſilenced and confounded, being convicted of their own wickedneſs & folly, & finding that not the poor are got out of their nets and ſnares, in which they thought that they had them faſt, but alſo the oppreſſours themſelves are inſnared in them; and all this by ſudden and unexpected means.

* Prov. 3. 12. Heb. 12. 5. James 1. 12. Rev. 3. 19. 17. * Behold g, happy is the Man whom God correcteth h; therefore deſpiſe not thou i the chaſtening of the Almighty k.

g For what I am ſaying, though moſt true, will not be believed without ſerious conſideration. h Heb. Bleſſednеſſes (i. e. various and great happineſs, as the plural number implies) belong to that Man whom God rebukes, to wit, with ſtrokes, Ch. 33. 16, 19. Thoſe afflictions are ſo far from making thee miſerable, as thou complaineſt, that they are and will be, if thou doſt thy duty, the means of thy happineſs: Which though a paradox to the World, is frequently affirmed in holy Scripture and the reaſon of it is plain, becauſe they are pledges of God's love, which no Man can buy too dear; and though bitter, yet neceſſary phyſick to purge out that ſin which is deeply fixed in all mens natures, and thereby to prevent far greater, even infinite and eternal miſeries. Without reſpect to which this Propoſition could not be true or tolerable. And therefore it plainly ſhews, that good Men in thoſe antient times of the Old Teſtament, had the proſpect, and belief, and hope of everlaſting bleſſedneſs in Heaven after this life. i i. e. Do not abhor it as a thing pernicious and intolerable, nor refuſe it as a thing uſeleſs and unprofitable, nor ſlight it as a mean and unneceſſary thing; but on the contrary, prize it highly as a favour and vouchſafement of God: for ſuch negative expreſſions oft imply the contrary, as 1 Theſ. 5. 20. 1 Tim. 4. 12. See Prov. 10. 2 & 17. 21. k Or, of the allſufficient God, who is able to ſupport and comfort thee in thy troubles, and to deliver thee out of them, and to add more calamities to them, if thou art obſtinate and incorrigible.

* Deut. 32. 39. 1 Sam. 2. 6. Iſa. 30. 26. Hoſ. 6. 1. 18. * For he maketh ſore, and bindeth up l: he woundeth, and his hands make whole.

l To wit, the wounds, as good Surgeons uſe to do when they have dreſſed them in order to their healing. Comp. Pſal. 147. 3. Ezek. 34. 4. The ſenſe is, Though he hath ſeen it fit to wound thee, yet he will not always grieve thee, but will in due time releaſe thee from all thy miſeries. Therefore deſpair not.

* Pſal. 91. 3. Prov. 24. 16. 19. * He ſhall deliver thee m in ſix n troubles: Yea, in ſeven there ſhall no evil touch thee o.

m To wit, if thou ſeekeſt to him by prayer and repentance. n i. e. Manifold or repeated; as ſix is uſed for many, Prov. 6. 16. o To wit, ſo as to undo or deſtroy thee, as touching is uſed, Joſ. 9. 19. Heb. 11. 28. 1 John 5. 18. See alſo Gen. 26. 11. 29. 2 Sam. 14. 10. Pſal. 105. 15. Zech. 2. 8. Thou ſhalt have a good iſſue out of all thy troubles, though they are both great and many.

† Heb. from the hands 20. In famin p he ſhall redeem thee from death q, and in † war from the power of the Sword r.

p Which Job might be thought to fear, as being ſo poor that he needed his friends contributions for his relief. q From that terrible kind of death. r Theſe things he utters with more confidence, partly becauſe the rewards or puniſhments of this life were more conſtantly diſtributed to Men in the old Teſtament according to their good or bad behaviour than now they are: And Partly becauſe it was his particular opinion, that great afflictions were the conſtant fruits and certain evidences of a Mans wickedneſs: And conſequently that great mercies and deliverances ſhould infallibly follow upon true repentance and godlineſs.

‖ Or, when the tongue ſcourgeth. 21. Thou ſhalt be hid s ‖ from the ſcourge of the tongue t, neither ſhalt thou be afraid u of deſtruction when it cometh x.

s i. e. Protected as in ſome ſecret and ſafe place. t i. e. From falſe accuſations and virulent ſlanders and reproaches, either by diverting their tongues to other perſons or things; Or by clearing thy integrity. x Thou ſhalt have no cauſe to fear it, becauſe God will ſecure thee in it and from it. u To wit, upon others near thee or round about thee.

* Iſa. 11. 9. & 35. 9. & 65. 25. Ezek. 34. 25. Hoſ. 2. 18. 22. At deſtruction and famine thou ſhalt laugh y: * neither ſhalt thou be afraid of the Beaſts y of the Earth.

y Thou ſhalt not only be redeemed from famine, v. 20. and not fear deſtruction, v. 21. But thou ſhalt laugh at them, not with a laughter of ſcorn and contempt, as this word is uſed Ch. 39. 18. Pſal. 2. 4. & 37. 13. (for God's judgments are to be entertained with reverence and godly fear) but with a laughter of joy and triumph ariſing from his juſt ſecurity and confidence in God's watchful and gracious providence which will either keep him from it, or in it, or do him much good by it. y i. e. The wild beaſts which were numerous and miſchievous in thoſe parts. See Deut. 28. 26. 1. Sam. 17. 34. Jer. 7. 33.

* Pſal. 91. 13. 23. * For thou ſhalt be in league with the ſtones of the field z: And the beaſts of the field a ſhall be at peace with thee.

z Thou ſhalt be free from any annoyance by ſtones either in thy walking or other poſtures, or in thy plowing, as if they had made an inviolable league with thee. Stones may be, and in theſe ſtony Countries were, hurtful to men many ways; either by bruiſing or hurting their feet when they walked barefoot, as the manner then was; Or by giving them occaſion of ſtumbling or ſlipping and falling: Or by falling upon a man from a rock or higher ground, as ſometimes it hath happened: Or filling his grounds, ſo as to hinder his plowing and make his lands unfruitful. Nay the ſtones ſhall not only ceaſe to be hurtful, but they ſhall be uſeful, and beneficial to thee, they ſhall as it were preſent themſelves to thee when thou haſt occaſion either to ſling them at thine enemies, as then was uſual, Judg. 20. 16. 2 Chron. 26. 14. or to make fences to thy ground: Or to build an houſe. This is a bold Metaphor, but ſuch are frequent, as in other Authors, ſo alſo in Scripture, as Iſa. 28. 15. Hoſ. 2. 18. a Either 1. the wild beaſts; and then this is an addition to the former priviledge; they ſhall not hurt thee, v. 22. nay, they ſhall befriend thee as being at peace with thee, here v. 23. Or, 2. the tame Beaſts, who otherwiſe may be refractory and hurtful to a Man, many having been killed by them.

‖ Or, that peace is thy tabernacle. 24. And thou ſhalt know b ‖ that thy tabernacle c ſhall be in peace d; and thou ſhalt viſit thy habitation e, and ſhall not ‖ ſin f.

b By certain and conſtant experience, c i. e. Thy habitation, as it follows, including alſo the Inhabitants, Children, or Friends and Servants. d Shall enjoy great ſafety from all their Enemies, and concord among themſelves, and proſperity in all their concerns: all which are comprehended under the ſweet name of Peace, e i. e. Manage and order thy Family and all thy domeſtick affairs and worldly concerns with care and diligence. Viſiting is oft uſed for regarding or taking care of, as Gen. 21. 1. Ruth 1. 6. Pſal. 8. 4. & 80. 14. f Either by unrighteouſneſs in thy dealings with thy Family or others; or by neglecting God and his ſervice in thy Family; or by winking at any ſin in thy domeſticks which thou canſt hinder. But becauſe he ſpeaks not here of Job's duty, but of his priviledge, and that in outward and worldly things, it ſeems better rendred by others, and thou ſhalt not err, or miſcarry, or miſs thy way or mark, as this very word is uſed below, Ch. 24. 19. & 14. 16. & Judg. 20. 16. Thou ſha't not be diſappointed of thy hopes, or blaſted in thy endeavours, but ſhalt ſucceed in them. Or, and thou ſhalt not wander, or be a wanderer, having no houſe in which to put his head, which Job might have ſome ground to fear: but thou ſhalt have an habitation of thy own, which thou ſhalt viſit, and manage as thou didſt before. ‖ Heb. liſted up.

g Partly by aſſurance from God's promiſes and the impreſſions of his Spirit; And partly by experience in due time. h Thy poſterity, which God will give thee inſtead of thoſe which thou haſt loſt, ſhall be high and honourable and powerful. Or, ſhall be many. i Which ſhall come out of thy own loins as branches out of a tree, as the word ſignifies. And this word ſeems added to the former to reſtrain and explain it by ſhewing that he did not ſpeak of his Spiritual ſeed, as Abraham's ſeed is in part underſtood, but of the fruit of his own body. k Both for its plentiful increaſe, and for its flouriſhing greenneſs.

† Heb. aſcendeth. 26. Thou ſhalt come to thy grave in a full age l like as a ſhock of corn † cometh in m in his ſeaſon n.

l In a mature and old, but vigorous, age, as the word implies. Thou ſhalt not be cut off by an hand of violence before thy time, as thy ſons and other wicked Men have been, but ſhalt die in a good old age, as did Abraham, Gen. 25. 8. and Moſes Deut. 34. 7. m As an heap or ſtack of corn is brought in, to wit, to the barn: Heb. aſcendeth or riſeth: which word is very proper and uſual in this caſe: for a ſtack of Corn is ſaid to riſe, when by the addition of new heaps and handfuls it is raiſed to an higher pitch: Or, is carried, as this ſame word is uſed Pſal. 102. 25. Cut me not off, &c. Heb. Make me not to aſcend: And thus it is fitly uſed both of the Corn, which, when it is cut up, aſcends, or is lifted up from the Earth on which it lay, and is advanced into ſtacks, and high heaps either in the Barn, or in the Field; and of Man, who when he dies, his ſpirit goeth upward to Heaven, as is implied even there where in the perſon of an Epicure it is queſtioned, Eccleſ. 3. 21. n In harveſt when the Corn is ripe.

† Heb. for thy ſelf. 27. Lo this, we o have ſearched it p, ſo it is; hear it, and know thou it q † for thy good r.

o It is not my ſingle opinion, but my Brethren concur with me, as thou wilt hear from their own mouths. p This is no raſh or haſty conceit, but what we have learned by deep conſideration and hard ſtudy, long experience, and diligent obſervation both of God's word, ſo far as he hath been pleaſed to reveal himſelf, and of the courſe and methods of his providence and dealing with Men in the world. q For to us thou ſeemeſt by thy words and carriage to be wholly, or in a great part ignorant of theſe things. r Let thy advantage which will come unto it by following this counſel, remove thy prejudice againſt it.

CHAP. VI.

1. BUT Job anſwered and ſaid,

2. Oh that my grief a were throughly weighed b, and my calamity ‖ laid in the ballances together c!

a Either up.

a Either 1. my calamity, as it follows, or the cauſe or matter of my grief: The act being put for the object, as is uſual, fear for the thing feared, &c. and the ſame thing being here repeated in differing words. Or 2. My ſorrow: or my wrath or rage, as thou didſt call it, Ch. 5. 2. So his wiſh is, that his ſorrow or wrath, were laid in one Scale of the ballances, and his calamity in the other, that ſo it might be known whether his ſorrow or wrath was greater than his miſery, as was pretended. b Were fully underſtood & duely conſidered. Thy harſh rebukes and cenſures of my impatience, and hypocriſy and wickedneſs proceedeth from thy ignorance or unſenſibleneſs of my inſupportable calamities. I deſire no favour from thee: But O that I had a juſt and equal Judge that would underſtand my caſe, and conſider whether I have not juſt cauſe for ſuch bitter complaints: Or, at leaſt, whether the greatneſs of my Burthen ſhould not procure ſome allowance to my infirmity, if I ſhould ſpeak ſomething indecently and unadviſedly, and protect me from ſuch ſevere cenſures. c Either 1. together with my grief; or rather, 2. together with any the moſt heavy thing to be put into the other ſcale, as with the ſand, &c. as is expreſſed in the next verſe; where alſo the particle it, being of the ſingular number, ſheweth that there was but one thing to be weighed with the ſand.

3. For now it d would be heavier than the Sand of the Sea e; therefore † my words are ſwallowed up f.

† That is, I want words to expreſs my grief.

d i. e. My grief or calamity; e which is heavier than dry Sand. f As this Verb is uſed, Prov. 20. 25. Obad. v. 16. My voice and ſpirit faileth me. So far am I from ſpeaking too liberally of it, for which I am now accuſed, that I cannot find, nor utter words ſufficient to expreſs my ſorrow or miſery; but my groanings are ſuch as cannot be uttered; as is ſaid in another caſe, Rom. 8. 26. When I would expreſs it, the words ſtick in my throat, and I am forced as it were to ſwallow them up.

* Pſal. 38. 2. Ch. 16. 12, 13.

4. * For the Arrows g of the Almighty h are within me i; the poiſon whereof k drinketh up my ſpirit l: * the terrours of God m do ſet themſelves in array n againſt me.

* Pſal. 88. 15, 16.

g So he fitly calls his afflictions, becauſe, like Arrows, they came upon him ſwiftly and ſuddenly one after another, and that from on high, and they wounded him deeply and deadlily. h So he calls them either generally, becauſe all afflictions come from him; or particularly becauſe God's hand was in a ſingular manner eminent and viſible in his miſeries, Ch. 1. or yet more ſpecially, becauſe they were immediately ſhot by God into his Spirit, as it follows. i Beſides thoſe evils which are paſt, Ch. 1. there are other miſeries that are conſtant and fixed in me, the ſharp pains of my body, and diſmal horrours of my mind. k Implying that theſe Arrows were more keen and pernicious than ordinary, as being dipped in God's wrath, as the barbarous Nations then and ſince uſed to dip their Arrows in poiſon, that they might not only pierce, but burn up and conſume the vital parts. l i. e. Exhauſteth and conſumeth either 1. my vital ſpirits together with my blood, the ſeat of them, and my heart, the ſpring of them, as poiſon uſeth to do. But I doubt the Hebrew word ruach, is never uſed in that ſenſe: Or 2. my ſoul, which is commonly the Spirit, my mind and conſcience. So he tells them, that beſides the miſeries which they ſaw, he felt others, and far greater, though inviſible, torments in his ſoul, which if they could ſee, they would have more pity for him. And in this ſenſe this place is, and may very well be otherwiſe rendred, whoſe poiſon my ſpirit drinketh up, i. e. my ſoul ſucks in the venom of thoſe calamities, by apprehending and applying to it ſelf the wrath of God manifeſted and conveyed by them, m Either 1. great terrours; or 2. God's terrible Judgments; or rather 3. theſe terrours which God immediately works in my ſoul, either from the ſenſe of his wrath accompanying my outward troubles; or from the ſad expectation of longer and greater torments. n They are like a numerous and well-ordered Army under the conduct of an irreſiſtible General, who deſigns and directs them to invade me on every ſide.

5. Doth the wild Aſs bray † when he hath graſs? or loweth the Ox over his fodder o?

o Thou wondereſt that my diſpoſition and carriage is ſo greatly altered from what it was, Ch. 4. 3, 4, 5. but thou mayeſt eaſily learn the reaſon of it from the brute Beaſts, the Aſs and Ox, who when they have convenient and common food, are quiet and contented; but when they want that, they will reſent it, and complain in their way by braying or lowing: See Jer. 14. 6. And therefore my carriage is agreeable to thoſe common principles of nature which are both in Men and Beaſts, by which their diſpoſition and deportment is generally ſuitable to their condition. It is no wonder that you complain not who live in eaſe and proſperity, nor did I, when it was ſo with me; but if you felt what I feel, you would be as full of complaints, as I am.

6. Can that which is unſavoury be eaten without Salt p? or is there any taſt in the white of an Egg q?

p Can, or do men uſe to eat unſavoury meats with delight, or without complaint? This is either 1. a reflection upon Eliphaz his diſcourſe as unſavoury, which could not give him any conviction or ſatisfaction. But his cenſure of Eliphaz his ſpeech begins not till v. 14. and then it proceeds: Or rather 2. a juſtification of Job's complaints (of which both the foregoing and following Verſes treat) by another argument. Men do commonly complain of their meat when it is but unſavoury, how much more when it is ſo bitter as mine is? which is implied here, and expreſſed in the next Verſe; where the ſenſe here begun is compleated, and this general Propoſition is accommodated to Job's condition. q Heb. in the white of a yolk, i. e. which encompaſſeth the yolk of an Egg.

7. The things that my ſoul refuſed to touch, are as † my ſorrowful meat r.

r Heb. as the ſicknaſſes or ſorrows of my meat, i. e. as my ſorrowful meat, which I am conſtrained to eat with grief of heart. The particle as, either 1. notes not the ſimilitude, but the truth of the thing, as it is oft uſed, as hath been formerly noted and proved. So the ſenſe is, That ſuch meat as formerly he ſhould have abhorred to touch either for the quality of it, or for his tears or ulcerous matter, which mixed themſelves with it, he was now forced by the neceſſities of nature, and his own poverty, to eat: Or 2. implies that the following words are not to be underſtood properly, but metaphorically. And ſo the ſenſe may be this, Thoſe grievous afflictions which according to the principles and common inclinations of humane nature I dreaded the very touch and thought of, they are now my daily, though ſorrowful bread; I am forced conſtantly to feed upon them; as other perſons in great afflictions are ſaid to be fed with bread of tears, Pſal 80. 5. and to eat aſhes like bread, Pſal. 102. 9. Others make this a cenſure of Eliphaz his words, as ungrateful and loathſom to him. But that ſenſe ſeems neither to agree with the words of this Verſe, nor with its ſcope and coherence with the former, of which ſee the notes on v. 6.

8. O that I might have my requeſt s! and that God would grant me † the thing that I long for!

s i. e. The thing which I have ſo paſſionately deſired; and notwithſtanding all your vain words, and weak Arguments, do ſtill juſtly continue to deſire, to wit, death, as is expreſſed v. 9. and more largely, Ch. 3.

9. Even that it would pleaſe God to deſtroy me t; that he would let looſe his hand u, and cut me off.

t To end my days and calamities together. u Which is now as it were bound up, or reſtrained from giving the that deadly blow which I deſire. O that he would reſtrain himſelf and his hand no longer, but let it fall upon me with all its might ſo as to cut me off, as it follows.

10. Then ſhould I yet have comfort x, yea, I would harden my ſelf in ſorrow y: let him not ſpare z, for I have not concealed the words of the holy One a.

x The thoughts of my approaching death would comfort me in all my ſorrows. This would ſolace me more than life, with all that worldly ſafety, and glory, and happineſs which thou haſt adviſed me to ſeek unto God for. y i. e. I would bear up my ſelf with more courage and patience under all my torments, with the hopes of my death, and that bleſſedneſs into which I know I ſhall after death be admitted, as he more fully ſpeaks, Ch. 19. 26, 27. whereas now I pine away in lingring, and hopeleſs miſeries. Or, I would burn, (i. e. I am content to burn) in ſorrow. Or, I would pray (as this word ſignifies in Hebrew Writers; and praying may be here put for praiſing or worſhipping of God, as it is frequently uſed in Scripture) in, or for my ſorrow or pain; Then I would worſhip God, and ſay, Bleſſed be the Lord's Name for theſe afflictions, as I did for the former, Ch. 1. 20, 21. z But let him uſe all ſeverity againſt me, ſo far as to cut me off, and not ſuffer me to live any longer; which will ſeem to me a cruel kind of patience towards me. a i. e. Of God, who is frequently called the Holy One in Scripture, as Iſa. 40. 25. & 57. 15. Hab. 3. 3. and is ſo in a moſt eminent and peculiar manner. The ſenſe is, Therefore I do not fear death but deſire it; and that not only to be freed from my preſent troubles, but alſo and eſpecially to put me into the poſſeſſion of the happineſs of the next life; of which I am aſſured, becauſe I have in good meaſure performed the conditions of that Covenant upon which he hath promiſed it; for, as for The words of God, i. e. That light of ſacred Truths & Precepts which he hath been pleaſed to impart to me, I have not concealed them, neither from my ſelf, by ſhutting mine eyes againſt them, or ſuffering my prejudices, or paſſions, or worldly Intereſts to blind my mind, leſt I ſhould ſee them, as you think I have done; nor from others; but as I my ſelf have ſtedfaſtly believed them, and not wilfully and wickedly departed from them, ſo I have endeavoured to teach and commend them to others, and have not been aſhamed nor afraid boldly to profeſs and preach the true Religion in the midſt of the Heathens who are round about me. And therefore I know that if God doth cut me off, it will be in mercy, and I ſhall be a gainer by it. Some tranſlate and diſtinguiſh the Verſe thus, Yet this is my comfort (though, or when I ſcorch with pain, and he, i. e. God doth not ſpare me, but afflicts me moſt ſeverely) that I have not concealed the words of God, but have profeſſed and practiſed them.

11. What is my ſtrength that I ſhould hope b? and what is mine end c, that I ſhould prolong my † life d?

b My ſtrength is ſo ſmall and ſpent that although I may linger a while in my torments, yet I cannot live long, and therefore it is vain and abſurd for me to hope for ſuch a reſtitution of my ſtrength and proſperity as thou haſt promiſed to me, Ch. 5. 22. &c. And therefore I juſtly pray that God would take away my life. c Either 1. What is the end or period of my miſeries? When may I expect it? I ſee no end of them; I know not how long I may pine and linger in them. Therefore, Lord, take me ſpeedily away. Or, 2. what is the end of my life? Or What is death to me? It is not terrible but comfortable, as he ſaid v. 10. I need not thoſe vain conſolations which thou giveſt me of being kept from death, v. 20. or having life continued and health reſtored. Death is not the matter of my fear, but of my deſire. d To wit, by my ſeeking to God for it, as thou adviſeſt me, Ch. 5. 8. Why ſhould I deſire or indeavour the prolonging of my life. Or, that I ſhould lengthen out my deſire, to wit, of life and thoſe comforts of life which thou haſt propounded to me. I deſire not to live longer, though in the greateſt ſplendour and proſperity, but to be diſſolved, and to be with my God and Redeemer Ch. 19. 25. The Hebrew word nephesh, here rendred soul or life, oft signifies desire, as Gen. 23. 8. Deut. 23. 24. Prov. 23. 2. Eccles. 6. 9.

12. Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is my flesh † of brass e?

e I am not made of stone or brass, but of flesh and blood, as others are, and therefore I am utterly unable to endure these miseries longer, and can neither hope for, nor desire any continuance of my life, or restauration of my former happiness, but only wish for that death which is the common refuge of all miserable persons, as I said, Ch. 3. 17. 18.

13. Is not my help in me f? and is wisdom driven quite from me g?

f Though I have no strength in my body or outward Man, yet I have some help, and support within me, or in my inward Man, even the conscience of my own innocency and piety, notwithstanding all your bitter accusations and censures as if I had no Integrity, Ch. 4. 6. g If I have no strength in my body, have I therefore no wisdom or judgment left in my Soul? Am I therefore unable to judge of the vanity of my discourse, and of the truth of my own case? Have I not common sence and discretion? do not I know my own condition, & the nature and degree of my sufferings better than thou doest. Am not I a better judge whether I have integrity or no than thou art? But this verse is rendred otherwise, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew words, What if I have no help in me, (i.e. If I cannot help my self, if my outward condition be helpless and hopeless, as I confess it is) is wisdom driven quite from me? Have I therefore lost my understanding and common reason? cannot I judge whether it is more desirable for me to live or to die, whether I am an hypocrite or no, whether your words have truth and weight in them or no, whether you take the right method in dealing with me, whether you deal mercifully and sincerely with me, or no. Yet again (because the construction and sense of these words is judged very difficult) this verse may be joyned with the following, and rendred thus, What if there be no help in me (or, if I be not able to bear my miseries) and if counsel be driven from me, so that I know not what to do, or how to help, or ease my self? Or, and subsistence, or power of subsisting be driven, or taken away from me, so that I can neither help my self out of my troubles, nor subsist under them, yet to the afflicted, pity should be shewed, &c.

14. † To him that is afflicted h pity should be shewed from his friend i, but he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty k.

h Heb. To him that is melted or dissolved with afflictions, or in the furnace of afflictions, that is in extream miseries; for such persons are said to be melted, as Psal. 22. 14. & 107. 26. & 119. 28. Nah. 2. 10. i His friend, such as thou, O Eliphas, pretendest to be to me, should shew kindness, benignity and compassion in his judgment of him and carriage towards him, and not pass such unmerciful and heavy censures upon him, nor load him with reproaches. k But thou hast no love or pity for thy neighbour and friend; Which is a plain evidence that thou art guilty of that which thou didst charge me with, even of the want of the fear of God; for, didst thou truly fear God, thou couldest not, and durst not be so unmerciful to thy brother, both because God hath severely forbidden & condemned that disposition & carriage, & because God is able to punish thee for it, and mete unto thee the same hard measure which thou metest to me. But this verse is, and may be otherwise rendred; Should a reproach (for so the Hebrew cheted oft signifies) be laid upon him that is afflicted by his friend, even that he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty? Should my friend have tasted such a reproach upon me, than which none is worse, that I am an impious Man and destitute of the fear of God, Ch. 4. 6, 7, 8. This he mentions as that which was most grievous and intolerable to him.

15. My brethren l have dealt deceitfully m as a brook, and as the stream of brooks n they pass away:

l i.e. My kinsmen or three friends; For though Eliphaz onely had spoken, the other two shewed their approbation of his discourse or, at least, of that part of it which contained his censure of Job's person and state. m Under a pretence of friendship and kindness dealing unrighteously and unmercifully with me, and adding to these afflictions which they said they came to remove. n Which quickly vanish and deceive the hopes of the thirsty traveller.

16. Which are blackish by reason of the ice o, and wherein the snow is hid p.

o Which in winter, when the traveller nither needs nor desires it, are full of water then congealed by the Frost. p Either 1. Under which the water made of snow, which formerly fell and afterward was dissolved, lies hid. So he implies that he speaks not of those Brooks which are fed by a constant Spring, but of them which are fill'ed by accidental and extraordinary falls of water or snow melted, which run into them. Or 2. Wherein there is abundance of snow mixed with or covered by the Ice; Or, In which the snow covers it self, i.e. Where is snow upon snow. Which gives the traveller hopes, that when he comes that way in summer he shall find good store of water here for his refreshment.

* Ch. 24. 10.

17. * What time they wax warm q, † they vanish: † when it is hot, r they are † consumed out of their place s.

q When the weather grows milder and the frost and snow is dissolved. r In the hot season of the year, when waters are most refreshing and necessary. s In which the traveller expected to find them to his comfort: But they are gone he knows not whither.

18. The paths of their way are turned aside; t they go to nothing and perish.

t i.e. The course of those waters is changed; they are gone out of their chanel, flowing hither and thither, till they be quite consumed; as it here follows.

19. The troops u of Tema x looked, the companies y of Sheba waited for them.

u As this word is used, Gen. 37. 25. Isa. 21. 13. Heb. The wayes, put for the travellers in the wayes, by an usual Metonymy. And so it must needs be meant here, and in the next clause, because the following verse, they were confounded, &c. plainly sheweth, that he here speaks of persons, not of senseless things. x This place and Sheba were both parts of the hot and dry Country of Arabia, in which waters were very scarce, and therefore precious and desirable, especially to travellers, who by their motion, and the heat to which they were exposed, were more hot and thirsty than other men. y As before the troops. And thus he speaks, because men did not there travel singly, as here we do, but in troops and companies for their greater security against wild Beasts and Robbers, of which they had great store.

20. They z were confounded because they had hoped a; they came thither, and were ashamed b.

z i.e. The troops and companies. a They comforted themselves with the expectation of water there to quench their thirst. b As having deceived themselves and others with vain and false hopes.

21. ‖ For c now ye are † nothing d; ye see my casting down, and are afraid e.

c He gives the reason why he charged them with deceitfulness, and compared them to these deceitful Brooks. d Or, as nothing, the note of similitude being oft understood; Heb. as not. i.e. you are to me as if you had not been, or as if you had never come to me; for I have no benefit nor comfort from you and your discourse, but only an increase of my misery. e When you come near to me and perceive my great and manifold calamities, you stand as it were at a distance; you are shie of me, and afraid for your selves, either lest my sores or breath should infect you: or lest some further plagues should come upon me, wherein your selves for my sake, or because you are in my company, should be involved: or, lest I should be burdensom to you, and need and call for your charitable contribution to support my self, and the small remainders of my poor Family, or for your helping hand to assist and save me from mine enemies, who may possibly fall upon me in this place, as the Chaldæans and Sabæans did upon my Servants and Cattle elsewhere, which is implied in the next verses. So far are you from being true friends and comforts to me, as you would seem to be.

22. Did I say f, Bring unto me g? or, give a reward for me h of your substance?

f Or, Is it because I said, Is this, or what else is the reason why you are afraid of me or alienated from me. g Give me something for my support or relief. Did either my former covetousness or my present necessity make me troublesome or chargeable to you? h Either to the Judge before whom I am brought and accused, that he may give a favourable sentence in my behalf: Or to the enemy who hath taken me captive. Or give a gift for me, i.e. for my use or need. Did I send for you to come and visit me for this end? Nay, did you not come of your own accord? Why then are you thus unmerciful to me! Methinks you might at least have given me good and comfortable words, which is the easiest and cheapest part of a friends work, when I desire and expected nothing else from you.

23. Or deliver me i from the enemies hand? or redeem me k from the hand of the mighty?

i By power and the force of your arms, as Abraham delivered Lot. k By price, or ransome.

24. Teach me l, and I will hold my tongue m; and cause me to understand wherein I have erred n.

l Instead of censuring and reproaching, instruct and convince me by solid arguments. m I will patiently hear and gladly receive your counsels. Or, I will be silent, I will neither contradict you, nor complain of my own griefs. Compare Job 40. 4, 5. Prov. 30. 32. n i.e. My mistakes and miscarriages.

25. How forcible are right words o? but what doth your arguing reprove p?

o i.e. The words of Truth or solid Arguments have a marvelous power to convince and persuade a man; and if yours were such I should readily yield to them. p Or, your arguing argue. There is no truth in your Assertions, nor weight in your Arguments, and therefore are they of no account or power with me.

26. Do ye imagin to reprove words q, and to reprove the speeches of one that is desperate r, which are as wind s?

q i.e. Do you think that all your Arguments are solid and unanswerable, and all my Answers are but idle and empty words? Or, do you think it is sufficient to cavil and quarrel with some of my words and expressions, without considering the merits of the cause, and the truth of my condition, or giving an allowance for humane infirmity, or for my extreme misery, which may easily force from me some indecent expressions? r Of a poor miserable, hopeless and helpless man: for the words of such persons are commonly neglected and despised, although there be truth and great weight in them. See Eccles. 9. 16. And such are generally thought to speak from deep passions and prejudices more than from reason and judgment. s i. e. Which you esteem to be like the wind, vain and light, without solid substance, making a great noise with little little sense, and to little purpose. But this last branch of the verse may be, and by many is rendred otherwise: And, do ye imagine (which is to be repeated out of the former clause, as is very usual in Scripture) the words of one that is desperate to be but wind? i.e. empty and vain. Do you take me for a desperate and distracted man that knows not, or cares not what he saith, but only speaks what comes first into his mind and mouth? The Wind is oft used to express vain words, as Ch. 15. 2. Jer. 5. 13 and vain things, Job 7. 7. Prov. 11. 29. Some render the whole verse thus, Do you in your arguings think, or ought you to think the discourses of a dejected, or despairing, or sorely afflicted man (such as I am) to be but words and wind? i.e. vain and empty, as indeed the discourses of such persons use to be esteemed by such as are in an higher and more prosperous condition. But you should judge more impartially, and more mercifully. Possibly the verse may be rendred thus, Do you think to reprove the speeches of a desperate, or dejected, or miserable man (such as I am, and you use me accordingly) with (the preposition being very frequently omitted and understood in the Hebrew tongue) words and with (for the Hebrew prefix, Lamed, oft signifies with, as hath been formerly proved) wind. You think any words or arguments will be strong enough against one in my circumstances. So it agrees with the foregoing verse.

27. Yea †, ye overwhelm t the fatherless u, and ye dig a pit for your friend x.

t Your words are not only vain and useless and uncomfortable to me, but also grievous and pernicious. t Heb. You rush or throw your selves upon him. For words in Hiphil are oft put reciprocally, as Hebricians know. You fall upon him with all your might, and say all that you can devise to charge and grieve him. A metaphor from wild beasts that fall upon their prey to hold it fast and devour it. You load him with censures and calumnies. u Or the desolate, i.e. me who am deprived of all my dear children and of all my estate, forsaken by my friends and by my heavenly father: Which should have procured me your pity rather than your censure. x Or you feed or feast (for so this Hebrew word is oft used as, 2 Sam. 3. 35. 2 Kings 6. 23. Job 40. 15.) upon your friend, i.e. You insult and triumph over me, whom sometimes you owned for your friend.

28. Now therefore be content, look upon me, y for it is † evident unto you, z if I lie.

y Be pleased either 1. To look upon my countenance if it betrayes any fear or guilt as if I spoke contrary to my own conscience. Or rather 2. to consider me and my cause further and better than you have done, that you may give a more true and righteous judgment concerning it. z You will plainly discover it. A little further consideration and discourse will make it manifest, and I shall readily acknowledge it.

* Ch. 17. 10. ‖ That is, in this matter.

29. * Return, a I pray you, let it not be iniquity b; yea return again, my righteousness is ‖ in it c.

a Turn from your former course of perverse judgment, lay aside passion and prejudice against me, let me beg your second thoughts and a serious review of my case. b To wit in your thoughts or debates, I beg not your favour, but your justice, judge according to right, and do not conclude me to be wicked, because you see me to be miserable, as you have falsly and unjustly done. Or, there shall be no iniquity, to wit, in my words which I have spoken and which I am further about to speak: Which you will find upon the review. c i.e. In this cause or matter between you and me, the Relative without the Antecedent, which is frequent in the Hebrew Language. You will find the right to be on my side.

30. Is there iniquity in my tongue d? cannot † my taste e discern perverse things f?

d Consider again, and more throughly examine if there be any untruth or iniquity in what I have already said, or shall further speak to you. e i.e. My judgment which discerns and judgeth of words and actions, as the taste or palate doth of meats. f i.e. False opinions or sinful expressions. I am not so bereft of common understanding, as not to be able to distinguish between good and evil. And therefore if I have uttered, or should utter any perverse words, I should apprehend them to be so as well as you do.

CHAP. VII.

‖ Or, a warfare. † Chap. 14. 13, 14. Psal. 39. 4.

1. IS there not ‖ * an appointed time to man upon Earth a? are not his daies also like the daies of an hireling b?

a Is there not a certain and short time limited by God wherein man shall live in this sinful, and vain, and miserable world, after which he shall live in an holier and happier place and state? And is it a crime in me to desire that God would give me some ease and respit for the present, and bring me to that blessed and joyful period? b Whose time is limited and short, being but for a few years, Isa. 16. 14. & 21. 16. and sometimes but for daies Job 14. 6. Matth. 20. 1, 2. and whose condition is full of toil and hardship.

2. As a Servant † earnestly desireth the shadow c, and as an Hireling looketh for the reward of his work d.

c i.e. The Sun-set, or the Night, the time allotted for his rest and repose, Psal. 104. 23. And why may not I also desire the time of my rest? d Heb. his work; which is oft put for the reward of it, as Levit. 19. 13. Isa. 40. 10. & 49. 4. Or, the end of his work.

3. So e am I made to possess f months g of vanity h, and wearisom nights i are appointed to me.

e This so respects not so much the desire and expectation of an hired Servant, which is expressed, v. 2. as the ground and reason of it, which is plainly implyed there, to wit, his hard toil and service, which makes him thirst after rest. f God by his soveraign Power and Providence hath given me this as my lot and inheritance. g So he calls them rather than daies, to note either the irksomeness and tediousness of his affliction, whereby every day seemed a month to him, or their length and continuance, which, as some infer from hence, had now been upon him some months. h Empty and unsatisfying, or false and deceitful, not giving me that ease and rest, which they promised me, and I expected. i He mentions nights, because that is the saddest time for sick and miserable persons; the darkness and solitude of the night being of themselves uncomfortable, and giving them more opportunity for solemn and sorrowful thoughts and reflections upon their own miseries.

* Deut. 28. 67. Chap. 17. 12. † Heb. the Evening be measured.

4. * When I lie down k, I say, When shall I arise, and † the night l be gone? and I am full of tossings to and fro m unto the dawning of the day n.

k To get some rest and sleep. l Heb. the evening. The part put for the whole, as it is, Gen. 1. 5. m From side to side in the Bed, as men in grievous pains of body, or anxiety of mind use to be. n So this Hebrew word is used also, 1 Sam. 30. 17. Psal. 119. 147.

5. My flesh is clothed o with worms p, and clods of dust q; my skin is broken r, and become loathsome.

o i. e. Covered all over as with a garment. p Which oft breed and break forth in divers parts of living bodies, as history and experience witnesseth, and which were easily bred out of Job's corrupted flesh and sores. q Either the dust of the earth upon which he lay, which his sores would quickly lick up; or the scabs of his sores, which by degrees mouldred away into dust. r By Ulcers breaking forth in all parts of it.

* Ch. 9. 25. & 16. 22. & 17. 11. Psal. 90. 6. & 102. 11. & 103. 15. & 144. 4. Isa. 38. 12. & 40. 6. James 4. 14.

6. * My days are swifter s than a Weavers Shuttle t, and are spent without hope u.

s The time of my life hastens to a period; And therefore vain are those hopes which you give me of a restitution to my former prosperity in this World. t Which passeth in a moment from one end of the web to the other. u To wit, of enjoying any good day here.

* Psal. 89. 47. † Heb. shall not return. ‖ To see, that is, to enjoy.

7. O remember x that * my life is wind y; mine eye † shall no more ‖ see good z.

x He turneth his speech to God as appears from v. 8. 12. 14. y i.e. vain, Isa. 57. 13. Hos. 8. 7. quickly passing away so as never to come again, as is said Psal. 78. 39. z i.e. Enjoy (for so seeing is sometimes used, as Psal. 34. 12. Jer. 17. 6.) good, to wit, in this world, as my friends flatter me. Compare Ch. 14. 12. & 19. 25, 27.

‖ That is, I can live no longer.

8. The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: a thine eyes are upon me, and ‖ I am not b.

a In this mortal state: I shall never return to this life again. b Either, 1. If thou doest but cast one angry look upon me, I am not, i. e. I am a dead man. So that phrase is used, Gen. 5. 24. & 42. 13. & 44. 20. Psal. 103, 16. Jer. 31. 15. Or, 2. When thine Eyes shall be upon me, (i.e. when thou shalt look for me to do me good, thou wilt find that) I am not, that I am dead and gone, and uncapable of that bounty and goodness which thou givest to men in this World. Comp. v. 21. Psal. 10. 15. Jer. 50. 20.

* 2 Sam. 12. 23. † Heb. Hell.

9. As the Cloud is consumed c and vanisheth away d; so * he that goeth down to † the grave shall come up no more e.

c being dried up or dissolved by the heat of the Sun. d Never returneth again. e To live a natural mortal life amongst men. For, that he doth not deny a future life is manifest from Ch. 19. 25, &c.

* Psa. 103. 16.

10. He shall return no more to his house f, * neither shall his place know him any more g.

f To enjoy his house and possessions again. g i. e. He shall no more be seen and known in his former habitation and condition by his friends and neighbours. The place put for the Men of the place, as Ch. 8. 18. & 20. 9. Psal. 37. 10.

11. Therefore h I will not refrain my mouth, I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul i.

h Since my life is by the common condition of mankind so vain and short, and when once lost, without all hopes of recovery, and withal extremely miserable, I will plead with God for pity and relief before I die; knowing that I must now speak, or else forever after hold my peace as to requests of this nature. i I will not smother my bitter anguish within my own breast, which will make it intollerable, but I will give it vent, and ease my self by pouring forth complaints, and expostulating with my God, who, as I hope, will hear and help me one way or other.

12. Am I a Sea, or a Whale k, that thou settest a watch over me l?

k Am I so great, and powerful, and dangerous a creature, that thou needest to use extraordinary power and violence to rule and subdue me? Am I as fierce and unruly as the Sea, which, if thou

didst not set a watch over it, and bounds to it, would overwhelm the earth, and destroy mankind upon it? Or, am I a vast and ungovernable Sea-monster, which, if thou didst not restrain it by thy powerful providence, would overturn ships, and destroy Men in it, and devour all the lesser fishes? Have I behaved my self towards thee, or towards Men, with such rage and violence, as to need such chains to be put upon me? Or, is my strength so great as that of the Sea, which can endure so many and long storms one after another, and yet can subsist under them, and after them? or, of a Whale, that can laugh at Darts and Spears? as is said ch. 41. 29. No, Lord, thou knowest that I am but a poor weak creature, which thou canst crush with the least touch of thy finger, without these violent and unsupportable pains and miseries; and that I have not been so fierce and boisterous in my carriage as to need or deserve these extraordinary calamities. l That thou shouldest guard and restrain me with such heavy and unexampled miseries, lest I should break into rebellion against thee, or into cruelty towards Men.

* Ch. 9. 27, 28. 13. * When I say, my Bed shall comfort me, my Couch shall ease my complaint m:

m By giving me sweet and quiet sleep, which may take off the sense of my torments for that while.

14. Then thou scarest me with dreams n, and terrifiest me through visions o.

n With sad and dreadful dreams arising either from that melancholy humour which is now so fixed in me and predominant over me, or from the Devils malice who by thy permission disturbs me in this manner; So that I am afraid to go to sleep, and my remedy proves as bad as my disease. o The same thing with dreams: for there were not only day-visions, which were offered to mens sight, when they were awake; but also night-visions, which were presented to mens Fancy in their sleep and dreams. See Gen. 28. 12. & 41. 1, 2. Dan. 2. 1, 31. & 4, 5, 10.

15. So that my Soul chooseth p strangling q, and death rather † than my life r.

p Not simply and in it self, but comparatively, rather than such a wretched life. q The most violent, so it be but a certain and sudden death. r Heb. than my bones, i. e. than my body, formerly the Soul's dear and desired companion, or than to be in the body, which commonly consists of skin and flesh, and bones, but in Job was in a manner nothing but a bundle of bones: for his skin was every where broken, and his flesh was quite consumed; as he oft complains, and his bones also were not free from pain and torment: for as Satan's Commission reached to Job's bones, Job 2. 5. so doubtless his Malice and wicked Design would engage him to execute it to the utmost.

* Ch. 10. 1. * Ch. 10. 20. & 14. 6. Psal. 39. 13. 16. * I loath it. s I would not live alway: t * let me alone, u for my days are vanity x.

s To wit, my life last mentioned. t In this World, if I might, no not in prosperity; for even such a life is but vanity, much less in this extremity of misery. Or, Let me not live for ever, lingring in this miserable manner, as if thou wouldest not suffer me to die, but hadst a design to perpetuate my torments. Or, let me not live out mine age, or the full time of my life, which by the course of nature, I might do; for so the Hebrew word Olam, is oft used: but cut me off, and that speedily. u i. e. Withdraw thy hand from me, either 1. thy supporting hand which preserves my life, and suffer me to die: Or rather 2. thy correcting hand, as this same phrase is used, v. 19. x Either 1. my life is in it self, and in its best estate a most vain, unsatisfying uncertain thing: do not add this evil to it to make it miserable. Or, 2. My life is a vain, decaying, and perishing thing, it will of it self quickly vanish and depart, and doth not need to be forced from me by such exquisite torments.

* Psal. 8. 4. & 144. 3. Heb. 2. 6. 17. * What is Man that thou shouldst magnifie him y? and that thou should'st set thine heart upon him z?

y What is there in that poor, mean, contemptible Creature called Man, miserable Man, as this word signifies, which can induce or incline thee to take any notice of him, to shew him such respect, or to make such account of him? Man is not worthy of thy Favour, and he is below thy Anger. It is too great a condescension to thee, and too great an honour for Man that thou wiltst contend with him, and draw forth all thy forces against him, as if he were a fit match for thee; whereas Men use to neglect and slight mean Adversaries, and will not do them the honour to fight with them. Comp. 1 Sam. 24. 14. Therefore do not, O Lord, thus dishonour thy self, nor magnifie me. I acknowledge that even thy corrections are mercies and honours, but, Lord, let me be no more so honoured. z i. e. Have any regard to him so far as to afflict him, which though it be grievous in it self, especially when it is aggravated as mine is, yet unto thy people it is a great mercy and blessing, as being highly necessary and useful to humble them, and purge them from sin, and prepare them for glory: as on the contrary, those wicked Men whom thou doest despise and hate, and design to destroy, thou doest forbear to punish or afflict them.

18. And that thou shouldest visit him a every morning b, and try him c every moment?

a To wit, punish or chasten him, as the Word is oft used, as visiting is oft used, as Exod. 20. 5. and 32. 34. and 34. 7. b i. e. Every day. But he mentions the mornings either because that is the beginning of the day, and so is put synecdochically for the whole day, as the evening, v. 4. is put for the whole night: Or he speaks of God after the manner of men, who rest and sleep in the night, but in the morning rise and go about their business, and visit or inspect those persons and things which they have a respect for, or care of. c i. e. Afflict him, which is oft called trying, because it doth indeed try a man's faith and patience, and preseverance. But this and the former Verse may possibly be otherwise understood, not of afflictions, but of mercies. Having declared his loathing of life, and his passionate desire of death, and urged it with this consideration, that the days of his life were meer vanity; he now pursues it with this expostulation, What is Man, that vain, foolish Creature, that thou shouldst magnifie or regard, or visit him, (to wit, with thy mercy and blessings, of which those words are commonly used, i. e. that thou shouldst so far honour and regard him, as by thy visitation to preserve his Spirit, or hold his Soul in life (and try him, which God doth not only by afflictions, but also by prosperity and outward blessings, which commonly detect a mans hypocrisie, and discover that corruption which before lay hid in his heart? Therefore, O Lord, do not thus magnifie, and visit me with thy mercy, but take away my life.

19. How long wilt thou not depart from me d, nor let me alone till I swallow down my spittle e?

d How long will it be ere thou withdraw thy afflicting hand from me? e i. e. for a little time; or that I may have a breathing time: A proverbial expression, like that Spanish Proverb, I have not time or liberty to spit out my spittle. Or this expression may have respect to Job's distempered and calamitous condition wherewith he was so overwhelmed, that he either had not strength, or could not take heed to spit out his spittle as he should have done, but swallowed it down, as sick and melancholy persons often do.

20. I have sinned f, what shall I do unto thee g, O thou preserver of Men h? why * hast thou set me as a mark against thee, so that I am a burden to my self i?

* Chap. 16. 12. Psal. 21. 12. Lam. 3. 12.

f Although I am innocent and free from those crying sins, for which my friends suppose thou hast sent this uncommon judgment upon me, yet if thou beest strict to mark what is amiss, I freely confess that I am a sinner, and therefore obnoxious to thy justice, and I humbly beg thy pardon for it; as it follows, vers. 21. And therefore accept of this Confession, g to satisfie thy Justice, or regain thy Favour. I can do nothing to purchase or deserve it, and therefore implore thy mercy to pardon my sins. h O thou who, as thou wast the Creator of Man, delightest to be, and to be called the Preserver and Saviour of Men, and that waitest to be kind and gracious to Men from day to day, as occasion requires; do not deal with me in a way contrary to thy own Nature and Name, and to the manner of thy dealing with all the rest of Mankind. Oth. O thou Observer of Men; thou who dost exactly know and diligently observe all mens inward motions, and outward actions and therefore if thou shalt be severe to mark mine iniquities, as thou seemest to be, I have not what to say or do unto thee. Compare Job 9. 3, 15, 29. & 14. 4. Into which thou wiltst shoot all the Arrows of thy indignation. i i. e. I am weary of my self, and of my life, being no way able to resist or endure the assaults of so potent an Adversary.

21. And why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and take away mine iniquity k? for now shall I sleep in the dust l; and thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be m.

k Seeing thou art so gracious to others, so ready to preserve and pardon them, why may not I hope for the same favour from thee? l If thou doest not speedily help me, it will be too late, I shall be dead, and so uncapable of those blessings which thou usest to give to men in the land of the living. m i. e. When thou shalt diligently seek for me, that thou mayest shew favour to me, thou wilt find that I am dead and gone, and so wilt lose thy opportunity: Help therefore speedily.

CHAP. VIII.

1. THen answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2. How long wilt thou speak these things? and how long shall the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind a?

a i. e. Boisterous and violent, swelling and furious, opposing all persons and things that stand in thy way, not sparing either God or Men.

3. * Doth God b pervert judgment c? or doth the Almighty pervert justice?

* Gen. 18. 25. Deut. 32. 4. Cap. 34. 17. 2 Chron. 19. 7. Dan. 9. 14. Rom. 3. 5.

b Heb. The mighty God, as this word signifies, the Almighty, or Allsufficient God, as the next name of God here implies. These Names are emphatically used, to prove that God cannot deal unjustly or falsly with Men, because he hath no need of it, nor temptation to it, being self-sufficient for his own happiness, and being able by his own invincible power to do whatsoever pleaseth him; unless Men will impudently say, that God doth falsly for meer love to falshood, without any necessity of it, or advantage to himself by it; than which nothing can be more absurd and ridiculous: for this makes him worse than the vilest of Men, who act unjustly and falsly because they cannot otherwise accomplish their designs.

designs. e i.e. Overthrow the course of justice in giving judgment; or, judge unrighteously? No, this is inconsistent with God's Nature, which is essentially and necessarily just, and with his Office of Governour of the World, Gen. 18. 25.

4. If thy children have sinned against him d, and he have cast them away † for their transgression e:

d What though thou wast in a great measure innocent, thy Children, upon whom a great part of these Calamities fell, might be guilty of great sins; and therefore God is not unrighteous in these proceedings. e Or, Hath expelled, or cast them out (to wit, out of the World, or out of his favour; as a Man gives his Wife a Bill of Divorce, of which this word is used) by means, (Heb. by the hand, which is oft so used) of their wickedness. Or, hath left them in the hand of their sin; to wit, to be punished by it, and for it. Comp. Num. 32. 23. Your sin shall find you out.

*Chap. 11. 13. & 22. 23.

5. * If thou f wouldest seek unto God betimes g, and make thy supplication to the Almighty;

f But God hath spared thee, whom he might justly have destroyed with thy Children, and thou art yet capable of his favour if thou seek for it: And therefore cease from these causeless and unthankful complaints. g Heb. rise early to seek him, i. e. if thou wouldest seek him speedily, early and diligently. See Ch. 5. 8. & 7. 18, 21. But this may be understood of the time past; and this verse being connected with the next, may be thus rendred and understood; If thou hadst sought (for the future tense in the Hebrew is oft put for the past) unto God betimes (as thou didst seem to do, Ch. 1. 5.) and made supplication to the Almighty; If withal thou hadst been pure and upright, i. e. If thy prayers had been accompanied with purity and uprightness of heart and life, they should have been heard and answered. But because thou didst regard iniquity in thy heart, therefore God would not hear, and did not answer thy prayers, but answered thee with a curse instead of a blessing, as he useth to deal with Hypocrites.

6. If thou wert pure and upright h, surely now he would awake for thee i, and make the habitation k of thy righteousness l prosperous.

h If thou wert in truth what thou pretendest, and hast been thought by others to be, pure and upright, i. e. of a sincere heart, and blameless life towards God and Men. But God's severe dealing with thee is an evident token, that notwithstanding all thy fair shews, thou art but an Hypocrite and secret sinner. And this sense may seem to agree both with the same charge brought in against Job by Eliphaz, Ch. 4. 6, 7. and with the following discourse particularly with v. 13, 20. Or thus, If thou wouldest be pure and upright; i. e. if thou wouldest joyn Reformation to thy Supplication. And this sense may seem best to suit with the foregoing verse, according to the common Translation. i i. e. Bestir himself to help thee, as being his faithful friend and servant, whom he could not in honour or justice forsake; whereas now he shews a deep sleep, and wholly neglects thee, and turneth a deaf Ear to all thy prayers; which sheweth what opinion he hath of thee. k i. e. The concerns of thy house and family: An usual Metonymy. l Either 1. which thou hast got and managed with righteousness; so he calls it by way of supposition; if it were so, God would prosper thee accordingly. But because thou doest not prosper, it gives us cause to suspect that thou hast got thy estate by fraud and oppression. Or 2. Which thou shalt now manage with justice, and not wrongfully, as thou hast done.

7. Though thy beginning was small, yet thy latter end should greatly encrease m.

m The sense is either 1. Though thou hadst possessed but very little at first, yet God would have wonderfully blessed and increased thy estate. Whereas now God hath brought thee down from a great estate almost to nothing. Which is an evidence of his displeasure and thy hypocrisy. Or 2. Though the beginning of thy future fortunes, or, tho' what thou hast left be now very small, yet if thou dost repent and seek God, it shall vastly increase.

*Deut. 4. 32. Chap. 15. 18.

8. * For enquire, I pray thee, of the former age n, and prepare thy self to the search of their Fathers o.

n i. e. Of our predecessors, who had the advantage of longer life and more experience, besides more frequent revelations from God, than we have who also will be more impartial Judges of this cause than we may be thought to be. Inform thy self from them by the instructions which they left either in word or writing what their opinion was about the manner of God's dealings with Men. o Do not slightly, but seriously and industriously search the antient Records.

*See ch. 7. 6. Gen. 47. 9. 1Chro. 29. 15. Psal. 39. 5. & 144. 4. † Heb. not.

9. (For * we are but of yesterday p, and know † nothing because our days upon earth are a shadow q.)

p But lately born, and therefore have but little knowledge and experience, as it follows. q This is meant either. 1. Of their lives in particular, which were far shorter than the lives of their ancestors, the Patriarchs, whose long lives gave them opportunity to know and see the course of Gods providence towards Good and bad Men, and the differing ends and issues of their lives. Or, 2. Of mens lives in general; Which being very short, mens observation reacheth but to very few events in comparison of those which may be known by the records and testimony of all former ages.

10. Shall not they teach thee r, and tell thee, and utter words out of their hearts s?

r Assuredly they will inform thee that it is as we say. s Not partially, but sincerely, speaking their inward thoughts; Not rashly, but from deep consideration; Not by hearsay from others, but their own knowledge and experience.

11. Can the rush † grow up without mire t? can the flagg u grow without water?

t i. e. If it be not in moist and miry ground. This and what follows he mentions as it were in the person of those antients to whom he had referred him, of whom he saith that they would give him such instructions as these. u Or, the grass: or the meadow as this word is used, Gen. 41. 2. i. e. The grass of a meadow. But our translation seems the best, because it is compared with other herbs.

12. * Whilest it is yet in his greenness x, and not cut down y, it withereth before any other herb z.

* Psal. 129. 6. Jer. 17. 6.

x Whereby it promiseth long continuance. y Though no man cut it down, it withered of it self, and will save a Man the labour of cutting or plucking it up. It gives not a Man so much warning that he can cut it down in time, as other green things do, but suddenly withered. z i. e. Sooner than other herbs, or in their presence, or they surviving; in which sense it seems to be said that Ishmael died in the presence of his brethren, Gen. 25. 18. The rest of the herbs looking upon it and admiring this sudden change. For actions of sense and understanding are oft ascribed to lifeless creatures both in Scripture and in other Authors.

13. So are the paths of all that forget God a, and the * Hypocrite's hope shall perish b:

* Ch. 11. 20. & 18. 14. Psal. 112. 10 Prov. 10. 25.

a i. e. Of wicked Men who are branded with this same character, Psal. 9. 17. & 50. 22. Or Hypocrites, as the next words explain it, who are described by their first and fundamental miscarriage which is, that they forget i. e. neglect, forsake, and despise (for so this phrase is commonly understood, as Deut 6. 12. & 8. 11, &c. & 32. 18. Jer. 2. 32 & 23. 27.) God, i. e. his presence, and commands, and worship and providence; and therefore break forth into manifold sins. But by their paths he doth not understand the course of their actions, or manner of their living, but the events which befall them, called their paths objectively, because they are the paths of God or the methods of his providence or manner of his dealing with them. Now this may be accommodated to the foregoing similitude in this manner; such is the prosperity of wicked Men, because it wants the solid foundation of their piety, & of God's promise and blessing consequent thereupon, it quickly vanisheth into nothing. b i. e. He shall lose what he hoped for, (hope being oft put for its object) even uninterrupted and abiding felicity, and with it all hope of restitution.

14. † Whose hope shall be cut off, c and whose trust shall be † a Spiders web d.

c i. e. Whose wealth and outward glory, which is the matter of his hope, and trust, shall be cut off. i. e. suddenly and violently taken away from him. Whose hope shall be irksome or tedious to him, by the succession of earnest expectation and great disappointment. d Which though it be formed with great art and industry, and may do much mischief to others, yet is most slender and feeble, and easily swept down or pulled in pieces, and unable to defend the spider that made it. The application is obvious.

Isa. 59. 5, 6.

15. * He shall lean upon his house f, but it shall not stand g: he shall hold it fast h, but it shall not endure.

* Chap. 27. 18.

e Either the spider: Or rather the wicked Man signified by it. f i. e. He shall trust to the multitude and strength of his Children and servants, and to his wealth all which come under the name of a mans house in Scripture-use. g i. e. Not be able to uphold it self nor him that trusted to it. h Or, he shall take fast hold of it, not to uphold it, but to strengthen and uphold himself by it, as it is in the former branch.

16. * He i is green k before the Sun l, and his branch m shooteth forth in his garden o.

* Ch. 29. 19.

i Either 1. the perfect man here understood out of v. 20. where it is expressed: Or rather 2. the hypocrite, of whom he hath hitherto treated, to whom this and the following verses very well agree; Whom he before compared to a Rush, and then to a spiders web and now to a Tree, which is of a more solid substance and more durable; as if he said, as some wicked Men are quickly cut off in the very beginnings of their prosperity; so there are others who seem to be more firmly grounded, and yet they also at last come to ruine. k i. e. Flourisheth in the World. l Either 1. publickly and in the view of all Men, who observe it with admiration, and applause, and envy. Comp. 2 Sam. 12. 12. Or rather 2, notwithstanding all the scorching heat of the Sun, which quickly withers the Rushes and Herbs of which he spake before, but doth only cherish and refresh the Tree. And so doth many a wicked man secure himself, and thrive and prosper even in times of great danger and trouble, and in spight of all opposition. m Or, His branches, the singular number for the plural; either 1. properly, and so this belongs to the description of a flourishing Tree, by the spreading of its branches here, as by the depth of its Root, v. 17. Or 2. metaphorically to wit, his Children, which are here mentioned as additions not only to his comfort, but also to his strength and safety. n A place where it is defended from those injuries to which the Trees of the field are subject from Men and beasts, and where besides the natural advantages common to all Trees, it hath peculiar helps from the Art and industry of Men, by whom it is watered and assisted, as need requires. So he supposeth this Man to be placed in the most desirable circumstances.

17. His

17. His roots are wrapped about the heap o, and ſeeth p the place q of ſtones.

o To wit, of ſtones, which word may be here underſtood out of the latter Branch of the Verſe, as is very uſual in Scripture-uſe. This Circumſtance of the Tree is added, to ſignifie either 1. Its firmneſs and ſtrength, that it was not in looſe and ſandy ground, which a violent Wind might overthrow, but in ſolid and hard ground, within which were many ſtones, which its numerous and ſpreading Roots embrace, folding and interweaving them ſelves ſeverally about ſeveral ſtones. Or, 2. Its ſingular and extraordinary growth in ſpight of all diſadvantages and oppoſitions; that every ſtony ground, which is very prejudicial to Trees, Matth. 13. 5. doth not hinder its grow, but only add to its ſtrength. So God and Man ſeem to conſpire, and all things concur to ſecure and perpetuate this Man's happineſs. Some render the words, His roots are wrapped, or folded, or ſpread, or about, or beſide a ſpring, as the Hebrew gal ſometimes ſignifies; as Joſhua 15. 19. Cant. 4. 12. i.e. A moiſt ground, which is much to its advantage: See Pſalm 1. 3. Jer. 17. 8. p. He, i.e. the Tree whoſe Roots he laſt mentioneth, reacheth thither, ſpreadeth himſelf ſo far, takes the advantage of that place for the ſtrengthening of its ſelf. Seeing is oft put for enjoying, and is frequently attributed to lifeleſs things, by a known Figure, called Proſopopœia. q Heb. the houſe, which is oft uſed for a place; as 2 Sam. 6. 17. 1 Kings 8. 6. Others render the words thus, He looketh upon the houſe of ſtones; i.e. made of ſtones for greater beauty and ſtrength. He ſtandeth proudly, and looketh boldly upon its owners houſe, nigh unto which it is placed, even in his Garden, as was ſaid before.

18. If he r deſtroy him from his place s, then it t ſhall deny him, ſaying, I have not ſeen thee u.

r Either God, who is the Saviour of good Men, and the Deſtroyer of the wicked: Or, the Owner: or any other man; for this is an indefinite ſpeech, and may be taken paſſively and impersonally; which is very common in the holy Text and Language. s In which he was planted. t i.e. The place; to which denying him, and ſeeing him, are here aſcribed figuratively, as we have oft ſeen. u i.e. I do not know, nor remember that ever thou waſt planted here. He ſhall be ſo utterly extirpated and deſtroyed, that there ſhall be no Footſtep, nor Name, nor Memorial of them left there.

19. Behold, this is the joy of his way x, and out of the earth ſhall others grow y.

x This is the joyful and happy iſſue of the flouriſhing courſe, ſtate, and condition (which is frequently called a way) of this Tree, or of the Hypocrite manifeſtly repreſented by it and expreſſed, v. 13. It is a Sarcaſm or Irony, and is to be underſtood contrariwiſe of his ſad and unhappy end. y i.e. Out of the ſame earth or place ſhall another Tree grow; which could not be, if there had been but a ſtump of it left though under ground. So it notes the total extirpation of the Tree, and of the Hypocrite, that his Perſon and all his Children and Family ſhall be utterly extinct, and ſo a ſtranger ſhall come into his place, and enjoy the fruite of his labours. But the words are and may be otherwiſe rendred very agreeably to the Hebrew Text, And out of other ground they (i.e. Plants or Trees, of which he is here ſpeaking) ſhall grow, or, others ſhall grow, or plants ſhall grow; the Noun being contained in the Verb: So the ſenſe is, This Tree ſhall be rooted up, and the very ground of it ſo curſed, that nothing ſhall grow or thrive in it; but other ground ſhall be fruitful, and other Trees that ſtood round about it ſhall ſtand ſtill and flouriſh in their places. His deſign in all this is to prove Job to be an Hypocrite, becauſe he meets with their lot, which is total deſtruction.

20. Behold, God will not caſt away z a perfect man, neither will he † help a the evil doers:

z Heb. Not deſpiſe or reject; i.e. He will not deny them his help, as appears by the oppoſite and following Branch of the Verſe: He will not ſuffer them to be utterly loſt. a i.e. Deliver them out of their troubles: Hence it may ſeem that thou, O Job, are not a perfect or upright man, but an evil-doer: But this is certain, if for the future thy heart and way be not perfect, and thou doeſt not ceaſe to do evil, thou wilt be utterly and irrecoverably loſt; as on the contrary, if thou doeſt repent and reform, he will help and deliver thee, and reſtore thee to thy former glory and happineſs; which Promiſe though it be not here expreſſed, is ſufficiently implied in the contrary threatning, as is evident from the following words which plainly ſuppoſe it, and have a reference to it: ſuch Elliſpes of Contraries being not unuſual in Scripture, as we ſhall ſee hereafter, eſpecially in the Book of the Proverbs.

21. Till he fill thy mouth with laughing b, and thy lips with † rejoycing.

b And what I have ſaid in general of all perfect men, ſhall be made good to thee, if thou beeſt ſuch an one; God will not forſake thee, nor deſiſt from doing thee good, till he fill, &c. i.e. God will give thee ſuch abundant matter of rejoycing, that thy heart ſhall not be able to hold it, but it ſhall break out at thy mouth and lips.

22. They that hate thee c ſhall be cloathed with ſhame d, and the dwelling-place of the wicked e † ſhall come to nought.

c That rejoyce in thy Calamities. d i.e. Shall be wholly covered with it, ſhall be utterly confounded, when they ſhall obſerve thee whom they have deſpiſed and inſulted over, to be ſo wonderfully and ſurprizingly reſtored to thy former or a greater Felicity. e Either particularly of thy Enemies who dealt ſo unworthily and wickedly with thee: Or more generally of all wicked Men. Having ſhewed what good God would do to the perfect man, he now declares the contrary Portion of the Wicked, and as he ſaid, that God would not help them, v. 20. ſo here he adds, that God will bring not onely them, but their houſe; i.e. their Family and Eſtate to nought.

CHAP. IX.

1. THen Job anſwered and ſaid,

2. I know it is ſo a of a truth: but how ſhould * man be juſt b || with God c.

* Pſal. 143. 2.

a To wit, as you ſay, that God is juſt in all his waies, that he doth ordinarily bleſs the Righteous, and puniſh the Wicked. b Heb. and how, &c. i.e. And I know that no man is abſolutely juſt, or can defend his righteouſneſs, if God be ſevere to mark what is amiſs in him. c Either 1. being compared with God: Or, 2. before God as the ſame Phraſe is taken, 1 Sam. 2. 26. Pſal. 130. 3. if he be brought before God's Tribunal to debate the matter with him.

3. If he will contend with him d, he cannot anſwer him one of a thouſand e.

d If God be pleaſed to contend, (to wit, in judgement, debate, or plead; for ſo this word is oft uſed, as Hoſ. 2. 2. & 4. 1. Mich. 6. 1. Comp. Iſa. 45. 9.) with man. e Either to one Accuſation or Argument among a thouſand which God ſhall produce againſt him: Or, one time of a thouſand. So far will he be from being able to maintain his own innocency againſt God, if God ſet himſelf againſt him as his Adverſary.

4. * He is wiſe in heart f, and mighty in ſtrength g: who hath hardned himſelf againſt him h, and hath proſpered i?

* Chap. 36.

f Either 1. really and profoundly wiſe; or, 2. wiſe in his mind and underſtanding, which in Hebrew is oft called the heart; as Prov. 2. 10. & 6. 32. Hoſ. 4. 11. becauſe the Hebrews make the heart the ſeat of the Underſtanding, or of the reaſonable Soul. The ſenſe is, He is infinitely wiſe, and ſo knows all things, and ſearcheth all mens hearts and waies, and diſcovers a multitude of ſins which mens ſhort-ſighted eyes cannot ſee; and therefore can charge them with innumerable evils, where they thought themſelves innocent, and ſees far more malignity than men could diſcern in their ſins: and men cannot conceal any of their ſins from him, nor cheat him, as they may other men, with crafty devices and evaſions: So that there is no contending with him. g i.e. Omnipotent, and therefore if men contumaciouſly perſiſt in contending with him after they are convicted and condemned, he can eaſily cruſh them. So that whether men contend with God by wiſdom or by ſtrength (which are the two waies of one Mans contending with another) God will be Conquerour. h i.e. Obſtinately contended with him. Or, ſpoken hard things towards him, quarrelling with him, oppoſing and reproaching God's Providence towards him as hard and unjuſt. Compare Jude, v. 15. i Heb. Hath been at peace; i.e. hath not provoked God to his own deſtruction. A common Figure called Meioſis, whereby more is underſtood than is expreſſed.

5. Which removeth the Mountains k, and they know not l: which overturneth them in his anger m:

k He proceedeth to give particular Evidences of the Divine Power and wiſdom, which he mentioned verſe 4. l i.e. Suddenly and unexpectedly, ere they were aware of it. They, i.e. the Mountains, to which he aſcribes Senſe and Knowledge figuratively, as hath been oft noted. m In token of his diſpleaſure with men that lived upon them, or near them.

6. Which ſhaketh the earth n, out of her place, and the pillars o thereof tremble.

n i.e. Great portions of it, by Earthquakes, or by removing Iſlands, which ſometimes hath been done. o i.e. The ſtrength or the ſtrongeſt parts of it, the Mountains, yea the deep and inward parts of it, which like Pillars ſupported thoſe parts which appear to our view, and yet have been diſcovered and overturned by Earthquakes.

7. Which commandeth the Sun, and it riſeth not p, and ſealeth up the ſtars q.

p He ſpeaks either 1. of that which God can do; or rather (as he doth in the foregoing and following Inſtances.) 2. Of what God actually doth, and that either 1. ordinarily; and ſo he gives Laws to the Sun that it ſhall not riſe, but at ſuch times, and to ſuch places, and in ſuch manner as he hath appointed; as that it ſhall riſe conſtantly at its ſet time and never diſorderly; that it ſhall not riſe for divers Months together in ſome parts of the World, &c. Or rather 2. Extraordinarily, (for of ſuch Works of God he diſcourſeth in this place) and ſo it may note either ſome ſtop given to the Sun for a ſmall ſeaſon, like that in Joſhua's time; which might have been, though it be not recorded, or ſome extraordinary tempeſt or dark ſeaſon, wherein the morning is made darkneſs, as the phraſe is, Amos 4. 13. Compare 5. 8. wherein the Sun doth not at all appear (as it was for many days together, Act. 27. 20.) and conſequently is to thoſe places and perſons, as if he were not riſen. For things in Scripture are oft ſaid to be, or not to be, when when they appear, or diſappear; of which ſome Inſtances have been formerly given, and more we ſhall have hereafter, in their proper places. q i.e. As it were covereth and ſhutteth them up that they may not ſhine, as in dark and diſmal Tempeſts, like that now mentioned, Act. 27.20. when neither ſun nor ſtars appeared for many days.

8. * Which alone r ſpreadeth out the Heavens s, and treadeth upon the † waves of the ſea t.

r i.e. By his own ſingle power, without any other help. *s He ſpread them out like a curtin, Pſ.*104. 1, 2. and he in a manner ſpreads them again every day; i.e. keeps them ſpread for the comfort and benefit of this lower World, and doth not roll and fold them up, as he will do in due time: See *Iſa.*34.4. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Revel. 6. 14. Or, boweth down the heavens, as the ſame Hebrew Verb is rendred, Pſalm 18. 9. So it is a further deſcription of a black and tempeſtuous ſeaſon, wherein the heavens ſeem to be brought down and nearer to the earth. t i.e. Repreſſeth and ruleth them when they rage and are tempeſtuous: for treading upon any thing, ſignifies in Scripture Uſe, Power and Dominion over it; as *Deut.*33.29. Job 40. 12. Pſalm 60. 12. & 91. 13. Luke 10. 19.

* Chap. 38. 31, &c. Amos 5. 8. † Heb. Aſh, Keſil, and Kimah.

9. * Which maketh u † Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, and the chambers of the ſouth x.

u Either, 1. created them; or rather, 2. ordereth and diſpoſeth them, as the word making is ſometimes uſed in Scripture, governeth their riſing and ſetting, and all their Influences. x Theſe he names as Stars or Conſtellations of greateſt note and eminency; for ſo they are both in Scripture and other Authors and ſuch as have, or are thought to have a ſpecial influence in raiſing Storms and Tempeſts; but under them he ſeems to comprehend all the Stars, which as they were created by God, ſo are under his Government. Arcturus is a Northern Conſtellation, near that called the Bear, which riſeth to us about the beginning of September, and by its riſing produceth (as Pliny affirms) horrible Storms and Tempeſts. Orion is a more Southernly Conſtellation, that ariſeth to us in December, and is noted by Aſtronomers for raiſing fearful Winds and Tempeſts both by Sea and Land. The Pleiades is a Conſtellation not far from Orion, and near that called the Bull, which we call the Seven Stars: To us it riſeth at the beginning of the Spring, and by its riſing cauſeth Rains and Tempeſts, and therefore is unwelcom to Mariners at Sea. By the chambers, (or inmoſt and ſecret chambers, as the word ſignifies) of the South, he ſeems to underſtand thoſe Stars and Conſtellations which are towards the Southern Pole, which are fitly called inward chambers, becauſe they are for the moſt part hid and ſhut up (as Chambers commonly are) from theſe parts of the World, and do not riſe or appear to us till the beginning of Summer, when they alſo raiſe Southernly Winds and Tempeſts, as Aſtronomers obſerve.

10. Which doth great things paſt finding out, yea, and wonders without number y.

y Which words were produced by Eliphaz, Chap. 5. 9. (where they are explained) and are here repeated by Job to ſhew his agreement with him therein.

11. Lo, he goeth z by me a, and I ſee him not b: he paſſeth on alſo c, but I perceive him not.

z i.e. He worketh by his Providence in ways of Mercy or Judgment. a Or beſides, or before me, in my preſence. b I ſee the Effects, but I cannot underſtand the Cauſes or Grounds of his Actions, for they are incomprehenſible by me, or by any other men: for though he ſpeaks only in his own perſon, yet he means it of all men; that ſuch is the weakneſs of mens Underſtandings, that they cannot ſearch out God's Counſels and ways: See Acts 17. 27. Rom. 11. 33. c He goeth from place to place, from one action to another: He ſpeaks of God after the manner of men.

* Iſa. 45. 9. Jer. 18. 6. Rom. 9. 20. † Heb. who can turn him away? Ch. 11. 10.

12. * Behold, he taketh away d, † who can hinder him: who will ſay unto him, What doeſt thou e?

d If he determine to take away from any Man his Children or Servants, or Eſtate, as he hath done from me, e who is able to reſtrain him from doing it? Or who dare preſume to reprove him for it? And therefore far be it from me to quarrel with God, whereof you untruly accuſe me.

13. If God will not withdraw his anger f, the † proud helpers g, do ſtoop under him h.

f i.e. If God reſolve not to withdraw his Rod and ſtroak, the Effect of his Anger. Or without if, which is not in the Hebrew, God will not withdraw his anger, i.e. not forbear to puniſh, neither becauſe any man can over-power and reſtrain him; nor for fear leſt he ſhould rebuke him for proceeding to puniſh, as is implied by comparing this Verſe with the former. g i.e. Thoſe men who ſhall undertake to uphold and defend him whom God intends to puniſh and deſtroy; who are fitly called proud helpers, becauſe this is a moſt proud, and inſolent, and preſumptuous act to oppoſe themſelves to the Lord God almighty, and to his Counſels and Courſes; or (as it is in the Hebrew) Helpers of pride, becauſe they give aſſiſtance to that man who carries himſelf proudly and ſtoutly towards God, under his correcting-hand: Or (as ſome tranſlate it) the helpers of Egypt, or the Egyptian helpers; i.e. the moſt potent helpers: for Egypt was in Job's time a powerful and flouriſhing Kingdom, and not far from Job's Country. And the word Rahab here rendred pride, is elſewhere put for Egypt, as Pſalm 87. 4. Iſa. 51. 9. And (as ſome take it) Job 26. 12. h i.e. Shall fall and be cruſhed by him; and conſequently they who are helped by him muſt fall with them.

14. How much leſs ſhall i I anſwer him k, and chooſe out my words to reaſon with him l?

i Since no Creature whatſoever can reſiſt his Power, and no Man living can ſearch out or comprehend his Counſels and Ways; how can I, who am a poor, contemptible, diſpirited Creature; contend with him? k i.e. Anſwer his Allegations and Arguments, produced againſt me. l Heb. Chooſe my words with (or before, or againſt, as this Particle is uſed, Deut. 9. 7. Pſalm 94. 16. Prov. 30. 31.) him. i e. Shall I try whether God or I can chooſe fitter Words, or ſtronger Arguments? Or ſhall I contend with him and expect to get the better of him by uſing choice, and forcible, and elegant words, as one man doth with another?

15. Whom, though I were righteous m, yet would I not anſwer n: but I would make ſupplication to my judge o.

m Though I had a moſt juſt cauſe and were not conſcious to my ſelf of any ſin. n i.e. I durſt not undertake to plead my Cauſe againſt him; or maintain my Integrity before him, becauſe he knows me better than I know my ſelf, and becauſe I am wholly in his hands and at his mercy. o To wit, that he would hear me meekly, and judge favourably of me and my Cauſe, and not according to the rigours of his juſtice.

16. If I had called p, and he had anſwered me, yet would I not believe, that he had harkened unto my voice q:

p i.e. Prayed, as this word is commonly uſed; to wit, unto my Judge, for a favourable ſentence, as he now ſaid, and therefore it was needleſs here to mention the Object of his Calling or Prayer. q I could not believe that God had indeed granted my Deſire, though he had done it; becauſe I am ſo infinitely below him, and obnoxious to him, and ſtill full of the tokens of his diſpleaſure; and therefore ſhould conclude that it was but a pleaſant Dream or a Fancy, and not a real thing; Compare Pſalm 126. 1.

17. For he breaketh me r with a tempeſt s, and multiplieth my wounds without cauſe t.

r This is the Reaſon of his foregoing Diffidence, that even when God ſeemed to anſwer him in words, yet the courſe of his actions towards him was of a quite contrary nature and tendency. s As with a Tempeſt; i.e. unexpectedly, violently, and irrecoverably: t Not ſimply without any deſert of his, or as if he had no ſin in him; for he oft declares the contrary, but without any evident or ſpecial cauſe of ſuch ſingular Afflictions; i.e. any peculiar and extraordinary guilt, ſuch as my Friends charge me with.

18. He will not ſuffer me to take my breath u, but filleth me with bitterneſs x.

u My pains and miſeries are continual, and I have not ſo much as a breathing-time free from them. x My Afflictions are not only long and uninterrupted, but alſo exceeding ſharp and violent, contrary to the common courſe of God's Providence.

19. If I ſpeak of ſtrength y, lo, he is ſtrong z: and if of judgment a, who ſhall ſet me a time to plead b?

y If my Cauſe were to be decided by power. z i.e. Stronger than I. a If I would contend with him in a way of right. b There is no ſuperiour Judge that can ſummon him and me together, and appoint us a time of pleading before him, and oblige us both to ſtand to his Sentence; and therefore I muſt be contented to ſit down with the loſs.

20. If I juſtifie my ſelf c, mine own mouth ſhall condemn me d: If I ſay, I am perfect e, it f ſhall alſo prove me perverſe.

c If I plead againſt God mine own Righteouſneſs and Innocency. d God is ſo infinitely wiſe and juſt, that he will find ſufficient matter of condemnation from my own words, though ſpoken with all poſſible care and circumſpection; or he will diſcover ſo much wickedneſs in me of which I was not aware, that I ſhall be forced to joyn with him in condemning my ſelf. e If I were perfect in my own opinion; If I thought my ſelf compleatly righteous and faultleſs. f i.e. My own mouth, as he now ſaid. Or, he, i.e. God, who is eaſily underſtood by comparing this with the former Verſes, where the ſame he is oft mentioned.

21. Though I were perfect, yet would I not know my ſoul: I would deſpiſe my life g.

g i.e. Though God ſhould acquit me in Judgment, and pronounce me perfect or righteous, yet would I not know, i.e. regard or value (as that word is oft uſed) my ſoul, i.e. my life; as the ſoul frequently ſignifies, as Gen. 19. 17. Job 2. 6. John 10. 15, 17 and as it is explained in the following branch, where life is put for ſoul, and deſpiſing for not knowing: and ſo the ſame thing is repeated in differing words, and the latter clause explains the former, which was more dark and doubtful; according to the usage of sacred Scripture. So the sense is, Though God should give sentence for me, yet I should be so overwhelmed with the dread and terrour of the Divine Majesty, that I should be weary of my life. And therefore I abhor the thoughts of contending with my Maker, whereof you accuse me; and yet I have reason to be weary of my life, and to desire death. Or thus, If I say I am perfect, as the very same Hebrew words are rendred, v. 20. i.e. If I should think my self perfect, yet I would not know, i.e. not acknowledge, my soul, I could not own nor plead before God the perfection and integrity of my soul, but would only make supplication to my Judge, as he said, v. 16. and flee to his grace and mercy: I would abhor, or reject, or condemn my life, i.e. my conversation: So the sense is, I would not insist upon, nor trust to the integrity either of my soul and heart, or of my life, so as to justifie my self before the pure and piercing Eyes of the all-seeing God.

22. This is one thing h, therefore I said it i, he destroyeth the perfect and the wicked k.

h In the other things which you have spoken of God's greatness, justice, &c. I do not contend with you, but this one thing I do, and must affirm against you. i I did not utter it rashly, but upon deep consideration. k God sends afflictions promiscuously upon good and bad men. Compare Psal. 73. 2, &c. Eccles. 9. 2. Jer. 12. 1, &c.

23. If the scourge slay suddenly l, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent m.

l Either, 1. If some common and deadly Judgment come upon a people, which destroys both good and bad. Or, 2. If God inflicts some grievous and unexpected stroke upon an innocent person, as it follows. m As he doth at the destruction of the wicked, Psal. 2. 4. His outward carriage is the same to both; he neglects the innocent, and seems not to answer their Prayers, and suffers them to perish with others, as if he took pleasure in their ruine also. But withal, he intimates the matter and cause of this laughter or complacency which God takes in their afflictions, because to them they are but trials of their faith, and patience, and perseverance, which tends to God's honour, and their own eternal advantage.

24. The earth n is given o into the hand of the wicked p: he covereth the faces of the judges thereof q; if not r, where, and who is he s?

n i.e. The possession and dominion of men and things on earth. o To wit, by God the great Lord and disposer of it by his providence. p Into their power. As good men are scourged, v. 23. so the wicked are advanced, and prospered in this world. q i.e. He blinds their eyes that they cannot discern between truth and falshood, justice and unrighteousness: He. Who? Either, 1. the wicked last mentioned, who either by power or by gifts corrupts the Officers of justice. Or rather, 2. God, whom the pronoun, he, designed all along this Chapter: Who is oft said to blind the minds of men, which he doth not positively by making them blind, but privatively by withdrawing his own light, and leaving them to their own mistakes and lusts. Or by Judges he may here mean those who are worthy of that name, and duly administer that Office; Whose faces God may be said to cover, because he removeth them from their high places into obscurity, and covers them with contempt, and in a manner passeth a sentence of condemnation and destruction upon them; Covering of the face being the usual posture of condemned persons and of men in great misery: Of which see Esth. 7. 8. Psal. 44. 22. Isa. 15. 17. Jer. 14. 4. So the sense of this Verse is, God commonly advanceth wicked men into power and honour, and casteth down men of true worth and vertue from their Seats. r If it be not as I say, If God do not these things. s Either, 1. Who will confute me by solid arguments? Or, 2. Who doth these things? Who but God doth dispose of the World in this manner?

* Chap. 7. 6. 25. Now t * my days u are swifter than a post x: they flee away, they see no good y.

t What he had said of the calamities which God usually inflicted upon good men, he now exemplifieth in himself. u The days either of my prosperity: For the time of affliction is commonly described by the night: or rather, 2. Of my life, as the last clause sheweth; For it were an absurd and contradictious speech to say, that his prosperous days saw no good. x Who runs or rides upon swift horses. y I enjoy no good in them. Seeing is oft put for experiencing either good or evil, Job 7. 7. Psal. 34. 12. Job. 3. 36. & 8. 51.

† Heb. Ships of desire. ‖ Or, Ships of Ebek. * Hab. 1. 8. 26. They are passed away as the † ‖ swift ships z: * as the eagle a that hasteth to the prey.

z Heb. ships of desire, which make great haste, as if they longed for their desired Haven, as it is called, Psal. 107. 30. Or, ships of pleasure; Which sail more swiftly than ships of great burthen. a Which generally flies most swiftly, Deut. 28. 49. Jer. 4. 13. Lam. 4. 19. especially when its own hunger and the sight of its prey quickens its motion.

* Chap. 7. 13. † Heb. face. 27. * If I say, b I will forget my complaints c, I will leave off my † heaviness d, and comfort my self e:

b If I resolve within my self. c I will cease complaining. d Heb. mine anger; wherewith Job was charged by his friends, Ch. 18. 4. my angry expressions. e I will endeavour to take comfort.

28. I am afraid of all my sorrows f, I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent g.

f Or, my pains and griefs: I find all such endeavours vain; for if my griefs be suspended for a little time, yet my fears continue. g I plainly perceive that my changing my note is to no purpose; for thou, O God (to whom he makes a sudden Apostrophe, as he doth also, v. 31.) wilt not clear my innocency by removing those afflictions which make them judge me guilty of some great crime; words proceeding from great impatience and despair of relief.

29. If I be wicked h, why then labour I in vain i?

h Heb. I shall be wicked, or guilty, to wit, before thee. Whether I be holy or wicked, if I dispute with thee, I shall be found guilty. Or thus, I shall be used like a wicked man, and punished as such. So this is opposed to his not being held innocent, v. 28. i.e. not being acquitted or exempt from punishment. i Why then should I not indulge my griefs, but restrain them? Why should I comfort my self with vain hopes of deliverance, as thou adviseth me, Ch. 8. 6. or seek to God, as I was directed, Ch. 5. 8. for that ease which I see he is resolved not to give me? why should I trouble my self with clearing mine innocency, seeing God will still hold me guilty?

30. * If I wash my self k with snow-water l, and make my hands never so clean: * Jer. 2. 22.

k Either, 1. really, by sanctification, cleansing my heart and life from all filthiness; or rather, 2. declaratively or judicially; i.e. If I clear my self from all imputations, and fully prove my innocency before men: l i.e. As men cleanse their bodies, and as under the Law they purified themselves with water, which he here calls water of snow, either because by its purity and brightness it resembled Snow; or because in those dry Countries, where fresh and pure water was scarce, Snow-water was much in use, or because that water might be much used among them in some of their ritual purifications, as coming down from Heaven.

31. Yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch m, and mine own cloths shall ‖ abhor me n. ‖ Or, make me to be abhorred.

m i.e. In miry and puddle water, whereby I shall become most filthy. But as Job's washing, so God's plunging him, &c. is not understood really, as if God would make him filthy, but only judicially, that God would prove him to be a most guilty and filthy creature notwithstanding all the professions and evidences of his purity before men. n i.e. I shall be so altogether filthy, that my own cloths, if they had any sense in them, would abhor to touch me. A figure called Prosopopœia.

32. For he is not a man as I am o, that I should answer him p, and we should come together q in Judgment.

o But one infinitely superiour to me in Majesty, and Power, and Wisdom, and Justice. p That I should presume to debate my cause with him, or answer his allegations against me. q Face to face, to plead upon equal terms before a superiour and indifferent Judge.

33. * Neither is there † any ‖ days-man q betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both r. * 1 Sam. 2. 25. ver. 19. † Heb. one that shall argue. ‖ Or, Umpire.

q Or, a Reprover; or a Judge, or Umpire, whose office was to reprove the guilty person. r i.e. Use his power and authority to appoint the time and place of our meeting; to order and govern us in pleading, and to oblige us to stand to his decision. The hand is oft put for power, and laying on the hand upon another was oft-times an act and sign of superiority and dominion.

34. * Let him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear s terrifie me. * Chap. 13. 21. & 33. 7.

s Objectively so called, i.e. The fear and dread of him, of his Majesty and of justice. Let him not deal with me rigorously according to his soveraign dominion and perfect justice, but according to his wonted grace and clemency.

35. Then would I speak, and not fear him t, † but it is not so with me u. † Heb. But I am not so with my self.

t i.e. I would speak freely for my self, being freed from the dread of his Majesty, which takes away my spirit and courage, and stoppeth my mouth. u i.e. I am not free from his terrour, and therefore cannot and dare not plead my cause boldly with him; and so have nothing else to do but to ease my self by renewing my complaints, as he doth in the next words. Otherwise thus, But I am not so with my self, i.e. I am in a manner besides my self, distracted with the terrors of God upon me. Or rather thus, For I am not so with my self, or in my own Conscience, as I perceive I am in your eyes; to wit, an Hypocrite and ungodly man. So this is a reason why he could speak to God without slavish fear, because he was conscious to himself of his own Integrity: I have a good Conscience within my self, and therefore could use boldness in speaking to God, provided he would not deal with me in strict justice, but upon the terms of grace and mercy which he hath proposed to sinners, and with allowance to humane Infirmities.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

* Chap. 7.16. ‖ Or, cut off while I live. † Or, of.

1. MY * soul is ‖ weary of my life a, I will leave my complaint upon my self b; I will speak in † the bitterness of my soul c.

a So the sense is: My Soul is weary of dwelling in this rotten and miserable Carkass: Or, I am from my heart, or with my very soul weary of my life; and therefore I may be excused if I complain: Or, My soul is cut off while I live: i.e. I am dead whilest I live; I am in a manner buried alive. b So the sense is, I will complain, and the burden or hazard of so doing I will take upon my self, and be willing to bear it: I must give my sorrows vent, let come on me what will, as he saith Chap. 13.13. But the words may be read interrogatively, Shall I then (or, how can I then) leave my complaint (i.e. give over complaining) within or concerning (as the Hebrew al oft signifies) my self? Or they may be rendred thus, I will strengthen (as this Verb signifies, Neh. 3.8.) my complaint against my self; whereby he implies, that he would not complain against God, so as to accuse him of injustice, but only against himself, or against his own life; or concerning my self; i.e. I must renew and encrease my complaints, as God renews and encreases my Sorrows. c My extream misery forceth my complaints from me.

2. I will say unto God, Do not condemn me d; shew me wherefore e thou contendest with me.

d Or, pronounce me not to be a wicked man, as my Friends do, neither deal with me as such, as I confess thou mightest do by thy soveraign power and in rigorous justice: O discover my Integrity by removing this stroke, for which my Friends so highly censure and condemn me! e i.e. For what ends and reasons, and for what sins; for I am not conscious to my self of any peculiar and eminent sins by which I have deserved to be made the most miserable of all Mortals.

3. Is it good unto thee f that thou shouldest oppress g? that thou shouldst despise h † the work of thine hands i, and shine upon the counsel of the wicked k?

f Dost thou take any pleasure in it: Hast thou any advantage or honour by it? Dost thou think it right and just, and becoming the Ruler of the World? g By thy absolute and irresistible power, without any regard to that justice, and equity, and clemency, by which thou usest to govern mankind. h i.e. Shew thy contempt of them, either by denying them common favour and protection; or by destroying them. i Which every Workman loves and maintains. k i.e. By the Methods of thy Providence seem to favour the courses and practices of wicked men, to whom thou givest prosperity and success, whilest thou frownest upon me and other good men. This may have reference, either to Job's Friends, whose ungodly censures God seemed to approve, by continuing Job's Afflictions upon him: Or to the Chaldæans and Sabæans, who had succeeded in their wicked attempts upon Job: But it seems to be more generally meant of wicked men.

* 1 Sam. 16.7.

4. Hast thou eyes of flesh l? or * seest thou as man seeth m?

l i.e. Of a man, who is called flesh, as Gen. 6.13. Isa. 40.6. m Man seeth outsides only, and judgeth by appearances, and is liable to many mistakes, and cannot search out secret faults without forcing men by cruel usage to accuse themselves. But thou needest none of these Arts, thou seest mine heart and mine uprightness, which my Friends do not see, who therefore are more excusable in charging me with Hypocrisie: But thou knowest all things, thou needest not examine me by Tortures, as thou now doest, *v.*6. For, thou knowest that I am not wicked, as he saith, *v.*7. and therefore do not thou deal with me as if I were wicked.

5. Are thy days as the days of man? are thy years as mans days n?

n Man's time is short and uncertain, and therefore he must improved his time, whilest he hath it, and diligently search out the Crimes of Malefactors, and punish them whilest he may, lest by Death he lose the opportunity of doing justice, and the criminal get out of his power: But it is not so with thee, thou art eternal and unchangeable, and seest at one view all mens hearts, and all their actions present and to come; and therefore thou doest not need to proceed with me in this manner by making so long and so severe a scrutiny into my heart and life.

* Ch. 14.16.

6. That thou * enquirest after mine iniquity, and searchest after my sin o?

o Keeping me so long as it were upon the Rack to compel me to accuse my self, as men sometimes do.

7. † Thou knowest that I am not wicked p, and there is none that can deliver out of thine hand q.

p i.e. An Hypocrite, or an ungodly man, as my Friends account me; and therefore deal not with me as such. q The sense is, either, 1. Thou dost not need to keep me fast in thy Prison, lest I should make an escape, or any should rescue me out of thy hands, which none can do; Therefore take off thy hand from me: Or, 2. if thou doest not help and deliver me, none else can do it; Therefore do not thou fail me: which considering God's merciful Nature, is a good Argument. If any man oppress another, he may have relief from thee, who art higher than his Oppressor, Eccles. 5.8. But thou art the supreme and uncontrollable Ruler of the World, and therefore thou must needs do right, Gen. 18.25. And therefore do not thou oppress me: See above Verse 3.

8. Thine hands † have made me, and fashioned me together round about r; yet thou dost destroy me s?

r i.e. All of me, all the faculties of my Soul, and all the parts of my Body, which are now over-spread with Sores and Ulcers; I am wholly thy Creature and Workmanship, made by thee and for thee. s Or, swallow me up; to wit, without cause, or any eminent provocation of mine; as if thou didst delight in doing and undoing, in making and then destroying thy Creatures; which doth not become thy Wisdom or Goodness.

* Gen. 2.7. & 3.19. ‖ Or, wrought.

9. Remember, I beseech thee, that * thou hast ‖ made me as the clay t, and wilt thou bring me into dust again u?

t i.e. Of the Clay, the Note of similitude here expressing the truth of things, as it doth, John 1.14. and elsewhere, as hath been before observed: Or, as a Potter maketh a Vessel of the Clay; and so this may note both the frailty of Man's Nature, which of it self decaies and perisheth, and doth not need such violent shocks and storms to overthrow it; and the Excellency of the Divine Artifice commended from the meanness of the Materials out of which it was made; which is an Argument why God should not destroy it. u Wilt thou now causlesly and violently destroy thy own Work? But the words are and may be read without an Interrogation; And thou wilt bring me into dust again, out of which I was made: I must die by the course of Nature, and by the sentence of thy Law; and therefore whilest I do live give me some ease and comfort.

* Ps. 139.14, 15, 16.

10. * Hast thou not poured me out as milk, and crudled me like cheese x?

x Thus he modestly and accurately discribes God's admirable Work in making Man out of a small and liquid, and as it were Milky substance, by degrees congealed and condensed into that exquisite Frame of Man's Body.

11. Thou hast cloathed me y with skin and flesh, and hast † fenced me with bones and sinews z.

y i.e. Covered my inward and more noble parts; which, as Philosophers and Physicians observe, are first formed. So he proceeds in describing Man's Formation gradually. z Which are the stay and strength of the Body; and some of them, as the Skull and Ribs, enclose and defend its vital and most noble parts.

12. Thou hast granted me life a and favour b, and thy visitation c hath preserved my spirit d.

a Thou didst not only give me a curious Body, but also a living and a reasonable Soul: Thou didst at first give me life, and then maintain it in me; both when I was in the Womb (which is a marvellous Work of God) and afterward when I was unable to do any thing to preserve my own life. b Or, benignity, or bounty, or mercy, or kindness; which is here, as oft elsewhere, put for its fruits or effects. Thou didst not give a meer Life, but many other Favours necessary, or convenient, or belonging to it, such as Nourishment by the Breast, Education, Knowledge, and Instruction, &c. c i.e. The Care of thy Providence watching over me for my good, and visiting me in mercy; as God's visiting is understood, Exod. 4.31. Luke 1.78. though elsewhere it is an Act of Punishment. d i.e. My Soul or Life, which is liable to manifold Casualties and Dangers, if God did not watch over us and guard us every day and moment. Thou hast hitherto done great things for me, given me Life, and the Blessings of Life, and daily Preservations and Deliverances: And wilt thou now undo all that thou hast done? And shall I who have been such an eminent Monument of thy Mercy, now be made a Spectacle of thy Vengeance, and that without cause?

* Isa. 59.12.

13. And these things hast thou hid in thine heart e: I know that this is * with thee f.

e This place may be understood, either 1. of Job's present Afflictions: So the sense is this; Yet in the midst of all those Manifestations of thy Grace and Kindness to me, thou didst retain a secret purpose of changing thy course and carriage towards me, and of bringing these dreadful Calamities upon me. Or rather, 2. of his former Mercies, these things, to wit, last mentioned; thou hast hid them in thy heart; i.e. thou dost exactly remember them, as this phrase is used, Psalm 119.11. Luke 2.51. So the Argument is this; Let the remembrance of thy former great Favours vouchsafed to me, move thee to give me further Blessings, and a speedy Deliverance. For this is usual both with God and Men, to choose and delight to do more good to those to whom they have done much good already; which is the ground of that known passage, Matt. 13.12. To him that hath shall be given. f i.e. In thy mind and heart; thou hast not forgot it: So the same thing is here repeated in other words.

14. If I sin g, then thou markest me h, and thou wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity i.

g If I commit the least sin; as who is there that liveth, and sinneth not? h Thou doest not wink at or pass by my sins, as thou usually usually doest other mens, but doest severely and diligently observe them all, that thou mayest punish them: Compare Chap. 14. 16. & 31. 4. i I perceive thou art resolved to punish me with rigour, and that thou wilt not pardon, and pity, and help me: Words of great impatience and distrust.

15. If I be wicked k, woe unto me l; and if I be righteous m, yet will I not lift up my head n: I am full of † confusion o, therefore see thou mine affliction.

k i.e. An ungodly Hypocrite, as my Friends esteem me. l Then I am truly and extremely, and must be eternally miserable. m i.e. An upright and good man: So whether good or bad, all comes to one; I have no relief. n Or, yet can I not, &c. The Future Tense being used potentially: Yet I have no comfort, nor confidence, or hopes of any good. Lifting up the head or face, is oft mentioned as a sign of comfort and confidence; as Psalm 3. 3. Luke 21. 28. As on the contrary, Grief and Same are described by its dejection or casting down. o Or, reproach, from my Friends, and from others, Chap. 30. 1, &c. and from God too, who casts me off and makes me contemptible: I have abundance of shame in the disappointment of all my hopes, and the continuance and aggravation of my misery, notwithstanding all my prayers to God to remove or mitigate it: And I am confounded within my self, not knowing what to say or do. Let my extremity move thee to pity, and help me.

* Isa. 38. 13. Lam. 3. 10. 16. For it encreaseth: thou * huntest me as a fierce lion p; and again thou shewest thy self marvellous upon me q.

p Which hunteth after his prey with great eagerness, and when he overtakes it falls upon it with great fury. q Heb. And thou returnest and shewest thy self marvellous upon, or in, or against me. The Lion tears its prey speedily, and so ends its torments; but thou renewest my Calamities again and again, and makest my Plagues wonderful both for kind and extremity, and continuance.

‖ That is, thy plagues. Ruth. 1. 21. Chap. 16. 8. 17. Thou renewest ‖ thy witnesses r against me, and encreasest thy indignation s upon me; changes and war t are against me.

r i.e. Thy judgments, which are the Witnesses and Evidences both of my sins, and of thy wrath. s i.e. My miseries the effects of thine anger. These words are added to explain what he meant by renewing witnesses. t Or, changes and an army; which may be a Figure called Hendiadys, for the changes of an army; i.e. many miseries succeeding one another, like Companies of the Souldiers of an Army in Battle: Or, changes may note the various kinds, and an army the great numbers of his Afflictions.

* Chap. 3. 11. 18. * Wherefore then hast thou brought me forth out of the womb? O that I had given up the Ghost, and no eye had seen me u.

u To wit, alive; i.e. that I had never been born alive.

19. I should have been x as though I had not been, I should have been carried from the womb to the grave.

x Or, O that I had been: And so in the following branch, O that I had been carried. For why should not these Verbs of the Future Tense be so rendred here, as that v. 19. is, the reason being wholly the same?

* See Ch. 7. 6. & 8. 9. * Psal. 39. 13. 20. * Are not my days few *? cease then x, and let me alone y, that I may take comfort a little:

x My life is short, and of its self hastens apace to an end, there is no need that thou shouldest push it forward, or grudge me some ease for so small a moment. y Or, lay aside, or remove thy hand or anger from me.

21. Before I go to the place whence I shall not return, z even to the land of darkness, and the shadow of death ‖.

z Into this World and Life: See on Chap. 7. 9, 10. ‖ i.e. A dark and dismal shade: See on Chap. 3. 5.

† Heb. as the gloominess of the shadow of death, and without order; and it shineth as darkness. 22. A land of darkness †, as darkness it self, and of the shadow of death, without any order †, and where the light is as darkness *.

† Either in things, without any succession of Day and Night, Winter and Summer: Or among persons where great and small are in the same condition, Chap. 3. 19. * Where there is no difference between Light and Darkness, where the Day is dark as the Night, where there is nothing but perpetual and uninterrupted darkness.

CHAP. XI.

1. THen answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said, 2. Should not the multitude of words be answered a? and should † a man full of talk be justified b?

a Doest thou think to carry thy Cause by thy long and tedious discourses consisting of empty words without weight or reason? b Shall we by our silence seem to approve of thy Errors? Or shall we think thy Cause the better, because thou usest more words than we do?

‖ Or, dictates. 3. Should thy ‖ lyes c make men hold their peace d? and when thou mockest e, shall no man make thee ashamed f?

c i.e. Thy false Opinions and Assertions both concerning thy self and thy own Innocency, and concerning the Counsels and Ways of God. d As if thy Arguments were unanswerable. e Both God, Chap. 10. 3. and us, and our friendly and faithful Counsels, Chap. 6. 14, 15, 25, 26. f By discovering thy Errors and Follies.

* Chap. 6. 10. * Chap. 10. 7. 4. For thou hast said *, my doctrine g is pure h, and * I am clean in thine eyes i.

g Concerning God and his Providence. h i.e. True and certain. i I am innocent before God; I have not sinned either by my former actions, or by my present expressions. Thou standest wholly upon thy justification. But Zophar aggravates and perverts Job's words, for he did not deny that he was a sinner in God's sight, Chap. 7. 20, 21. & 9. 2, 3. & 10. 14. but only that he was an Hypocrite or ungodly man, as they made him.

5. But, O that God would speak, and open his lips against thee k; k i.e. Plead with thee according to thy desire, Chap. 9. 32, &c. He would soon put thee to silence and shame.

* Ezra. 9. 13. 6. And that he would shew thee the secrets of wisdom l, that they are double to that which is m! know therefore that * God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth n.

l i.e. The unknown and unsearchable depths of God's Wisdom and Counsels, in dealing with his Creatures. m i.e. That they are far more and greater (the word double being used indefinitely for manifold, or plentiful, as Isa. 40. 2. & 61. 7. Jer. 17. 18. Zech. 9. 12.) than that which hath a being or existence; i.e. The secret Wisdom of God is infinitely greater than that which is revealed to us by his Word or Works: The greatest part of what is known of God, is the least part of those Perfections that are in him. And therefore thou doest rashly and foolishly in passing such a bold censure upon God's ways, and judging so harshly of his proceedings with thee, because thou doest not comprehend the reasons of them, and in judging thy self innocent, because thou doest not see thy sins; whereas the all-knowing God sees innumerable sins in thee, for which he may utterly destroy thee, though thou discernest them not: But the words are and must be rendred, either thus, that he hath double; id est, abundant wisdom; For so this Hebrew word signifies, Chapter 6. 13. and 12. 16. Proverbs 2. 7. and 3. 21. Or, that they are double to, or in that being or essence; to wit, to God, of whom he is here speaking: Or, to the being; i.e. to God, who calls himself by the Name I am, Exod. 3. 14. which signifies being, and who appropriates being to himself, Isa. 45. 18. I am, and there is none else besides me; as elsewhere he is said to be the onely wise, and onely Potentate, and onely immortal being, 1 Tim. 1. 17. & 6. 15, 16. n Heb. God lends or gives, or forgives thee part of thine iniquity, or of thy punishment. So far is he from dealing worse than thou deservest, as thou doest most falsly and wickedly accuse him.

* Eccles. 3. 11. Rom. 11. 33. * Ch. 26. 14. 7. * Canst thou by searching find out God o? canst thou find out the Almighty * unto perfection?

o i.e. Discover all the Depths of his Wisdom, and the Reasons of all his Actions.

† Heb. the heights of heaven. 8. It is † as high as heaven p, what canst thou do q? deeper than hell, what canst thou know r?

p Thou canst not measure the heights of the visible Heavens much less of the Divine Perfections. q To wit, to find him out. r Concerning him and his ways, which are far out of thy sight and reach.

9. The measure thereof is longer than the earth r, and broader than the sea s.

r From one end to the other. s Which is called the great and wide sea, Psalm 104. 25.

* Chap. 9. 12. ‖ Or, make a change. † Heb. who can turn him away? 10. * If he ‖ cut off t, and shut up u, or gather together x, then † who can hinder him y?

t To wit, a Person or a Family. u In a Prison, or in the hands of an Enemy. This shuting up, is opposed to the opening of the Prison-doors, and to that enlargement, which God is elsewhere said to give to men. x either, 1. in a way of judgment, as a like word is used, Psalm 26. 9. Gather not my soul with sinners. Or rather, 2. in a way of mercy, as this word is generally used in Scripture; this being every where promised by God to his people, as an eminent mercy that he would gather them together. So this is opposed to the former actions, and the sense of the place is, whether it pleased God to scatter a Family, or to gather them together from their dispersions. y From doing what he pleaseth and designeth with his own Creatures? Who can restrain him either by giving Law to him, or by force and power? Or, who can contradict or answer him, or object against him, or retort, or return upon him; i.e. charge him with injustice injuſtice in ſuch proceedings? Which ſenſe may ſeem to agree beſt both with the ſcope of the place, and ſtate of the queſtion between him and Job; which was not whether any man could reſiſt God's power, but whether he could queſtion his juſtice; and with the following Verſe.

11. For * he knoweth vain men z: he ſeeth wickedneſs alſo a, will he not then conſider it b?

*Pſ. 10. 11, 14. & 35. 22.

z Though Men know but little of God, and therefore are very unfit Judges of all his Counſels and Actions, yet God knows Man exactly, and his vanity, or falſhood, or folly, or raſhneſs; for all theſe this word ſignifies. He knoweth that every Man in the World is guilty of much vanity and folly, and therefore ſeeth ſufficient reaſon for his ſeverity againſt the beſt men; ſuch as thou, O Job, ſanſieſt thy ſelf to be; and if thou wert ſo, thou haſt no reaſon to wonder at or quarrel with his proceedings: And if thy quarrel be that he ſhuts thee up, or cuts thee off, when he gathers others under his wing and protection, whom thou thinkeſt or knoweſt to be worſe than thy ſelf, while thou doeſt impeach his juſtice, thou doeſt but betray thy own vanity and folly: For he knows both whom he chaſtiſeth, and whom he ſpareth, and why he doth it, though he do not acquaint thee with the reaſons of all his actions. a As he knoweth the vanity of all Men, ſo he exactly perceiveth the wickedneſs of evil men, though it be covered with the Veil of Religion. He ſeeth thy evil heart which diſcovers it ſelf by ſuch wicked and ſcandalous ſpeeches, againſt the juſtice and goodneſs of his Providence, which gives him juſt cauſe to continue and encreaſe thy miſeries. Though thou art partial and flattereſt thy ſelf with a conceit of thy own Integrity, yet he knoweth thy hypocriſie and wickedneſs. b Shall he only ſee it as an idle Spectator, and not obſerve it as a Judge to requite and puniſh it?

12. For † * vain man would be wiſe c, though man be born d like a wild aſſes colt e.

c Or, Yet (or But vain or empty man (that fooliſh Creature that ſince the fall is void of all true wiſdom and ſolid knowledge, and judgment of the things of God) would be wiſe; i. e. pretends to be, and would be thought wiſe and able to paſs a cenſure upon all God's ways and works. Or thus, But vain Man is fooliſh, or without heart; i. e. without underſtanding, unable to judge aright of the ways and things of God. For a Verb very like this, and coming from the ſame Root, ſignifies to have ones heart taken away, Cant. 4. 9. d And Man is born; i. e. he is by his birth ſuch; this evil is now natural and hereditary, and therefore common to all Men: and therefore it is not ſtrange if Job partake of the common diſtemper. e i. e. Ignorant, and dull, and ſtupid, as to the knowledge of divine things, and withal heady and untractable; and therefore very incompetent to judge of theſe high affairs.

* Ch. 5. 8. & 22. 21.

13. * If thou f prepare thine heart g, and ſtretch out thine hands h towards him i; f O Job, thy buſineſs is not to quartel with thy Maker, or his Works, but to addreſs thy ſelf to him. g To wit, to ſeek God, as it is expreſſed, 2 Chron. 19. 3. & 30. 19. Pſalm 78. 8. If thou prepare thy heart, by ſincere repentance for all thy hard ſpeeches of God, and ſins againſt him, and with a pure and upright heart ſeek unto him; without which thy prayers will be in vain. Or, If thou directeſt or rectifieſt thine heart, turning thy bold contentions with God into humble and ſincere ſupplications to him. h i. e. Pray, which is here deſcribed by its uſual geſture, as Chap. 15. 25. Pſalm 88. 9. i i. e. To God as appears both from the nature of the thing, and from the Context.

14. If iniquity be in thine hand k, put it far away l, and let not wickedneſs dwell m in thy tabernacles n.

k Either, 1. If thou haſt in thine hand or poſſeſſion, any Goods got by injury or oppreſſion, as it ſeems they ſuppoſed that he had. Or, 2. more generally, If thou alloweſt thy ſelf in any ſinful practices. The hand is put for action, whereof it is the Inſtrument. l keep thy ſelf at a great diſtance not only from ſuch actions, but alſo from the very occaſions and appearances of them. m Let it not have a quiet and ſettled abode or allowance. n i. e. In thy habitation; i. e. either in thy ſelf, or in thy family; whoſe ſins Job was obliged as far as he could to prevent or reform; as he had done, Chap. 1. 5. He ſaith Tabernacles, becauſe anciently the habitations of great men conſiſted of ſeveral Tents or Tabernacles, as we ſee Gen. 24. 67. & 31. 33.

15. For then ſhalt thou lift up thy face o without ſpot p; yea, thou ſhalt be ſtedfaſt q, and ſhalt not fear.

o Which notes chearfulneſs, and holy boldneſs and confidence; as a dejected Countenance notes grief and ſhame. See Gen. 4. 5, 6. 2 Sam. 2. 22. Job 22. 26. Luke 21. 28. p. Or, Being without ſpot: So it is only an Elliptis of the Verb Subſtantive, which is moſt frequent. And this fitly follows as the ground of his confidence, becauſe he ſhould in this caſe have a clear and unſpotted Conſcience, and a ſenſe of his own innocency. Or, without blemiſh, as the word properly ſignifies; i. e. without any ſenſe of guilt, or any ſhame conſequent upon it either from God or Men. The ground of the expreſſion is this, That when mens faces are ſpotted with dirt, they are aſhamed to ſhew them. And Job was charged by his friends, as having many ſpots upon him, yea, ſuch as were not the ſpots of God's Children. q Or, firm or fixed: Either, 1. as to his outward Condition, which ſhould be conſtantly proſperous. Or rather as to his Mind, which ſhould have ſtrong and comfortable aſſurance of God's favour, and of his own ſafety and happineſs: For this ſtedfaſtneſs is oppoſed unto that fear, which is incident to wicked Men; who, even when they are free from actual miſeries, yet oft-times are tormented with the dread of them.

16. Becauſe thou ſhalt forget thy miſery r, and remember it as waters that paſs away s:

r Thou ſhalt be free from fear, becauſe thy great and ſettled proſperity ſhall baniſh out of thy mind all thoſe ſad and irkſom thoughts of thy former Calamities, which naturally ingender fears of the continuance or return of them. Perſons bleſſed with eminent Deliverances, and an happy ſettlement, are frequently ſaid in Scripture to forget their former ſorrows; as Gen. 41. 51. Iſa. 54. 4. John 16. 21. not that they ſimply forget them, but becauſe they have no ſad or frightful remembrance of them: For remembring and forgetting in Scripture, do not ſimply note acts of the mind, but alſo affections and practices ſuitable to them, as is well known. s Thou ſhalt remember them no more, than Men remember either a Land-flood, which as it comes ſo it goes away ſuddenly, and leaves few or no footſteps or memorials behind it; or the waters of a River, which as ſoon as they are out of ſight, are out of mind, becauſe of the new waters which immediately come in their ſtead.

17. And thine age t † ſhall be * clearer u than the noon-day x; thou ſhalt || ſhine forth y, thou ſhalt be as the morning z.

† Heb. ſhall ariſe above the noon-day. * Pſ. 37. 6. & 112. 4. Iſa. 58. 8. || Or, ſee up. Iſa. 40. 31.

t i. e. The remainder of thy life and time in this world. u Heb. ſhall ariſe: Men are ſaid to fall into trouble, and to ariſe out of them. x Or, above the noon day; or above the Sun at Noon day, when it is at its higheſt pitch, as well as in its greateſt glory. y Light in Scripture commonly ſignifies Proſperity and Glory; as Eſth. 8. 16. Job 18. 5, 6. & 38. 15. Prov. 4. 18. Or, If thou art in darkneſs, as this word properly ſignifies, Job 10. 22. Amos 4. 13. i. e. If thou comeſt into any diſtreſs and trouble. z i. e. That Night of trouble ſhall certainly and ſpeedily be followed with the Morning of Deliverance and Comfort, which like the Morning-light ſhall ſhine brighter and brighter, until the perfect day.

18. And thou ſhalt be ſecure becauſe there is hope a; yea thou ſhalt dig about thee b, and * thou ſhalt take thy reſt in ſafety c.

* Lev. 26. 5, 6. Pſ. 3. 5. & 4. 8. Prov. 3. 24.

a i. e. Thy mind ſhall be quiet and free from terrours, becauſe thou ſhalt have a firm and well-grounded hope and confidence in God's merciful and providential care of thee. Or, thou ſhalt be confident that thou ſhalt have what thou hopeſt for; the act hope being put for the object, as is very uſual. i. e. Thou ſhalt have aſſurance in and from God, that thy hopes ſhall not be diſappointed but fulfilled. This is oppoſed to that fear, verſ. 15. b Either to fix thy Tents, which after the manner of the Arabians were removed from place to place for conveniency of Paſturage for their Cattel; or to find out water for thy Cattel; as they did, Gen. 26. Or to plough the Ground, as he had done, Chap. 1. 14. Or to make a Fence about thy Dwelling. For both the foregoing and following paſſages expreſs his ſecure and ſafe condition. c Free from dangers and the fear of them; becauſe of God's fatherly Providence watching over thee when thou canſt not watch over thy ſelf.

19. Alſo thou ſhalt lie down, and none ſhall make thee afraid; yea, many ſhall † make ſuit unto thee d.

† Heb. intreat thy face. Pſ. 45. 12.

d Deſiring thy favour and friendſhip, becauſe of thy great power and riches, and eminent felicity: See Gen. 26. 26, &c.

20. But the eyes of the wicked ſhall fail e, and † they ſhall not eſcape f, and * their hope ſhall be as || the giving up of the ghoſt g.

e Or, be conſumed, either with grief and tears for their ſore Calamities: Or with Long looking for what they ſhall never attain, as this phraſe is taken, Pſalm 69. 3. Jer. 14. 6. Lamint. 4. 17. And this ſhall be thy condition, O Job, if thou perſiſteſt in thine impiety. f They ſhall never obtain deliverance out of their Diſtreſſes, but ſhall periſh in them. g i. e. Shall be as vain and deſperate as the hope of life is in a Man, when he is at the very point of death. Or, as a puff of breath, which is gone in a moment without all hopes of recovery.

CHAP. XII.

1. AND Job anſwered and ſaid,

2. No doubt, but ye are the people a, and wiſdom ſhall die with you b.

a You three, and you only are the people; i. e. people of all people for eminency of wiſdom, the only company of reaſonable Creatures, all others are but fools or beaſts: You have engroſſed all the reaſon of Mankind; and each of you have as much wiſdom as an whole people put together. It is an Ironical Expreſſion, as the next Verſe ſheweth. b All the wiſdom and knowledge of divine things which is in the World, lives in you, and will die and be utterly loſt when you die. This you think of your ſelves; and this makes you ſo confidently and peremptorily deliver your Opinions, and give Laws to me and all mankind, and even to God himſelf.

* Ch. 13. 2. † Heb. heart. † Heb. I fall not lower than you. † Heb. with whom are not ſuch as thoſe?

3. But * I have an † underſtanding c as well as ye, † I am not inferiour to you d: yea, † who knoweth not ſuch things as theſe e?

e Heb. an heart; which is oft put for the understanding; as Job 34. 34. Jer. 5. 21. Acts 8 22. i. e. God hath given me also the knowledge and ability to judge of these matters. d In these things; which he speaketh, not in a way of vain-glorious boasting, but for the just and necessary vindication, both of himself and of that cause of God, which for the matter and substance of it he maintained, as God himself attests, Job 42. 7. e The truth is, neither you nor I have any reason to be puffed up with our knowledge of these things: For the most foolish and barbarous Nations know, that God is Infinite in Wisdom, and Power, and Justice. But this is not the question between you and me.

* Chap. 16. 10. & 17. 6. & 21. 3. & 30. 1. * Prov. 14. 2.

4. * I am as one mocked of his neighbour f, who calleth upon God, and he answereth him g: * the just upright man is laughed to scorn h.

f Heb. I am a derision (the Infinitive being put for a Noun, as is usual both in the Hebrew and other Languages) to my Neighbour; i. e. to these three who have pretended and would be thought to be my Friends and Neighbours; whom therefore such carriage doth very ill become: Instead of supporting and comforting me, they make a sport and scorn of me. g This who belongs either, 1. to Job, who here declares his own practice in this case; when you mock me, I go to God with my Complaints and Prayers, and he hears me, though you will not. But this seems not to agree either with the Context, or with other passages of Job; in which he constantly complains, that God did not hear nor regard his prayers, nor pity and help him. Or, 2. to Job's Friends; and so this is either, 1. an aggravation of their Crime, that they should mock him who made a great profession of Religion, who used duly to call upon God, and to receive answers from him, and therefore should have carried themselves more piously and charitably, and compassionately towards their miserable Brother. Or, 2. as the reason of their mockage of Job, because God who neglected Job's prayers, heard theirs, and gave them those mercies for which they prayed; and therefore being themselves well and at ease, they were hard-hearted towards their poor afflicted Brother, as the manner of men is. This seems to suit well with the following Verse. Or, 3. as an Argument against their scorning or slighting of him; God hears you when you pray, therefore you should turn your mocks of me into prayers for me; and you should pity me, whom God doth not hear when I pray; and as God hears you, so you should hear and comfort me, when I pour out my Complaints to you. But these words may be brought in mimetically, as being some of their scoffing words: They say of me, Let him call upon God, and God will hear him: For so they had suggested to Job, Ch. 5. 8. & 8. 5, &c & 11. 13. But this, saith Job, I take for a piece of mockery, and insulting over my Miseries: For I know by sad experience, and they see the contrary, that though I call and cry again and again, yet God hath no regard to me. h i. e. I, who, notwithstanding all their hard censures and reproaches, must and dare still own it, That through God's grace I am a just and upright Man, and derided by them. This he repeats again because it was very grievous and burdensom to him.

5. He that is ready to slip with his feet i, is as a lamp despised k in the thought of him that is at ease l.

i i. e. The just man last mentioned who is upon the brink of the Pit or Grave, ready to fall into mischief, so as never to rise again in this World, which is my case, and the occasion of their scorn and contempt. k i. e. Like a Lamp or Torch, which whilst it shines clearly and in a dark Night is very useful and comfortable, but when it draws towards an end, and is nigh extinct, and in the light, is neglected and despised, as that which is unnecessary and troublesom, and offensive: So the same Man, who, when his Feet stand fast in a prosperous Condition, is magnified and adored by all: When his Feet slip or stumble, as the Phrase is, Psalm 94. 18. Jer. 13. 16. when he is in misery, is commonly forsaken and despised. l i. e. In the Opinion of a Man that lives in great ease and outward happiness; which generally makes persons to forget and despise those who are in affliction. But these words are a little otherwise rendred, and that agreeably to the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, He (which is easily understood out of verse 4. the just and upright Man) is as a Torch despised in the opinion or thought, (as this or the like words coming from the same Hebrew Root are used, Psalm 146. 4. Dan. 6. 3. Jon. 1. 6. Or because of the splendor? for so this Root and its Derivatives elsewhere signifie, as Cant. 5. 14. Jer. 5. 28. Ezek. 27. 19. And either of these significations agree well with the place. Or compared with the splendor, or greater luster and glory) of him that lives in tranquillity; he, (i. e. the just man) is (or, because he is: for this may be the reason of the contempt) ready to slip with his foot; i. e. ready to perish.

* Ch. 21. 7. Psal. 37. 1. 35. & 92. 7. Jer. 12. 1. Mal. 3. 15.

6. * The tabernacles of robbers prosper m, and they that provoke God are secure n; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly o.

m Thy opinion delivered Chap. 11. 14, &c. is confuted by daily experience; which shews that the most wicked and injurious, and impudent Oppressors, Tyrants and Robbers, are so far from meeting with those Disappointments and Miseries, wherewith thou didst threaten them, that they commonly succeed in their cursed Enterprizes, and flourish in Wealth and Glory, and fill their Houses with the Goods of others which they violently took away; whereof the Chaldæans and Sabæans, ch. 1. 15, 17. are a present and pregnant Evidence. n They whose common practice it is to despise and provoke God, are confident and secure, live without danger or fear. o So far is God from crushing such persons, that he seems to favour them with wonderful success, and by his special and more than common Providence, puts into their hands the opportunities which they seek, and the persons and goods of other more righteous Men which they lie in wait for.

7. But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee p; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee.

p To wit, objectively; i. e. If thou observest the Beasts and their Properties and Actions, and Events, from them thou mayst, learn this Lesson: What Lesson? I answer, Either, 1. that which was last mentioned, v. 5. God's Providence doth order things in the like manner among the very Beasts, and Fowls, and Fishes; of which the most ravenous and mischievous fare the best, whilst those which are more harmless, and serviceable, and beneficial to men, meet with the hardest usage. Or, 2. That which Zophar had uttered with so much pomp and gravity, Chap. 11. 7, 8, 9. concerning God's Infinite Wisdom, which, saith Job, thou needest not go into Heaven or Hell to know, but thou mayst learn it even from the Beasts, &c.

8. Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee, and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9. Who knoweth not in all these q, that the hand of the LORD hath wrought this r?

q Or, by all these Brute-creatures. r That God by his power and wisdom hath created and ordered all this which is in them, or is done by and among them.

* Num. 16. 22. ‖ Or, life. † Heb. all flesh of man.

10. * In whose hand s is the ‖ soul t of every living thing u, and the breath x of † all mankind.

s i. e At whose absolute disposal it is to give it, or take it away when and how it seemeth good to him. t The life, or the Soul the Principle of Life. u i. e. Of all unreasonable Creatures, of which he spoke v. 7. opposed to man in the last words. x Or, the spirit, as that word is commonly used; i. e. the Immortal Soul, which is no less a Creature, and in Gods power to dispose of it, than the Animal Soul of unreasonable Creatures.

* Chap. 34. 3. † Heb. palat. Chap. 6. 30.

11. * Doth not the ear try words? and the † mouth taste his meat y?

y As the Mouth tasteth and thereby judgeth of Meats, and as it liketh or disliketh, so it receiveth or rejecteth what is put into it; so it is the Office of the Ear, or rather of the Mind, which hears and receives the Opinions and Discourses of others by the Ear, not rashly to approve or condemn every thing which it hears, but diligently and thoroughly to search and try whether it be true, and so to be embraced; or false, and to be rejected. Interpreters are much puzzled about the connexion and design of these words: But they seem to be either, 1. An Apology for himself, why he did not comply with their Opinion and Arguments, because they did not suit with his Ear or Mind; and though he had considered and tried them, he could not discern any weight in them. Or rather, 2. a Reproof to his Friends, that they did so hastily condemn his Person and his Doctrine without a strict and serious enquiry, Or, 3. a Preface to his following Discourse; whereby he invites them to hear and judge of his Words and Arguments more candidly and impartially; and not to scorn all that he said because of his present poverty and misery, as Men at ease use to do; nor to cast away the good for any mixture of bad with it; but calmly to weigh and debate things both within and among themselves and with him, that they and he too might all agree in disallowing whatsoever should appear to be false, and owning of every truth.

12. With the ancient is Wisdom, and in length of days Understanding z.

z These words contain a concession of what Bildad had said, ch. 8. 8, 9. and a joyning with him in that appeal; but withal, an intimation, that this Wisdom was but finite, and imperfect, and liable to many mistakes; and indeed meer Ignorance and Folly, if compared with the divine Wisdom, of which he speaks in the next and following Verses. And therefore that antiquity which they pretended for their Opinion, ought not to be received against the Oracles or Truths of the eternal and most wise God.

‖ That is, with God. Chap. 36. 5.

13. ‖ With him a is Wisdom b and strength, he hath Counsel and Understanding c.

a i. e. With God; the Relative being put for the Antecedent, which is easily and necessarily understood out of the scope of the place, and all the following Verses. b Perfect Wisdom is only in him, and all Wisdom in the World cometh from him, who giveth to old or young as it pleaseth him: The ancient are not wise without his Gift and Grace, and with that a younger Man may be wiser than the Ancients, as David was, Psal. 119. 100. c Counsel, i. e. Practical Wisdom to guide all the Affairs of the World, and Understanding, or a speculative knowledge of all persons and things.

16. With him is ſtrength and Wiſdom i: the deceived and the deceiver are his k.

i He doth the things here mentioned in the foregoing and ſucceeding Verſes, and that both powerfully, ſo as no Creature can reſiſt and hinder him; and wiſely, ſo as none can prevent and overreach him. The ſame thing he had ſaid before, v. 13. but he repeats it here to prepare the way for the following events, which are eminent Inſtances, both of his Power and Wiſdom. ki. e. From or by him, and wholly ſubject to his diſpoſal. That one Man deceiveth another, and that the other is deceived by him, either in Divine, or Civil and Worldly things, (which ſeem to be principally intended here by comparing the following Verſes;) this is from God, and by the conduct of his wiſe and powerful Providence. God giveth to the deceiver more Wit, and Knowledge, and Art, and withal opportunity and all favourable Circumſtances for his deceit. He alſo gives leſs Underſtanding to the deceived, and withdraws from him either wholly, or in part, that common light of diſcretion, which is his free Gift, and he may juſtly give, or take away as he pleaſeth, and leaves him to his own Ignorance and Errour, pride and Self-conceit, and to all thoſe Prejudices, Paſſions, and Luſts, which commonly corrupt mens Minds, and to the Power and Crafts of Satan, that grand deceiver. He governs the Deceiver, and ſets bounds to his Deceits, to whom, and when, and how far they ſhall extend, as is manifeſt from Deut. 13. 1. 1 King. 22. 20. Iſa. 19. 14. Ezek. 14. 9. Matth. 24. 24. 2 Theſ. 2. 11. Rev. 20. 3, 8. He alſo over-rules, all this to his own Glory, and the accompliſhment of his righteous Deſigns of trying the good; and puniſhing wicked men, by giving them up to believe Lies. Yet God is not the cauſe or Author of any error or ſin, but only the wiſe and holy Governour and Diſpoſer of it.

17. He leadeth Counſellors away ſpoiled l, and maketh the Judges Fools m.

l The wiſe Counſellors or Stateſmen, by whom the affairs of Kings and Kingdoms are ordered, he leadeth away as Captives in triumph, being ſpoiled either of that Wiſdom which they had, or ſeemed or pretended to have; or of that Power and dignity which they had enjoyed. m Partly by diſcovering their Folly; and partly by infatuating their Minds and turning their own Counſels to their ruine: Of which ſee 2 Sam. 15. 31. & 17. 14, 23. Iſa. 19. 11. 1 Cor. 1. 19.

18. He looſeth the Bond of Kings n, and girdeth their Loins with a Girdle o.

n Either 1. Paſſively, whereby they are bound. He freeth them from Priſon or reſtraint. Or rather, 2. Actively, that wherewith they bind their Subjects to Obedience, to wit, their Power and Authority, and that Majeſty which God ſtamps upon Kings, to keep their People in awe: All which God can, and oft doth take away from them, and freeth the People from their bonds, when it pleaſeth him: Of which all Hiſtories give Inſtances. See Dan. 2. 21. o Either, 1. With a Girdle of Dignity and Glory, which was put upon the Loins of Men in great Honour and Authority, as Iſa. 11. 5 and 22. 21. Jer. 13. 1, 2. So this Member of the Verſe is oppoſite to the former, and the ſenſe of the whole is, he either caſteth down Kings or raiſeth them up, as he pleaſeth. But the Scripture no where mentions this Girdle as one of the Ornaments of Kings. Or rather, 2. With a ſervile Girdle: For ſeeing all, both the foregoing and ſucceeding paſſages do evidently note acts of Judgment or puniſhments, inflicted upon them, it ſeems improper to underſtand this alone of an act of Gods favour to them. So the ſenſe is, He reduceth them into a mean and ſervile condition; which is thus expreſſed becauſe Servants did uſe to gird up their Garments (which after the manner of thoſe parts and times were looſe and long) that they might be fitter for attendance upon their Maſters; of which ſee Luk. 12. 37. & 17. 8. And ſo this is an amplification of the former ſentence. He not only depoſeth them from their Thrones, but brings them into Bondage and Slavery.

19. He leadeth Princes p away ſpoiled, and overthroweth the mighty.

p So this word, which uſually ſignifies Prieſts, is oft uſed, as Gen. 41. 45. & 47. 22, 26. Exod. 2. 16. 2 Sam. 8. 18. Compared with 1 Chron. 18. 17.

20. * He removeth away † the Speech q of the truſty r, and taketh away the Underſtanding of the aged.

q Either, 1. By taking away or reſtraining the Gift of utterance from them that they ſhould not be able to expreſs their thoughts with ſuch clearneſs and Power, as they uſed to do; which God oft doth to wiſe and eloquent men. Or, 2. By bringing them into ſuch ſtraits and troubles that they know not what to ſay or adviſe. Or, 3. By taking away their Underſtanding which ſhould ſuggeſt and direct their Speech, as it here follows. Or, 4. By permitting them to betray their truſt, and either not to ſpeak when they ſhould, nor to ſpeak otherwiſe than they ſhould, and to uſe their Wit and Rhetorick, not to direct, but to deceive, and ſo deſtroy a Prince. r i. e. Of thoſe wiſe and eloquent Counſellors, that were, and for their great abilities might be truſted by the greateſt Princes with all their affairs.

21. *He poureth contempt upon Princes s, and ‖ weakneth t the ſtrength of the Mighty. *Pſa. 107. 40. Dan. 2. 21. ‖ Or, looſeth the girdle of the ſtrong.

si. e. He makes them contemptible to their Subjects and others. t Heb. He looſeth the Girdle. Which Phraſe ſignifies weakneſs, as Ea. 5. 27. as the girding of the Girdle notes ſtrength and Power, as Iſa. 22. 21. & 45. 5. Both theſe Phraſes being taken from the quality of their Garments which being looſe and long, did diſenable a Man for Travel or Work.

22. He * diſcovereth deep things out of Darkneſs u, and bringeth out to light the ſhadow of death. * Chap. 28. 3. Dan. 2. 22. Mat. 10. 26. 1 Cor. 4. 5.

u i. e. The moſt ſecret and crafty Counſels of Princes, which are contrived and carried on in the dark.

23. * He encreaſeth the Nations, and deſtroyeth them x: he enlargeth the Nations y and † ſtraitneth them again z. * Pſa. 107. 38. † Heb. leadeth it.

x What hitherto he ſaid of Princes, he now applies to Nations and People, whom God doth either increaſe or diminiſh, as he pleaſeth. y He multiplies them ſo that they are forced to ſend forth Colonies into other Lands. z Or, leadeth them in: or, bringeth them back into their own Land, and confineth them there.

24. He taketh away the Heart a of the † chief b of the People of the Earth, and * cauſeth them to wander in a Wilderneſs where there is no way c. † Heb. Heads. * Pſa. 107. 40.

a Which ſignifies either, 1. Their Courage, as Pſal 76. 12. or rather, 2. Their Wiſdom and Counſel, as Job 5. 13. Ia. 3. 4. as the following words ſhew. b Either for place and Power: or for Wiſdom and Conduct. ci. e. Fills them with confuſion, and uncertainty, and perplexity of mind, ſo that they know not how to govern themſelves or their People.

25. They grope d in the dark without light e, and he maketh them to † ſtagger like a drunken man f. † Heb. wander.

d Like men that cannot ſee their way. e Two Phraſes expreſſing the ſame thing, emphatically to expreſs their profound darkneſs. f Who reels hither and thither without any certainty. So they ſometimes take one courſe and ſometimes another, as reſolving to try all experiments, and indeed not knowing what to do.

CHAP. XIII.

1. LO, mine Eye hath ſeen all this, mine Ear hath heard and underſtood it a.

a All this which either you or I have diſcourſed concerning the infinite Power and Wiſdom of God, I know, both by ſeeing it, i. e. by my own Obſervation and Experience, and by hearing it from my Anceſtors; ſo that I did not need your tedious and impertinent diſcourſes concerning thoſe matters.

2. * What ye know, the ſame do I know alſo: I am not inferiour unto you. * Chap. 12. 3.

3. * Surely I would ſpeak to the Almighty b, and I deſire to reaſon with God. * Chap. 23. 3.

b According to thy Wiſh, Ch. 11. 5. I had rather debate the matter with God than with you. I am not afraid of preſenting my Perſon and Cauſe before him, who is a Witneſs of my Integrity, and would not deal ſo unmercifully with me as you do.

4. But ye are forgers of Lies c, * ye are all Phyſicians of no value d. * Chap. 6. 21. & 16. 2.

c i. e. Authors of Falſe Doctrine, to wit, that great afflictions are peculiar to Hypocrites and wicked Men. d Unfaithful and unſkilful, preſcribing bad Remedies, and miſapplying good ones.

5. O that ye would altogether hold your peace, and it ſhould be your Wiſdom e.

e For then your Ignorance and Folly had been concealed, which is now manifeſt. Compare Prov. 17. 28.

6. Hear f now my reaſoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my Lips g.

fi. e. Attend to it, and conſider it more ſeriouſly than you have done. g i. e. To the arguments which I ſhall produce.

7. * Will ye ſpeak wickedly for God h? And talk deceitfully for him? * Chap. 17. 5. & 32. 21. & 36. 4.

h Will you utter falſhoods upon pretence of pleaſing God, or of maintaining Gods Honour or Juſtice? Doth he need ſuch defences?

8. Will ye accept his Perſon i? Will ye contend k for God l?

i Not judging according to the right of the Cauſe, but the quality of the Perſon, as corrupt Judges do. k i. e. Wrangle and quarrel with me, and cavil at my Speeches, and pervert my meaning.

meaning. l i. e. That you may gratifie him, or defend his Rights?

9. Is it good m that he ſhould ſearch you out n? or as one mocketh another, do ye ſo mock him o?

m Will it be to your Credit and Comfort? n i. e. Narrowly examine your Hearts and diſcourſes, whether you have uttered Truth or Falſhood, and whether your Speeches proceed from true Zeal for God, or from your own Prejudices and Paſſions, and from a deſire to curry Favour with him. To wit, by covering your uncharitableneſs and corrupt affections with pretences of Piety, as if God could not diſcern your Artifices; or by pleading his Cauſe with weak and fooliſh Arguments, which is a kind of Mockery to him, and an Injury to his Cauſe; or by ſeeking to flatter him with falſe Praiſes as if he did diſtribute the things of this World with exact Juſtice, proſpering only the good, and ſeverely afflicting none but wicked Men.

10. He will ſurely reprove you p, if ye do ſecretly q accept Perſons.

p i. e. Puniſh you, as this word is oft uſed, as hath been once and again obſerved. q Though it be concealed in your own Breaſts, and no Eye ſee it, yea though it be ſo cloſe that your own Minds and Conſciences, through ignorance, or inadvertency, or ſlothfulneſs, do not perceive it, yet he, who is greater than your Conſciences, ſees and knows it.

11. Shall not his Excellency r make you afraid s? and his dread fall upon you?

r His infinite Wiſdom which ſees your ſecret Falſhoods, and his Juſtice and Power, which can and will puniſh you for it. s Of ſpeaking raſhly or falſly of his ways and Counſels.

12. Your remembrances t are like unto aſhes, your Bodies u to Bodies of Clay.

t Either, 1. Actively, i. e. your Memorials, or your Diſcourſes and arguments by which you deſign to bring things to my remembrance. So he might poſſibly allude to that paſſage, Ch. 4. 7 Remember I pray thee, &c. That and all your other Memento's are like unto aſhes, i. e. contemptible and unprofitable: Heb. are Parables, or Speeches of duſt, or aſhes. Or, 2. Paſſively, all that which is moſt excellent and memorable in you; your Wealth, and Dignity, and Wit, and Reputation, or whatſoever it is for which you expect or deſire to be remembred, it is all but poor deſpicable duſt and aſhes: And therefore you have juſt reaſon to abhor your ſelves and to dread the Divine Majeſty, as I now adviſed you. u Though they be not full of ſores and boils as mine is, yet they are but duſt, and to duſt they ſhall return as well as mine. Heb. Your backs, which, being the ſtrongeſt part of the Body, is put for the whole Body. Or, Your Eminencies, or Excellencies, as this word moſt properly ſignifies, as Hebricians obſerve, ſo it anſwers to their memorables. All thoſe things wherein you do, or think that you do excel others, are but like Eminencies, or Lumps, or Heaps of Clay, vain and uſeleſs things, if compared with the Excellencies of God. Or, Your heights, i. e. your lofty Diſcourſes are like Clay, i. e. without ſolidity and ſtrength.

13. † Hold your peace x, let me alone that I may ſpeak y, and let come on me what will z.

x Do not now interrupt me in my Diſcourſe; which peradventure he obſerved by their geſtures ſome of them were now attempting. y That I may freely utter my whole mind. z For the event of my Diſcourſe with God, wherewith you threaten me, I am willing to ſubmit my ſelf to him, to do with me as he pleaſeth: For I know he will not judge ſo ſeverely and partially of me, or my words, as you do, but will accept what is good, and paſs by any circumſtantial defects in my Perſon or Speech, as knowing that I ſpeak from an upright Heart.

14. Wherefore do I take my Fleſh in my Teeth, and put my Life in mine hand? (z)

(z) According to this Tranſlation the ſenſe ſeems to be this, If you ſpeak truth and God puniſheth none but wicked Men, why doth he bring me (whom he knows to be no Hypocrite, as you ſlander me) to that extremity of Pain and miſery, that I am almoſt conſtrained to tear and eat my own fleſh (which is mentioned as the Character of Men in great anguiſh, Iſa. 9. 20. & 49. 26.) and am ready to lay violent hands upon my ſelf? Is it ſo great a crime to complain in this caſe, or at leaſt to enquire into the cauſe of this unwonted ſeverity: But this ſenſe ſeems not well to ſuit either with the foregoing or following Verſes, but to come in abruptly. Others therefore render the words thus, Why ſhould I take my fleſh in my Teeth, &c. And ſo this may be, either, 1. A Reaſon of his ardent deſire of Liberty of Speech, becauſe he could hold his Tongue no longer, but muſt needs tear himſelf to pieces, if he had not ſome vent for his grief. So this agrees well both with v. 13. where he deſired this freedom, and with v. 19. where the ſame ſenſe is expreſſed in plainer words. Or, 2. An antidote againſt deſpair. I perceive, O my Friends, by your Diſcourſes, that you intend to drive me to utter Deſpair, if I do not turn to God in another manner than yet I have done. Which if it were true, I ſhould certainly tear my fleſh, and violently take away my own Life: But I ſee no reaſon why I ſhould give way to any ſuch deſpair or deſperate Actions. And this alſo hath a good dependance upon the foregoing words, Let come on me what will. But I have no reaſon to fear ſuch Conſequences as you ſuggeſt, nor to deſpair of a merciful Audience and Relief from God; and a good connexion with thoſe which follow, v. 15. where he declares his Hope and Confidence in God. The Phraſe of having ones Life in his hand, notes a condition extremely dangerous, and almoſt deſperate, as Judg. 12. 3. 1 Sam. 19. 5. & 28. 21. Pſal. 119. 109.

15. * Though he ſlay me a, yet I will truſt in him b: but c I will † maintain mine own ways d before him e.

* Pſa. 23. 4. Prov. 14. 32.

a Though God ſhould yet more and more encreaſe my torments, ſo that I could bear them no longer, but ſhould perceive my ſelf to be at the point of Death, and without all hopes of Recovery in this World. b Or, ſhall I not truſt in him? Should I deſpair? No, I will not. I know he is a juſt, and a faithful, and merciful God, and he knows that mine Heart is upright before him, and that I am no Hypocrite. c Though I will truſt in him, yet I will humbly poſtulate the matter with him. d I will argue, or prove, or demonſtrate my ways, i. e. I will make a full free Confeſſion of the whole courſe of my Life, and I will boldly, though ſubmiſſively, aſſert mine own Integrity, which he alſo will, I doubt not, acknowledge. And what I have done amiſs I will as freely confeſs, and make Supplication to my judge for the pardon of it. e Before his Tribunal: for I deſire no other Judge but him.

16. He alſo ſhall be, † my Salvation f: for g an Hypocrite ſhall not come before him.

f I reſt aſſured that he will ſave me out of theſe miſeries ſooner or later, one way or other, if not with a temporal, yet with an eternal Salvation after Death; of which he ſpeaks, Ch. 19. 25, &c. g Or, but, as this particle commonly ſignifies; for this Clauſe is put by way of oppoſition to the former, and the ſenſe is, But if I were an Hypocrite as you alledge, I durſt not preſent my ſelf before him to plead my Cauſe with him, as now I deſire to do, nor could I hope for any Salvation from, or with, him in Heaven.

17. Hear diligently my Speech h, and my declaration i with your Ears.

h This he deſired before, v. 6. and now repeated, either becauſe they manifeſted ſome neglect or diſlike of his Speech, and ſome deſire to interrupt him: Or, becauſe he now comes more cloſely to his buſineſs, the foregoing Verſes being moſtly in way of Preface to it. i i. e. The words whereby I declare my Mind.

18. Behold now, I have ordered my † Cauſe k; I know that I ſhall be juſtified l.

k To wit, within my ſelf. I have ſeriouſly and ſincerely conſidered the ſtate of my caſe, and what can be ſaid either for me, or againſt me, and am ready to plead my Cauſe. l i. e. Acquitted by God from that Hypocriſie and Wickedneſs wherewith you charge me, and declared a righteous and innocent perſon, humane Infirmities excepted.

19. Who is he that will plead with me m? for now if I hold my Tongue, I ſhall give up the Ghoſt n.

m Where is the Man that will do it? Nay, Oh that God would do it: which here he implies, and preſently expreſſeth. n My grief for Gods heavy Hand, and for your bitter Reproaches would break my Heart, if I ſhould not give it vent.

20. Only do not Two things unto me o: then will I not hide my ſelf from thee p.

o Which two he expreſſeth, v. 21. p Then ſhall I boldly preſent my ſelf and Cauſe before thee.

21. * Withdraw thine hand far from me q: and let not thy dread make me afraid r.

* Ch. 9. 34, 35. & 33. 7.

q i. e. Suſpend my Torments during the time of my pleading with thee, that my Mind may be at liberty. r Do not preſent thy ſelf to me in terrible Majeſty, neither deal with me in rigorous Juſtice, but hear me meekly, as one Man heareth another, and plead with me upon thoſe gracious Terms, wherewith thou uſeſt to deal with Mankind.

22. Then call thou, and I will anſwer: or let me ſpeak, and anſwer thou me s.

s Then chuſe thy own Method. Either do thou charge me with Hypocriſie, or more than common Guilt, and I will defend my ſelf: Or I will argue with thee concerning thy extraordinary ſeverity towards me, and do thou ſhew me the reaſons of it. This propoſal favoured of too great ſelf-confidence, and of Irreverence towards God; for which, and ſuch like Speeches, he is reproved by God, Ch. 38. 2, 3. & 40. 2.

23. How many are mine Iniquities and ſins t? Make me to know my tranſgreſſion and my Sin u.

t That I am a ſinner I confeſs; but that I am guilty of ſo many or ſuch heinous Crimes as my Friends ſuppoſe, I utterly deny; and if I be ſo, do thou O, Lord, diſcover it to my ſhame. u If peradventure my heart deceive me therein; for I am not conſcious to my ſelf of any enormous crime.

24. Wherefore hideſt thou thy Face x, and * holdeſt me for thine Enemy y?

* Deut. 32. 20. Ruth. 1, 21. Ch. 16. 9. & 19. 11. & 33. 10.

x i. e. Withdraweſt thy favour and help which thou didſt uſe to afford me; as this Phraſe is commonly uſed, as Deut. 31. 17. Pſal.

13. 1. & 102. 2, &c. y i. e. Dealeſt as harſhly with me, as if I were thy profeſſed Enemy.

*Iſa. 42. 3. 25. * Wilt thou break a Leaf driven to and fro? And wilt thou purſue the dry ſtubble z?

z Doth it become thy infinite and excellent Majeſty to uſe all thy might to cruſh ſuch a poor, impotent, frail Creature as I am, that can no more reſiſt thy Power, than a Leaf, or a little looſe and dry ſtraw can reſiſt the fury of the Wind or Fire.

*Pſa. 25. 7. 26. For thou writeſt a bitter things b againſt me, and * makeſt me to poſſeſs the Iniquities of my Youth c.

a i. e. Thou appointeſt or inflicteſt. A Metaphor from Princes or Judges, who anciently uſed to write their Sentences or Decrees, concerning Perſons, or Cauſes, brought before them. See Pſal. 149. 9. Jer. 22. 30. Joh. 19. 22. b i. e. A terrible Sentence, or moſt grievous puniſhments. c Thou doſt now at once bring upon me the puniſhment of all my ſins, not excepting thoſe of my Youth, which, becauſe of the Folly and weakneſs of that Age, are uſually excuſed or winked at, or, at leaſt, but gently puniſhed.

*Chap. 33. 11. †Heb. obſerveſt. †Heb. roots. 27. * Thou putteſt my Feet alſo in the ſtocks d, and †looketſt narrowly unto all my Paths e; thou ſetteſt a Print upon the † Heels of my Feet f.

d Thou encompaſſeſt me with thy Judgments, that I may have no way or poſſibility to eſcape. e When thou haſt me faſt in Priſon, thou makeſt a ſtrict and diligent ſearch into all the actions of my life, that thou maiſt find matter to condemn me. f i. e. Thou followeſt me cloſe at the Heels, either to obſerve my Actions, or to purſue me with thy Judgments, ſo that thou doſt oft tread upon my Heels, and leave the prints of thy Footſteps upon them.

28. And he g, as a rotten thing, conſumeth as a Garment that is Moth-eaten.

g Either 1. Man, or Job, ſuppoſed to be Gods Adverſary in this conteſt. So he ſpeaks of himſelf in the third Perſon, as is uſual in this and other ſacred Books. So the Senſe is, He, i. e. this poor frail Creature, this Carkaſs or Body of mine; which poſſibly he pointed at with his Finger, conſumeth or pineth away, &c. So he mentions here the effect of Gods ſevere proceedings againſt him, to wit, his Conſumption, and utter Deſtruction, which was making haſt towards him. Or, 2. God, of whom he hitherto ſpoke in the ſecond Perſon, and now in the third Perſon, ſuch changes of perſons being very frequent in poetical Writings, ſuch as this is. So he continueth the former Diſcourſe, and as before he mentioned Gods ſevere Enquiry into his ways, and Sentence againſt him, ſo here he deſcribes the Conſequence and dreadful Execution of it upon him: He i. e. God, conſumeth (for the Verb is Active) me as rottenneſs conſumeth that in which it is, or as a rotten thing is conſumed, and as a Moth which eateth a Garment.

CHAP. XIV.

†Heb. ſhort of days. *Eccleſ. 2. 23. 1. MAn that is born of a Woman a, is † of few days b, and * full of trouble c.

a This expreſſion is here uſed either, 1. To intimate the cauſe of Mans Miſery, that he was born of Woman, a weak Creature, 1 Pet. 3. 7. and withal corrupt and ſinful, and of that Sex by which ſin and all calamity was brought into the World. See Ch. 15. 14. & Gen. 3. 17. 1 Tim. 2. 13, 14. Or, 2. To note the Univerſality of the thing, Every Man, every Mothers Son, as we uſe to ſpeak. Mens Fathers are oft times unknown and uncertain, but their Mothers are always definite and certain. One man was then to be born, and afterwards was born without an earthly Father, to wit, our Lord and Saviour Chriſt; but no Man was ever born without a Mother. b A ſhort liv'd Creature in himſelf, and therefore needs no violent hand to cut him off, becauſe he withereth ſo ſoon of his own accord. c And therefore a fitter Object for divine Compaſſion, than for his fury or ſeverity. He chiefly intendeth himſelf, but he expreſſeth it thus generally, partly to relieve himſelf, with the thoughts of the common Calamities of Mankind; and partly to move God with the conſideration of the frailty and miſery of humane Nature, and conſequently of his condition.

*Chap. 8. 9. Pſ. 90. 5, 6. & 102. 11. & 103. 15. & 144. 4. Iſa. 40. 6. Jam. 1. 10, 11. 1 Pet. 1. 24. 2. * He cometh forth d like a flower e, and is cut down: he fleeth alſo as a ſhadow f, and continueth not.

d Out of his Mothers Womb, Ch. 1. 21. e Which quickly groweth up and maketh a fair ſhew, but ſoon withereth, or is cut down. f Which being made by the Sun, follows its motions, and is in perpetual variation until at laſt it quite vaniſh and diſappear.

3. And doſt thou open thine Eyes upon ſuch an one g, and bringeſt me into judgment with thee h?

g Either, 1. To take thought or care about him. Or rather, 2. To obſerve all his ways, that thou maiſt find cauſe of Puniſhment. He is not a fit match for thee. It is below thee to contend with him, and to uſe thy infinite Wiſdom and Power to cruſh him. This ſeems beſt to ſuit with the ſcope and context. h i. e. Pleadeſt with me by thy Judgments, and thereby, in a manner, forceſt me to plead with thee, without granting me thoſe Two neceſſary and favourable conditions, expreſſed Ch. 13. 20, 21.

4 † Who * can bring a clean thing out of an unclean i? Not one k.

†Heb. Who will give. * Gen. 5. 3. Pſal. 51. 5. Joh. 3. 6. Rom. 5. 12. Epheſ. 2. 3.

i I do not ſay, I am clean, as Zophar pretendeth, Ch. 11. 4. but confeſs that I am a very unclean Creature, and therefore liable to thy Juſtice, if thou wilt deal rigorouſly with me: but remember that this is not my peculiar caſe, but the common lot of every Man, who, coming from ſinful Parents, and being infected with original Corruption, muſt unavoidably be unclean. Why then loeſt thou inflict ſuch peculiar and extraordinary Judgments upon me, for that which is common to all men? And although my original Corruption do not excuſe my actual Sins; yet I hope it may procure ſome mitigation to my puniſhments, and move thy divine Pity, which oft ſheweth it ſelf upon ſuch occaſions. See Gen. 8. 21. k i. e. No man can cleanſe himſelf, or any other from all ſin. See 1 Kin. 46. Pſal. 14. 3. Eccleſ. 7. 21 This is the Prerogative of thy Grace, which therefore I humbly implore of thee.

5. Seeing his days l are determined m, the number of his Months are † with thee n, thou haſt appointed his bounds that he cannot paſs o.

l The days, or (as it follows) months of his Life. m Are by thy Sentence and Decree limited to a certain period. n i. e. Exactly known to thee. Or, in thy power and diſpoſal. o Thou haſt appointed a certain end of his days beyond which he cannot prolong his Life. And therefore let this ſhort Life, and unavoidable Death ſuffice for mans puniſhment, and do not add further and ſorer Calamities.

*Ch. 7. 16. 19. †Heb. ceaſe. *Chap. 7. 1. 6. * Turn from him p that he may † reſt q, till he ſhall accompliſh as * an hireling his day r.

p Withdraw thine afflicting Hand from him. q That he may have ſome preſent comfort and eaſe. Or, and let it ceaſe, to wit, the affliction, which is ſufficiently implied. Others, and let him ceaſe, to wit, to Live, i. e. Take away my life. But that ſeems not to agree with the following clauſe of this Verſe, nor with the ſucceeding Verſes. r Give him ſome reſpite, till he finiſh his courſe and come to the period of his Life, which thou haſt allotted to him, as a Man appoints a ſet time to a mercenary ſervant.

7. For there is hope of a Tree, if it be cut down, that it will ſprout again s, and that the tender branch thereof will not ceaſe.

s But Man though a far nobler Creature, is in a much worſe condition, and when once he loſeth this preſent and Worldly Life, he never recovers it; therefore ſhew ſome pity to him, and give him ſome Comfort whileſt he lives.

8. Though the root thereof wax old t in the Earth, and the ſtock thereof die u in the † ground:

t Being to whither and decay. u To wit, in outward appearance.

9. Yet through the ſcent of Water x it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a Plant y.

x i. e. By means of Water. Scent or Smell is figuratively aſcribed to a Tree. y Like a Tree newly planted.

†Heb. it is wedded or cut off. 10. But Man dieth, and † waſteth away z: yea, Man giveth up the Ghoſt, and where is he a?

z His body by degrees rotting away. Or, and is cut off, as this word is uſed, Exod. 17. 13. Iſa. 14. 12. a i. e. He is no where, or, he is not, to wit, in this World, as that Phraſe is commonly uſed. See Job 3. 16. & 7. 8, 21.

11. As the Waters fail from the Sea, and the flood decayeth, and drieth up b:

b This may be underſtood, either, 1. By way of oppoſition, The Waters go, or flow out of the Sea, and return thither again, Eccleſ. 1. 7. and a Lake, or River ſometimes decayeth, and drieth up; but afterwards is recruited and repleniſhed. But man lieth, &c. as it follows. Or, 2. By way of reſemblance, As Waters, i. e. ſome portion of Waters, fail from the Sea, being either exhaled or drawn up by the Sun, or received and ſunk into the dry and thirſty Earth, or overflowing its Banks; and as the Flood, or a River, or a Pond, (for the word ſignifies any conſiderable confluence of Waters) in a great drought decayeth, and is dried up: in both which caſes the ſelf ſame Waters never return to their former places. So it is with man. Or thus, as when the Waters fail from the Sea, i. e. when the Sea forſakes the place into which it uſed to flow, the River which was fed by it, Eccleſ. 1. 7. decayeth and drieth up without all hopes of Recovery. So man, when once the Fountain of his radical moiſture is dried up, dies, and never revives again.

12. So Man lieth down c, and riſeth not d, till the Heavens be no more e, they ſhall not awake, nor be raiſed out of their Sleep.

c To wit, in his Bed, the Grave, or to ſleep the ſleep of Death, as this Phraſe is uſed, Gen. 46. 30. Deut. 31. 16. 2 Sam. 7. 12. 1 Kin. 1. 21. d To wit, to this Life: For he ſpeaks not here of the Life to come, nor of the Reſurrection of the Body after death by the divine Power; of his belief whereof he giveth ſufficient evidences in divers places. e i. e. Either, 1. Never; becauſe the Heavens, though they ſhall be changed in their Qualities, yet ſhall never ceaſe to be as to the Subſtance of them. And therefore everlaſting and unchangeable things are expreſſed by the duration of the Heavens; of which ſee Pſal. 72. 5, 7, 17. & 89. 30, 36, 37. Mat. 5. 18. & 24. 35. Or, 2. not until the time of the general Reſurrection, and the reſtitution of things, when theſe viſible Heavens shall pass away, and be no more, at least in the same form and manner as now they are: of which see Psal. 102. 26. Luk. 21. 33. 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10. Rev. 21. 1.

† Heb. Hell.

13. O that thou wouldest hide me in † the Grave f, that thou wouldst keep me secret g, until thy Wrath be past h, that thou wouldest appoint me a set time i, and remember me k.

f Either, 1. In some dark Vault under ground, such as good Men hide themselves in, in times of Persecution. Heb. 11. 38. Lord hide me in some hiding place from thy Wrath, and all the intolerable effects of it, which are upon me: for I cannot be hid from thee but by thee. Or, 2. In the Grave, properly so called. Though I know Life once lost is irrecoverable, yet I heartily desire Death rather than to continue in these Torments. And if the next words and wish seem to suppose the continuance of his Life, that is not strange: For he speaks like one almost distracted with his miseries, sometimes wishing one thing, sometimes another, and the quite contrary, as such persons use to do. And these Wishes may be understood disjunctively, I wish either that I were dead, or that God would give me Life free from these torments. Or the place may be understood thus; I could wish, if it were possible, that I might lie in the Grave for a time, till these storms be blown over, and then be restored to a comfortable Life. g In some secret and safe place, under the shadow of thy Wings and favour. that I may have some support and comfort from thee. h Whilst I am oppressed with such grievous and various Calamities, which he calls Gods Wrath, because they were or seemed to be, the effects of his Wrath. i To wit, to my sufferings, as thou hast done to my Life, v. 5. k i. e. Wherein thou wilst remember me, to wit, in mercy, or so as to deliver me: For it is well known that God is frequently said to forget those whom he suffers to continue in misery, and to remember those whom he delivers out of it.

14. If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of † my appointed time will I wait till my change come m.

l i. e. He shall not, namely in this World, as was said before. The affirmative question is equivalent to an absolute denial, as Gen. 18. 17. Psal. 56. 7. Jer. 5. 9. and every where. m Seeing Death puts an end to all mens hopes of any comfortable being here, because man once dead never returns to Life, I will therefore wait on God, and hope for his favour whilest I live, and it is possible to enjoy it, and will continue waiting from time to time, until my change come, i. e. either, 1. Death, the Great and last change, which is expressed by the Root of this word, Job 10. 17. Or, 2. The change of my condition for the better which you upon your terms encourage me to expect, and which I yet trust in God I shall enjoy; for this word properly signifies Vicissitudes or Changes in ones condition, and this seems to suit best with the following verse. And this Change, or a comfortable Life here Job so heartily wisheth, not only from that love of Life and Comfort which is naturally implanted in all Men, good and bad, and is not forbidden by God, which also was stronger in those Old Testament Saints when the discoveries of Gods Grace to sinners, and of eternal Life, were much darker than now they are; but also because this would be an effectual vindication of his own Integrity, and Good-name, and of the honour of Religion, both which did suffer some Eclipse from Job's extream Calamities as is evident from the discourses of his Friends.

* Chap. 40. 3.

15. Thou shalt * call, and I will answer thee n: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands o.

n I trust there is a time coming when thou wilt grant me the mercy which now thou denyest me, to wit, a favourable hearing, when thou wilt call to me to speak for my self and I shall answer thee; which I know will be to thy Satisfaction and my Comfort. Compare this with Chap. 13. 22. where the same words are used in this same Sense. Or, thou shalt call me out of the Grave of my Calamities, and I shall answer thee, and say, Here I am, raised out of the Pit in which I was buried by thy powerful and gracious Command. o i. e. To me who am thy Workmanship in divers respects, from whom thou now seemest to have an aversion and abhorrency, but I doubt not thou wilst have a desire, i. e. shew thy Affection or Good-will to me; or a desire to look upon me, and to deliver me. Nor is it strange that Job, who lately was upon the brink of despair, doth now breath out words of Hope, such Ebbings and Flowings being usual, both with Job elsewhere, as Ch. 13. 15, 16. and with David frequently in the Psalms, and with others of God's People.

* Psa. 139. 2, 3. Chap. 13. 27. Prov. 5. 21. Jer. 32. 19.

16. * For now p thou numbrest my steps q, dost thou not watch over my sin r?

p So this is a reason of his desire of Death, v. 13. Or rather, But now; for this seems to be added by way of opposition. I believe thou wilst pity and help me, but for the present it is far otherwise with me. q Thou makest a strict enquiry into all my Actions, that thou maist find out all mine Errours, and punish them. Compare Job 13. 27. & 31. 4. & 34. 21. Psal. 56. 6. r i. e. Dost thou not watch for my Halrings, or Miscarriages, as if thou wast glad of an occasion to punish me? Or, thou dost not delay the punishment of my sin: For the same Hebrew word signifies both sin, and its punishments.

17. My transgression is sealed up in a bag s, and thou sewest up mine iniquity t.

s As Writings or other choise things, that they may be safely kept, and all of them brought forth upon occasion, and not one of them forgotten or lost. Compare Deut. 32. 34. Job 37. 7. Hos. 13. 12. t i. e. Thou keepest all my sins in thy memory, and fastenest the guilt of them upon my Conscience. Or, thou addest to my sin, one sin to another, the follies of my youth, Job 13. 26. to those of my riper Years. Or, thou addest to my punishment, i. e. thou punishest me more than mine Iniquities deserve, all things considered. For this sinful thought seems sometimes to have risen in Job's Mind, as may be gathered from divers parts of this Book: which therefore Zophar decries, and disproves, Job. 11. 6.

18. And surely as the Mountain falling † cometh to nought u: and the Rock is moved out of his place:

u As when a great Mountain falls, either by an Earthquake or Inundation of Waters, or from any other cause, it moulders away like a fading Leaf, (as the Hebrew word signifies) and never recovers its former height and stability, and as the Rock when by the violence of Winds or Earthquake, &c. it is removed out of its place, and thrown down, is never readvanced. And as the waters by continual droppings, or violent and frequent assaults, wear away, or break the stones to pieces, so as they can never be made whole again: And as thou washest away, to wit, by a great and violent Inundation which thou sendest, the things which grow out of the dust of the Earth, to wit, Herbs, & Fruits, & Plants, which once washed away are irrecoverably lost, and, or so (as this particle is oft used, i. e. in like manner, to wit, irrecoverably,) thou destroyest the hope of Man; i. e. So when Man dies all hope of living again in this World is utterly lost: And this seems to be the plain meaning of these two Verses. And as before he declared the hopelessness of mans restauration from death to this animal life, by way of opposition to such things as did rise in a manner from death to live, v. 7. &c. so now he declares it by way of similitude or resemblance to such things as being once lost and gone, are past all hopes of recovery.

19. The Waters wear the Stones: thou † washest away the things which grow out of the Dust of the Earth, and thou destroyest the hope of Man.

20. Thou prevailest for ever against him x, and he passeth y: thou changest his Countenance z, and sendest him away a.

x When once thou takest away this life it is gone for ever: For he speaks not here of man's future and eternal life in another World. y i. e. He dieth or is about to die: Man's death is oft called a passage or a going; to intimate that it is not an annihilation, but only a translation of him into another place and state. z Either, 1. his Visage, which by death and its Harbingers, is quite transformed in colour and shape, as we see by daily experience. Or, 2. the face and state of his Affairs, as to worldly riches and pleasures, and honours, all which he leaves behind him. a To his long home by death.

21. His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not b; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

b Either, 1. is ignorant of all such events: Or, 2. is not concerned nor affected with them. A dead or dying man minds not these things.

22. But his flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn c.

c This is mans condition, he is miserable both when he dies, because he dies without hope of returning to life, as he had discoursed before; and (as he now adds) whilest he lives, whilest his flesh is upon him, and his soul within him; whilest the soul is cloathed with or united to the body, he feels sharp pain in his body, and bitter grief in his soul. Seeing therefore the state of Man upon earth is so vain and unhappy every way, Lord give me some comfort to sweeten my life, or take away my life from me.

CHAP. XV.

1. THen answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,

2. Should a wise Man a utter † vain knowledge b, and fill his belly c with the east-wind d!

a Such as thou seemest and pretendest to be. b i. e. Empty words without any sense or solidity in them. c i. e. Satisfie his own mind and Conscience, which being secret is compared to the Inwards of the Belly; as Chap. 32. 19. Prov. 20. 27. & 22. 18. d i. e. With Discourses which are not only flashy and unprofitable, and without any weight, but also boisterous and pernicious both to himself and others; as the East wind was in these parts, Gen. 41. 6. Exod. 10. 13. Hos. 12. 1.

3. Should he reason with unprofitable talk? or with speeches wherewith he can do no good e?

e Either to himself or others, but much hurt; which is implied by the contrary, as is usual.

4. Yea, † thou castest off fear f, and restrainest ‖ prayer g before God.

Heb. Thou makest void fear; i. e. the fear of God, as the word is oft used for the word of God; or Piety and Religion, which oft cometh under the name of fear. This may be understood, either, 1. of Job himself; that he cast off all Reverence to God by uttering such bold and reproachful expressions concerning God and his Providence. Or, 2. with respect to others; that by his insolent and unworthy speeches of and carriage towards God, and by those false and pernicious principles which he had laid down; as that God dealt with Men in way of absolute Soveraignty, not of Justice; and that he made no difference between good and bad in the course of his his Providence, but did equally proſper or afflict both of them: He did that which tended to the ſubverſion of the fear and worſhip of God. g As this Hebrew word ſignifies alſo, Pſalm 102. 1. Or, meditation or ſpeech; which well agrees to prayer which is accompanied with ſerious thoughts and expreſſions. The ſenſe is, either, 1. Inſtead of humble and fervent prayer to God, which thy Condition calleth for, thou breatheſt forth falſe and blaſphemous ſpeeches againſt him. Or, 2. Thou doſt by thy words and examples, and principles, as far as in thee lies, baniſh prayer out of the World, by making it uſeleſs and unprofitable to Men.

5. For thy mouth † uttereth thine iniquity h, and thou chooſeſt the tongue of the crafty i.

h i. e. Thy words diſcover the naughtineſs of thy heart, and juſtifie my charge againſt thee, that thou caſteſt off fear, &c. i Thou ſpeakeſt wickedly, but craftily: thou covereſt thy impious principles and paſſions with fair pretences of piety and reſpect to God, wherewith thou endeavoureſt to mock God, and deceive Men.

6. Thine own mouth condemneth thee k, and not I: yea, thine own lips teſtifie againſt thee.

k My condemnation of thee is grounded upon thine own words.

7. Art thou the firſt Man that was born l? or waſt thou made before the hills m?

l Haſt thou lived ever ſince the Creation of the World, and treaſured up the experiences of all ages in thy own breaſt, that thou ſpeakeſt ſo arrogantly and magiſterially, and with ſuch contempt of other Men? Art thou the moſt ancient and the wiſeſt of all mortal Men? Whom doſt thou make thy ſelf? m Before the earth was made and diſtinguiſhed into Mountains and Valleys.

* Rom. 11. 34.

8. * Haſt thou heard the ſecret of God n? and doſt thou reſtrain wiſdom to thy ſelf o?

n Hath God acquainted thee with all his ſecret Counſels whereby he governs the World, that thou doſt paſs ſo bold a cenſure upon all his Deſigns and Actions? o Art thou the only wiſe Man in the World, and we and all others but fools?

† Heb. with us, Chap. 10. 13.

9. What knoweſt thou that we know not p? what underſtandeſt thou, which is not † in us?

p He retorts upon Job his own Expreſſions. Chapter 12. 3. and 13. 2.

10. With us q are both the gray-headed, and very aged Men, much elder than thy father.

q i. e. Among us, either, 1. ſome of us, who ſeem to have been very ancient; from Chap. 32. 7. Or, 2. ſome others with whom we have converſed, and who are of our Opinion in this matter. And this they oppoſe to that paſſage of Job's, Ch. 12. 12.

11. Are the conſolations of God ſmall with thee r? is there any ſecret thing with thee s?

r Are thoſe Comforts, which we in the Name and according to the Mind, and by the Direction of God, have propounded to thee upon condition of thy true Repentance, Chap. 11. 13, 14, &c. ſmall and contemptible in thine eyes? s. Haſt thou any ſecret and peculiar ground or way of Comfort which is unknown to us and to all other Men except thy ſelf; for which, or in compariſon of which thou deſpiſeſt our Conſolations as mean and trivial? To pretend to this is vanity and impudence: And if thou haſt not this, to deſpiſe and reject our Comforts is horrible pride and ſtubbornneſs.

12. Why doth thine heart carry thee away t? and what do thine eyes wink at u, t Why doſt thou ſuffer thy ſelf to be tranſported by the pride and luſts of thine heart, to uſe ſuch unworthy and unbecoming Expreſſions both concerning us, and concerning God and his Providence? u i. e. what doeſt thou aim at? What benefit doeſt thou expect from ſuch words and carriages? So it is a Metaphor from Archers, who wink when they take their aim at a Mark. Or, why do thine eyes wink? i. e. Why doeſt thou look with ſuch an angry, ſupercilious, and diſdainful look, expreſſing both thy contempt of us, and thy rage againſt God? The eye is obſerved both by God and men, as the great Diſcoverer of their hearts; and winking with the eye, is a note of a malicious mind, Pſalm 35. 19. Prov. 6. 13. & 10. 10.

13. That x thou turneſt thy ſpirit y againſt God, and letteſt ſuch words go out of thy mouth?

x Or, for, or ſurely. y i. e. Either thy breath; or thy rage; or thy ſoul: for all theſe the ſpirit ſignifies. Hebr. thou makeſt thy ſpirit to return to, or to return again againſt that God from whom thou didſt receive it.

* 1 Kings 8. 46. 2 Chron. 6. 36. Chap. 14. 4. Pſal. 14. 3. Prov. 20. 9. Eccleſ. 7. 20. 1 John. 1. 8.

14. * What is Man z, that he ſhould be clean? and he which is born of a Woman a, that he ſhould be righteous b?

z Heb, frail, or ſick, or wretched man. His mean Original and corrupt Nature ſheweth him to be unclean. a From whom he derives Infirmity and Corruption, and Guilt, and the Curſe conſequent upon it. b To wit, in his own Eyes, as thou, O Job art.

* Chap. 4. 18.

15. * Behold, he putteth no truſt in his ſaints c: yea, the heavens d are not clean in his ſight.

c i. e. In his Angels, as appears, by comparing Chap. 4. 18. who are called his ſaints or holy ones, Deut. 33. 2. Pſalm 103. 20. Dan. 4. 13, 23. Mat. 18. 10. & 24. 36. Who though they were created holy, yet he could not be confident in them, nor they be confident in themſelves, that they would continue in their integrity, if they were left to themſelves, and not upheld by God's ſpecial Grace and aſſiſtance. See the Notes on Job 4. 18. d Heb. and the heavens, i. e. Either, 1. the Heavens properly ſo called; which though they be free from thoſe droſſie mixtures which are and appear in heavenly bodies, yet are not abſolutely pure, but have ſome ſpots and bleminſhes in them; as Philoſophers have diſcovered, and the all-ſeeing God knoweth: Compare Chap. 25. 5. where the ſtars are ſaid not to be pure: Unleſs the ſtars alſo there be metaphorically put for the Angels, as they are, Job 38. 7. and for other holy Miniſters of God, as Dan. 8. 10 Revel. 1. 16, 20. & 12. 1, 4. The Angels that dwell in heaven, heaven being oft put for its Inhabitants; either for God, as Pſalm 73. 9. Dan. 4 26. Luke 15. 18, 21. Or, 2. for the Angels, as Pſalm 89. 6. & 148. 1, 2. So this is a repetition of the ſame thing in other words. And theſe are not pure; to wit, ſimply and perfectly, and comparatively to God; in which and ſuch like reſpects, God only is ſaid to be good and wiſe, and immortal. The Angels are pure from corruption, but not from imperfection, nor from a poſſibility of ſinning, if God ſhould withdraw his help from them.

16. How much more abominable and filthy is Man, which drinketh iniquity like water e?

e Who beſides his natural proneneſs to ſin, hath contracted habits and cuſtoms of ſinning, and ſinneth as freely and eaſily, as greedily and delightfully, as frequently and abundantly as Men, eſpecially in thoſe hot Countries, uſed to drink up water. But this did not Job: And therefore though the things delivered by him and the reſt, be true in the general, yet they commit a great errour in miſapplying them to Job, for which therefore they are afterwards reproved.

17. I will ſhew thee f, hear me, and that which I have ſeen g, I will declare.

f I will prove what I have affirmed, that ſuch ſtrokes as theſe are peculiar to hypocrites and wicked Men. g I ſpeak not by hear-ſay only, but from my own experience.

18. Which wiſe men h have told from their fathers i, and have not hid it k:

h Who are moſt able to be Witneſſes and Judges in theſe matters. i Or, Anceſtors; who diligently obſerved this, and carefully tranſmitted their own judgment and experience ſucceſſively, to their Poſterity. k They judged it to be ſo certain and ſo important a truth that they would not conceal it in their own breaſts, but made conſcience of publiſhing it for the inſtruction and comfort of ſucceeding ages.

19. Unto whom alone the earth was given l, and no ſtranger m paſſed among them n.

l Either, 1. By the ſpecial and gracious gift of God: whereas wicked men invaded their parts of the earth, and took them away by force. Or, 2. by the choice and conſent of the people, who for their great and known wiſdom and vertue conferred this power and truſt upon them. This he alleageth partly to make their Teſtimony more conſiderable, becauſe theſe were not obſcure, and mean, and fooliſh men, whoſe words are commonly deſpiſed, but the moſt worthy and famous Men in their places and ages; and partly to contradict and confute what Job had ſaid, Chap. 9. 24. That the earth was given into the hand of the wicked. By the earth, he means either the dominion of the earth; to wit, of that part of the earth in or nigh which Job and his Friends lived: Or rather, the poſſeſſion of the earth; i. e. of a great portion of worldly goods: Or particularly, the land, or that land (as the word properly ſignifies) to wit, the land of Canaan; which was given by ſpecial gift unto Abraham (from whom it ſeems moſt probable that both Job and his Friends were deſcended) and to Iſaac and to Jacob: who though they met with ſome common and ordinary afflictions, yet enjoyed a great meaſure of comfort and wealth, and honour, and power in the World, as the Fruits of God's Bleſſing, and of his Covenant made with good men, whileſt wicked men were expoſed to manifold Diſtreſſes and grievous Calamities, all which thoſe holy Patriarchs diligently obſerved, and induſtriouſly imparted to their Children, to encourage them to continue and proceed in the ways of true Piety. But how was the Earth or Land given to them alone, as is here ſaid? Anſwer, Either, 1. Becauſe Noah and his Sons (of whom ſome underſtand theſe words) had the ſole poſſeſſion and dominion of the Earth. Or, 2. Becauſe Canaan was given to Abraham and to his Seed alone: And ſome of Abraham's Children had the dominion of, or an ample poſſeſſion in thoſe parts where Job and his Friends lived, who alſo ſeem to be in the number of them. Or, 3. Becauſe they only had it either by God's ſpecial and gracious Providence, or by the choice and approbation of the people; whereas wicked Men took it by Rapine and Violence, without asking leave either from God or men. m i. e. The Enemy; for ſuch are called ſtrangers both in Scripture; as Prov. 5. 10. Iſa. 1. 7. Ezek. 11. 9. & 28. 10. and in other Authors. No perſon of a ſtrange Nation and Diſpoſition, or Religion. n i. e. Through their Land, as this phraſe is uſed, Num. 20. 18. To wit, ſo as to moleſt or diſturb, or ſpoil them, as the Sabeans and Chaldeans did thee. God watched over thoſe wiſe and holy men ſo carefully, that no Enemy ſhould invade them; and ſo he would have done over thee, if thou hadſt been ſuch an one.

20. The wicked man travelleth with pain o all his days, and the number of years is hidden p to the oppreſſor q.

o i.e. Lives a life of care, and fear, and grief, by reason of God's Wrath, and the Torments of his own Mind, and his manifold and dreadful outward Calamities. p i. e. He knows not how short the time of his tyranny and life is, and therefore lives in continual fear of losing them. The number of a good Man's years are also hid from him as well as they are from the wicked Men: But to those this is a great torment and mischief; whereas it is not so to him. Or, and a few years (Heb. a number of years, put by a common Hypallage, for years of number; as few years are called, Job 16. 22. because they are soon numbred; as men of number, is put for a few men, Gen. 34. 30. Deut. 4. 27. & 33. 6.) are laid, or treasured up, i.e. are allotted to him by God's secret Counsel; for God cuts off such men in the midst of their days, Psalm 55. 23. whereas long-life is promised and commonly given to righteous Men. q i.e. To the wicked Man: but he names this one sort of them, the Oppressors, partly because he supposed Job to be guilty of this sin, Chap. 22. 6. partly in opposition to what Job had affirmed of the safety and happiness of such persons, Chap. 12. 6. and partly because such are most apt to expect and promise to themselves a longer and happier life than other Men, because of their singular preservatives and advantages of life above other Men.

21. † A dreadful sound is in his ears r: * in prosperity the destroyer shall come upon him s.

r Even when he feels no evil, he is tormented with perpetual fears and expectations of it from the sense of his own guilt and of God's all-seeing eye and righteous judgment: See Levit. 26. 36. Deut. 28. 65. s Or, shall invade and destroy him suddenly and unexpectedly: which is a great aggravation of it.

22. He believeth not that he shall return out of darkness t, and he is waited for of the sword u.

t i.e. When he falls into trouble, he despairs of God's mercy and of deliverance, by reason of his guilty Conscience: Which he speaks with particular reflection upon Job who would receive no comfort nor matter of hope. u i.e. Besides the Calamity which is upon him, he is in constant expectation of further and greater miseries; for the sword is oft used for any grievous affliction; as Luke 2. 35.

* Ps. 59. 15. & 109. 10. * Chap. 18. 12.

23. He * wandreth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it x? he knoweth y that * the day of darkness z is ready at his hand a.

x His poverty is so great, that he is forced to wander hither and thither to seek for Bread, and cannot find it. A just punishment for him that took away the Bread and substance of others by violence. y He is assured of it from his own guilty Conscience. z i.e. The time of his total and irrecoverable and everlasting destruction. a i.e. Ready to seize upon him, or take him by the hand or shoulder like a Serjeant to arrest him. The words may well be rendred, was prepared by his hand; i.e. by his works or actions; which being most commonly done with the hand, are oft called by the name, as Exod. 14. 31. Judg. 9. 16. Prov. 10. 4, & 12. 24. So the sense is, He is conscious to himself that by his wicked life he hath prepared and stored up Calamities and Destruction for himself, and therefore he expected nothing less.

24. Trouble and anguish shall make him afraid b; they shall prevail against him, as a king ready to the battle c.

b i.e. When trouble comes, in stead of trusting, and hoping, and comforting himself in God, as good men do in such cases; as 1 Sam. 30. 6. He is full of torment, and dread of the issue of it, and concludes it will end in his utter ruine, as he hath great reason to do. c Or, prepared, or furnished, or disposed with his army round about him, as this word seems to signifie.

25. For d he stretcheth out his hand against God e, and strengtheneth himself f against the Almighty g.

d Now he gives the reason of all the forementioned Calamities which befel him, which was his great wickedness in the time of his peace and prosperity. e i. e. He commonly and customarily sinned against God with an high and out-stretched hand; i.e. boldly and presumptuously, as one that neither desired his favour, nor feared his anger. f i.e. He putteth his Forces in array, as if he would fight with him. g Which aggravates the madness of this poor contemptible Worm that durst fight against the Omnipotent God.

26. He runneth upon him h, even on his neck i, upon the thick bosses of his bucklers k:

h i.e. Assaults him, or rusheth upon him with great swiftness and fury; as this phrase signifies, Dan. 8. 6. This he, is either, 1. God, who was expressed twice in the last Verse, and who is here produced as entring the Lists and fighting with his daring Adversary. Or rather, 2. The wicked man, of whom and whose sin and misery he speaks in the whole Context, both before and after this; who in the last Verse was introduced as preparing for the Battle, and here as actually and impudently fighting with him. i As a stout Warrier who cometh close to his Adversary, and grapples with him, and taketh him by the Neck to throw him down. Compare 2 Sam. 2. 16. Job 16. 12. Or, with his neck. So it is a Metaphor from a mad and raging Bull, which runs upon his Enemy with an hard and stiff Neck. k i.e. Even where his Enemy is strongest: He is not discouraged with the Enemies thick and strong, and eminent Shields, but boldly ventures in upon them and among them. Or, with the thick bosses (Heb. the thickness and eminency) of his Shields, wherewith he invaded the Enemy, that so he might both defend himself, and offend his Enemy; for the ancient Shields were useful both ways, because they had a sharp Iron or Steel in the midst of them.

27. Because he covereth his face with his fatness l, and maketh collops of fat on his flanks m.

l This, is mentioned as the reason of his insolent carriage towards God, because he was fat; i.e. rich and potent, and successful, as that expression signifies, Deut. 32. 15. Psalm 78. 31. Jer. 46. 21. His great prosperity made him proud and secure, and regardless of God and Men. m His only care and study is to pamper and please himself, and obey his own mind and lusts, and in defence and pursuance of them he contends with God.

28. And he dwelleth in desolate places n, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, which are ready to become heaps o.

n These words may note, either, 1. his tyranny and cruelty, whereby he makes the places of his abode and dominion desolate by his frequent Murthers, Spoils and Oppressions, wherewith he destroyeth great numbers of his people, and forceth others to flie out of his reach. Or, 2. His pride and power, and wealth; which enabled and engaged him to build desolate Houses and Cities for his own glory and safety, and conveniency: Of which see the Notes on Chap. 3. 14. Or, 3. his punishment and misery, that for his Impiety towards God and Oppression of Men, he was driven out of his Dominions and Possessions, and forced to flie into desolate places for safety and an habitation. This seems best to agree with the Hebrew words which run thus; But (for so the Particle and is commonly used, as hath been oft said) he shall dwell, &c. And so this is fitly opposed to this last-mentioned prosperity, and is the beginning of the description of his misery, which is continued in the following Verses. o Which were ready to fall and to be turned into an heap of stones.

29. He shall not be rich p, neither shall his substance continue q, neither shall he prolong the perfection thereof r upon the earth.

p i.e. Not abide rich, but shall become poor. q What he had gotten shall be taken from him. r i.e. The perfection of his substance, or that compleat estate and glory which he hath attained, shall not be continued to him and to his Posterity. Or, neither shall their perfection (i.e. that prosperity and wealth, and power wherein they placed their perfection or happiness) spread it self, or be propagated or spread abroad, but shall be diminished and taken away: It is a Metaphor from a Tree. Compare Job 8. 16.

30. He shall not depart out of darkness s, the flame t shall dry up his branches u, and by the breath of || his mouth x shall he go away y.

s His misery shall have no end. t God's anger and judgment upon him. u Either, 1. his Children. Or, 2. Wealth, and Power, and Glory, wherewith he was encompassed and adorned and secured, as Trees are with their Branches. x i.e. Of God's mouth, as appears both by comparing this with v. 25. where God is expressed as the Adversary with whom this wicked Wretch contendeth: and by the nature of the thing, and the whole Context, all this man's Calamities being manifestly the effects of God's anger; and by other places of Scripture, where the breath of God's mouth or lips are mentioned, as that whereby he destroyeth wicked men, as Job 4. 9. Isa. 11. 4. 2 Thes. 2. 8. And this expression intimates to us, with how much facility God subdueth his Enemies, he needs no Arms or Instruments; his Word, his Blast, one Act of his Will is more than sufficient to do it. y Heb. go back; i.e. retreat and run away from God faster than he did run towards and upon him, v. 26. So it is a continuation of the former Metaphor of a Battle or Conflict between two persons.

31. Let not him that is deceived, trust in vanity z: for vanity a shall be his recompence b.

z i.e. In the vain and deceitful things of this world, such as Power, Riches, Honour, &c. of which and of the loss of them he had been largely discoursing; and now he subjoyns a general Caution to all men to take heed of running into the same error and mischief with the fore-mentioned persons: and withal he secretly intimates Job's great sin which was the cause of his ruine; to wit, his carnal confidence in those vain things, the Wealth, and Glory, and Children which God had given him: from which Crime he therefore vindicates himself hereafter. a i. e. Disappointment and dissatisfaction, and the vanishing or loss of all their imaginary felicity. The same word vanity, being elegantly repeated in another sense, as is usual in Scripture and all Authors. b Heb. his exchange; he shall exchange one vanity for another, a pleasing vanity for a vexatious vanity. But this Verse is and may be rendred otherwise; the Hebrew Particle al, being here, as it is elsewhere, taken for a simple Negation. Thus, He that is deceived with vanity (i.e. with the vain things of this World, wherewith most men are deceived and bewitched) will not believe that vanity (i.e. emptiness and disappointment, and misery) shall be his recompence. And so this is an aggravation of his Calamity, that it surprized him when he was confident and secure from all fears of such an event.

32. It

32. It shall be ‖ accomplished c * before his time d, and his branch e shall not be green f.

* Ch. 22. 16. Psal. 55. 23.

c To wit, that which was last mentioned, that vanity should be his recompence. Or, it; i.e. his Branch mentioned in the next Clause of the Verse, from which it is understood in this former Clause, as is very usual in the holy Scripture, shall be consumed or cut off. d i.e. When by the course of Nature, and common Providence, it might have continued and flourished much longer. e Either, 1. his Glory and Prosperity. Or rather, 2. his Children; by comparing v. 34. where the desolation is said to fall upon all the Congregation and Tabernacles of these men: And so he reflects upon Job who lost his Children. f i.e. Shall not continue to flourish, as it had done.

33. He g shall shake off h his unripe grapes i as the vine k, and shall cast off his flower as the olive l.

g Either, 1. the wicked man, who by his sins is the Author of his own ruine. Or, 2 God, who is easily understood both from the Matter and Context. h Heb. Shall take away by violence. i i.e. His Fruit, his Children, or other Comforts, before their time. k i.e. As the Vine either it self droppeth, or rather loseth its tender Grapes which are plucked off by a violent hand. l Which flourisheth much about the same time with the Vine, and is commonly handled in the same manner.

34. For the congregation m of hypocrites shall be desolate n, and fire o shall consume the tabernacles of bribery p.

m i.e. Their Children, and Servants, and Friends, and Dependents. n i.e. Utterly destroyed. o i.e. Some eminent and terrible judgment of God, which is oft expressed by fire; as Isa. 9. 19. & 26. 11. p i.e. Which were either built or maintained by extortion and bribery, and such like unrighteous Courses; whereof they thought Job guilty, Chapter 22. 8.

35. * They conceive mischief q, and bring forth ‖ vanity r, and their belly s prepareth deceit t.

* Psal. 7. 14. Isa. 59. 4. Hos. 10. 13.

q i.e. They devise and contrive injurious and pernicious Enterprizes against others. r Or iniquity, or injury, or trouble; either, 1. to others: They execute what they had contrived. Or, 2 to themselves; the mischief they design for others, falleth upon their own heads, and they reap what they sowed. s i.e. Their inward parts, their hearts and minds. See above on v. 2. t Either, For 1. others, whom they design to cheat: Or, 2. for themselves, who whilst they seek to deceive others, shall find that they themselves are most deceived, as being deprived of all their desires and hopes wherewith they fed themselves, and cast into all those Calamities, which they thought to prevent by these Artifices.

CHAP. XVI.

1. THen Job answered and said,
2. I have heard many such things a: ‖ * miserable comforters b are ye all.

* Chap. 13. 4.

a Both from you, who do so odiously repeat the same things, and from divers others: For these things, though you pride and please your selves in them, as if you had made some great and strange discoveries, are but vulgar and trivial. b In stead of giving me those Comforts which you pretend to do, Chap. 15. 11. and which my Condition loudly calls for, you feed me with terrours, and censures, and scoffs.

3. Shall † vain words have an end c? or what emboldneth thee that thou answerest d?

e When wilst thou put an end to these idle and impertinent discourses? He retorts upon him his Charge against Job, Ch. 15. 2, 3. d To wit, so, or in such manner, so censoriously, and opprobriously, and peremptorily. What secret grounds hast thou for thy Confidence? Thy Arguments are flashy and weak; if thou hast any stronger produce them.

4. I also could speak as ye do: if your soul e were in my souls stead; I could heap up words against you f, and * shake mine head at you g.

* Lam. 2. 13.

e i.e. Your person, as Gen. 12. 5. f i.e. I could multiply Accusations and Reproaches against you, as you do against me. g In way of derision, as this phrase is most commonly used; as 2 Kings 19. 21. Psal. 22. 7. Isa. 37. 22. Matth. 27. 39.

5. But I would strengthen you h with my mouth, and the moving of my lips should assuage your grief i.

h i.e. Direct, and support, and comfort you. i i.e. My discourse should comfort you. The words, your grief, are here understood either out of the fore-going Clause, where they are implied: Or out of the next Verse, where they are expressed. Possibly the words may be thus rendred without any Ellipsis, which is most natural, if the Translation be true and suitable; Compassion (for the Hebrew word, nid, comes from nud, which signifies to condole) should restrain or govern my lips, that they should avoid all speeches which may vex you, and speak only what may be to your comfort and benefit; whereas you let your Tongues loose to speak whatsoever pleaseth you, or tormenteth me.

6. Though I speak k, my grief is not assuaged: and though I forbear, † what am I eased l?

† Heb. what goeth from me?

k To God by Prayer; or to you in way of discourse: I find no relief. Job having reproved his Friends for their unkind carriage towards him, and aggravated it by his resolutions to have dealt more friendlily with them, if they had been in his case; now he returns to his main business, to describe and aggravate his miseries, if by any means he could move his Friends to pity and help him. l Or, what part or grain of my grief or misery departeth from me? I receive not one jot of ease. Neither speech nor silence do me any good.

7. But m now he n hath made me weary o: thou p hast made desolate all my company q.

m Or, surely, as this Hebrew Particle most commonly signifies. n i.e. God as appears by the following Words and Verses. o Either of complaining, or, of my life. p He speaks in the second Person to God, as in the former Clause in the third Person of God: Such change of Persons are very usual in Scripture and elsewhere. q Hast turned my society into desolation, by destroying my Children and Servants.

8. And thou hast filled me with wrinkles r, which is a witness against me s: and my leanness rising up in me t, beareth witness to my face u.

r By consuming all my fat and flesh. s Heb. Which is a witness of the reality, and greatness, and just cause of my sorrows. Or, which is become or made a witness; i.e. is produced by my Friends as a Witness of Gods Wrath, and of my Hypocrisie and Impiety. t i.e. Which is in me. Or, rising up against me, as Witnesses use to rise and stand up against a guilty person to accuse him. u As Witnesses are to accuse a person to his Face, openly and evidently, so as any that look on my Face may plainly discern it. But this Clause may be rendred thus, My leanness in my face; (i.e. which appears in my Face, and causeth the wrinkles which are visible there) riseth up against me, and beareth witness, as before.

9. * He teareth me in his wrath x, who hateth me y: he gnasheth upon me with his teeth z; * mine enemy a sharpneth his eyes upon me b.

* Chap. 10. 16, 17.
* Chap. 13. 24.

x Heb. His wrath teareth me in pieces, as a Lion doth his Prey. y Heb. And he hateth me; i.e. He pursueth me with a deadly hatred and rage. Or, And he is become mine enemy; Or, he sets himself against me with all his might: Or, He treats me like an implacable enemy. z Which is a gesture and sign of extream anger and fury; as Psalm 35. 16. & 37. 12. Lament. 2. 16. as elsewhere of grievous pain; as Luke 13. 28. a Either, 1. God, who of a Friend is now become my implacable Enemy. Or, 2. Eliphas, who deals with me more like an enemy than a Friend. b i.e. Looks upon me with a fierce and sparkling Eye, as enraged persons use to do.

10. They c have gaped upon me with their mouth d, they * have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully e, they have gathered themselves together against me f.

* Lam. 3. 30 Mich. 5. 1.

c The Instruments of God's anger, my Friends, as they are falsly called. d Opened their mouths wide against me; either, 1. to devour and destroy me; as a Lion which falls upon his Prey with open mouth; as this phrase is used, Psalm 22. 13, 14. And this they did aggravating and encreasing his sorrows, whereby he was well-nigh overwhelmed. Or, 2. To scoff and deride me, as it follows, and as this phrase is most commonly used, as Psal. 22. 8. & 35. 21. e Or, by reproach; or in way of scorn and contempt; whereof such smiting was a sign; as 1 Kings 22. 24. Lament. 3. 30. Mich. 5. 1. The sign is here put for the thing signified: They despised and derided me. f i.e. They are come from several places and met together here, not for me, or to comfort me, as they pretended, but really against me, or to torment and grieve me. Heb. they have filled themselves, &c. Either, 1. they have filled up their numbers, they are all come against me. Or, 2. they have filled their minds with evil Opinions of me, and their hearts with courage and resolution to assault me, and their mouths with words and arguments against me. Compare Eccles. 8. 11. Acts 5. 3.

11. God † hath delivered me to the ungodly g, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked.

g Either, 1. to my Friends, who act the part of the wicked in censuring and condemning the righteous whom God approveth, and in pleading for a false and wicked Cause. Or rather, 2. to the Chaldeans and Sabæans, who were a most wicked people, living in gross contempt of God, and injuriousness to all sorts of men. For this best suits both with the first Clause of the next Verse, which sheweth that he speaketh of Job's first afflictions which befel him when he was at ease; and with Job's principal scope, which was to prove, that both eminent prosperity and affliction did indifferently happen to good and bad men: and this was evident from this example, because holy Job was ruined, when these wicked people were most victorious and successful.

12. I was at ease h, but he hath broken me asunder i; he hath also taken me by my neck, and shaken me to pieces k, and * set me up for his mark l.

* Ch. 7. 20.

h I lived in great peace and prosperity, which makes my present miseries more grievous to me: and therefore my Complaints are excusable, excusable, and I deserve pity rather than reproach from my friends.

i Broken my Spirit with the sense of his anger, and my Body with loathsome Ulcers, as also by destroying my Children, a part of my own flesh or body. k As a mighty Man doth with some young Stripling, when he wrestleth with him. l That he may shoot all his Arrows into me, and that with delight, which Archers have in that exercise.

* Ch. 19. 12.

13. * His archers m compass me round about; he cleaveth my reins asunder n, and doth not spare; he poureth out my gall upon the ground.

m i. e. His Plagues or Judgments elsewhere compared to Arrows, and here to Archers. n With his Arrows. i. e. he wounds me inwardly, and mortally, and incurably: which also is noted by pouring out the Gall; such wounds being deadly.

14. He breaketh me with breach upon breach n; he runneth upon me like a giant o.

n My Calamities have no interruption, but one immediately succeeds another, as it did, Chap. 1. o Who falls upon his Enemy with all his might, that he may overthrow and kill him.

15. I have sewed sackcloth upon my skin p, and defiled my horn in the dust q.

p. i. e. I put on sackcloth sowed together, not upon my other garments, but next to my skin, as was done in great Calamities, as 2 Kings 6. 30. So far am I from stretching out my hands against God, whereof I am accused, Chap. 15. 25. that I have humbled my self deeply under his hand, q I have willingly parted with all my Wealth, and Power, and Glory, (as the horn oft signifies in Scripture; as Psalm 75. 5. & 132. 17 Luke 1. 69.) and been contented to lie in the dust, and to endure the contempt which God hath brought upon me.

16. My face is foul with weeping, and on my eyelids is the shadow of death r.

r i. e. A gross and terrible darkness. My sight is very dim and dark, as is usual in case of sore Diseases, or excessive grief and weeping, Lament. 2. 11. and especially in the approach of death: Compare Psalm 6. 7. & 38. 10. Lament. 5. 17.

17. Not for any injustice in mine hands s: also, my prayer is pure t.

s And all this is not come upon me for any injurious dealing with others by oppression, or deceit, or bribery, wherewith I am implicitely charged; Chap. 15. 16, 20, 34. but for other reasons known to God only, for I cannot discover them. t I do not cast off God's fear and service, as I am accused to do, Ch. 15. 4. I do still pray and worship God, and my Prayer is accompanied with a sincere Heart, and undefiled Conscience: See Psalm 109. 7. Prov. 28. 9. 1 Tim. 2. 8. So that I have lived inoffensively towards God and towards Men: And therefore your Assertion is both uncharitable and false, that eminent Afflictions are peculiar to ungodly Men.

18. O earth, cover not thou my blood u, and let my cry x have no place.

u So called not actively, to wit, his own blood; but passively or objectively; i. e. the blood of others shed by him and lying upon his Conscience. The Earth is said to cover that blood which lies undiscovered and unrevenged: Of which see on Gen. 4. 10, 11. Isa. 26. 21. But saith Job, If I be guilty of destroying any one Man by Murder or Oppression, as I am traduced; O Lord, let the Earth disclose it, let it be brought to light, that I may suffer condign punishment for it. x Either, 1. passively; to wit, the cries and groans which I have forced from others by my Oppressions: Let those Cries have no place to hide them. Or rather, 2. actively, the cry of my Complaints to men, or Prayers to God; let them find no place in the Ears or Hearts of God or Men, if this be true: Or, no place; i. e. no regard, or no power or success; in which sense God's Word is said not to have place in evil men. John 8. 37. And Esau, not to find place of repentance. Heb. 12. 17. i. e. All his Intreaties and Tears could not prevail with his Father to repent of and retract the Blessing given from him to Jacob.

19. Also now, behold, my Witness is in Heaven y, and my Record † is on high.

y Besides the Witness of Men, and of my own Conscience, God is Witness of my Integrity.

20. My Friends z † scorn me a: but mine Eye poureth out tears upon God b.

z Who should defend me from the Scorns and Injuries of others. a So this word is used, Psal. 119. 51. Prov. 3. 34. & 19. 28. b I pour forth my Prayers and Tears to God, that he would judge me according to my Innocency, and plead my righteous cause against you.

* Ch. 31. 25. Eccl. 6. 10. Isa. 45. 9. Rom. 9. 20. ‖ Or, friend.

21. * O that one might plead for a Man * with God c, as a Man pleadeth for his ‖ Neighbour!

c O that either I, or some faithful Advocate might be admitted to plead my Cause, either with God, or rather with you, before God's Tribunal, God being Witness and Judge between us. But this Verse is, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew Text, otherwise translated and interpreted, either, 1. With respect to Christ, And he (i. e. God last mentioned, to wit, God the Son, Christ Jesus) will plead for a man (i. e. for me, against whom you plead. He modestly speaketh of himself in the third Person, as is usual,) with God, (to wit, with God the Father:) and the Son of man (as Christ is oft called) will plead for his Friend, or Companion, or Neighbour, i. e. For a Man whom he hath taken into that Relation to himself. It is plain that the mystery of Mans Redemption by Christ was known to the ancient Patriarchs, as hath been oft noted before; and to Job among others, Ch. 19. 25. Or, 2. as the matter for which he prayed, and cried to God; That (so the Hebrew Vau is frequently used) he (i. e. God) would plead or judge or give sentence for a man. (i. e. for me, or in my cause) with God, (i. e. with himself, the Noun being put for the Pronoun, as Gen. 2. 20 & 4. 15. Lev. 14. 15, 16. and elsewhere, or at his own Tribunal, to which I have appealed) as a man pleadeth for his Friend or Neighbour, with or before an earthly Judge and Tribunal. This seems most agreeable to the scope of the place, which was to maintain his own Integrity against his Friends before God.

22. When † a few years are come, then I shall go the way whence I shall not return d.

d i. e. To the state and place of the dead, whence men do not, and cannot return to this Life. The meaning is, my death hastens, and therefore I earnestly desire that the cause depending before God, between me and my Friends, may be searched out and determined, that if I be guilty of these things whereof they accuse me, I may bear the shame and blame of it before all Men, and if I be innocent, that I may live to see my own Integrity, and the credit of Religion, (which suffers upon this occasion) vindicated, that so I may die in peace with God, and may leave the favour of a good name behind me.

CHAP. XVII.

‖ Or, my Spirit is spent.

1. MY ‖ Breath is corrupt a, my days are extinct b, the Graves c † are ready for me d.

a i. e. It stinks, as it doth in dying persons. Or, my Spirit is corrupted, or spent, or lost, i. e. My vital Spirits, and natural Powers are wasted; my Soul is ready to leave the Body. b The lamp of my Life is wasted, and upon the point of going out, and that in a Snuff. c i. e. The Grave; the plural number being put for the singular, as Sepulchres, 2 Chron. 21. 20. Cities, Judg. 12. 7. Ages, Zech. 9. 9. are put for one of each of these. d Open their mouths as ready to receive me. The sense and scope of this Verse is the same with the former.

2. Are there not Mockers with me e? And doth not mine Eye f † continue in their provocation?

e Do not my Friends, instead of comforting, mock and abuse me, as if I had made use of Religion only as a Cloak to my wickedness. Heb. If there be not mockers with me, understand, let God do so or so to me. It is a form of an Oath, which is defectively expressed after the manner of the Hebrews. Assuredly I am in the midst of cruel Mockers, which is a sore aggravation of my affliction. Thus he returns to what he had said. Ch. 16. 20. and intimates the necessity and justice of his following Appeal, which otherwise might be thought too bold. f Either, 1. The eyes of my Body. Do they not continue to provoke me to my Face? Or rather, 2. The Eye of my Mind. Their provoking Scoffs and Reproaches do not only molest me in the day-time when they are with me, but lodge with me in the night, and are continually in my thoughts, and break my sleep, and disturb me in dreams: And therefore if I be a little disordered, I may be excused.

3. Lay down now, put me in a surety with thee g, who is he that will strike hands with me h?

g He turneth his Speech either to Eliphaz, who spake last; or rather to God, as is evident from the matter and scope of the words, and from the next Verse. These words contain, either, 1. An humble desire to God that he would appoint him a Surety, who should undertake for his Friends, that they should refer the cause in difference between them to God, or to some other person who should determine the matter in God's Name, and according to Gods Will: Or that God would be his Surety, or appoint him a Surety who should maintain his righteous cause against his opposers; for so this Phrase is oft used, as Psal. 119. 121, 122. Isa. 38. 14. And some expound this, as they did, Ch. 16. 21. of Christ Jesus who was called our Surety, Heb. 7. 22. Appoint, I pray thee, my Surety (i. e. Christ who is now) with thee, to plead my Cause. Or rather 2. An appeal from God unto God, or a kind of challenge or desire of debating his Cause with God. Which, though it savoureth of too much boldness and irreverence to God, yet seeing Job expresseth the same desire almost in the same manner, Ch. 9. 33, 34. and is sharply reproved by God for contending with him, Ch. 40. 2. I know no Inconvenience of ascribing the same thing to him here. So the sense is, Because I am not able to deal with thee immediately, considering the dread of thy Majesty, my only desire is that thou wouldest deal with me upon fair and equal terms, as if thou were a Man like my self, and appoint some Man who shall in thy name and stead determine the time and place for the trial of my cause with thee. And this suits well enough with the two following Verses, because his Friends were without Understanding, v. 4. and partial, v. 5. therefore he desires to cease discoursing with them, and to debate his cause with God, who was just and impartial, and also would be favourable to him. h. i. e. Agree and promise, or be Surety to me; whereof that was the usual gesture, Prov. 6. 1, 2. & 17. 18. & 22. 26.

4. For thou hast hid their heart from Understanding i: therefore shalt thou not exalt them k.

i Thou hast blinded the minds of my Friends that they cannot see those truths which are most plain and evident to all Men of sense sense and experience: Therefore I desire a more wise and able Judge. k i. e. Thou wilst not give them the Victory over me in this contest, but wilst give sentence for me, and disparage them, and make them ashamed of their confidence in affirming falshoods of thee, and punish them severely for this miscarriage. It is an usual figure, whereby much more is understood than is expressed.

5. He that speaketh Flattery to his Friends l, even the Eyes of his Children shall fail m.

l Hereby Job chargeth them, either, 1. With flattering him with vain hopes, and Promises of the return of his former prosperity, when he knew that his case was desperate. Or, 2. With flattering and befriending God, and giving a partial sentence out of respect to him, for which he reproved and condemned them before, Ch. 13. 7, 8, 9. where see the notes. Some render the words thus, He that uttereth, or declareth his mind or thoughts (as this word signifies, Psal. 139. 2, 17.) with flattery or to flatter or deceive another. m He shall be severely punished, not only in his Person, but even in his Children, whose Eyes shall fail with vain expectations of Relief and deliverance out of those Calamities, which shall come upon them for this sin of their Parents.

* Chap. 30. 9. ‖ Or, before them. † Heb. Topheth.

6. He n hath made me also* a by-word o of the People, and p ‖ aforetime q I was as a † Tabret r.

n i. e. God, who is oft designed by this Pronoun in this Book. o Or Proverb, or common talk. My calamities are so great and prodigious, that they fill all people with discourse, and are become proverbial to express extream miseries. Compare Numb. 21. 27, 28. Deut. 28. 37. p Or, but, or although, as this particle is oft used. q So he aggravateth his present misery by the mention of his former prosperity. Or, to their faces; or openly. They do not only reproach me behind my back, but revile and mock me, and make a sport of my calamities even to my face. r i. e. I was the Peoples Delight and Darling, and matter of their praise, and entertained by them with applauses, and as it were with Instruments of Musick. Or, I am as a Tabret, i. e. matter of sport and merriment to them.

7. Mine Eye also is dim by reason of sorrow s, and all ‖ my Members are as a shadow t.

s Through excessive weeping and decay of Spirits, which cause a dimness in the sight. t My body is so consumed, and my colour so wan and ghastly, that I look more like a Ghost, or a Shadow, than like a Man.

8. Upright Men shall be astonied at this u, and the innocent shall stir up himself against the Hypocrite x.

u Wise and good Men, when they shall see and consider my calamities, will not be so forward to censure and condemn me, as you are, but will rather stand and wonder at the depth and mysteriousness of Gods Counsels and Judgments, which fall so heavily upon innocent Men, while the worst of Men prosper. x But, or Yet, notwithstanding all these sufferings of good men, and the astonishment which they cause, innocent or religious Persons shall be so far from joining their Opinions, and Counsels, and Interests, with Hypocrites, or prophane Men, who thence take occasion to censure the afflicted Person, and to reproach, and condemn, and desert the Profession and Practice of Godliness, that they will stir up themselves against them in holy Indignation, and will oppose their wicked courses, and will prefer afflicted Piety before prosperous Iniquity.

9. The righteous also shall hold on his way y, and he that hath clean hands z † shall be stronger and stronger a.

y i. e. Shall persist in that good way into which he hath entred, and not be turned from it by any afflictions, which may befal himself or any other good Men, nor by any contempt or reproach cast upon them by the ungodly, by reason thereof. z i. e. Whose life and the course of His Actions is holy and righteous; which is a sign that his heart also is pure and perfect. a Shall not be shaken and discouraged by the grievous afflictions of the godly, nor by the bitter censures and reproaches of Hypocrites, or wicked Men, cast upon them for that cause, but will be confirmed thereby, and made more constant and resolute in cleaving to God, and his ways, and People, in spight of all difficulties and miseries.

* Chap. 6. 29.

10. But as for you all, * do ye return, and come now b: for I cannot find one wise man c among you.

b i. e. Come now again (as this Phrase is oft used) and renew the Debate, as I see you are prepared and resolved to do; and I am ready to receive you. Or, return into your selves, and consider my cause again; peradventure your second thoughts may be wiser. c To wit, in this matter. None of you speak like wise, or good men, but like rash and heady persons, you censure me as a rotten Hypocrite, and misjudge of Gods ways, and condemn the Generation of Gods Children upon frivolous grounds.

* Chap. 7. 6. & 9. 25. † Heb. the possession.

11. * My days d are past, my purposes e are broken off, even † the thoughts of my Heart f.

d The days of my life. I am a lost and dying man, and therefore the hopes you give me of the bettering of my condition, are vain and groundless. e Or, my designs, or thoughts, to wit, which I had in my prosperous days, concerning my self and Children, and the continuance of my happiness. f Heb. the possessions of my Heart, i. e. those thoughts which in a great measure possessed my Heart, which were most natural, and familiar, and delightful to me. All my thoughts, and designs, and hopes are disappointed and come to nothing.

12. They g change the night into day h: the light is † short i, because of darkness k. † Heb. near.

g Either, 1. my Friends. Or, 2. my Sorrows, of which he is here speaking. Or, 3. my thoughts last mentioned. Possibly these words may be joined with them thus: The thoughts of my heart change the night into day. h They do so unceasingly pursue and disturb me, that I can no more rest and sleep in the dark and silent nights, than in the midst of the light and tumults of the day. Or, they change the day into night. Heb, they put the night for, or instead of (as the Hebrew Lamed is elsewhere used) the day, i. e. They make the day as sad and dark as the night to me. So it seems best to agree with the following branch of the Verse. i i. e. The day-light, which oft times gives some little comfort and refreshment to men in misery, seems to be gone and fled as soon as it is begun. k i. e. Because of my grievous pains and torments which follow me by day as well as by night.

13. If I wait l, † the Grave is mine house m: I have made my Bed in darkness n. † Heb. Hell.

l If I should give way to those hopes of my deliverance and restauration which you suggest to me. m I should be sadly disappointed; for I am upon the borders of the Grave, which is the only House appointed for me, instead of that goodly house which you promise to me here upon condition of my Repentance. n I expect no other rest, but in the dark Grave, for which therefore I prepare my self.

14. I have † said to Corruption o, thou art my Father p: to the Worm, thou art my Mother, and my Sister q. † Heb. cried; or called.

o Heb. To the pit of corruption, the Grave. p I am near akin to thee, as being taken out of thee, and thou wilst receive and embrace me, and keep me in thy house, as Parents do their Children. q Because of the same original, and the most strict and intimate Union and Conjunction between me and the Worms.

15. And where is now my hope r? As for my hope s, who shall see it t?

r And what then is become of that hope which you advised me to entertain? s i. e. The fulfilling of my hope, or the happiness which you would have me expect. Hope being put for the thing hoped for, as Prov. 13. 12. 1 Cor. 9. 10. t No man shall see it; it shall never be.

16. They u shall go down to the bars of the pit x, when our rest together is in the dust y.

u Either, 1. They that would see my hope, they must go into the Grave to behold it. Or rather, 2. my hopes, of which he spake in the singular number, v. 15. which he here changeth into the plural, as is very usual in these Poetical Books. x i. e. into the closest and innermost parts of the Pit: My hopes are dying, and will be buried in my Grave. y So the sense is, when those Spectators, together with my self shall be in our Graves. Heb. Seeing that (as this Hebrew Particle, im, oft signifies: or, certainly, as it is used numb. 17. 13. Job 6. 13. and elsewhere,) our rest shall be together is the dust, i. e. I and my hopes shall be buried together.

CHAP. XVIII.

1. THen answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said:

2. How long will it be ere ye a make an end of words? Mark b, and afterwards we will speak.

a Either, 1. You my Brethren. Why do you not give over discoursing with Job, who is wholly transported with rage, and not fit to be discoursed with, at least until both you and he have better considered what to say. Or rather, 2. Thou, O Job, of whom he speaks here, as also v. 3. in the plural number, either because there were some other person or persons present at this Debate, who by their words or gestures shewed themselves favourers of Job's cause: or because it was a common Idiotism of the Eastern Language to speak thus of one person, especially where he was one of Eminency or Authority. Job's Speeches were generally longer than his friends, and they seemed very tedious to them. b Consider the matter and our words better. Or, inform us, Heb. make us to understand. Seeing thou lookest upon us as ignorant and brutish Men, as it follows, do thou instruct and inform us. Cease cavilling and railing, and produce thy strong Reasons, that we may consider and answer them, or yield to them.

3. Wherefore are we counted as Beasts c, and † reputed vile d in your sight e?

c i. e. Ignorant, blockish and stupid men, Ch. 17. 4, 10. d Heb. polluted, or unclean, i. e. not fit to be conversed or discoursed with; or contemptible, as such things are. e Either, 1. To your faces, or in your own hearing. Or, 2. In thy sight or Judgment, O Job; so he speaks of Job in the plural number, as he did v. 2.

† Heb. his Soul.

4. He teareth † himself f in his anger: shall the Earth be forsaken g for thee h? and shall the rock be removed out of his place i?

f i. e. Job, of whom he speaks in the third person for the second, as Ch. 12. 4. & 16. 7. Obad. 3. 3. Or, O thou that tearest thy self. Thou complainest of us for vexing thee with our speeches, when in truth thou art thy own greatest tormenter by thy own impatience and rage. g To wit, by God. Shall God give over the government of the Earth, and Men, and things in it, and suffer all things things to fall out by chance, and promiscuously to good and bad men, without any regard to his Truth, or Wisdom, or Justice? Shall God forbear to rule the World righteously, as he hath hitherto done, in favouring good men, and destroying the wicked? h i.e. For thy sake; or to prevent thy Complaints and Clamours. i Shall the Counsels of God, which are more firm and unmoveable than Rocks and the whole course of his Providence be altered to comply with thy Fancies or Humours?

5. Yea k, the light of the wicked shall be put out l, and the spark of his fire m shall not shine.

k The thing is true and certain, notwithstanding thy dissatisfaction and opposition against it. l All their Glory and Felicity shall perish m i.e. Their highest and brightest Glory, which he calleth the spark, &c. because, like a spark, it shines briskly for a moment, but is quickly extinct.

6. The light shall be dark in his tabernacle n, and his ‖ candle shall be put out with him o.

n i.e. In his Family. In stead of his former splendour, both he and his shall fall into extremity of misery. o i.e. His Glory shall die with him, and not descend to his posterity, as he hoped and designed. Or, his Candle, which was with him, or shone upon him, shall be put out.

7. The steps of his strength p shall be straitned q, and his own counsel shall cast him down r.

p i.e. His strong steps, by a vulgar Hebraism. By steps he means his Counsels, as the next branch explains it, his attempts and actions, and by steps of strength, such of them as seem to be most firm and settled, contrived with greatest strength of Understanding, and carried on with great resolution and might. q i.e. Shall be hindred and entangled. He shall be cast into great difficulties, and troubles, and perplexities, so that he shall not be able to proceed, and to accomplish his Enterprizes, but shall find himself ensnared by his own devices, as the next words declare it. This Phrase is used also, Prov. 4. 11, 12. and it is opposed to the enlarging of a mans way or steps, which signifies success and prosperity, as Psal. 4.1. & 31. 8. r He shall be undone by his own contrivances, either because God will give him up to dangerous and destructive mistakes of his way, or because God will oppose him, and turn his own devices against him; which he can easily do, by throwing in unexpected accidents.

8. For he is cast into a net by his own feet s, and he walketh upon a snare t.

s By his own choice, and design, and actions. t And therefore must needs be entangled and destroyed.

9. The * gin shall take him by the heel u, and the robber x shall prevail against him.

* Chap. 5. 5.

u i.e. Take fast hold of him, so as to keep him in those distresses. x When he is ensnared, the Robber shall come upon him, and take, and spoil, or kill him. Or, the horrible or terrible man, the Huntsman, that laid the Snare for him. A Metaphor from those who hunt for wild Beasts, who first lay snares for them, and then seize upon them in the snares.

10. The snare is † laid for him in the ground y, and a trap for him in the way.

y Where he doth not expect nor discern it. The former snare he laid for himself, but this was laid for him by another.

11. * Terrors z shall make him afraid on every side, and shall † drive him to his feet a.

* Ch. 15. 21. Jer. 6. 25. & 20. 3. & 46. 5. & 49. 29.

z Both from men, and from God, and from his own unquiet Mind and guilty Conscience. a Shall force him to flee hither and thither, and he knows not whither, being secure and safe no where, but pursued by terrors from place to place.

12. His strength b shall be hunger-bitten c, and * destruction shall be ready at his side d.

* Ch. 15. 23.

b Either, 1. His Children, which are, and are called a mans strength, as Gen. 49. 3. Psal. 127. 4, 5. Or rather, 2. His Wealth, and Power, and Prosperity. c Or famished, i.e. utterly consumed. d i.e. Shall follow him at the heels, as a most diligent servant, or constant companion.

13. It shall devour the †. strength of his skin e: even the firstborn of death f shall devour his strength.

e Heb. The bars, or rather, the branches of the skin, i.e. either the veins, and sinews which branch out themselves through the skin as well as elsewhere: Or the fat and flesh which like Bars support the skin, and adorn and beautifie it, as branches do a Tree; without which the skin is shrivel'd up and deformed. f i.e. A most remarkable and terrible kind of death. The first-born was the chief of his Brethren, and therefore this title is given to things eminent in their kind, as Isa. 14. 30. Col. 1. 18. Heb. 12. 23. Rev. 1. 5.

14. * His confidence g shall be rooted out of his tabernacle h, and it i shall bring him to the king of terrours k.

* Chap. 8. 14. & 11. 20. Psal. 112. 10. Prov. 10. 28.

g i.e. All the matter of his Confidence, his Riches, Children, &c. h i.e. Out of his Habitation. i To wit, the loss of his Confidence. k Either, 1. Into extream Fears and horrors of mind. Or, 2. To Death, which even Aristotle called, The most terrible of all terribles. And this it will do, either because it will expose him to his Enemies, who will kill him: or because the sense of his disappointments, and losses, and dangers, will oppress his Spirits, and break his Heart.

15. It shall dwell in his tabernacle l, because it is none of his m: brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation n.

l It, i.e. destruction, expressed v. 12. and designed by this particle. It, v. 13. shall not come upon him and his for a season, for then there might be some hopes of Recovery; but it shall fix its abode with him. m This may be added either, 1. By way of correction, did I say, his Tabernacle? I must retract the expression; for in truth, it is none of his, it is become another mans. Or, 2. As a reason of the ruine of his Tabernacle because it is none of his own, but got from others by deceit or violence. But these words are, and may be joined with the former, and both thus rendred, A stranger (Heb. one that is not his, that is not descended from him, and hath no relation to him) shall dwell in his Tabernacle, i.e. shall possess his House and Goods. n It shall be utterly and prodigiously destroyed as it were by Fire and Brimstone. He seems to allude both to the destruction of Sodom upon which God did scatter Brimstone and Fire, which happened not long before these times, and could not be unknown to them who lived near that place, and were diligent observers of Gods works; and to the judgment which befel Job, Ch 1.16 when the stranger hath taken and rifled his dwelling, he shall forsake it as an accursed place, and shall burn it with Fire and Brimstone; that there may be no monument of so vile a person left upon the Earth.

16. His roots shall be dried up beneath, and above shall his branch be cut off o.

o i.e. He shall be destroyed both root and branch, i.e. both himself and all his posterity. Compare Mal. 4. 1.

17. * His remembrance shall perish p from the earth and he shall have no name in the street.

* Psal. 109. 13. Prov. 2. 22. & 10. 7.

p Instead of that Honour and Renown which he designed to have both whilst he lived, and after his death, he is not so much as remembred unless it be with contempt and reproach.

18. † He shall be driven q from light into darkness r, and chased out of the world.

q Heb. They shall drive him. i.e. his Enemies, or those whom he hath oppressed; or they whom God shall appoint to do it, whether Angels or men. Or it is an impersonal Speech, and to be rendred passively, as it is also, Job 7. 3. Luk. 12. 20. & 16. 9. r From a splendid and prosperous Life to disgrace and misery, and to the Grave, the Land of Darkness and Forgetfulness, as the following words explain it.

19. * He shall neither have son nor nephew among his people s, nor any remaining in his dwellings.

* Isa. 14. 22. Jer. 22. 30.

s But if any such survive, they shall be in the hands and power of strangers, or rather of their Enemies.

20. They that come after him shall be astonied at his day t, as they that ‖ went before u † were affrighted x.

t i.e. At the day of his destruction, as the word day is used, Psal. 37. 13. & 137 7. Ezek. 21. 25. Obad. 12. They shall be amazed at the suddenness, and dreadfulness, and prodigiousness of it, as Job's Friends were at his Calamities, Ch. 2. 12, 13. vi.e. Before the persons last mentioned. Those who lived in the time and place where this judgment was inflicted. x Or, filled with horrour, partly through Humanity and Compassion, and partly for Fear, lest the Judgment should overtake them also.

21. Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God y.

y i.e. Who doth not acknowledge, nor fear, nor serve God, as this Phrase is used, 1 Sam. 2. 12. Psal. 79. 6. 2 Thess. 1. 8.

CHAP. XIX.

1. THen Job answered and said,
2. How long will ye vex my Soul, and break me in pieces with words a?

a With meer empty words, void of Sense or Argument, with your impertinent and unedifying discourses, and bitter reproaches, as it followeth.

3. These ten times b have ye reproached me: ye are not ashamed that ye ‖ make your selves strange to me c.

b i.e. Many times. A certain number for an uncertain. So this Phrase is oft used, as Gen. 31. 7. Numb. 14. 22, &c. c That you carry your selves like strangers to me, and are not concerned nor affected with my Calamities, and condemn me as if you had never known my former Piety and Integrity.

4. And

4. And be it indeed, that I have erred d, mine errour remaineth with my self e.

d If my Opinion in this point be faulty and erroneous, as you pretend it is. Or, if I have sinned, (for sin is oft called errour in Scripture) and am therefore punished. e Either, 1. It is likely to continue, I see no cause from your reasons to change my judgment. Or, 2. I suffer deeply for my sins, and therefore deserve your pity and help, rather than your reproaches, whereby you add affliction to the afflicted.

5. If indeed ye will magnifie your selves against me f, and plead against me my reproach g:

f i.e. Use lofty, and imperious, and contemptuous Speeches against me. Or, seek Praise and Honour from others, by your conquering or out-reasoning of me. g Either, 1. Your reproaches: If your reproachful and censorious Speeches must pass for solid Arguments. Or, 2. My wickedness, which, if true, were just matter of reproach, and the cause of all my miseries. Or, 3. My contemptible and calamitous condition, for which you reproach and condemn me as an Hypocrite and wicked Man.

6. Know now h that God hath overthrown me i, and hath compassed me with his net k.

h Consider what I am now saying, i Hath grievously afflicted me in all kinds: Therefore it ill becomes you to aggravate my miseries; and if my passions, hereby raised, have broken forth into some extravagant and unmeet expressions, I might expect your pity and favourable construction, and not such severe censures and reproaches. Heb. God hath perverted me, i.e. either my state or condition, as was now said, or my right and cause. He oppresseth me with power, and will not give me a fair hearing, as it follows, v. 7. He giveth me very hard measure, and dealeth worse with me than I might in reason and justice expect from so wise and gracious a God. This is an harsh reflection upon God; but such passages have sometimes come from good men when under sore afflictions and temptations, which was Job's case. k i.e. With afflictions on every side, so that I cannot escape, nor get any freedom to come to him and plead with him, as I desire.

7. Behold, I cry out l of ‖ wrong m, but I am not heard: I cry aloud, but there is no Judgment n.

l To wit, unto God by Prayer or Appeal. m That I am oppressed, either, 1. by my Friends: Or rather, 2. by God, who deals with me according to his Soveraign Power, and exact and rigorous Justice, and not with that equity and benegnity which he sheweth to the generality of men, and hath promised to good men, such as he knoweth me to be. n God will not hear my Cause, nor pass Sentence; which I might reasonably expect from him: but he quite neglects me, and hath utterly forsaken me and left me in the hands of the Devil and wicked Men. See the like Complaints of other good men in the like case of desertion, Psalm 13. 2. & 22. 2. & 88. 15. Lament. 3. 8. Habak. 1. 2.

8. He hath fenced up my way that I cannot pass o, and he hath set darkness in my paths p.

o i.e. So that I know not what to say or do, and can see no means nor possibility of getting out of my troubles: p So that I cannot discern my way, or what course I should take.

9. He hath stript me of my glory q, and taken the crown r from my head.

q i.e. Of my Estate, and Children, and Authority, and all my Comforts. r i.e. All my Ornaments.

10. He hath destroyed me on every side s, and I am gone t: and * mine hope u hath he removed like a tree x.

*Chap. 24. 20.

s i.e. In all respects, and to all intents and purposes, my Person, and Family, and Estate. t i.e. I am a lost and dead man. Going is oft put for dying; as Gen. 15. 2. Psalm 39. 13. u i.e. All my hopes of the present life, as he oft expresseth it; but not of the life to come, as appears from Job 13. 15, 16. & 19. 25, &c. x Which being once plucked up by the roots never groweth again.

11. He hath also kindled his wrath against me y, and * he counteth me unto him, as one of his enemies z.

y He hath stirred up his wrath against me of his own accord, without any provocation of mine, humane infirmity excepted. z i.e. He useth me as harshly as if I were an inveterate Enemy of God and of all goodness, though he knoweth I am and have ever been an hearty lover and servant of him.

12. * His troops a come together, and raise up their way b against me, and encamp round about my tabernacle.

*Chap. 6. 4.

a i.e. My afflictions which are but God's Instruments and Souldiers marching under his Conduct. b Either, 1. cast a Bank or Trench round about me, as an Army doth when they go to besiege a place. Or rather, 2. make a Causeway or raised Path, as Pioneers usually do in low and waterish grounds for the march of an Army: God removes all Impediments out of the way, and lays me open to all manner of mischief.

13. * He hath put my brethren † far from me c, and mine acquaintance are verily estranged from me.

* Psal. 31. 11. & 38. 11. & 69. 8. & 88. 8, 18.

† i.e. My Kindred and Friends who might and should have supported and comforted me in my Distress. d Either, 1. in place; because they feared or disdained, or at least neglected to visit or succour me: Or, 2. in their affections which are far from me, when their bodies are present with me, as I find in you. But this also I ascribe to God; he hath alienated your hearts from me.

14. My kinsfolk have failed e, and my familiar friends have forgotten me f.

e To wit, to perform the offices of humanity and friendship which they owe to me. f i.e. Neglect and disregard me as much as if they had quite forgotten me.

15. They that dwell in mine house g, and my maids h count me for a stranger i: I am an alien in their sight k.

g Heb. The sojourners of my house; i.e. such as had formerly sojourned with me, whether strangers, widows, and fatherless, whom by the Law of Charity and Hospitality he entertained: Or hired Servants, who had for a good while their habitation and subsistence in his Family. h Who by reason of their Sex, commonly have and should have more tender and compassionate hearts than men. And therefore this is God's doing, who hath hardned their hearts against me. i Regard my Commands and Concerns no more than a strangers. k The same thing repeated through vehemency of passion, because this lay very heavy upon him.

16. I called my servant l, and he gave me no answer m: though I entreated him n with my mouth o.

l To do some servile office about me for my ease or relief. m He passed by as if he had been deaf, because he loathed and feared to come near to me. n To my Commands I added humble and earnest Desires. Either, 1 with gentle and moving speeches; Or rather, 2. with my own mouth and not by a proxy.

17. My breath is strange to my wife p, though I entreated for the childrens sake of † mine own body q.

p Who by reason of the stink of my breath and sores denied me her company. q By these pledges of our mutual and matrimonial tye and affection, the Children which came out of my Loyns; and were begotten by me upon her body. But divers render the words thus; And I intreated the children of my own body, i.e. Either some of Job's younger Children who by reason of their tender years were kept at home with their Father, when their eldest Brethren and Sisters were gone abroad to the Feast; or some of his Grand-children by those grown Sons and Daughters; for such also oft come under the name of children. But this sense seems not so proper, partly because according to that Translation here is mention of only Job's entreating them, but not a word of their denying his request; which is the only matter of his present Complaint; and partly because according to the former Translation it is a great and just aggravation of his Wifes unkindness, and exactly answers to the foregoing Verse, where the Servants perverseness is aggravated in the same manner and by part of the same words.

18. Yea ‖ young children r despised me; I arose s, and they spake against me.

‖ Or, the Vile.

Or, Fools; the most contemptible persons. s To wit, for my Seat, to shew my respect to them, though they were my inferiours, to shew my readiness to comply with that mean and low condition, into which God had now brought me. Or, I stood up, for so this word sometimes signifies. I did not disoblige or provoke them by any uncivil and uncomely carriage towards them, but was very courteous to them, and yet they make it their business to rail against me, as you also do.

19. * All † my inward friends t abhorred me: and they whom I loved u are turned against me.

* Psal. 41. 9. & 55. 13, 14, 20.

t Heb. the men of my secret; my Intimates and Confidents, to whom I imparted all my Thoughts, and Counsels, and Concerns. u Sincerely and fervently, which they so ill requite. He saith not, they who loved me; for their love, had it been true, would have continued in his affliction, as well as in his prosperity.

20. * My bone x cleaveth to my skin y, ‖ and to my flesh z, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth a.

* Chap. 30. 30. Psal. 102. 5. Lam. 4. 8.

x i.e. My bones, the Singular collectively put for the Plural; as Chap. 2. 5. Prov. 15. 30. y To wit, immediately, the fat and flesh next to the skin being consumed. The sense is, I am worn to skin and bone: See the same phrase Psalm 120. 5. z Or, as (the Particle and, being often so used, as hath been observed before) to my flesh, i.e. either as formerly it clave to my flesh: Or as near and as closely as it doth to these remainders of flesh which are left in my inward parts. a I am scarce sound and whole, and free from sores in any part of my skin, except that of my Jaws which holdeth and covereth the roots of my Teeth.

This being, as divers observe, the Devils Policy to leave his mouth untouched, that he might more freely express his mind and vent his blasphemies against God, which he supposed sharp pain would force him to do, and which he knew would be of pernicious consequence not only to Job, but to others also.

21. Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends b, for the hand of God hath touched c me.

b For such you have been and still pretend to be; and therefore fulfil that relation, and if you will not help me, yet at least pity me. c i. e. Smitten or afflicted me sorely, as this word is oft used, as Chap. 1. 11. Psalm 104. 32.

22. Why do ye persecute me as God d, and are not satisfied with my flesh e?

d Either, 1. as God doth: or rather, 2. as if you were gods and not Men; as if you had the same infinite knowledge which God hath, whereby you can search my heart and know my hypocrisie, and the same soveraign and absolute Authority to say and do what you please with me, without giving any reason or account of it, which is indeed the Prerogative of the great God, but it belongs not to you who are Men, and therefore liable to mistake and misjudging, and such as must give an account to God of all their words and carriages towards their Brethren, and particularly towards persons in affliction, and withal subject to the same Diseases and Calamities under which I groan; and therefore may need the pity which I expect from you. e i. e. With the consumption and torment of my whole body, but add to it the vexation of my spirit by grievous reproaches and censures; but are like Wolves or Lions that are not contented with devouring the flesh of their prey, but also break their bones.

23. † Oh that my words f were now written; oh that they were printed in a book!

f Either, 1. the following and famous confession of his Faith, v. 25, &c. Or rather, 2. all his foregoing discourses with his Friends, which he was so far from disowning or being ashamed of, that he was desirous that all Ages should know, that they might judge between him and them, whose Cause was better, and whose Arguments were stronger.

24. That they were graven with an iron pen g and lead h, in the rock for ever!

g Of which also there is mentioned, Jer. 17. 1. h Or, of lead; or with lead, the Particle and being oft so used; as Gen. 4. 20. Exod. 1. 6. Jer. 22. 7. For this Lead may be either, 1. the Writing-pen which might be either of Iron or of Lead: For though Lead be of it self too soft, yet there was an Art of tempering Lead with other Metals to such a degree of hardness that it would pierce into a Rock; as they did also temper Brass, so that they could make Bows and Swords of it. Or, 2. the Writing-table: for the Ancients did use to write divers things in Lead, as is well known. Or, 3. the Writing-Ink, as I may call it: For they used to grave the Letters in a Stone with an Iron Tool, and then to fill up the Cuts or Furrows made in the Stone with Lead, that the Words might be more plainly seen and read.

25. For i I know k that my redeemer l lived m, and that he shall stand n ‖ at the latter day o upon the earth p.

i This is the reason of his great Confidence in the goodness of his Cause, and his willingness to have the matter depending between him and his Friends published and submitted to any Tryal, because he had a living and powerful Redeemer to plead his Cause, and vindicate his person from all their severe censures, and to give sentence for him. k I have no knowledge nor confidence, nor hope of restitution to the prosperities of this life; yet this one thing I know, which is more comfortable and considerable, and therein I rejoyce though I be now a dying Man, and in a desperate condition for this life. l In whom I have a particular, interest, and he hath a particular care of me. Quest. What Redeemer, and what Deliverance doth Job speak of in this and the two following Verses? Answ. Some late Interpreters understand this place metaphorically, of God's delivering Job out of his doleful and desperate Condition, and restoring him to his former splendour and happiness in the World; it being a very usual thing in Scripture to call eminent Dangers or Calamities by the name of Death; as Psalm 22. 15. & 88. 4, 5. Ezek. 37. 11, 12. 2 Cor. 11. 23. And great and glorious Deliverances by the name of quickning and resurrection; as Psalm 71. 20. Isa. 26. 19. Rom. 11. 15. But the most Interpreters both ancient and modern understand it of Christ and of his Resurrection, and of Job's resurrection to life by his power and favour: Which seems most probable for many reasons. 1. From that known Rule, that a proper and literal Interpretation of Scripture, is always to be preferred before the Metaphorical, where it suits with the Text and with other Scriptures. 2. From the Hebrew word Goel, here used; which although sometimes it be used of God absolutely or essentially considered, yet it most properly agrees to Jesus Christ: For this word, as all Hebricians know, is primarily used of the next kinsman, whose Office it was to redeem by a price paid the sold or mortgaged Estate of his deceased kinsman, Levit. 25. 25. and to revenge his death, Num. 35. 12. and to maintain his Name and Honour by raising up Seed to him, Deut. 25. 5. All which most fitly agrees to Christ who is our neareſt kinsman and brother, Heb. 2. 11. as having taken our Nature upon him by Incarnation: who also hath redeemed that everlasting Inheritance which our first Parents had utterly lost and sold, by the price of his own blood; and hath revenged the death of Mankind upon the great Contriver of it, the Devil, by destroying him and his kingdom; and hath taken a course to preserve our Name, and Honour, and Persons to Eternity. And if the places where God is called Goel in the Old Testament, be examined, it will be found that either all or most of them may be, and some of them must be understood of God the Son, or of Christ, as Gen. 48. 16. Isa. 59. 20. See also Psalm. 74. 2. Isa. 41. 14. & 44. 6. & 49. 7. & 52. 3. & 63. 16. 3. Because Job was so far from such a firm Confidence as he here professeth, that he had not the least degree of hope of any such glorious temporal restauration as his Friends promised to him, as we have oft seen and observed in the former Discourses; as Chap. 16. 22. & 17. 12, 13, &c. And therefore that hope which every righteous Man hath in his death, Prov. 14. 32. and which Job oft professeth that he had, must necessarily be fixed upon his happiness in the future life. 4. Because some of the following expressions cannot without wresting and violence be applied to a Metaphorical Resurrection, as we shall see in the Sequel. 5. Because this is a more lofty and spiritual strain, than any in Job's former Discourses, and quite contrary to them. And as they generally savour of Dejection and Diffidence, and do either declare or encrease his Grief; so this puts him into another and much better temper: And therefore it is well observed, that after this time and these expressions, we meet not with any such impatient or despairing passages, as we had before; which shews that they had inspired him with new life and comfort. 6. Because this well agrees with other passages in this Book; wherein Job declareth, that although he had no hope as to this life and the comforts thereof, yet he had an hope beyond death, which made him profess, Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him, Job 13. 15. Trust in him: For what? Surely for comfort and happiness. Where? Not in this life, for that he supposeth to be lost, therefore it must be in the next life. And this was one reason why he so vehemently desired Death, because he knew it would bring him unto God and unto true Felicity. And this his hope and confidence in God and in his Favour to him, Job opposeth to those foul and false aspersions which his Friends had cast upon him, as if he had forsaken God and cast off all fear of him and hope in him. Object. 1. If this place had spoken of the Resurrection of the Body, some of the Hebrew Writers or Commentators upon this Place, who did believe that Doctrine, would have understood it so, and have urged it against the Sadducees, which they did not. Answ. 1. All the Jewish Writers which are now extant, lived and wrote since Christ's time; when the Doctors of that People were very ignorant of many great Truths, and of the plain meaning of many Scriptures, and very corrupt in their Principles as well as in their Practices. 2. There was a manifest Reason why they could not understand this Text thus, because they believed that Job in his Agonies did deny God's Providence, and consequently the Resurrection and the future Judgment, which though it was a most uncharitable and false Opinion, yet forced them to interpret this Text another way. Obj. 2. How is it credible that Job in those ancient times, and in that dark state of the Church should know these great Mysteries of Christ's Incarnation, and of the Resurrection and Life to come? Answ. 1. The mystery of Christ's Incarnation was revealed to Adam by that first and famous Promise, that the seed of the Woman should break the Serpent's head, Gen. 3. 15. which being the only Foundation of all his Hopes for the recovery and salvation of himself and of all his Posterity, he would doubtless carefully and diligently teach and explain it, as need required, to those that descended from him. 2. That the ancient Patriarchs and Prophets were generally acquainted with these Doctrines, is undeniably evident from Heb. 11. and 1 Pet. 1. 9, 10, 11, 12. 3. Particularly Abraham, from whom Job is supposed to have descended, had the Promise made to him that Christ should come out of his Loins, Gen. 12. 3. and is said to have seen Christ's day, and rejoyced to see it, John 8. 56. and had his hopes and desires fixed upon a divine and heavenly City and Country, Heb. 11. 10, 16. And as Abraham knew and believed these things himself, so it is manifest that he taught them to his Children and Servants, Gen. 18. 19. and to his Kindred and others, as he had occasion: And therefore it cannot seem strange that Job professeth his Faith and hope in these things. m I am a dying Man, and my hopes are dying, but he liveth and that for ever; and therefore though I die, yet he both can and will make me to live again in due time, though not in this World, yet in the other which is much better; and though I am now highly censured and condemned by my Friends and others, as a great Dissembler and a secret Sinner, whom God's hand hath found out; yet there is a day coming wherein my Cause shall be pleaded, and my Name and Honour vindicated from all these Reproaches, and my Integrity brought to light. n I am falling and dying, but he shall stand firm, and unmovable, and victorious in full power and authority: all which this word stand signifies; and therefore he is able to make me to stand in Judgment, and to maintain my Cause against all Opposers. Or, he shall arise, as this Verb most commonly signifies; i. e. Either, 1. he shall exist or be born, as this word is oft used; as Num. 32. 14. Deut. 29 22. Judg. 2. 10. 1 Kings 3. 12. Matth. 11. 11. And it notes Christ's Incarnation, that although as he was God, he was now and from all Eternity in being, yet he should in due time be made Man, and be born of a woman. Or, 2. he shall arise out of the dust; which had been more probable, if it had been in the Text from or out of, as now it is upon, the earth or dust; for Christ's Resurrection from the dead, might be fitly mentioned here as the Cause of Job's Resurrection, which followeth. o Either, 1. in the days of the Messiah or of the Gospel, which are oft called the latter or last days or times; times; as Isa. 2. 2. Hos. 3. 5. Joel. 2. 28. Compared with Acts 2. 17. 1 Tim. 4. 1. and 2 Tim. 3. 1. Heb. 1. 1. Or rather, 2. at the day of the general Resurrection and Judgment, which, as those holy Patriarchs well knew and firmly believed, was to be at the end of the World; and which is called the last day, John 6. 39, 40, 44, 54. & 11. 24. 8. 12. 48. 1 Pet. 1. 5. For this was the time when Job's Resurrection, of which he speaketh here, was to be. Heb. at the last: By which word he plainly intimates, that his hope was not of things present and of Worldly Felicities, of which his Friends had discoursed so much, but of another kind of, and a far greater blessedness which should accrue to him in after-times, long after he was dead and rotten. Or, the last; who is both the first and the last, Isa. 44. 6, Rev. 1. 11. who shall subdue and survive all his and his peoples Enemies and after others the last enemy, death, 1 Cor. 15. 26. and then shall raise up his people and plead their Cause, and vindicate them from all the Calumnies and Injuries which are put upon them, and conduct them to Life and Glory. p The place upon which Christ shall appear and stand at the last day. Heb. upon the dust; in which his Saints and Members lie or sleep, whom he will raise out of it: And therefore he is fitly said to stand upon the dust, or the Grave, or Death; because then he will put that among other Enemies under his feet; as it is expressed, 1 Cor. 15. 25, 26. Some render the Words thus, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew, The last, or at the last he shall arise or stand up against (for so this very Phrase is used, Gen. 4. 8. Judg. 9. 18. Psalm 54. 3.) the dust, and fight with it, and rescue the bodies of the Saints, which are held in it as Prisoners, from its Dominion and Territories. Some understand this of God, that He should stand last in the field as Conquerour of all his Enemies. But this neither agrees with the words, the Hebrew, Aphar, signifying dust, and being never used of the field or place of Battel; nor with Job's scope, which was to defend himself against his Friends Accusations, and to comfort himself with his hopes and assurance of God's Favour to be exhibited to him in due time. Which end the words in that sense would by no means serve, because God might and would be Conqueror of all his Enemies, though Job himself had been one of them, and though his Cause had been bad, and his Friends should with God have triumphed over him.

26. ‖ And though after my skin, worms destroy this body q; yet r in my flesh s shall I see God t:

q The style of this and other Poetical Books is concise and short, and therefore many words are to be understood in some places, to compleat the sense: The meaning of the place is this, Though my skin is now in a great measure consumed by Sores, and the rest of it together with this body shall be devoured by the Worms, which may seem to make my case quite desperate. Heb. And though (which Particle, as it is oft elsewhere, is here to be understood, as the opposition of the next branch sheweth) after my skin (which either now is or suddenly will be consumed by Sores or Worms) they (i.e. the destroyers or devourers, as is implied in the Verb; such Impersonal speeches being usual in the Scripture; as Gen. 50. 26. Luke 12. 20. & 16. 9. where the actions are expressed, but the persons or things acting are understood. And by the Destroyers, he most probably designs the Worms which do this work in the Grave) destroy or cut off, or devour this; i.e. all this which you see left of me, this which I now point to, all this which is contained within my skin, all my flesh and bones, this which I know not what to call, whether a living Body, or a dead Carkass, because it is between both; and therefore he did not say, this body, because it did scarce deserve that name. r For the Particle and is oft used adversatively, Or, then, as it is oft rendred. s Heb. out of my flesh, or with (as the Particle Mem is used, Can. 1. 2. & 3. 9. Isa 57. 8.) my flesh; i.e. with eyes of flesh, as Job himself calls them Chap. 10. 4. Or with bodily eyes; my flesh or body being raised from the Grave, and restored and reunited to my soul. And this is very fitly added, to shew that he did not speak of a mental or spiritual, but of a corporeal Vision, and that after his death. t The same whom he called his Redeemer, v. 25. i.e. Christ; of which see the note there, who being God-man, and having taken flesh, and appearing in his flesh or body with and for Job upon the earth, as was said v. 25. might very well be seen with his bodily eyes. Nor is this understood of a simple seeing of him; for so even they that pierced him shall see him, Revel. 1. 7. but of seeing him with delight and comfort, as that word is oft understood, as Gen. 48. 11. Job 42. 16. Psalm 128. 5. Isa. 53. 11. of that glorious and beautifying Vision of God, which is promised to all God's people, Psalm 16. 11. & 17. 15. Matth. 5. 8. 1 Cor. 13. 12. 1 John 3. 2.

27. Whom I shall see u for my self x, and mine eyes shall behold, and not † another y: though my reins be consumed † within me z.

u In manner before and after expressed. No wonder that he repeats it again and again, because the meditation of it was most sweet to him. x i.e. For my own comfort and benefit as that Phrase is oft used. Or, which is much of the same importance, on my behalf, to plead my Cause and vindicate me from all your reproaches. y To wit, for me or in my stead. I shall not see God by anothers eyes, but by my own, and by these self same eyes in this same body which now I have. Heb. not a stranger; i.e. This priviledge shall be granted to me and to all other sincere Servants of God, but not to strangers; i.e. to wicked men, who are oft called strangers; as Psal. 18. 44, 45. & 54. 3. Prov. 21. 8. because they are estranged or alienated from God and from his service and people. And if I were such an one, as you suppose me to be, I could never hope to enjoy that happiness. z This I do confidently expect and hope for, though at present my Case seems desperate, my very inward parts being even consumed with grief; and though, as I have said, the Grave and the Worms will consume my whole Body, not excepting the Reins which seem to be safest and furthest out of their reach. Or, without though, which is not in the Hebrew, My reins are consumed within me. So this may be a sudden and passionate ejaculation or exclamation (such as we find Gen. 48. 18. and oft in the Book of Psalms) arising from the contemplation and confident expectation of this his unspeakable happiness, wherein he expresseth his vehement desire and longing for that blessed time and state. Thereins are oft put for earnest desires or affections, whereof they are supposed to be the seat; as Job 38. 36. Prov. 23. 16. And men are oft in Scripture said to be consumed or eaten up, or the like, by ardent affections; as Psalm 69. 19. & 84. 2. and 119. 81, 82. John 2. 17.

28. But a ye should say b, why persecute we him c, seeing the root of the matter is found in me d?

a Or, Therefore, because this is my case, and my faith and hope in God. b So the Future is used Potentially; as it is Obad. v. 12. and the sense is, It would become you, or it is your duty upon this account to say. Or you will say; i.e. Either, 1. I hope you will say so, and that you will be more moderate in your censures and expressions concerning me, as being convinced and sweetned by this sincere and solemn profession of my Faith and Hope. Or, 2. Peradventure you will say; to wit, by way of excuse for your selves. c So it is a correction of themselves, seeing things are thus with him, we are blame-worthy that we have persecuted him with such bitter Invectives, and we will do so no more. Or, wherein or how (for so that Particle is sometimes used, as the Learned observe) do we persecute him, as he chargeth us, v. 22. He accuseth us falsly and without cause given on our parts. So it is an Apology for their hard speeches against him, which Job puts into their mouths as their exception to his charge which he mentioned, v. 22. and upon that occasion sails into a most serious and pathetical exclamation, v. 23, 24. and into a most solemn declaration of his Faith in God his Redeemer, v. 25, 26, 27. and after that digression he resumes the former matter, and here propounds an Objection, to which he gives a severe Answer, which may seem to suit much better with this than with the former Exposition. d These words contain either, 1. a Motive or Reason why they should correct themselves for persecuting him, and desist from it; because, saith Job, the root of the matter or word is in me. The root notes the occasion of the foundation, or the truth and substance of a thing. And by this matter or word may be meant either, 1. that famous profession of his Faith and Confidence in God, v. 25, 26, 27: which, saith he, I have not uttered vain-gloriously or hypocritically, but from my very heart, wherewith I believe what I have spoken with my mouth, as is said upon another occasion, Rom. 10. 9, 10. This Word or Faith is rooted in mine heart, as it should be, Matth. 13. 21. Col. 2. 7. I am no Hypocrite, as you asperse me, but an upright person, having a root of true Religion in me; which therefore should allay your Censures, and make you willing to bear with some circumstantial defects or mistakes in my discourses, or miscarriages into which my passion and pain might transport me, and make you repent of your cruel usage of a truly good man. But although Job had this root in his heart, yet this was doubted of, and not discernible by Job's Friends, and therefore could be no argument to them. Possibly it might be better to understand by this root of the word, to wit, of God's word, which is oft called the word, by way of eminency, the foundations or fundamental Truths of Divine Doctrine, which Job held; as appeared by this glorious Confession; howsoever he might err in the matter of Controversie with them; which being a difference in lesser things they should mildly have born with it, and not aggravated it and traduced him, as if thereby he had renounced God and the very Principles of Religion, as they did. Or, 2. the word or thing under debate among them. So the sense may be this, The root or truth of the thing debated by us is with me; i.e. is on my side. Your discourses and arguments have no truth nor solidity in them, as mine have. You speak whatever cometh into your minds and mouths, but my discourses are rooted or grounded upon sound knowledge and deep consideration. But this was no convincing answer; for they could easily retort the same thing upon him again, and their affirmation might seem as good as his; for it was only a begging of the thing in question. Or rather, 2. a defence of themselves and of their former sharp and severe discourses, which Job called Persecution, v. 22. And having made a short, but vehement and important digression v. 23, &c. he returns to the main question between them here: And the sense of this Verse (with submission to better judgments) seems to me to be plainly this; But ye will say; i.e. I know will object against my Charge; How or wherein, or why do we persecute him? Why doth he charge us with so black a Crime; seeing or for (as Vau is oft used) the root; i.e. the Foundation or Cause, or occasion of the word; i.e. of those words or passages of ours which are so ill taken, or of the matter; i.e. of the thing now debated among us, is in me; i.e. Job gives the occasion to it by his boisterous passions and wicked expressions against God, which we neither can nor ought to endure, but are to be sharply reproved. And so this Verse contains their Objection or Apology which Job puts into their mouths, to which he makes a sharp and suitable reply in the following Verse.

29. Be ye afraid of the sword e: for wrath bringeth the punishment of the sword f, that ye may know g that there is a judgment h.

e i.e. Of some considerable judgment to be inflicted on you which is called the sword; as Deut. 32. 41. and oft elsewhere. Do not please your selves with such pretences and crafty evasions, as if the blame were wholly in me, not in you: God will not be mocked by you; He sees and will punish your most unrighteous and uncharitable judgment of me and dealing with me. f For that wrath or fury which is in your hearts and breaks out of your lips against me, doth deserve and will certainly bring upon you the punishment (Heb. punishments or iniquities: but iniquity is oft put for punishment) of the sword; i. e. a dreadful judgment from God. Or, without any supplement except that which is generally understood, for wrath (that sin of wrath or rage against a Man, especially against one in affliction) is an iniquity (Heb. iniquities, the Plural number being used by way of aggravation, as Psalm 73. 22. and elsewhere: Or, of the iniquities; the Hebrew prefix Mem being here understood, as it is in many other places) of the sword; i. e. one of those iniquities which use to be, or are fit to be punished by the sword; i. e. by some eminent judgment: as Job 31. 19. An iniquity of the judges is an iniquity to be punished by the judges, as our Translation hath it. g The sense is either, 1. This admonition I now give you, that you may know it in time, and for your good, that you may seriously consider and prevent it. Or, 2. This judgment will come upon you that you may be taught by your own sad and costly Experience what you would not learn without it. h. i. e. That there will be a time of judgment when God will call men to an account for all their hard speeches and miscarriages, and particularly for their rash and uncharitable censures of their brethren, Matth. 7. 1. Rom. 14. 4. Jam. 4. 11. either in this life, or at that last and dreadful Day of the general Resurrection (of which he spoke v. 25. &c.) and judgment. God sees and observes, and will judge all your words and actions, and therefore do not flatter your selves with vain hopes of Impunity.

CHAP. XX.

1. THen answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2. Therefore a do my thoughts cause me to answer b, and for this I make haste c.

a For this thy severe sentence and denunciation of God's judgments against us, Chap. 19. 29. which much more justly belongs to thy self and is actually executed upon thee; and because of thy reproaches, as it followeth, v. 3. b I thought to have troubled my self and thee with no further discourses, considering how exceptious and incorrigible thou art, but my thoughts or consideration of thy reproachful words force me to break silence and to answer thee as the matter requires. c I speak sooner than I intended, because I am not able to contain my self longer, and fear lest I should forget what is in my mind. Possibly he interrupted Job, when he was proceeding further in his discourse. Or, he prevented some of his brethren who made an offer to speak.

3. I have heard d the check of my reproach e, and the spirit f out of my understanding g causeth me to answer h.

d From thy mouth. Or, shall I hear? to wit, with patience and without a reply? Who can endure it? e i. e. Thy shameful and opprobrious reproofs of us, as if we and all thy Friends were void of all humanity and natural affection towards thee, and were haters and cruel Persecuters and even Devourers of thee, Chap. 19. 19, 22. and as if we were guilty of most heinous Crimes, and might expect God's Vengeance upon us. f i. e. My Soul or Mind. g Or, because of (for so the Hebrew Mem oft signifies) my understanding; i. e. Out of, or because of that certain knowledge which I have of this matter from study and experience: I have not spoken, and I shall not speak out of ignorance, or prejudice, or passion and rage against Job, as he aspersеth us, but only what I evidently know, and yet hope that I can and shall convince thee of. h i. e. Forceth me to speak. Or, answereth for me; i. e. either vindicates me against thy Calumnies: or, suggesteth an answer to me.

4. Knowest thou not this i of old k, since man was placed upon earth l?

i i. e. This which I am now about to say: How canst thou, thou I say, who pretendest to such an exact and universal knowledge of men and things, be ignorant of so notorious a thing which wicked men sensibly feel, and good men diligently observe, and all men are forced to acknowledge one time or other? k i. e. From the experience of all former ages. l i. e. Since the World was made, and there were any men to observe God's Government of it.

* Psal. 37. 35, 36. † Heb. from near.

5. * That the triumphing of the wicked is † short m, and the joy of the hypocrite n but for a moment?

m Heb. is from near; i. e. from, or for a little time: They have not long enjoyed it, and it will shortly vanish. n This he adds by way of reflection upon Job, who though he did clear himself from gross wickedness, yet might be guilty of deep hypocrisie.

* Isa. 14. 13, 14. Obad. 3. 4. † Heb. cloud.

6. * Though his excellency mount up to the heavens o: and his head reach unto the † clouds:

o Though he be advanced to great Dignity and Authority in the World.

7. Yet he shall perish for ever, like his own dung p; they which have seen him q shall say, where is he r?

p Which men cast away with contempt and abhorrency. Compare 1 Kings 14. 10. & 2 Kings 9. 37. q With admiration at his felicity. r i. e. He is no where to be found; he is utterly lost and gone.

8. He shall fly away * as a dream s, and shall not be found t: yea, he shall he chased away as a vision of the night u. * Psa. 73. 20.

s Which for the present makes a great shew and noise, and highly affects the Fancy, but hath nothing solid nor permanent in it; for as soon as the Man awakes, all vanisheth, and the remembrance of it is quickly lost. t The Man will be utterly lost and gone together with all his riches and glory. u Which appears to a man in the night and in his sleep.

9. * The eye also which saw him, shall see him no more, neither shall his place any more behold him x. * Ch. 7. 8, 10. Psal. 37. 36. & 103. 16.

x i. e. It shall not acknowledge nor contain him. A figure called Prosopopœia, as Job 7. 10. Or, neither shall it (i. e. the Eye last mentioned) behold him any more in his place.

10. ‖ His children shall seek to please the poor y, and his hands shall restore their goods z. ‖ Or, the poor shall oppress his children.

y Either, 1. to get some small relief from them in their extream necessity. Or rather, 2. lest they should revenge themselves of them for the great and many Injuries which their Fathers did them; or seek to the Magistrate for reparations. z By the sentence of the Judge, to whom the oppressed poor will appeal notwithstanding all their entreaties and endeavours to dissuade them from so doing.

11. His bones a are full of the sin of his youth b, * which shall lie down with him in the dust. * Chap. 13. 26. Psa. 90. 8.

a i. e. His whole Body, even the strongest parts of it, which may seem most remote from danger. b Heb. of his youth; i. e. of his youthful pleasures and lusts, by a Metonymy of the subject. And this may be understood either, 1. of the sins themselves, that he shall persevere in his youthful lusts even in old age, and shall die without repentance. Or rather, 2. of the punishment of his sins, of which he is speaking both in the foregoing and following Verses. He shall feel the sad effects of those sins in his riper years, as riotous sinners commonly do; and, as it follows, attended him to his grave. Or, with his secret ways or sins, as others render it. Whereby he possibly intimates, that Job though he appeared righteous before others, yet was guilty of some secret wickedness for which God was now reckoning with him.

12. Though wickedness be sweet in his mouth c, though he hide it under his tongue d; c i. e. To his taste, though it greatly please him for the present. d As an Epicure doth a sweet Morsel, which he is loath to swallow, and therefore keeps and rolls it about his mouth that he may longer enjoy the pleasure of it. Though he be highly pleased with his lusts, and cleave to them in hearty love and resolve to hold them fast, and improve them to the greatest delight and advantage.

13. Though he spare it e, and forsake it not, but keep it still † within his mouth f. † Heb. in the midst of his palate.

e i. e. Will not part with it; or gratifie and obey it, in stead of subduing and mortifying it. f To suck out all the sweetness or benefit of it, though it be very delightful to him.

14. Yet his meat in his bowels is turned g, it is the gall of asps h within him.

g Into another nature or quality, from sweet to bitter. h i. e. Exceeding bitter and pernicious. Gall is most bitter; the Gall of Serpents is full of poyson, which from thence is conveyed to their mouths by Veins, as Pliny observes; and the poyson of Asps is most dangerous, and within a few hours kills without remedy.

15. He hath swallowed down riches, and he shall vomit them up again i: God shall cast them out of his belly k.

i i. e. Be forced to restore them with great shame and torment, as Gluttons sometimes do loath, and with grief and pain cast up that meat which they have eaten and swallowed down with much greediness and delight. k If no mans hand can reach him, God shall find him out and punish him severely.

16. He shall suck the poyson of asps l, the vipers tongue m shall slay him.

l That which he hath greedily and industriously sucked in as pleasant and wholsom nourishment, shall in the issue be as ungrateful and destructive to him as the poyson or head (for the Hebrew word signifies both, and the poyson lies in the head) of asps would be to one that sucketh it. m Together with its teeth in which the poyson lurks which it conveys by biting a Man.

17. He shall not see n the rivers, ‖ the floods, the brooks of honey and ‖ butter o. ‖ Or, streaming brooks. ‖ Or, cream.

n i. e. Not enjoy, as that word is oft used; as Psalm 106. 5. Eccles. 2. 1. o That abundant satisfaction and comfort (oft signified by these or such like Metaphors; as Psalm 36. 8 & 46. 5. Isa. 7. 15, 22. & 41. 18.) either which he promised to himself from that great great Estate which he had got by deceit and oppression; or which good men through God's blessing may and commonly do enjoy.

18. That which he laboured for p, shall he restore, and shall not swallow it down q: † according to his substance shall the restitution be r, and he shall not rejoyce therein s.

p Heb. Labour; i. e. the goods which were gotten with labour, either, 1. by the labour of others; or rather, 2. by his own labour: Which may relate as well to the goods of others which he got not without pains and difficulty; or to his own goods honestly gotten by the sweat of his Brows. And this is an aggravation of his misery, that he was forced to restore not only other mens goods which were in his hands, but his own also to make reparation for their damages. q To wit, so as to hold it; for otherwise he did swallow it, but withal did speedily vomit it up again, v. 15. which was as if he had not swallowed it. He shall not possess it long, nor to any considerable purpose. r i. e. He shall be forced to part with all his Estate to make compensation for his wrongs done to others. s i. e. He shall not enjoy what he had gotten, because it shall be taken from him.

19. Because he hath † oppressed, and hath forsaken the poor t, because he hath violently taken away an house which he built not u:

t By his oppression he brought men to utter poverty, and then forsook or left them in that forlorn estate, affording no mercy nor help to them. Or, some he made poor by his oppression, and others that were poor he suffered to perish for want of that relief which he should and might have afforded them; which is a crying sin in God's sight, and one of those sins for which God destroyed Sodom, Ezek. 16. 49. and therefore fitly mentioned here as one of the sins for which God punished this wicked Man. Or, He oppresseth and leaveth poor; as Broughton renders it. u i. e. Which was none of his. Heb. He hath violently taken away an house, and (or, but) did not build (or, repair, as building is oft used) it; to wit, that House for his own use; i. e. he did not build or possess that House as he intended to do, but was cut off by God's hand before he could enjoy the fruit of his oppressions.

20. * Surely he shall not † feel quietness in his belly x, he shall not save of that which he desired y.

* Ec. 5. 13, 15.

x i. e. He shall have no peace nor satisfaction in his mind in all his gains, partly because of his perpetual fears and expectations of the wrath of God and man, which his guilty Conscience knoweth that he deserves: and partly because they shall be speedily taken away from him. He still continueth the Metaphor of a Glutton, whose Belly is not quiet until it hath vomited up that wherewith he had oppressed it. y i. e. Any part of his good and desirable things, but he shall forfeit and lose them all.

21. ‖ There shall none of his meat be left z, therefore shall no man look for his goods a.

z For his own future use; but he shall be stript of all. a It being publickly known and observed that he was totally ruined, none of his Kindred or Friends shall trouble themselves to seek for any relicks of his Estate, as is usually done after mens deaths. But this Verse is and may be rendred otherwise: There shall none be left for his meat (i. e. He shall leave no Heir who shall possess or enjoy his goods) because (for so the Hebrew Particle Al-chen is oft used; as Gen. 38. 26. Num. 14. 43. Psalm 42. 7. Jer. 48. 36.) none of his goods shall remain, either for his Heir, or any other; all shall be utterly lost.

22. In the fulness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits b: every hand of the ‖ wicked c shall be upon him.

b In the height of prosperity and abundance he shall be distressed and tormented either by the horrours of an unquiet Mind and guilty Conscience, which makes him every moment expect Divine Vengeance to fall upon his head: Or rather, because of the sudden and unexpected assault of other men combining against him, and spoiling all his goods, as it follows. c Who lives by injury and the spoiling of others, and by God's Providence are directed to fall upon him. Or, of the labourer, whose wages possibly he hath detained: Or, of such as are in trouble or misery, as this word signifies, Job 3. 20. who may joyntly invade him, either because their necessity tempts and drives them to spoil others; or rather because they were such as had been brought into their Calamity by his Oppressions, and therefore now take Reparations from him.

23. When he is about to fill his belly d, God e shall cast the fury of his wrath f upon him, and shall rain it upon him g while he is eating h.

d i. e. When he hath enough and abundance to satisfie all his Appetites, and shall design to take the pleasure of all his gains, and to spend his days in Epicurism and sensuality. e Who is oft understood in this Book where he is not expressed; and so he is here, as appears from the following words; because there is no other person here expressed, who was to inflict these evils upon him; and because they are said to be rained down upon him; which implies their coming from heaven, or from God. f Some dreadful and destructive judgment. g This Phrase notes both the Author of his Plagues, God, and the nature and quality of them, that they shall come upon him like rain; i. e. with great vehemency, and so as he cannot prevent or avoid it. h As it fell upon thy Sons, Chap. 1. 18, 19. Compare Psalm 78. 30, 31.

24. * He shall flee from the iron weapon i, and the bow k of steel l shall strike him through m.

* Isa. 24. 18. Jer. 48. 43. Amos 5. 19.

i i. e. From the Sword or Spear; and so shall think himself out of danger. k An Arrow shot out of a Bow, a distant place and unknown hand shall unexpectedly fall upon him: So that he shall only go from one danger to another. l which is of great strength, and therefore sendeth forth the Arrow with greater force. Compare Ps. 18. 34. Or, of brass, as the word properly signifies: which the Ancients did so temper and harden, that their Bows were commonly made of it. m i. e. Mortally wound him.

25. It is drawn n and cometh out of the body o, yea, † the glistering sword p cometh out of his gall q: * terrors are upon him r.

† Heb. the lightning cometh.
* Ch. 18. 11.

n Either, 1. a Sword, which may be understood out of this Hebrew Verb, which is for the most part used of that Weapon, as Num. 22. 23, 31. Judg. 8 20, &c. and out of the following Branch of the verse. Or, 2. the Arrow last mentioned, which had entred into his body, and now was drawn out of it either by himself, or by some other person; as is frequent in that case, if peradventure he might be cured. o Or, out of his body; i. e. the body of the wounded Man; as appears both by the next Clause of the Verse, which is added to explain the former; where it is, out of his gall: and from the use of this Hebrew word, which signifies a mans body or carkass; as Judg. 14. 8. 1 Sam. 31. 12. Isa. 5. 25. Nahum 3. 3. p The word properly signifies lightning, and thence a glistering weapon, the bright Sword or Spear; as Deut. 32. 41. Ezek. 21. 10, 15. Nah. 3. 3. Habak. 3. 11. Whereby it is implyed, that he was doubly wounded, first by the Arrow, and then to make more sure work, with the Sword or Spear thrust into him. But the word may as well signifie the bright and sharp point of an arrow, of which he spoke hitherto; and having in the general said, that it came out of his body, now he determines the part of the body, the gall; which sheweth that the Wound was both deep and deadly, as they are in that part. It is probable he mentions this in reference to the like expression of Job Ch. 16. 13. q Into which it had entred, and wherewith it was coloured. r To wit, the terrours of Death; because he perceived by the tincture of his Gall upon the Weapon, that his Wound was incurable. Or horrours of Conscience, because he cannot live, and dare not die.

26. All darkness s shall be hid t in his secret places u; a fire not blown x shall consume him, it shall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle y.

s i. e. All sorts of miseries both of Soul and Body, and Estate. t Or, is hid or laid up; to wit, by God for him. This Phrase may note, that though it be not actually upon him, yet it is reserved and treasured up for him, and is kept as in a sure place, and shall infallibly overtake him. u Either, 1. In his hid treasures, as this very word signifies, Psalm. 17. 14. He treasures up wealth, and with God's wrath and curse. Or, 2. in those places where he confidently hopes to hide and secure himself from all evils and enemies: yet even there God shall find him out. Or, for, or instead of (or with; for both ways the prefix Lamed is oft used) his hid treasures. x To wit, by man, but kindled by God himself, as that was, Chap. 1. 16. He thinks by his might and violence to secure himself from men, but God by his own immediate hand, or in some unknown and unexpected manner will find him out. Some understand it of Hell-fire; of which see Isa. 30. 33. y i. e. with his Posterity or Family, who shall inherit his curse as well as his Estate.

27. * The heaven shall reveal his iniquity z, and the earth a shall rise up against him.

* Ch. 16. 18, 19.

z i. e. God shall be a swift witness against him by some extraordinary judgments; still he reflects upon Job's Case, and the Fire from Heaven, Chap. 1. a i. e. All Creatures upon earth shall conspire with God to destroy him.

28. The encrease of his house b shall depart c, and his goods shall flow away d in the day of his wrath e.

b Either, 1. his Posterity; or rather, 2. his Estate got by the labour, and employed for the use of his Family. c Shall be lost or taken away from him: See 2 Kings 20. 17. d Like Waters; to wit, swiftly and strongly, and so as to return no more. e i. e. Of God's wrath; when God shall come to execute judgment upon him.

29. * This is the portion of a wicked Man from God f, and the heritage † appointed unto him g by God.

* Ch. 27. 13.

f Who like a wise Master of a Feast gives to every man his proper portion, and as a just Judge distributes to him according to his deserts. g Heb. the heritage (i. e. the Portion, as before, called here an heritage; partly to note the stability and assurance of it, that it is as firm as an Inheritance to the right Heir; and partly in opposition to that Inheritance which he had gotten by fraud and violence) of his word; either, 1. of God's Word, i. e. which is allotted to him by the word or sentence of God. Or, 2. of the wicked man's word, the reward of his speeches; which, like his actions, are and may well be presumed to be wicked and blasphemous, and many ways offensive to God. And he instanceth in his his ſpeeches rather than his actions, to meet with Job; who, though he made ſome colourable excuſes for his actions, yet was manifeſtly guilty of hard and ſinful ſpeeches againſt God; which he would hereby intimate, that they were not ſuch harmleſs and excuſable things as Job pretended, as appeared by theſe ſevere judgments which they brought upon wicked men.

CHAP. XXI.

1. BUt Job anſwered and ſaid,
2. Hear diligently my ſpeech, and let this be your conſolations a.

a Or, This ſhall be your conſolations; i. e. I ſhall accept of your patient and diligent attention to me in ſtead of all thoſe conſolations which you owed to me in this condition, and which I expected from you.

3. Suffer me that I may ſpeak b, and after that I have ſpoken, * mock on c.

b Without ſuch interruption as you have given me. Chap. 20. 2.

c If I do not defend my Cauſe with ſolid and convincing Arguments, go on in your ſcoffs if you pleaſe.

* Ch. 16. 10. & 17. 2.

4. As for me, is my complaint to man d? and if it were ſo e, why ſhould not my ſpirit be † troubled f?

d Or, of man; for the prefix Lamed commonly ſignifieth both to and of: And this queſtion implies a Denial, or that his Complaint is not to, or of man; to wit, only, but to, or of God; as is here ſufficiently implied, and oft elſewhere expreſſed by Job in this Book. So the ſenſe ſeems to be either, 1. this, I do not make my moan or complaint unto, or expect relief from you, or from any men, but from God only: and therefore you have reaſon patiently to hear me when I am pouring forth my Complaints to God. Or rather, 2. this, do I only complain, or have I reaſon to complain only of you, and your unmerciful carriage to me; or of men who have dealt barbarouſly with me? Chap. 1. & 30. 1, 9, &c. Surely no: But my complaint is of God, and of his hard and ſevere dealing with me. It is he who hath alienated my Friends affections from me, and ſtirred up mine enemies againſt me: And though it hath been my chief care and buſineſs to pleaſe and ſerve him, yet he hath alſo ſet himſelf againſt me, and ſhot all his Arrows into me. And therefore my Expoſtulations with him (which here follows, v. 7.) is the more reaſonable; and if you will hear me calmly and patiently, you will find that I have cauſe of complaining. e i. e. If my complaint were only of Man, I have cauſe to be troubled. Or, if it be ſo, i. e. If I do not complain of man, but of God, it is no wonder if my Spirit be greatly oppreſſed, and you ought to allow me the liberty of eaſing my troubled mind, and modeſtly pleading my Cauſe before God. f Heb. be ſhortned or ſtraitned; i. e. either grieved, or vexed, as this word ſignifies, Exod. 6. 9. Num. 21. 5. Judg. 10. 16. & 16. 16. The heart is enlarged by joy and contracted by ſorrow; as appears by Philoſophy and Experience.

5. † Mark me, and be aſtoniſhed g, and lay your hand upon your mouth h.

g Conſider what I am about to ſay concerning the wonderful proſperity of the worſt of Men, and the intolerable preſſures of ſome good men, ſuch as I have manifeſted, and ſhall prove that I am, and it is able to fill you that are but Spectators with aſtoniſhment and horrour at the ſtrange and myſterious courſe of Divine Providence herein; and therefore it is no wonder, if I who ſuffer ſuch things from that God whom I have ſo faithfully ſerved, am overwhelmed with the ſenſe of it. h i. e Be ſilent, as this Phraſe is oft uſed, as Chap. 40. 4. Prov. 10. 32. Micah 7. 16. for ſhame forbear to vex me with your words: Or, you will lay, &c. the Imperative being put for the Future, as is uſual. I am perſwaded you will be ſilenced and convinced by what I ſhall ſay.

6. Even when I remember i, I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my fleſh.

i What I have partly obſerved, and partly felt of theſe things. The very remembrance of what is paſt, fills me with dread and horrour.

* Ch. 12. 6. Pſal. 17. 10. & 73. 3, 12. Jer. 12. 1. Hab. 1. 16.

7. * Wherefore k do the wicked live l, become old m, yea, are mighty in power?

k He expoſtulates this matter partly with his Friends; If things be as you ſay, how comes this to paſs, &c. partly with God himſelf, wherefore doth the righteous God diſtribute things ſo unequally? l To wit, long and happily; as living is often taken, as Levit. 18. 5. 1 Sam. 10. 24. & 25. 6. Pſal. 38. 19. a painful and afflicted life being a kind of death, and oft ſo called, as Deut. 30. 15, 19. Prov. 15. 10. & 19. 16. 1 Cor. 3. 22. & 15. 31. m To wit, in their proſperous eſtate.

8. Their ſeed n is eſtabliſhed o in their ſight p with them, and their off-ſpring before their eyes.

n Either, 1. the Fruits of their ground: Or rather, 2. their Children; as it is explained in the next branch of the Verſe, the words both here and there uſed, being commonly ſo underſtood. o i. e. They multiply and proſper greatly. p Which is a great addition to their happineſs.

9. Their houſes † are ſafe from fear, neither is the rod of God upon them q.

q They neither fear nor feel any diſturbance.

10. Their bull gendreth and faileth not, their cow calveth, and caſteth not her calf.

11. They ſend forth their little ones like a flock r, and their children dance.

r Of Sheep or Goats, as the word ſignifies; in great numbers, and with ſweet concord; which is a ſingular delight to them and to their Parents.

12. They take the timbrel and harp, and rejoyce at the ſound of the organ.

13. They ſpend their days ‖ in wealth s, and in a moment t go down to the † grave.

‖ Or, in mirth. † Heb. Hell.

s In good; i. e. in the enjoyment of all the good things of this life, without any mixture of evil. t They do not die of a lingring and tormenting Diſeaſe, as I now, and many other good men die, but ſuddenly and ſweetly like Lambs; as is uſually ſaid in ſuch caſes.

14. * Therefore x they ſay y unto God, Depart from us, for we deſire not the knowledge of thy Laws z.

* Chap. 22. 17.

x Becauſe of their conſtant proſperity. Heb. And: or Yet. Though God be ſo gracious to them, yet they ſay and do thus to him. y Sometimes in words, but commonly in their thoughts and affections, and the language of their lives: See Pſalm 14. 1. & 36. 1, 2. Mal. 3. 14, 15. Tit. 1. 16. z Much leſs the practice.

15. What is the Almighty a, that we ſhould ſerve him? and * what profit ſhould we have, if we pray unto him?

* Ch. 35. 3. Mal. 3. 14.

a What excellency is there in him? and what advantage have we, or can we expect from him?

16. Lo, their good is not in their hand b: the counſel of the wicked is far from me c.

b This ſeems to be an anſwer to the foregoing Queſtion, and a Confutation of that ungodly Opinion and practice, v. 14, 15. Wicked men (ſaith he) have no reaſon to neglect and reject God, becauſe of their proſperity, for their good; i. e. all their wealth and felicity, is not in their hand; i. e. it neither was obtained, nor can be kept, by their own might, but only by God's power and favour upon whom they wholly depend for it. Or, the ſenſe is, Though they have riches, and power, and glory in their hands, yet their true and proper good is not in their hand; i. e. They are deſtitute of that in which their true happineſs lies; to wit, in God's love and favour; and all the comforts which they enjoy are attended with God's wrath and curſe, and therefore not to be envied by any man in his wits. They ſay to God. depart from us, when indeed their true and only felicity conſiſts in the enjoyment of him. Compare Pſalm 4. 6, 7. c Therefore I am far from approving their Opinion, or following their courſe, or enjoying their proſperity, or deſiring to partake of their Delicates upon ſuch terms.

17. How oft d is the ‖ candle e of the wicked put out? and how oft cometh their deſtruction upon them? God f diſtributeth ſorrows in his anger.

d This Phraſe notes, either, 1. the rarity and ſeldomneſs of it. This, I confeſs, ſometimes happens, but not oft. Or rather, 2. the frequency of it; I grant that this happens oft, though not conſtantly, as you affirm. And this ſeems beſt to agree both with the uſe of this phraſe in Scripture, where it notes frequency; as Pſalm 78. 40. Matth. 18. 21. Luke 13. 34. and never ſeldomneſs; and with the foregoing words, as a reaſon why the counſel of the wicked was far from him; becauſe they oft times pay dear for it in this life, and always in the next life; and with the following Verſes, wherein he diſcourſeth largely not of the proſperity of the Wicked (as he ſhould have done, if the ſenſe of theſe words were this, that ſuch were but ſeldom afflicted) but of their Calamities. e Or, lamp; i. e. their glory and outward happineſs; as Chap. 18. 6. 2 Sam. 21. 17. Pſalm 132. 17. f Who is manifeſtly underſtood out of the following words, this being God's work and proceeding from God's anger.

18. * They are as ſtubble before the wind, and as chaff that the ſtorm † carrieth away g?

* Pſal. 1. 4. & 35. 5. Iſa. 29. 5. Hoſ. 13. 3. † Heb. ſtealeth away.

g i. e. Their deſtruction ſhall be ſpeedy, certain, and irrecoverable.

19. God layeth up h ‖ his iniquity i * for his children: he rewardeth him, and he ſhall know it k.

‖ That is, the puniſhment of his iniquity. * Exod. 20. 5.

h To wit, in his Treaſures Rom. 2. 5. i Or rather, the puniſhment of his iniquity; i. e He will puniſh him both in his perſon and in his poſterity. k i. e. He ſhall live to ſee the deſtruction of his children.

20. His

20. His Eyes shall see his destruction l, and * he shall drink m of the wrath of the Almighty.

* Psal. 75. 8. Jer. 25. 15. Rev. 14. 10. & 19. 15.

l i.e. He shall be destroyed, as to see death, is to die, Psal. 89. 48. Heb. 11. 5. and to see affliction, or any kind of evil, is to feel it, Psal. 90. 15. Lament. 3. 1. and to see good, is to enjoy it, Ch. 7. 7. & 9. 25. Psal. 34. 12. Or this Phrase may be emphatical, he shall, foresee his Ruine hastening towards him, and not be able to prevent or avoid it; he shall sensibly feel himself sinking and perishing: which aggravates his misery: m Not sip or taste, but drink; which word commonly notes the abundance of the thing spoken of.

21. For what pleasure hath he in his House after him n, when the number of his Months is cut off in the midst o?

n Or, For what desire, or care; or study hath he for, or concerning (as Beth is oft used) his House, i.e. his Children. When he is dead and gone he cares not what becomes of his Children, as Irreligion commonly makes men unnatural, he is not concerned nor affected with their Felicity or misery. See Ch. 14. 21. And therefore God doth punish both him and his Children whilest he lives, v. 19, 20. Or thus: What delights can he take in the thoughts of the Glory and Happiness of his Posterity, when he finds that he is dying a violent and untimely Death? So this is a farther proof that this man is neither happy in himself, nor with reference to his Posterity. o When that number of Months which by his Constitution, and the course of Nature, he might have lived, is diminished and cut off by the hand of Violence.

* Isa. 40. 13. & 45. 9. Rom. 11. 34. 1 Cor. 2. 16.

22. * Shall any teach God Knowledge p? seeing he judgeth those q that are high.

p i.e. Discretion, or how to govern the World? For so you do whilest you tell him that he must not sorely afflict the Godly, nor give the wicked much and long prosperity here. q Either, 1. The highest persons, whether in Earth, as the greatest Kings, or in Heaven, as the Angels, he judgeth them, i.e. he exactly knows them, and accordingly gives sentence concerning them, as he sees fit; and therefore it is great folly and presumption in us to direct or correct his Judgments. Or, 2. Those things that are high, and deep, and far out of our reach, as Gods secret Counsels and Judgments are.

23. One r dieth † in his full strength ‖, being wholly at ease and quiet.

r To wit, either, 1. One of these wicked men, of whose condition he is here speaking. Or, 2. Any one man, whether good or bad. ‖ In a state of perfect Health, and Strength, and Prosperity; all which this Phrase implies.

‖ Or, Milk-pails.

24. His ‖ Breasts s are full of Milk, and his Bones are moistened with Marrow t.

s The Hebrew word is not elsewhere used, and therefore it is diversly translated; either, 1. Breasts. But that seems very improper here, because mens Breasts do not use to be filled with Milk. Or, 2. Milk-Pails. But their fulness is common, and no sign of eminent plenty, which is here designed. Besides, the following Branch, which in Job and elsewhere frequently explains the former, implies that it signifies some part of mans Body, as all the ancient Interpreters render it, either the sides, as some of them have it, or the bowels, as others. But for the following Milk, they read Fat; the Hebrew Letters being exactly the same in both words: and the Hebrews by the name of Milk do oft understand Fat. t Which is opposed to the dryness of the bones, Job 30. 30 Psal. 102. 3. which is caused by Old-age, or grievous Distempers or Calamities.

25. And another u dieth in the bitterness of his Soul x, and never eateth with Pleasure y.

u Either, 1. Another wicked man. Or, 2. Any other man promiscuously considered, either good or bad. So hereby he shews how indifferently, and alike, God deals the concerns of this Life to one and another, to good and bad. So he shews that there is a great variety in Gods Dispensations, that he distributes great Prosperity to one, and great afflictions to another no worse than he, according to his wise but secret Counsel. x i.e. With Heart-breaking Pains and Sorrows. y i.e. Hath no pleasure in his Life, no not so much as at Meal-time, when Men usually are most free and pleasant.

26. They shall lie down alike in the dust z, and the Worms shall cover them.

z All these worldly differences are ended by Death, and they lie in the Grave without any distinction, till the time of General Resurrection and Judgment comes. So that no man can tell who is good, and who is bad by any Events which befal them in this Life.

27. Behold, I know your thoughts a, and the Devices b which ye wrongfully imagine c against me d.

a I perceive what you think, and will object, and say for your own defence. b Or, evil Thoughts, for so this word is oft used, as Prov. 12. 2. & 14. 17. & 24. 8. Isa. 32. 7. c Or, wrest, or, violently force. For they strained both Job's words, and their own thoughts, which were byassed by their prejudice and Passion against Job. d For I know very well that your discourses, though they be of wicked men in the general, yet are particularly levelled at me.

28. For ye say e, where is the House of the Prince f? and where are † the Dwelling-places of the wicked g?

e To wit, in your minds. f i.e. It is no where, it is lost and gone. This is spoken either, 1. Of Job, or his eldest Son, whose house God had lately overthrown. Or rather, 2. In general of wicked Princes or Potentates, as the following answer sheweth. So the meaning of the question is, That it was apparent, from common observation, that eminent Judgments, even in this Life were sooner or later the portion of all ungodly Men. g which is added to limit the former Expression, and to shew that he spake only of wicked Princes.

29. Have ye not asked them that go by the way h? and do ye not know their tokens i?

h These are the words, either, 1. of Job's Friends, who thus continue their former Discourse by a second Enquiry: Or rather, 2. Of Job himself, who answers one question with another. You may learn this, which is the matter of our debate, to wit, that good men are oft afflicted, and that wicked men do commonly live and die in great prosperity, and are not punished in this World, even from them that go by the way, i.e. either from Travellers, who living seen, and observed many Persons, and places, and events, are more capable Judges of this matter; or from any person that passeth along the high way, from every one that you meet with. It is so vulgar and trivial a thing, that no man of common sense is ignorant of it. i i.e. The Examples, or Evidences, or Signs of this truth, which they that go by the way can produce. They will shew here and there in divers places the goodly Houses and Castles, and other monuments of Power and dignity, which wicked Potentates have erected, and to this day do possess, and in which divers of them live and die. He alludes here to those Tokens, which are set up in high ways for the direction of those who travel in them.

30. * That the wicked k is reserved l to the day of Destruction? they m shall be brought forth n to † the day of Wrath o.

* Prov. 16. 4. † Heb. the day of Wrath.

k This is the thing which they might learn of Passengers. l Or with-held or kept back, to wit, from falling into common Calamities, though in truth he be not so much kept from Evil, as kept for evil, he is reserved from a less, that he may be swallowed up in a greater misery, as Pharaoh was kept from the other Plagues that he might be drowned in the Sea. m He speaketh of the same person; only the singular number is changed into the plural, possibly to intimate, that although for the present only some wicked men were punished, yet then all of them should suffer. n To wit, by the conduct of Gods Providence and Justice, as malefactors are brought forth from Prison to Judgment and Execution, though they be brought to it slowly, and by degrees, and with some kind of Pomp and State, as this word signifies. o Heb. To the day of Wrath, i.e. of special and extraordinary Wrath, either to some terrible and desolating Judgments, which God sometimes sends upon wicked Princes or People: Or, to the day of the last and general judgment, which is called in Scripture the day of Wrath: For the day of the general Resurrection and Judgment was not unknown to Job and his Friends, as appears from Ch. 19. 25, &c. and other passages of this Book.

31. Who shall declare his way to his face q? and who shall repay him what he hath done r?

p i.e. His wicked courses and actions, and whither they lead him. His power and splendour is so great, that scarce any man dare reprove him for his sin, or shew him his danger. q i.e. Plainly, and whilest he lives, as the same Phrase is used, Deut. 7. 10. r No man can bring him to an account or punishment.

32. Yet s shall he be brought t to the † Grave u, and shall † remain in the Tomb x.

s Heb. And. The pomp of his death shall be suitable to the glory of his Life. t With Pomp and State, as the word signifies. u Heb. to the Graves, i.e. to an honourable and eminent Grave: The plural number being oft used Emphatically to note Eminency, as Job 40. 10. Prov. 1. 20. Lam. 3. 22. He shall not die a violent but a natural Death, and shall lie in the Bed of Honour. x Heb. Shall watch, (i.e. have a constant and fixed abode, as Watchmen have in the watching-place) in the heap, i.e. in his Grave, which is called an heap, either because the Earth is there heaped up, or because it was adorned with some Pyramid, or other Monument raised up to his Honour. His Body shall quietly rest in his Grave or Monument, where he shall be embalmed and preserved so entire and uncorrupted, that he might rather seem to be a living Watch-man, set there to guard the Body, than to be a dead Corps.

33. The clods of the Valley y shall be sweet unto him z, and every man shall draw after him ‖, as there are innumerable dead before him.

y i.e. Of the Grave, which is low and deep like a Valley. z He shall sweetly rest in his Grave, free from all cares, and fears, and troubles, Ch. 3. 17, 18. ‖ Heb. He shall draw every man after him, to wit, into the Grave, i. e. All that live after him, whether good or bad, shall follow him into the Grave, i.e. shall dye as he did. So he fares no worse herein than all Mankind. He is figuratively said to draw them, because they come after him, as if they were drawn by his Example.

34. How then comfort ye me in vain, seeing in your answers there remaineth † Falshood *?

* Why then do you seek to comfort me with vain hopes of recovering my prosperity if I repent, seeing your grounds are manifestly false, and common Experience sheweth, that good men are very oft in great tribulation, while the vilest of men thrive and prosper in the World.

CHAP. XXII.

1. THen Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2. Can a man be profitable unto God a, ‖ as b he that is wise may be profitable to himself c?

* Chap. 35. 7. Psal. 16. 2. Luk. 17. 10. ‖ Or, if he may be profitable, doth his good success depend thereon?

a i.e. Add any thing to his Perfection or Felicity, to wit, by his Righteousness, as the next Verse shews. Why then dost thou insist so much upon thy own Righteousness, as if thou didst oblige God by it, or as if he could not without injury afflict thee who supposest thy self to be a righteous person, though indeed thou art not so, as he saith, v. 5, 6, &c. but if thou wert really so, God is not thy debter for it. Or, because; or, but; or yea rather: so this latter Clause is to be read without an Interrogation, and the former with it. A wise or good man (for these in Scripture-use are one and the same) doth much good to himself, he promotes his own Peace, and Honour, and Happiness by his Goodness; and having so great a reward for his Virtue, God is not indebted to him, but he is indebted to God for it.

3. Is it any pleasure d to the Almighty, that thou are righteous? Or is it gain to him, that thou makest thy ways perfect e?

d i.e. Such a pleasure as he needs for his own ease and contentment, without which he could not be happy, as appears by the foregoing and following words. For otherwise God is oft said to delight in the good actions of his People, to wit, so far as to approve and accept them. e That thy Life is free from blemish, as thou pretendest, but falsly, as I shall shew.

4. Will he reprove thee f, for fear of thee g? Will he enter with thee into Judgment h?

f Will, or doth, or would he reprove thee? i.e. punish thee: For this word is frequently used of real Rebukes or Chastisements, as hath been oft noted. g Because he is afraid, lest if he should let thee alone, thou wouldst grow too great and powerful for him, as Princes oft-times crush those Subjects of whom they are afraid? Surely no. As thy Righteousness cannot profit him, so thy wickedness can do him no hurt. Or, For thy Piety or Religion, which is commonly called by the name of Fear? Doth he punish thee because thou fearest and servest him, as thou dost insinuate? No surely, but for they sins, as it follows. h And condemn thee, to wit, for the reason last mentioned, as appears from the Hebrew Text, where the words lie thus, Will he for fear of thee reprove thee, or enter with thee into Judgment?

5. Is not thy wickedness great, and † thine iniquities infinite i?

i Thy great sins are the true and only causes of thy misery. The words may very well be rendred thus, Is not thy evil (i.e. thy punishment or affliction, which is frequently expressed by this very word) great, because (the particle and being oft used causally, as it is Gen. 18. 13. & 22. 12. & 24. 56. Isa. 39. 1. & 64. 5.) thine iniquities are infinite? Are not thy calamities procured by, and proportionable to thy sins? Thy own Conscience tells thee they are so. And therefore thou hast no reason to accuse God, nor any person but thy self.

6. For thou hast taken k a pledge from thy Brother l for nought m, and † stripped the naked of their Cloathing n.

k Or, Surely thou hast taken. He speaks thus by way of conjecture, or strong presumption, when I consider thy grievous and unusual calamities, I justly conclude thou art guilty of all or some of these following crimes, and do thou search thine own Conscience, whether it be not so with thee. l i.e. Either of thy Neighbour, or of thy Kinsman; which are both called by the name of Brother. This is added to aggravate the offence. m i.e. Without sufficient and justifiable cause. Which he might do many ways, either by taking what he ought not to take, Deut. 24. 6. or from whom he ought not, to wit, the poor to whom he should give, Prov. 3. 27. or when, and in such manner as he ought not, of which see on Deut. 24. 10, 11. or by keeping it longer than he should, as when the poor mans necessity requires it, or when the debt is satisfied, Ezek. 18. 16. n Either by taking their Garment for a pledge, against the Law, Exod. 22. 26. or otherwise by robbing them of their Rights, all other injuries being Synecdochically comprehended under this. Qu. How could he strip the naked? Answ. He calls them naked, either, 1. Because they had but very few and mean Cloths, such being oft called naked, as Deut. 28. 48. 1 Cor. 4. 11. Jam. 2. 15. Or, 2. From the effect; because though he did not find them naked, yet he made them so. The like Phrases we have Isa. 47. 2. grind Meal, i. e. by grinding Corn make it Meal; Amos 8. 5. falsifying the deceitful Balances, i.e. by falsifying making true balances deceitful: And so here, to strip the naked, is by stripping them to make them naked.

7. Thou hast not given water o to the weary p to drink, and thou hast with-holden Bread from the hungry q.

o Surely thou hast been so hard hearted as to deny a Cup of cold Water to those that needed and desired it. Water was oft-times scarce and precious in those hot Countries, and was appropriated to particular persons, without whose leave other persons might not take it. p. i.e. To him who by reason of hard labour or Travel is weary and thirsty. So this word is used, Prov. 25. 25. q To whom it was due by Gods Law, Prov. 3. 27. which also was known to Job by the light of Nature. Hereby he intimates the greatness of this Sin of Uncharitableness, by ranking it with heinous crimes, whereas Job (as he thought) esteemed it but a small fault, if any.

8. But as for † the mighty man, he had the Earth r and the † honourable man dwelt in it s.

† Heb. the man of arm. † Heb. eminent, or, accepted for countenance. 2 Kings 5. 1. Isa. 3. 3.

r Heb. And, or but the man of Arm, or Strength, or Power, to him was the Earth, or the Land, i. e. he had the firm possession, or free enjoyment of it. Which is meant either, 1. Of Job, of whom he speaks invidiously in the third person. The mighty man Job possessed, and enlarged, and enjoyed his Estate without any compassion to the poor. Or rather, 2. Of other rich and potent men, who had the Earth or Land, either, 1. By Job's judicial Sentence, which was generally given in favour of the rich, and against the poor: Or, 2. By Job's kindness and courtesie. The rich were always welcome to him, his house was open to them, his Land was before them, when the poor were driven away from his House and Territories. s Either by thy sentence or permission, he had a peaceable and sure possession of it. He repeateth the same thing in other words.

9. Thou hast sent Widows t away empty u, and the Arms x of the Fatherless have been broken.

t Whose helpless Estate called for thy pity, Exod. 22. 22. Deut. 24. 17, 19. u Either by denying them that Relief which their poverty required, or that right which their cause deserved; or by spoiling them of their goods, because thou knewest them to be unable to oppose thee, or to right themselves. x i.e. All their supports and comforts, and rights. An heinous sin, but falsly charged upon Job.

10. Therefore y Snares are round about thee z, and sudden fear a troubleth thee;

y For these and the like crimes. The cause of thy ruine is not secret from Gods soveraign Power, and unsearchable Judgments, (as thou pretendest) but plain and manifest, even thy own crying sins. z Thou art encompassed with dangers and calamities. a Beside thy present miseries thou art tormented with the dread and expectation of further and sorer Judgments.

11. Or darkness b that thou canst not see, and abundance of Waters c cover thee.

b Either, 1. A darkness and confusion of mind, so great that thou canst not discern the true cause and use of all thy sufferings Or, 2. Grievous Calamities, which are oft called darkness, which are such that thou canst see no way nor possibility of escaping. Either thou art troubled with fear of further evils, as it is said, v. 10. or with the gross darkness of thy present state of misery. c i.e. Plenty and variety of sore afflictions, which are frequently compared to Waters, as Psal. 18. 16. & 66. 12. Isa. 43. 2.

12. Is not God in the height of Heaven d? and behold † the height of the Stars how high they are e?

d Surely he is; and from that high Tower he looketh down upon men, Psal. 14. 2. to behold, and govern, and recompense all their actions, whether good or bad. And therefore, O Job, thou are grossly mistaken, in thinking that all things in this lower world are managed by chance, and without any regard to Justice, or to just men, and not by the wise and holy Providence of God: For this is the genuine Consequence of thy great Principle, that good men suffer as deeply as any others, whilest the vilest of men are exalted and flourish. e Yet God is far higher than they, and from thence can easily spy all men and things here below; as the highest places afford the best prospects.

‖ Or, what. * Psal. 10 11. & 59. 7. & 73. 11. & 94. 7.

13. And f thou sayest, * how doth God know h; can he judge through the dark Cloud?

f Or,

f Or, Therefore: From this true and certain Principle thou draweſt this falſe and wicked Concluſion. Or, Yet, notwithſtanding this undeniable Argument. g Thou reaſoneſt thus within thy ſelf, as it may ſeem by thy diſcourſes. h i.e. God cannot diſcern, and therefore doth not mind things ſo far below him and diſtant from him. i i.e. Through thoſe immenſe and innumerable Clouds which lie between the Heaven and the Earth, although our eyes ſee but few of them.

14. Thick clouds are a covering to him that he ſeeth not, and he walketh in the circuit of heaven k.

k His converſation and buſineſs and delight is in the higher and heavenly World, which is worthy of his care, but he will not diſparage nor burden himſelf with the care of this contemptible ſpot of earth: which was the opinion of many heathen Philoſophers, and, as they fanſied, was Job's opinion alſo.

†Heb. everlaſting way. So Gr.

15. Haſt thou marked the † old way l which wicked men have troden?

l Heb. The way of antiquity, i.e. of men living in ancient times, or former ages: By this way is here meant, either, 1. their courſe or common practice: Or, 2. their end or ſucceſs, as the way is taken, 1 Sam. 9. 6, 8. and as death, which is, and is called the end of all men, Eccleſ. 7. 2. is alſo called the way of all the earth, Joſ. 23. 14. 1 Kings 2. 2.

16. Which were cut down out of time m, † whoſe foundation was overflown with a flood n.

m i.e. Before their time; who died a violent and untimely death. n Who together with their foundation; to wit, the earth and all their ſupports and enjoyments in it, were deſtroyed by the general Deluge; which doubtleſs was very well known to them, becauſe they lived not long after it; and which was moſt proper for this Argument. Or, whoſe foundation, i.e. all their power, and riches, and policy, upon which they build all their hopes and happineſs, was like a flood poured forth; which made a great ſhew and noiſe for a time, but ſpeedily vaniſhed and came to nothing.

*Ch. 21. 14. ‖Or, to them.

17. * Which ſaid unto God, Depart from us: and what can the Almighty do ‖ for them o?

o He reports Job's words, Chap. 21. 14, 15. (where they are explained) but to a contrary purpoſe. Job alledged them to ſhew that they proſpered notwithſtanding their profeſſed wickedneſs; and Eliphaz produceth them to ſhew that they were cut off for it.

18. Yet he filled their houſes with good things p: but * the counſel of the wicked is far from me q.

p Yet it is true, that for a time God did proſper them, as he did thee; which alſo was the aggravation of their ſin, and that which haſtned their ruine: but at laſt, and in due time, God cut them off in a tremendous and exemplary manner: as he will alſo do thee, if thou doſt not repent. q He repeats Job's words, Ch. 21. 16. not without reflection and ſome kind of deriſion: Thou didſt ſay ſo, but without ſufficient reaſon and againſt thy own principle, that God carries himſelf indifferently towards good and bad; but I who have obſerved God's terrible judgments upon wicked men, have much more reaſon to abhor their counſels which had ſo ſad an iſſue.

u Or, when; or, ſeeing that, or Becauſe: for this Hebrew particle Im, is oft uſed for Chi. And ſo the following words may contain the reaſon of the joy and laughter of the Innocent mentioned, v. 19. becauſe when wicked men are deſtroyed, they are preſerved; becauſe our ſubſtance, i.e. our ſouls and bodies, and ſubſiſtence was not cut down. He ſhould have ſaid their ſubſtance; i.e. the ſubſtance of the righteous; but he changeth the perſon, and ſaith, our ſubſtance; either as including himſelf in the number of righteous perſons, and thereby intimating that he pleaded the common cauſe of all ſuch, whileſt Job pleaded the cauſe of the wicked, as is elſewhere obſerved: or becauſe he would hereby thankfully acknowledge ſome eminent and particular preſervation given to him amongſt other righteous men: or becauſe he and his brethren were of the ſame ſubſtance with; and deſcended from the loyns of them whom God had miraculouſly preſerved, when others round about them were cut off; as God had done for Abraham and his poſterity, of which race theſe are conceived to have been. And a like change both of perſon and number we find, Hoſ. 12. 4. He found him (i.e. Jacob, in Bethel, and there he ſpake with us; i.e. with him, as repreſenting us, and for all our good. x All that was left undeſtroyed in the general calamity. Or, their excellency, all their deſirable and delectable things. y i.e. Of thoſe who are oppoſed to the righteous, and in whoſe deſtruction the righteous rejoyced. z To wit, of God's wrath: ſome dreadful judgment, either proper fire, poſſibly that which deſtroyed Sodom and Gomorrha, which ſuch knowing and inquiſitive perſons could not be ignorant of as a thing done near their times and places; or ſome other ſore calamity; for ſuch oft come under the name of fire. But this whole Verſe is and may be otherwiſe rendred, and that Interrogatively, Is not (or rather, Was not, the Hebrew Prefix, he, being here underſtood, after the manner of the Language, from v. 15. where it is expreſſed) our ſubſtance (i.e. almoſt all our nature and kind) cut off, (almoſt all deſtroyed in the flood) and did not the fire conſume a remnant of them, i.e. of Mankind, and of ungodly men, in Sodom and Gomorrha?

21. Acquaint now thy ſelf ‖ with him a, and be at peace b: thereby c good ſhall come unto thee d. ‖ That is, with God.

a i.e. With God, as appears both from v. 23. where he is expreſſed, and from the nature of the thing, there being no other way to happineſs. Renew thy acquaintance and converſe with God by prayer, which thou haſt reſtrained, Chap. 15. 4. and repentance for all thy ſins, and true humiliation under his hand, and hearty compliance with all his Commands, and diligent care to ſerve and enjoy him, and be no longer eſtranged from God, as thou now art. b This is either 1. a promiſe, the Imperative being put for the Future of the Indicative Mood, and ſo thou ſhalt have peace; i.e. Proſperity and happineſs: Or, rather, 2. a Counſel or Command, If God be an enemy to thee, as thou ſayſt he is, reconcile thy ſelf to him by true repentance, and earneſtly ſeek his favour and friendſhip, and do not provoke him further by thy falſe and wicked ſpeeches of him, or by thy froward carriage to him: And whereas thou art full of unquietneſs and rage againſt God, learn to poſſeſs thy ſoul in patience, give over murmuring againſt him, and get a compoſed, and quiet, and ſubmiſſive mind and heart; which is called peace, Judg. 6. 23. & 19. 20. Iſa. 57. 21. Thus far is the Command or Exhortation; now followeth the Promiſe. c i.e. By following theſe Counſels. d Thou ſhalt be freed from all thy Calamities, and enjoy all the happineſs which thy heart can deſire.

22. Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth e, and lay up his words in thine heart f.

e Take the Law and Rule whereby thou governeſt thy thoughts and words, and whole life, not from profane Heathens, whoſe Opinion concerning God's Providence thou haſt embraced, not from thy own vain imaginations or violent paſſions, which have led thee into thy preſent errours and miſcarriages, but from God, and from his Word, and from his Law which is written in thy own mind, and from the Doctrines and Inſtructions of the holy men of God who are all of our mind in this matter. f i.e. Do not only hear them with thine ears, but let them ſink into they heart, being received there by hearty affection, and fixed by ſerious and frequent, and practical conſideration of them, Pſalm 119. 11. Matth. 13. 19, &c. Luke 2. 19, 51.

23. * If thou return to the Almighty g, thou ſhalt be built up h, thou ſhalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles i. *Ch. 8. 5, 6 & 11. 13.

g Or, home to the Almighty; or, ſo as to reach to the Almighty and be joined to him. The Hebrew Phraſe is extraordinary, and emphatical, and implies a thorough and effectual turning not only from ſin (which an Hypocrite may do in great part, at leaſt for a time upon carnal Motives, and without any reſpect or love to God) but alſo unto God, ſo as to love him and cleave to him, and ſincerely devote a man's ſelf to his fear and ſervice. And he expreſſeth it in this manner, becauſe he thought Job to be an Hypocrite, and therefore counſelleth him to turn to God in another and better manner than he had done; to wit, with all his heart, and not feignedly. h God who hath pulled thee down in thy Eſtate and Honour, and Children, will repair thy Ruines, and give thee more Children, which is oft called building; as Gen. 16. 2. Exod. 1. 21. Ruth 4. 11. and bleſs thee with proſperity and happineſs, as building ſignifies, Jer. 42. 10. & 31. 4. i This may be either, 1. a Condition upon which God makes the following Promiſes, If (which Particle may be repeated out of the former part of the Verſe) thou ſhalt put away, &c. i.e. If thou ſhalt effectually purge thy ſelf and family from all ſin, and keep thy ſelf and them, as far as thou canſt, from all appearances and occaſions of ſin, which is the duty of all, and the practice of true Penitents; Whereby he ſeems to reflect upon Job as if he had been faulty and negligent in the government of himſelf or Children; notwithſtanding his ſacrificing for them, Chap. 1. Or rather, 2. a Promiſe, becauſe the Conditions required had been expreſſed together, v. 21; 22. and in the beginning of this Verſe, after which he comes to the Promiſes, and begins with this, thou ſhalt be built up, and ſo proceeds to other Promiſes; and therefore it ſeems not probable that he ſhould return to the Conditions again, and mix the Conditions and Promiſes together, which he hath ſo carefully ſeparated in theſe Verſes. And ſo it is either, 1. a ſpiritual Promiſe, If thou doſt ſincerely repent, God will give thee more grace effectually to reform thy ſelf and family, according to that rule, To him that hath, ſhall be given. Or 2. a temporal Promiſe. Thou ſhalt put away iniquity, or injury, or perverſeneſs (i.e. either perverſe and injurious injurious men: Or God's judgments, or the punishments of thy sins; as iniquity is very oft used) far from thy tabernacles; i.e. from all thy Dwellings, and Tents, and Possessions; no hand of violence shall come near them, no evil plague shall come upon thy own habitation, or upon the habitations of thy Children, as lately it did for thine and their sins.

24. Then shalt thou lay up gold k ‖ as dust l, and the gold of Ophir † as the stones m of the brook.

k Solid or choice Gold, as the word signifies. l i.e. In great abundance. Or, upon the dust, or ground: It shall be so plentiful, and therefore vile, that thou shalt not lock it up in Chests and Treasuries, but scatter it any where, and let it lie even upon the ground. m As plentifully as if the pieces of Gold were but so many pebble stones, which are to be found in and near every Brook. Or, for the stones, i.e. instead of them. Or, in the rock, or among the rocks: Gold shall be so abundant that thou mayst lay it any where, even upon or among the Rocks.

25. Yea, the Almighty shall be thy ‖ defence n, and thou shalt have † plenty of silver o.

n God by his special and watchful Providence shall protect thee from all dangers and calamities. Heb. thy defences or munitions. One God shall keep thee as safely as many munitions. o Heb. silver of strength, i.e. which by God's blessing shall be thy defence, Eccles. 7. 12. Or, silver of heights, i.e. high and heaped up like a Mountain.

* Ch. 11. 15.

26 For then p shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty q, and shalt * lift up thy face unto God r.

p So this Verse contains a Reason why he might confidently expect all those former outward blessings, because he should have God's favour, which is the spring and foundation of them. Or, Surely: Or, Yea moreover; for this Particle chi, is sometimes used by way of aggravation or amplification, as Gen. 45. 26. 1 Sam. 14. 41. Isa. 7. 9. & 32. 13. And this suits very well here; yea God will do greater things than these for thee. q Thou shalt find delight not only in these outward comforts, but also and especially in God, whose Face shall shine upon thee, who shall give thee these things not in anger and wrath, as he doth to wicked men, but as pledges of his love and favour to thee, and of those greater and eternal blessings which he hath in store for thee; and accordingly thou shalt delight thy self in worshipping, enjoying, obeying, and serving God in and with all his mercies. r i.e. Look up to him by meditation and prayer, not as now thou dost, with horrour and grief, which is signified by a dejected Countenance, 2 Sam. 2. 22. Luke 18. 13. but with chearfulness and confidence, as this Phrase oft notes, as Luke 21. 28. See on Job 11. 15.

* Psal. 50. 14, 15.

27. * Thou shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee s, and thou shalt pay thy vows t.

s i.e. Answer thy prayers, and not disregard them, and hide himself from thee, as now he doth. t i.e. Thou shalt obtain those blessings for which thou didst make Vows to God, and therefore according to thy Obligation, shalt pay thy Vows to him. The Antecedent is here supposed and understood out of the Consequent.

28. Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established u unto thee, and the light shall shine upon thy ways x.

u Thy purposes and designs shall not be disappointed, but effected and ratified by God; which is a great satisfaction. x In all thy counsels, and courses, and actions, God shall give thee the light of his direction and governance, and of comfort and success; and thou shalt not be in such a dark and doubtful, and perplexed condition as now thou art.

* Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. † Heb. him that hath low eyes.

29. When men are cast down y, then thou shalt say z, There is lifting up a: and b he c shall save d * † the humble person e.

y Heb. When they (i.e. they who do this work. It is an Indefinite and impersonal speech, which is very common in the Hebrew Language) shall cast down or overthrow; either, 1. proud and wicked men, as may be guessed by the opposition of the humble and innocent, who should be saved, whilest these were destroyed. So the sense is, when there shall come a general calamity which shall sweep away all the wicked round about them. Or, 2. Thee or thine; which Pronoun is oft understood. So the sense is, when through God's permission thou shalt be brought into some trouble, which God sees fit for thee. z Within thy self with good assurance and confidence. a Or, there shall be lifting up; either, 1. for them, if they repent and humble themselves, they shall be preserved or restored. And this thou wilst assure them of from thy own experience. Or, 2. for thee and thine: God will deliver thee, when others are crushed and destroyed. b Or, for, this Particle being oft put causally, as hath been formerly noted. So the following words contain a reason why he might confidently say, that there would be such a lifting up for a person so humbled. c i.e. God, unto whom only salvation belongeth, Psalm 3. 8. d Either, 1. eternally; or 2. temporally; to wit, from the evils here mentioned. e Heb. Him that hath low or cast down eyes: Which phrase may here note, either, 1. humility and lowliness of mind and disposition, as pride is oft expressed by high or lofty looks, as Psalm 18. 27. & 101. 5 & 131. 1. Prov. 6. 17. And so this is a tacit admonition and reproof for Job, whom, for his confident justification of himself, and his contemptuous expressions and censures concerning them, they judged to be guilty of intolerable pride of heart. Or, 2. Lowness of Estate or Condition, as James 1. 10. So it notes him whose Eyes and Countenance are dejected by reason of his great troubles and miseries; as on the contrary, prosperity makes persons lift up their Eyes and Faces.

30. He f shall ‖ deliver g the Island of the innocent h: and it i is delivered by the pureness of thine hands k.

f i.e. God, as v. 29. whose Prerogative it is to give deliverances. g To wit, upon thy request, as the following Clause sheweth: God will hear thy prayers even for others: which is a great honour and comfort, and much more for thy self. h Not only thy self, when thou shalt become innocent and pure, but for thy sake he will deliver the whole Island (or Country, that word being oft used not only for such Lands or Countries as were separated from Canaan by the Sea, as is commonly observed, but also for such as were upon the same Continent with it, as appears from Gen. 10. 5, &c. Psalm 72. 10. & 97. 1. Isa. 41. 5.) in which thou dwellest. Or, the guilty, or him that is not innocent: For the word here rendred Island, is sometimes used for not, both in Scripture, as 1 Sam. 4. 21. Prov. 31. 4. So the sense is, God will have so great a respect to thy innocency and purity, that for thy sake he will deliver those that belong to thee, or live with thee or near thee, though in themselves they be sinful Creatures and ripe for destruction. See Gen. 18. 32. i To wit, the Island. Or, he, i.e. the guilty person. k i.e. By thy prayers proceeding from a pure heart and conscience, when thou shalt lift up pure hands to God in prayer as it is expressed, 1 Tim. 2. 8. Whereby as he asserts the prevalency of the righteous man's prayers with God for mercy both for himself and others, and by this argument he perswadeth Job to repentance: so withal he alledgeth this as an Argument or evidence that Job did not stretch out pure hands to God in prayer, as he pretended, because his prayers could not prevail for the preservation of himself or his Children, and much less for others at a greater distance.

CHAP. XXIII.

† Heb. My hand.

1. THen Job answered and said,
2. Even to day a is my complaint bitter b, † my stroke c is heavier than my groaning d.

a i.e. Even at this time, notwithstanding all your promises and pretended consolations, I find no ease nor satisfaction in all your discourses: And therefore in this and the following Chapters, Job seldom applies his discourse to his Friends, but only addresseth his speech to God, or bewaileth himself. b i.e. I do bitterly complain, and have just cause to do so. But this Clause is and may be otherwise rendred: Even still (Heb. at this day) is my complaint called or accounted by you rebellion or bitterness? or the rage of an exasperated mind? Do you still pass such harsh censures upon me after all my declarations and solemn protestations of my Innocency? c Heb. my hand, passively; i.e. the hand or stroke of God upon me, as the same phrase is used, Psal. 77. 2. and mine arrow, Job, Chap. 34. 6. d i.e. Doth exceed all my Complaints and expressions: So far are you mistaken that think I complain more than I have cause. Some render the words thus, My hands are heavy (i.e. feeble and hanging down, as the Phrase is Heb. 12. 12. My strength and spirit faileth) because of my groaning.

* Ch. 13. 3.

3. * O that I knew where I might find him e! that I might come even to his seat f.

e To wit, God, as his Friends well knew, and the thing it self sheweth: Thou bidst me acquaint my self with him, Chapter 22. 21. I desire nothing more than his acquaintance and presence; but alas he hides his Face from me that I cannot see him, nor come near him. f i.e. To his Throne or Judgment-seat to plead my Cause before him, as it here follows Verse 4. not upon terms of strict justice, but upon those terms of grace and mercy upon which God is pleased to deal with his sinful Creatures: See before Chapter 9. 34, 35. & 16. 21. & 17. 3. And this my confidence may be some evidence that I am not such a gross Hypocrite as you imagine me to be.

* Ch. 13. 3, 18.

4. I would * order my cause g before him h, and fill my mouth with arguments i.

g i.e Orderly declare the things which concern and prove the right of my Cause; h not only debating the Controversie between my Friends and me, concerning my sincerity or hypocrisie before God, as a Witness or Judge; but also pleading with God as a Party, and modestly enquiring whether he doth not deal more rigorously with me than I might reasonably expect, wherein I desire no other Judge but himself. i To prove my Innocency and sincerity towards God, and consequently that I am severely used.

5. I would know the words which he would answer me, and understand what he would say unto me k.

k I long

k I long to know what he would say either to prove me an hypocrite, or to justifie his harsh proceedings against me; and if he should discover to me any secret and unknown sins, for which he contendeth with me, I should humble my self before him, and accept of the punishment of mine Iniquity.

6. Will he plead against me with his great power l? No, but he would put strength in me m.

l i.e. Oppress me with his soveraign and absolute Power, as men do those whom they cannot fairly and justly conquer? m The word Strength, or Power, being fitly supplied out of the former branch of the Verse, as is very usual in Scripture. He would not use his power against me, but for me; by enabling me to plead my Cause, and giving Sentence according to that Clemency and Benignity, which, according to his gracious Covenant he useth towards his Children. Or, He would put or set his heart (this very Verb of putting, or setting, being elsewhere used in this defective manner, for putting or setting the Heart, as Job 7. 17. Isa. 41. 10. as it is fully expressed, Isa. 57. 1. Ezek. 40. 4. & 44. 5.) upon (the Preposition Beth, in, being sometimes used for al, upon, as Neh. 2. 12. Isa. 21. 13.) me, to wit, to hear me and all my reasons meekly, and to judge favourably, and to help and deliver me, as that and the like Phrases commonly signifie in Scripture use.

7. There n the Righteous o might dispute with him p: so q should I be delivered for ever from my judge r.

n At that Throne of Grace, as it is called, Heb. 4. 16. where God lays aside his Majesty, and Power, and judgeth according to his wonted Grace and Clemency. o Such as I do and dare avow my self to be, to wit, in sincerity, though not in perfection. p Humbly and modestly propounding the grounds of their confidence, and the Evidences of their Righteousness. q Upon such a fair and equal hearing. r Either, 1. From the severe Censures of all corrupt and partial Judges, such as you my Friends are. Or rather, 2. From the damnatory sentence of God; for he is not only pleading before him, but also with him. He would give sentence for me, and against himself. This and some such Expressions of Job cannot be excused from Irreverence towards God, and too great a confidence in himself; for which therefore God sharply reproves him hereafter, and Job abhorreth himself.

‡ Chap. 9. 12. 8. * Behold, I go forward s, but he is not there t; and backward u, but I cannot perceive him:

s i.e. Towards the East, which in Scripture is accounted the forepart of the World, as the Hebrew name of it signifies, because of the light of the Sun, which ariseth there, and draweth the Eyes of men towards it. t To wit, so as I would have him, as a Judge to hear and determine my cause, of which he is here speaking: For otherwise he knew and believed that God was essentially present in all places. u i.e. Towards the West. So also the North is called the Left hand, and the South the Right-hand, v. 9. because so they all are to a man who looks towards the East. He names all the several parts of the World to shew his eager desire, and restless endeavours to find out God, and to present himself before him.

9. On the Left hand where he doth work x, but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself y on the Right hand, that I cannot see him z:

x To wit, in a special and peculiar manner, more than in other parts of the World, for so indeed God did work in those parts which were Northward from Job, because there Mankind (among whom God delights to be and to work) were most numerous, and most ingenious to discern Gods works. There also was the Seat of the Assyrian Empire, which was eminent in Job's time, and afterwards of the other successive Empires. In and by all which God did many great and glorious works: But this Hebrew word is by others, and that very properly and fitly rendred, when or whilst he worketh, to wit, in an eminent manner. So this is added to aggravate Job's unhappiness. We may certainly find any man when and where he is working: But I, saith he, search for God even when and where he is working, and yet cannot find him out. y To wit, from me. He withdraweth his favour, and will not afford me his presence and audience. z Either, 1. I cannot discern his Counsels, and Ways and the Reasons of his severe dealings with me. Or rather, 2. He doth not appear to me as a Judge to examine my Cause and Arguments, but condemns me without hearing me.

† Heb. the way that is with me. 10. But a he knoweth † the way that I take b: when he hath tried me c, I shall come forth as Gold d.

a Though I cannot see him, yet my comfort is, that he seeth me and my heart, and all my Actions. Or, For, as this particle commonly signifies. So this Verse contains a reason why he so vehemently desired that he might plead his cause with or before God. b He cannot be deceived nor blinded, either by the artifices of bold Accusers or Advocates, or by his own misapprehensions or passions, but he exactly knows the way that is with me, i.e. the disposition of my heart, and the whole course or manner of my Life. c If he would examine me throughly, which above all things I desire. d Which cometh out of the Furnace pure from all dross. It would appear upon a fair hearing that I am free, though not from all sin, as he had confessed before, yet from that hypocrisie, and those gross enormities wherewith my friends charge me.

11. My foot hath held e his steps f, his way have I kept and not declined g.

f i.e. Made a free and fixed choice and taken fast hold of them, been firmly and strongly settled, and resolved to continue in them, as the word signifies. g Either, 1. Actively, the steps or ways in which God himself walks, the paths of Holiness, Justice, Mercy, &c. wherein he walked with, or after God, as the Phrase is, Gen. 5. 24. 2 Kings 23. 3. following his Example. Or, 2. Passively, the steps or paths which God hath appointed men to walk in, as Ch. 21. 14.

12. Neither have I gone back h from the Commandment of his Lips, † I have esteemed i the word of his mouth more than ‖ my necessary food k.

† Heb. I have hid, or laid up. ‖ Or, my appointed portion.

b i.e. Not turned aside to any crooked or sinful path or course of Life, humane Infirmity excepted. Heb. I have hid, or laid it up, as men do their best Treasures, or what they most love and value. The Phrase notes an high estimation of it, an hearty affection to it, and a diligent care to preserve it. k Or, my appointed food or my daily portion. i.e. that food or provision which is necessary for the support of my Life, as this word is used, Gen. 47. 22. Prov. 30. 8. & 31. 15. which is more prized and desired than all the riches in the world.

13. But he is in one mind l, and * who can turn him m? and what † his Soul desireth even that he doth n.

* Chap. 9. 12, 13. & 12. 14. † Psal. 115. 3.

l i.e. Notwithstanding all these Evidences of my sincere Piety, and all my Prayers to him, he still continues in the same mind and course of afflicting me. Or, But he is, i.e. if he be, against one, or against any man, as that word is oft used, as he now setteth himself against me. Or, But he is one, the Hebrew prefix Beth, being here the note of a Nominative Case, as it is Job 18. 8. Psal. 68. 5. Hos. 13. 9. and elsewhere. So the sense is, But why do I waste words to no purpose? All my former constant Integrity, and my present profession of it gives me no ease, he is still one and the same, constant, unchangeable in his purposes and counsels of proceeding against me. Or, he is alone, and there is none besides him, who can either restrain, or advise, or move him. m No man can change his Counsels or course, or encline him to shew favour to me. He is most absolute and free to do what he pleaseth, and he dealeth with me accordingly, and not by those milder Methods which he useth towards other men. n He will not do what I please or desire, but only what pleaseth himself.

14. For he performeth the thing that is appointed for me o: and many such things are with him p.

o Or, he will perfect, or finish my appointed portion, i.e. those calamities which he hath allotted to me for my portion, which as he hath begun to lay on me, so he is resolved to make a full end of them. p There are many such examples of Gods proceeding with men in way of absolute Soveraignty and Severity, and his Counsels and Providences, though always just, yet are oft secret, and we cannot discern the reasonableness or equity of them, which is my case.

15. Therefore q am I troubled at his presence r: when I consider I am afraid of him.

q In consideration of his glorious Majesty, and soveraign, and irresistible power, by which he can do whatsoever pleaseth him, without giving any account of his matters. r When I present him to my thoughts. Or, when he appears or manifesteth himself to me. Or, for fear or dread of him; or, by reason of him.

16. For God maketh my heart soft s, and the Almighty troubleth me:

s Or, tender. He hath bruised, and broken, or melted it, so that I have no Spirit, nor Courage, nor Strength in me, as this or the like Phrase is used, Deut. 20. 3. Psal. 39. 11. Isa. 7. 4. Jer. 51. 46.

17. Because I was not cut off t before the darkness u, neither hath he covered the darkness from my face x.

t Because God did not cut me off by death. u i.e. Before these dark and dismal miseries came upon me. Or, before the face, or by reason of the darkness, i.e. That God hath not yet cut me off by these calamities, but prolonged my days under them, that he might encrease my torment. x So that I might no longer see, or feel my Miseries, but might be taken out of them by my long desired death. Seeing (and consequently having before ones face) is oft put for experiencing, for enjoying good, or feeling evil, as Job 20. 17. Psal. 16. 10, &c. Or, but he hath covered darkness, to wit, death, which is so called, Job 10. 21, 22. and elsewhere, from my Face, i.e. he will not allow me the favour to see death.

CHAP. XXIV.

* Act. 1.7. 1. WHy seeing * times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him not see his days a?

a The sense of the words according to this Translation is this, Why (how comes it to pass) seeing times, (i.e. the several times of every mans Life, how long he shall live, or the fittest seasons and opportunities (which are oft called times, as Gen. 24. 11. Psal. 31. 15. & 119. 126. Acts 1. 6, 7.) for every action, and particularly for the punishment of wicked men, about which the present controversie was) are not hidden from, or unknown to the Almighty God, (i.e. seeing all times and men that live, and things that are done, or to be done in their times and seasons, are exactly known to God,) do they that know him (i.e. who love and obey him, as that word is oft used, as Psal. 9. 10. & 36. 10. & 91. 14. or they who observe and regard his ways and works done in the world) not see (whence is it that they cannot discern) his (i.e. Gods) days; i.e. his times and seasons which he takes for the punishment, of ungodly men, which if they were constant and fixed in this Life, as you pretend they are, they would not be unknown to good men, to whom God useth to reveal his secrets, and they could not be unobserved by so many good men who make it their business to mind and study the works of God, and especially the course and Methods of his Providence towards good and bad men. The times or days of Gods executing Judgments upon sinners are frequently called the days of the Lord, as Isa 2. 12. & 13. 6. Jer. 46. 10. Compare Job 20. 28. Prov. 6. 34. Act. 2. 20. as the time of mans judging is called mans day, 1 Cor. 4. 3. But this Verse is in part, and may very agreeably to the Hebrew Text be rendred and interpreted thus, Why or how are not times (i.e. the times and seasons appointed for the punishment of evil-doers, about which the Dispute was) hidden or reserved by or with God (i.e. kept as a secret in his own Breast, and concealed from the knowledge of Mankind: How can you say or think with any colour that these times are fixed and manifest to all men, and that sinners are constantly punished in this Life, and that so notoriously that all good men see it, as was said, Chap. 22. 15.–19.) seeing (as the particle vau is rendred, Chap. 19. 28. or for, as it is frequently used) they that know him (that give themselves to understand and consider his doings in the world, who of all men are most likely to know this, if it were true and certain) do not see his days, to wit of punishing the wicked in this Life, as was said before. And this he mentions as a fit Preface to usher in the following Discourse concerning the manifold wickedness of Men, and withal their present impunity.

b Or, they (i.e. the wicked, of whom he here treats) touch (to wit, in an unlawful manner, and with evil design, as this word is oft used, as Gen. 26. 11, 29. Ruth 2. 9. so as to invade, or possess, or remove,) the Land-marks, by which mens Lands are discerned, and their proprieties secured, that so they may inlarge their own border by diminishing their Neighbours. Which is so horrid an Act of Injustice, that it hath not only been severely forbidden by God, Deut. 19. 14. & 27. 17. Prov. 22. 28. & 23. 10. but also declared execrable by the Heathens; among whom it was permitted to any man to kill him that did it. c Or, feed them. They do not hide or kill them, but openly feed them, either in their oppressed Neighbours ground, which, by taking away the Land-marks, they have made their own, or in their own Pastures, without any remorse, or shame, or fear of punishment, either from God or men.

* Chap. 22. 6. 3. They drive away the Ass d of the Fatherless e, they * take the Widows Ox f for a Pledge g.

d Either the asses, the singular number being used collectively: Or he saith the Ass, to aggravate their sin, that they robbed him who had but one Ass. Compare 2 Sam. 12. 2, 3, 4. e Whose helpless condition required their pity and mercy. f Thereby depriving her not only of the Ox it self, but of all the benefit of its labours, by which she sustained her Life. g Contrary to Gods Law, first written in mens Hearts, and afterwards in holy Scripture, Exod. 22. 26, 27. Deut. 24. 6, 10, &c.

* Pro. 28. 28. 4. They turn the needy out of the way h: * the poor of the earth hide themselves i together k.

h Either, 1. Out of the way of Piety and Justice. They engage them to take evil courses by their Examples, or Promises, or threatnings. Or, 2. Out of their right. Or 3. Out of their course and way of living. Or rather (as the word properly signifies, and as the next clause explains it) out of the high-way, out of the path or place in which these wicked oppressours walk and range. They labour to keep out of their way and sight for fear of their further injuries and oppressions. i For fear of these wicked Tyrants and Persecutors. k For their mutual comfort and defence against those who should invade or disturb them there. Or, alike. Though some of the poor are more nearly related, or have been more serviceable to these oppressors, yet none of them can escape their rage and violence.

5. Behold, as wild Asses l in the desert m, go they forth n to their work o, rising betimes for a Prey: the Wilderness yieldeth food for them p, and for their Children.

l Which are wild, and lawless, and unteachable, and fierce, and greedy of Prey, or Food, which they snatch out of the goods or labours of the Husband man; in all which they are fit emblems of these men. Or, these wild men. For so this word signifies, Gen. 16. 12. as elsewhere wild Asses. The particle, as, is not in the Hebrew. m Which is the proper Habitation of wild Asses, Jer. 2. 24. If this be understood of the wild men, he placeth them in the Desart and Wilderness, either because they by their spoils and violences have destroyed or driven away the people, as is intimated Verse 4. and thereby turned populous places into Desarts; or because such places as have but few Houses and Inhabitants, (which are oft so called, as Gen. 21. 20, 21. Jos. 15. 61, 62. 1 Kings 2. 34. & 9. 18. Isa. 42. 11. Matth. 3. 1.) are most fit for their Robberies. n Either 1. the poor whom they spoiled and drove away from their own former habitations into Desarts, where they hid themselves, and wrought hard for a subsistence. Or rather, 2. the Oppressors, who are more fitly compared to wild Asses, and more truly said to seek for prey, than those poor oppressed persons mentioned v. 4. and of whom he speaks both in the foregoing and following Verses. o i.e. To spoil and rob, which is their constant work and trade. p They are so diligent and industrious in that work, that they will fetch food for them and theirs, even out of Desart-places in which the Owners can very hardly subsist. q Or servants; for the word signifies both children and servants, even the whole Family.

r Either the poor, who are forced to gather in the Corn and Grapes of their wicked Oppressors: Or rather, 2. the Oppressors, of whom he speaks, v. 4, 5, & 7. s i.e. The Corn of the wicked, as it is in the next Clause. Or, that which is not their own; as the Seventy, and Chaldee, and Vulgar Latine translate it, reading the Hebrew as two distinct words: They reap other men's labours. t i.e. In the Field of the right Owner from whom they take it. He notes their great power and boldness, that they did not come suddenly and carry away their Corn when it was laid up in the Barns, or in heaps, but they proceeded leisurely, and stayed to reap the Corn, and by degrees carried it away, as it were in triumph, not fearing any interruption or hindrance either from God or man. u Of such as themselves: So they promiscuously robbed all, even their own Brethren in iniquity, whereby also he may intimate the righteous judgment of God in punishing one wicked man by another, and in depriving men of those goods which they had wickedly gotten. Or, the wicked (the Singular Number being used collectively for the Plural, as is frequent, the Oppressors) gather the vintage; to wit, belonging to other men.

7. They cause the naked x to lodge y without clothing z, that they have no covering in the cold a.

x i.e. Those whom they have made naked, whom they stripped of their garments and coverings; so far were they from exercising justice or charity towards them. y To sleep in the night, which is the coldest season. z Without Bed-cloths to cover them. Compare Deut. 24. 13. a Of the Night of the Winter-season. This Verse is and may fitly be rendred thus; They cause men to lodge naked, because they have no clothing, (i.e. because they leave them nothing wherewith they can cloath themselves) and no covering in the cold: They leave them neither rayment to wear in the Day, nor a covering for the Night.

8. They b are met with the showers of the mountains c, and embrace the rock d for want of a shelter.

b i.e. The poor being stripped of their Rayment, and forced away from their houses. c With the Rain-water which in great showers runs down from the rocks or mountains into the caves or holes in the sides of them, to which they fled for shelter. d i.e. Are glad when they can find a Cavern or Cleft of a Rock in which they may have some protection against the Injuries of the Weather, and an hiding-place from the fury of their Oppressors. Compare Lament. 4. 5.

9. They e pluck the fatherless from the breast f, and take a pledge of the poor g.

e The wicked Oppressor, as is manifest from the following words. f Either out of cruelty, not sparing poor Infants, but killing them: or out of covetousness, and with design either to sell the Mother, or to employ her in their work to which they so strictly confine her, that they will not allow any of her time or strength for the suckling of her Infant. g Of which see the Notes on Chapter 22. 6.

10. They cause him h to go naked without clothing, i and they take away the sheaf from the hungry k;

h The poor oppressed person. i Leaving him nothing, or next to nothing to cover him in the Day-time, when he should go abroad to his labour to get his living, but cannot for want of Cloths to cover his nakedness. k That single Sheaf which the poor man had got with the sweat of his Brows to satisfie his hunger, they unhumanely take away, and add it to their own Stores and full Barns. Or, they are hungry; or they sent them away hungry; those words words being repeated out of the former Clauſe of the Verſe, as is moſt uſual) which took or carried the ſheaf, or their ſhares; i.e. which reaped and gathered in the rich man's Corn, for which they received Injuries in ſtead of a juſt Recompence for their labour; and that when God's liberality, and the bounty of the earth to them invited and obliged them to kind and generous actions to others.

11. Which make oil within their walls l, and tread their wine-preſſes m, and ſuffer thirſt n.

l To wit, the poor man laſt mentioned. Either, 1. within their own Walls, i.e. in private and ſecret places for fear of the Oppreſſors. Or rather, 2. within the Walls of the rich Oppreſſors for their uſe and benefit: For the poor, alas! had no Walls nor Houſes, nor Olive-yards, nor Vine yards left to them, but they were violently ſpoiled of and driven away from all thoſe things as was ſaid in the foregoing Verſes. m i.e. The Grapes in their Wine-preſſes, by a Metonymy of the thing containing, for the thing contained. n Becauſe they are not permitted to quench their thirſt out of the Wine which they make, though their labours both need and deſerve refreſhment.

12. Men groan o from out of the city p, and the ſoul q of the wounded crieth out: yet God layeth not folly to them r.

o Under the burden of Injuries and grievous Oppreſſions. p Not only in Deſerts or leſs inhabited places where theſe Tyrants have the greater opportunity and advantage to practice their Villanies, but even in Cities where there is a face of Order and Government, and Courts of Juſtice, and a multitude of people to obſerve and reſtrain ſuch actions; whereby they plainly declare that they neither fear God nor reverence man. q Either, 1. properly, their Soul ſympathizing with the Body, and being grieved for its inſupportable miſeries, crieth to God and men for help. Or rather 2. the life or blood (which oft cometh under that name) of thoſe who are there wounded unto death, as this word properly ſignifies, Ezek. 30. 24. crieth aloud unto God for vengeance, Gen. 4. 10. Revel. 6. 9, 10. whereby God might ſeem in ſome ſort obliged to puniſh them, and yet he did not, as the next words declare. r So the ſenſe is, Yet God doth not impute or lay to their charge this folly or wickedneſs, which in Scripture is commonly called folly; i.e. He takes no notice of theſe horrid Oppreſſions, nor hears the Cries of the Oppreſſed, nor puniſheth the Oppreſſors. Or, Yet God (who ſeeth and permitteth all this) diſpoſeth, or ordereth, or doth, (for all theſe things this Hebrew Verb ſignifies) nothing which is abſurd, or fooliſh, or unſavoury; i.e. doth nothing in this permiſſion and connivence unworthy of himſelf, or which a wiſe and conſiderate man cannot reliſh or approve, or which is not in it ſelf righteous and reaſonable, though we do not always diſcern the reaſonableneſs of it.

13. They are of thoſe that rebel againſt the light s, they know not t the ways thereof u, nor abide in the paths thereof x.

s This is added as the general Character of the perſons before mentioned, and as a great aggravation of their wickedneſs, that they were not modeſt ſinners which were aſhamed of their evil ways; and therefore ſinned in the dark, and in ſecret, as ſome who here follow: but ſinned impudently in the face of the Sun, and in ſpight of all their light, as well the light of Reaſon and Conſcience, which abhors and condemns their wicked actions, as the light of Divine Revelation which was then in good meaſure imparted to the Church and people of God in this time, and ſhortly after was committed to Writing; all which they ſet at defiance, ſinning with manifeſt contempt of God, and of men, and of their own Conſciences. t Either, 1. they do not deſire or care to know them, they are willingly ignorant of them. Or, 2. they do not approve, nor love, nor chooſe them, as knowing frequently ſignifies in Scripture-uſe. u i.e. Of the light, or in ſuch ways and courſes as are agreeable to the light, Or, in his ways, i.e. in the ways of God, who is oft underſtood in this Book where he is not expreſſed. x If they do ſome good actions, yet they do not perſevere in well-doing, they are not conſtant and fixed in a good courſe of life.

*Pſal. 10. 8. 14. * The murderer riſing with the light y, killeth the poor and needy z, and in the night is as a thief a.

y As ſoon as the light appears, uſing no leſs diligence in his wicked practices, than Labourers do in their honeſt and daily employments. z Where he finds nothing to ſatisfie his covetouſneſs, he exerciſeth his cruelty. a i.e. He is really a Thief, the Particle as being oft uſed to expreſs not the reſemblance, but the truth of the thing, as Num. 11. 1. Deut. 9. 10. Hoſ. 4. 4. & 5. 10. John 1. 14. In the Night they rob men ſecretly and cunningly, as in the Day-time they do it more openly and avowedly.

*Prov. 7. 9. 15. * The eye alſo of the adulterer b waiteth for the twilight c, ſaying d, No eye ſhall ſee me: and † diſguiſeth his face e.

b i.e. The Adulterer; but he mentions his Eye, becauſe the Eye diſcerns the difference between light and darkneſs. c To wit, for the Evening twilight which is his opportunity. d In his heart, comforting himſelf with the thoughts of ſecretneſs and impunity. e Heb. putteth his face in ſecret, covers it with a Vizard or Cloak that he may be undiſcovered.

16. In the dark they f dig through houſes, which they g had marked for themſelves h in the day-time: * they know not the light i.

f Either 1. the Adulterer laſt mentioned; although ſuch perſons do not uſe nor need theſe violent courſes to get into the houſe of the Adultereſs, but are commonly admitted upon milder and eaſier terms. Or, 2. the Thief or Robber, whoſe common practice this is, of whom he ſpoke v. 14. and having on that occaſion inſerted the mention of the Adulterer as one who acted his ſin in the ſame manner as the Night-thief did, he now returns to him again. g The Thief and his Complices. h Deſigning by ſome ſecret mark the houſe of ſome rich man which they intended to rob, and the part of the houſe where they reſolved to enter into it. i i.e. Do not love or like it, as Verſe 13. but abhor it, as it follows.

17. For the morning is to them even as the ſhadow of death k: if one know them, they are in the terrours of the ſhadow of death l.

k i.e. Terrible and hateful, becauſe it both diſcovers them and hinders their practices. l If they are brought to light or diſcovered, they are overwhelmed with deadly horrours and terrours. Or, as the words are, and may very agreeably to the Hebrew be rendred thus; But (as the Hebrew Particle commonly ſignifies) they know (Heb. he knoweth, every one of them knoweth; i.e. approveth and loveth) the terrours of the ſhadow of death, i.e. the groſſeſt darkneſs of the Night, which to other men is as terrible as the ſhadow of death, but to theſe men is moſt acceptable: So this Clauſe is fitly oppoſed to the former, he hates the light, and he likes darkneſs.

18. He is ſwift † a the waters m, their n portion o is curſed in the earth p: he beholdeth not the way of the vineyard q.

m In theſe words he deſcribes either, 1. the wicked man's diſpoſition and deportment, that ſuch perſons are light and frothy in their ſpirits; or ſwift, or haſty to do evil, or unſtable in their ways as the waters, or upon the face of the waters; i.e. like the foam or froath, or any other light thing which ſwims upon the top of the waters. Or rather, 2. his miſerable condition of which he manifeſtly ſpeaks in the next words, and in the two next Verſes. For though Job conſtantly affirms and maintains it againſt his Friends, that many ungodly men do proſper and eſcape puniſhment in this life, yet withal he obſerves and aſſerts that God will certainly ſooner or later puniſh them, and that he ſometimes doth it here, cutting them off by cruel and untimely Deaths, or otherwiſe inflicting ſome notable judgment upon them; of which he alſo ſpeaks, Chap. 21. 17, &c. So the ſenſe is, He is ſwift, i.e. he quickly paſſeth away with all his glory, as the waters which never ſtay in one place, but are always haſting and running away; or like a Ship, or any other thing which ſwimmeth upon the face of the waters: Though he ſeems to ſtand as firm and unmovable as a Rock, and to have taken deep rooting in the earth, yet he is ſuddenly and unexpectedly removed and pulled up by the roots. n Or, his; for he ſtill ſpeaks of the ſame perſon, though with a change of the number, which is moſt familiar in this Book, and elſewhere in Scripture. o Or, part, i.e. his Habitation and Eſtate which he left behind him. p Is really accurſed by God, and is by all men who live near it, or obſerve it pronounced accurſed, becauſe of the remarkable judgments of God upon it, and upon his Poſterity or Family to which he left it, and from whom it is ſtrangely and ſuddenly alienated. q i.e. He ſhall never more ſee or enjoy his Vineyards, or other pleaſant places and things, which ſeem to be comprehended under this particular.

19. Drought and heat † conſume the ſnow-water: ſo doth the grave thoſe which have ſinned r.

r As the Snow though it doth for a time lie upon the ground, yet at laſt is diſſolved into water by the heat of the ſeaſon, and that water quickly ſwallowed up by the earth when it is dry and thirſty: So ungodly ſinners though they live and proſper for a ſeaſon, yet at laſt they ſhall go into the grave, which will conſume them together with all their hopes and comforts: Their jolly life is attended with a ſad and oft-times ſudden and violent death, not with ſuch a death as the godly die, which perfects them and brings them to happineſs, but with a conſuming and never dying death.

20. The womb ſhall forget him s, the worm † ſhall feed ſweetly on him t, he ſhall be no more remembred u, and wickedneſs x ſhall be broken y as a tree z.

† Heb. is ſweet to him. Ch. 21. 33.

s His Mother that bare him in her Womb, and much more the reſt of his Friends, ſhall ſeldom or never remember or mention him; to wit, with honour and comfort, but ſhall rather be afraid and aſhamed to own their Relation to one that lived ſuch a vile and wretched life, and died ſuch an accurſed death. This he ſhall have inſtead of all that Honour and Renown which he thirſted and laboured for, and expected ſhould perfume his Name and Memory. t This proud and inſolent Tyrant that preyed up-upon all his Neighbours, v. 2, 3, &c. ſhall himſelf become a prey and a ſweet Morſel to the contemptible Worms. u To wit, with Honour, or ſo as he deſired and hoped, but his Name ſhall rot, and ſcarce ever be mentioned but with Infamy and Execration. x i.e. The wicked man, of whom he is here treating; the Abſtract being put for the Concrete, of which many Inſtances have been formerly given. y Broken to pieces, or violently broken down, as the word ſignifies. He ſhall be utterly and irrecoverably deſtroyed. And this expreſſion plainly ſheweth that the former Clauſes are not to be underſtood of the Sinner's happineſs in an eaſie and comfortable death, but of his curſed and miſerable end. z Which being once broken either by its own weight or by ſome violent wind, or by the hand of Man, never groweth again.

21. He a evil entreateth b the barren that beareth not c, and doth not good d to the widow.

a Either, 1. God, who is oft underſtood, who having cut off his perſon and brought him to his grave, continues his judgments upon his Wife or Widow, and Family. Or rather, the Oppreſſor, who is the principal ſubject of almoſt all that is ſaid in this Chapter; whoſe great and manifold wickedneſs Job deſcribed from v. 2, to 18. where he proceeds to relate the judgments of God upon him for his ſins; which having done v. 18, 19, 20. he here returns to the declaration of his further wickedneſſes, the cauſe of theſe judgments. b Or, feedeth upon, or devoureth, or breaketh in pieces; for all theſe the word ſignifieth, and all come to one and the ſame thing. c Barrenneſs was eſteemed a Curſe and Reproach; and ſo he added affliction to the afflicted, whom he ſhould have pitied and helped: But becauſe ſuch had no Children, and the Widows no Husbands, to defend or avenge their Cauſe, he exerciſed cruelty upon them. d Either, 1. he did her much wrong and harm, it being uſual in Scripture under ſuch Negative expreſſions to contain the Affirmation of the contrary; as Exod. 20. 7. Prov. 17. 21. & 28. 21. And ſo this Branch anſwers to the former, of evil-entreating. Or, 2. he afforded her no help, or advice, or comfort in her Diſtreſſes: And ſo he intimateth the greatneſs of (omiſſion-ſins, and that the common neglect or contempt of plain and poſitive Duties, whether of Piety to God, or of Charity to men, is to be reckoned among high and hainous Crimes.

22. He draweth e alſo the mighty f, with his power g: he riſeth up h, and ‖ no man is ſure of life i.

‖ Or, he truſteth not his own life.

e Either into his Net, as Pſalm 109. or to his Party, to aſſiſt and ſerve him in his Enterprizes. f Who are mighty in place, or wealth, or power: He practiſeth upon theſe, as well as upon the poor. g Which being greater than theirs, he ſoon forceth them to comply with his deſires and demands. h To wit, againſt any man, as this phraſe is uſed, Pſalm 18. 38. & 44. 5. When he ſets himſelf againſt a man and reſolves to deſtroy him. i i.e. None of them whom he ſo oppoſeth can be ſecure or confident of holding his life, but all ſuch give up themſelves for loſt men, as knowing they cannot reſiſt his greater might: Compare Deut. 28. 26.

23. Though it be given him to be in ſafety, whereon he reſteth; yet ‖ his eyes are upon their ways k.

‖ That is God's Eyes.

k Heb. He giveth to him to be in ſafety, or all things neceſſary for his ſafety, &c. This Verſe is underſtood, either, 1. of the Oppreſſor, If the Oppreſſor give a man his hand or promiſe, that he ſhall live in ſafety by him; or, If the Oppreſſed give Gifts to the Oppreſſor to purchaſe his quiet and ſafety, and as it follows, he reſteth upon that aſſurance given him, yet his, i.e. the Oppreſſors eyes are upon their ways, he watcheth for their halting, and ſeeks for all occaſions to quarrel with them, and to deſtroy them. Or rather, 2. of God, and ſo the words are fitly rendred thus, He, i.e. God, giveth or granteth to him, i.e. to the Oppreſſor, to be in ſafety, i.e. to live a quiet and comfortable life, and he reſteth ſecure, or he reſteth or leaneth upon him, i.e. upon God; his former experience of God's Favour makes him confident of the continuance of it: So he is not only happy in his preſent enjoyments, but alſo in his freedom from diſtracting fears of future miſeries; and his, i.e. God' Eyes are upon their ways, i.e. God bleſſeth and proſpereth him in all his undertakings, as this phraſe moſt commonly ſignifies, as Deut. 11. 12. Ezra 5. 5. Pſalm 33. 18. Or, yet his eyes are upon their ways, i.e. although God giveth them ſuch ſtrange ſucceſſes, this doth not proceed from his ignorance or regardleſneſs of their wicked actions, for he ſees and obſerves them all, and will in due time puniſh them, though not always in this life, nor as ſoon as their ſins are committed, but in ſuch time and way as he in deep wiſdom ſeeth moſt fit.

24. They are exalted for a little while l but † are gone m, and brought low n, they are † taken out of the way o as all other p, and cut off q as the tops of the ears of corn r.

l They live in honour and happineſs, but not for ever, but only at beſt during this ſhort and mortal life, which laſteth but for a very little time, and therefore their preſent happineſs is not to be envied; nor is it any reproach to God's Providence, which hath time enough to reckon with them hereafter. m Heb. are not; to wit, in this World, they die. n As low as their graves: Or, after (as the Particle Vau is elſewhere uſed, as hath been obſerved before) they have been brought low; to wit, by pining ſickneſs, or other grievous judgments. o i.e. Out of this world and way of living, by death. Or, are reſtrained or ſhut up; to wit, in the grave, the place of ſilence and impotency. p They can no more prevent or delay their death, than the meaneſt men in the world. q By Death's Sickle, or by a violent Hand. r To wit, in his greateſt height and maturity, when he is arrived at his perfect ſtature of Worldly power and glory, then God cuts him off, and that ſuddenly and violently.

25. And if it be not ſo now s, who will make me a liar, and make my ſpeech nothing worth?

s To wit, as I have diſcourſed, if God doth not ſuffer wicked men to live long and proſperouſly in the World before he puniſheth them; and if good men be not ſometimes ſorely afflicted here, if all things do not fall alike to all men in theſe matters.

CHAP. XXV.

1. THen anſwered Bildad a the Shuhite, and ſaid, a Not to that which Job ſpake laſt, but to that which ſtuck moſt in Bildad's mind, and which ſeemed moſt reprovable in all his diſcourſes, to wit, his bold cenſure of God's proceedings with him, and his avowed and oft repeated deſire of diſputing the matter with him.

2. Dominion b and fear c, are with him d, he maketh peace in his high places.

b i.e. Abſolute and ſovereign power over all perſons and things, with whom to contend, is both rebellion and madneſs. c Actively underſtood, or terrour, i.e. that which juſtly makes him dreadfull to all men, and eſpecially to all that ſhall undertake to diſpute with him; awful Majeſty, infinite knowledge, whereby he knows men's hearts and ways, far better than they know themſelves, and ſees much ſin in them which themſelves do not diſcover, and exact purity and juſtice, which renders him formidable to ſinners. d Emphatically ſpoken: with him whom thou challengeſt, with him who is not lightly and irreverently to be named, much leſs to be contended with. And therefore it is thy duty to humble thy ſelf for thy preſumptuous words and carriages towards him, and quietly and modeſtly to ſubmit thy ſelf and thy cauſe to his pleaſure. This Clauſe, as well as the following Verſe, ſeems to be added to prove what he laſt ſaid of God's dominion and dreadfulneſs: He keepeth and ruleth all perſons and things in Heaven in peace and harmony, and the order which he hath eſtabliſhed among them. The Angels though they be very numerous and differing in orders and miniſteries, do all own his Soveraignty, and acquieſce in his Pleaſure, without any diſputing and murmuring. The Stars and heavenly Bodies though vaſt in their bulk and various in their motions, yet exactly keep their courſes and the order which God hath appointed them: And therefore it is great folly and impudence to exempt thy ſelf from God's juriſdiction, or to quarrel with the methods of God's dealings with thee.

3. Is there any number of his armies e? and upon whom doth not his light ariſe?

e Of the Angels, and Stars, and other Creatures, all which are his Hoſts wholly ſubmitting themſelves to his Will, to be and do what God would have them: And therefore how inſolent and unreaſonable a thing is it for thee to quarrel with him! He ſpoke before of God's making peace; and here he mentions the Armies by which he keeps it. f Either, 1. properly, his Sun, which riſeth upon all, Mat. 5. 45. Or rather, 2. metaphorically, all that is in men, which is or may be called light, the light of life, by which men ſubſiſt and are kept out of the ſtate of the dead, called a land of darkneſs, Job 10. 22. The Light of Reaſon and Underſtanding, called God's Candle, Prov. 20. 27. by which thou, O Job, art capable of arguing with God and with us, and all that peace, and proſperity, and comfort which thou ever didſt enjoy, which oft comes under the name of Light, as Eſth. 8. 15, 16. Pſalm 97. 11. & 112. 4: which being here called light, is to continue the Metaphor, moſt fitly ſaid to ariſe upon men: all this is from God, and therefore is wholly at his diſpoſal, he freely gave it all, and he may juſtly take it away, as thou thy ſelf didſt truly obſerve and confeſs, Job 1. 21. and conſequently thou haſt no reaſon to reproach God for diſpoſing of his own as he pleaſeth. Thou haſt loſt nothing which was thine own, and having no propriety, there is no foundation for any judicial conteſt with God.

4. * How then, can man g be juſtified with God h? or how can he be clean that is born of a woman i?

* Chap. 4. 17, &c. and 15. 14, &c.

g The word ſignifies Man that is miſerable, which ſuppoſeth him to be ſinful; and that ſuch a Creature ſhould quarrel with that Dominion of God, to which the ſinleſs, and happy, and glorious Angels willingly ſubmit, is moſt abſurd and impious. h i.e. Before God's Tribunal, to which thou doeſt ſo boldly appeal. Thou mayſt plead thy Cauſe with thy fellow-worms as we are, and expect to be juſtified, but woe to thee if the great God undertake to plead his Cauſe againſt thee; how ſeverely and certainly wouldeſt thou then be condemned! i To wit, after the ordinary courſe; for otherwiſe Chriſt was born of a Woman, but in a ſingular manner. This Birth is alledged as an Evidence of man's filthineſs, Job 14. 4. & 15. 14. Pſalm. 51. 5. and of his liableneſs to God's Curſe and Wrath, Gen. 3. 16. Epheſ. 2. 2. and conſequently of his his condemnation oppoſite to the juſtification here mentioned, and confidently expected by Job in this Conteſt.

5. Behold even to the moon, and it ſhineth not k, yea, the ſtars are not pure in his ſight l.

k The Moon, though a bright and glorious Creature, Job 31. 26. Cant. 6. 10. if compared with the ſplendour of the Divine Majeſty, is but as a dark and earthy lump, without any luſtre or glory. He names the Moon and the Stars, rather than the Sun, becauſe they many times are eclipſed or diſappear even to our Eyes, which is a plain evidence of their utter obſcurity in reſpect of God's Light: whereas the Sun, though that alſo be obſcure, if compared with God, yet it caſts a conſtant and moſt clear light. Or by naming the Moon, and thence proceeding to the Stars, the Sun is included between them. l He can diſcern many ſpots and blemiſhes in them which we cannot ſee; and in like manner he can diſcover thoſe corruptions or ſins in us which are unknown to our own Conſciences, which ſhould make thee, O Job, tremble to appear before his Tribunal.

* Pſal. 22 6. 6. How much leſs man that is a* worm m: and the ſon of man which is a worm n?

m To wit, mean, and vile, and impotent, proceeding from corruption, and returning to it, and withal filthy and loathſom, and ſo every way a very unfit perſon to appear before the high and holy God, and much more to contend with him. n The ſame thing repeated in other words; only for miſerable man in the laſt Branch he here puts the ſon of any man, of what degree or quality ſoever, to ſhew that this is true even of the greateſt and beſt of men.

CHAP. XXVI.

1. BUt Job anſwered and ſaid,

2. How haſt thou helped a him that is without power b? how ſaveſt thou the arm that hath no ſtrength?

a Thou haſt helped egregiouſly: It is an Ironical expreſſion, implying the quite contrary, that he had not at all helped. See the like, Gen. 3. 22. 1 Kings 18. 27. 1. Cor. 4. 8, 10. b Either, 1. God, who it ſeems is weak and unwiſe, and needed ſo powerful and eloquent an Advocate as thou art, to maintain his Rights and plead his Cauſe. Or rather, 2. Job himſelf. I am a poor helpleſs Creature, my ſtrength and ſpirits quite broken with the pains of my Body and perplexities of my Mind, whom Nature, and Humanity, and Religion ſhould have taught thee to ſupport and comfort, with a repreſentation of the gracious Nature and Promiſes of God, and not to terrifie and overwhelm me with diſplaying his Soveraign Majeſty, the thoughts whereof are already ſo diſtractive and dreadful to me.

3. How haſt thou counſelled him that hath no wiſdom c? and how haſt thou plentifully declared the thing as it is d?

c Either, 1. God: Thou haſt in effect undertaken to teach God how to govern the World. Or rather, 2. me, whom you take to be a man void of underſtanding, Chapter. 11. 2, 3. whom therefore you ſhould have inſtructed with Wholeſom counſels, inſtead of theſe impertinent diſcourſes; and who indeed do want wiſdom being perfectly at a loſs, and not knowing what to ſay or do. d Heb. Eſſence, the truth and ſubſtance of the thing, in queſtion between us; Thou haſt ſpoken the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and all that can be ſaid in the matter. Or, Wiſdom, as this word is uſed, Prov. 3. 21. A moſt wiſe and profound diſcourſe thou haſt made and much to the purpoſe: an Ironical expreſſion as before.

4. To whom haſt thou uttered words e? and whoſe ſpirit came from thee f?

e For whoſe Inſtruction haſt thou uttered theſe things? For mine? Doeſt thou think me to be ſo ignorant that I do not know, that which the meaneſt perſons are not unacquainted with; to wit, that God is incomparably greater and better than his Creatures? f So the ſenſe is, whom haſt thou revived or comforted by this diſcourſe? Not me ſurely. The Spirit or breath of a man is in a manner ſuppreſſed and intercepted in deep ſorrows and conſternations, ſuch as Job's were, and when he is cheared or refreſhed, it finds vent and breaths out freely as it did before. But I do not remember that ever this Phraſe is uſed in this ſenſe, but on the contrary, the giving or reſtoring of life are expreſſed by the coming in, and not by the going out of ſpirit or breath, as appears from Gen. 2. 7. Ezek 37. 5, 6, 10. The words therefore are and may be otherwiſe underſtood; either thus, Whoſe ſpirit or inſpiration, (as this word ſignifies, Job 32. 8.) came from thee? Who inſpired thee with this profound diſcourſe of thine? Was it by Divine Inſpiration, as thou wouldeſt have us to believe? Or was it not a raſh ſuggeſtion of thy own vain and fooliſh mind? Or thus, Whoſe ſpirit went out (to wit, of his body by an ecſtaſie of admiration) for thee, by reaſon of thy diſcourſe? I may be thought partial in my cenſure of it, but thou mayſt perceive none of our Friends here preſent admire it, except thy ſelf. Or to, or for whom (the Particle eth being here underſtood out of the former Branch, as is uſual among the Hebrews) did breath go out from thee; i.e. didſt thou ſpeak? For whoſe good, or to what end didſt thou ſpeak this? God needed it not, I receive no edification or benefit by it.

5. ‖ Dead things g are formed from under the waters, ‖ and the inhabitants thereof.

‖ Or, ſhall the dead be born under the waters? So Gr. ‖ Or, will the inhabitants?

g Job having cenſured Bildad's diſcourſe concerning God's Dominion and Power as inſignificant and impertinent to their queſtion, he here proceedeth to ſhew how little he needed his Information in that Point, and that he was able to inſtruct him in that Doctrine, of which accordingly he gives divers Proofs or Inſtances. Here he ſheweth that the Power and Providence of God reacheth not only to the things which we ſee, but alſo to the inviſible parts of the World, not only to the Heavens above and their Inhabitants, and to Men upon Earth, of which Bildad diſcourſed Chap. 25. 2, 3. but alſo to ſuch perſons or things as are under the Earth, or under the Waters, which are under the Earth, which are out of our ſight and reach, and might be thought to be out of the ken or care of Divine Providence. This Hebrew word ſometimes ſignifies Giants, as Deut. 2. 11, 20. & 3. 13. and 1 Chron 20. 8. Whence it may be tranſlated to other great, and as it were, gigantick Creatures, and more commonly dead men, as Pſalm 88. 11. Prov. 2. 18. & 9. 18. & 21. 16. Iſa. 14. 9. & 26. 14, 19. Whence it is ſuppoſed metaphorically to ſignifie alſo dead or lifeleſs things; though there be no example of that uſe of the word elſewhere; and it may ſeem improper to call thoſe things dead, which never had nor were capable of life. The next Hebrew Word, or the Verb is primarily uſed of Women with Child, and ſignifies their bringing forth their young Ones with travel or grievous pains; as Job 39. 3. Pſalm 29. 9. Iſa. 23. 4. & 45. 10. and thence it ſignifies either to form or bring forth, as below, verſe 13. Prov. 26. 10. Or to grieve or mourn, or to be in pain. Accordingly theſe words are diverſly underſtood; either, 1. of dead, or lifeleſs things, ſuch as Amber, Pearl, Coral, Metals, or other Minerals. which are formed or brought forth; to wit, by the Almighty power of God, from under the waters; i.e. either in the bottom of the Sea, or within the Earth, which is the loweſt Element, and in the Scripture and other Authors ſpoken of as under the Waters; this being obſerved as a remarkable Work of God's Providence, that the Waters of the Sea which are higher than the earth do not overwhelm it, and from under (which may be repeated out of the former Clauſe of the Verſe, after the manner of the Hebrews) the inhabitants thereof; i.e. either of the Waters, which are Fiſhes, or of the Earth, which are Men. Or rather, 2. of the Giants of the old World, which were men of great Renown whileſt they lived, Gen. 6. 3. and the remembrance of them and of their exemplary deſtruction was now in ſome ſort freſh and famous; who once carried themſelves inſolently towards God and men, but were quickly ſubdued by the Divine Power, and drowned with a Deluge, and now mourn or groan from under the waters where they were buried, and from under the preſent Inhabitants thereof, as before. Or, 3. of vaſt and gigantick Fiſhes or Monſters of the Sea, who by God's infinite power were formed or brought forth under the waters, with the other inhabitants thereof; to wit, of the Waters, the leſſer Fiſhes. Or, 4. of dead men, and of the worſt ſort of them, ſuch as died in their ſins, and after death were condemned to further miſeries; for of ſuch this very word ſeems to be uſed, Prov. 2. 18. & 9. 18. who are here ſaid to mourn or groan from under the waters, i.e. from the lower parts of the earth, or from under thoſe ſubterraneam Seas of Waters, which are by Scripture and by Philoſophers ſuppoſed to be within and under the Earth? of which ſee Deut. 8. 7. Job 28. 4, 10. Pſalm 33. 7. and from under the inhabitants thereof; i.e. either of the Waters or of the Earth, under which theſe Waters are: or with the other inhabitants thereof; i.e. of that place under the Waters, to wit, the Apoſtate Spirits. So the ſenſe is, that God's dominion is over all men, yea even the dead, and the worſt of them, who though they would not own God, nor his Providence, whileſt they lived, yet now are forced to acknowledge and feel that power which they deſpiſed, and bitterly mourn under the ſad effects of it in their ſubterraneal and infernal Habitations, of which the next Verſe ſpeaks more plainly. And this ſenſe ſeems to be favoured by the Context and ſcope of the place, wherein Job begins his diſcourſe of Gods Power and Providence at the lowermoſt and hidden parts of the World, and thence proceeds to thoſe parts which are higher and viſible. Nor is it ſtrange that Job ſpeaks of theſe matters, ſeeing it is evident that Job, and others of the holy Patriarchs and Prophets of old, did know and believe the Doctrine of the future Life, and of its ſeveral Recompences to good and bad men. Others underſtand this of the Reſurrection of the dead; The dead ſhall be born (as this word is uſed, Pſal. 2. 7. Prov. 8. 24, 25. i.e. ſhall be raiſed, which is a kind of Regeneration, or ſecond Birth, and is ſo called, Mat. 19. 28. Act. 13. 33.) from under the waters (i.e. even thoſe of them that lie in the waters, Rev. 20. 13. that were drowned and buried in the Sea, and devoured by Fiſhes, &c. whoſe caſe may ſeem to be moſt deſperate, and therefore they only are here mentioned) and (or, even, this particle being oft uſed expoſitively) the Inhabitants thereof, i.e. thoſe dead corps which lie or have long lain there.

6. * Hell b is naked before him i, and deſtruction k hath no rovering l.

* Pſ. 139. 8, 11. Heb. 4. 13.

b As this word is frequently uſed, as Job 11. 8. Iſa. 57. 9, &c. And ſo it ſeems to be explained by the following word deſtruction, i.e. the place of deſtruction, which Interpreters generally underſtand ſtand of Hell, or the place of the Damned. Others the Grave, the moſt ſecret and obſcure places and things. l i.e. It is in his Preſence and under his Providence. So far am I from imagining that God cannot ſee through a dark Cloud, as you traduced me, Chap. 22. 13. that I very well know, that even Hell it ſelf, that place of utter darkneſs, is not hid from his ſight. k i.e. The place of deſtruction, as it is uſed, Prov. 15. 11. by a Metonymy of the Adjunct. l To wit, ſuch as to keep it out of his ſight.

* Chap. 9 8. Pſal. 104. 2, &c.

—. * He ſtretcheth out the North m over the empty place n, and hangeth the earth upon nothing o.

m i.e. The Northern Pole, or part of the Heavens, which he particularly mentions and puts for the whole viſible Heaven, becauſe Job and his Friends lived in a Nothern Climate, and were acquainted only with that part of the Heavens, the Southern Pole and parts near it being wholly unknown to them. The Heavens are oft and fitly ſaid to be ſpread or ſtretched out like a Curtain or Tent, to which they are reſembled. n To wit, the Air, ſo called not Philoſophically, as if it were wholly empty, but popularly, becauſe it ſeems to be ſo, and is generally void of ſolid and viſible bodies. o Upon its own Center, which is but an imaginary thing, and in truth nothing: Or upon no Props or Pillars, but his own Power and Providence: Which is juſtly celebrated as a wonderful Work of God both in Scripture, and in Heathen Authors.

8. He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds, and the cloud is not rent under them p.

p This alſo is a miraculous Work of God, conſidering the nature of theſe Waters which are fluid and heavy, and preſſing downward, eſpecially being oft-times there in great abundance, and withal the quality of the Clouds, which are thin and looſe bodies of the ſame nature with Fogs and Miſts upon the Face of the Earth, and therefore of themſelves utterly unable to bear that weight, and to keep up thoſe Waters from falling ſuddenly and violently upon the Earth.

9. He holdeth back q the face of his throne r, and ſpreadeth his cloud upon it.

q i.e. To wit, from our view, that its luſtre and glory ſhould not reach us, and ſo dazle our ſight, he covereth it with a Cloud, as the next words explain it. Or, He holdeth faſt, or binds together, or ſtrengthens it, that it may be able to bear that burden. r Either 1. this lower Air, which is as the Face or open part of the Heavens, which is often called God's Throne, as Pſalm 11. 4. Iſa. 66. 1. Amos 9. 6. Or 2. the appearance or manifeſtation of the Heaven of Heavens where he dwelleth, whoſe light and glory is too great for mortal eyes, which therefore by Clouds and other ways he hides from us.

* Pſ. 33. 7. & 104. 9. † Heb. until the end of light with darkneſs.

10. * He hath compaſſed the waters s with bounds t, † until the day and night come to an end v.

s To wit, of the Sea, for of the upper Waters coming out of the Clouds he ſpake before. t Which are partly the Rocks and Shores, and principally God's appointment, made at the firſt Creation, and renewed after the Deluge, Gen. 9. 11, 15. that the Waters ſhould not overwhelm the Earth: See Job 38. 8, 10, 11. Pſalm 104 3. Jer. 5. 22. u i.e. Unto the end of the World, for ſo long as theſe Viciſſitudes of Day and Night are to continue, Gen. 8. 22. & 9. 9, &c. Jer. 5. 22. & 31. 35, 36.

11. The pillars of heaven x tremble, and are aſtoniſhed at his reproof y.

x Either, 1. thoſe Mountains which by their height and ſtrength may ſeem to reach and ſupport the Heavens, as the Poets ſaid of Atlas; for this is a Poetical Book, and there are many Poetical expreſſions in it. Theſe tremble ſometimes by force of Earthquakes, or by God's glorious appearance in them, as Sinai did. Or, 2. Holy Angels, but they are not ſubject either to trembling or to God's rebuke. Or, 3. the Heavenly Bodies, as the Sun, and Moon, and Stars, which as they may ſeem in ſome ſort to ſupport, ſo they do certainly adorn the Heavens: And we know Pillars are oft made, not for ſupport, but only for Ornament; as the two famous Pillars of the Temple, Jachin and Boaz, 1 Kings 7. 21. And theſe oft-times ſeem to tremble and be aſtoniſhed, as in Eclipſes or Tempeſts, and terrible Works of God in the Air, by which they are frequently ſaid to be affected and changed, becauſe they ſeem ſo to us, and many things are ſpoken in Scripture according to appearance: See Iſa. 13. 10. & 24. 23. Joel 2. 10, 31. Mat. 24. 29, &c. y Either, 1. when God rebuketh them: for God is ſometimes ſaid in Scripture to rebuke the lifeleſs Creatures; which is to be underſtood figuratively of the Tokens of God's anger in them. Or, 2. when God reproveth not them, but men by them, manifeſting his diſpleaſure againſt ſinful men by Thunders, or Earthquakes, or prodigious Works.

* Iſa. 51. 15. ‖ Or, ſtilleth, Chap. 38. 11. † Heb. pride.

12. * He ‖ divideth the ſea z with his power, and by his underſtanding a he ſmiteth thorough † the proud b.

z He ſpeaks either, 1. of God's dividing the Red-ſea for the Iſraelites to paſs over: And conſequently the Hebrew word Rahab, which here follows, and is tranſlated pride, or the proud, is meant of Egypt, which is oft called Rahab, as Pſalm 87. 4. & 89. 10. Iſa. 51. 9. But it ſeems moſt probable that that Work was not yet done, and that Job lived long before Iſraels coming out of Egypt. Or rather, 2. of the common Work of Nature and Providence, in raiſing Tempeſts, by which he breaketh or divideth the Waves of the Sea, by making deep Furrows in it, and caſting up part of the Waters into the Air, and ſplitting part of them upon the Rocks and Shores of the Sea. a i.e. By his wiſe Counſel and adminiſtration of things, ſo as he may obtain his own glorious ends. b Either, 1. the Whale, which is called King over all the children of pride, Job 41. 34. and which is ſometimes by force of Tempeſts caſt upon the ſhore. Or rather, 2. the Sea, which is fitly called, proud, as its Waves are called, Job 38. 11. becauſe it is lofty, and fierce, and ſwelling, and unruly; which God is ſaid to ſmite when he ſubdues and reſtrains its rage, and turns the ſtorm into a calm.

13. By his * ſpirit c he hath garniſhed the heavens d, his hand hath formed the † crooked ſerpent e.

* Pſal. 33. 6. † Heb. croſſing like a bar. Ia. 27. 1.

c Either, 1. by his Divine Vertue or Power, which is ſometimes called his Spirit, as Zach. 4. 6. Mat. 12. 28. Or, 2. by his holy Spirit, to which the Creation of the World is aſcribed, Gen. 1. 2. Job 33. 4. Pſalm 33. 6. d Adorned or beautified them with thoſe glorious Lights the Sun, and Moon, and Stars. e By which he underſtands either, 1. all the kinds of Serpents, or Fiſhes or Monſters of the Sea. Or, 2. the moſt eminent of their kinds, particularly the Whale, which may be here not unfitly mentioned (as it is afterwards more largely deſcribed) amongſt the glorious Works of God in this lower World; as the garniſhing of the Heavens was his nobleſt Work in the ſuperiour viſible parts of the World. Or, 3. an Heavenly Conſtellation, called the great Dragon and Serpent, which being moſt eminent, as taking up a conſiderable part of the Northern Hemiſphere, may well be put for all the reſt of the Conſtellations or Stars wherewith the Heavens are garniſhed. Thus he perſiſteth ſtill in the ſame kind of God's Works, and the latter Branch explains the former. And this ſenſe is the more probable, becauſe Job was well acquainted with the Doctrine of Aſtronomy, and knew the nature and names of the Stars and Conſtellations, as appears alſo from Chapter 9. 9. and 38. 31.

14. Lo theſe are parts f of his ways g, but how little a portion is heard of him h? but the thunder of his power i who can underſtand?

f Or, the extremities, but ſmall parcels, the outſide and viſible work: How glorious then are his inviſible and more inward Perfections and Operations. g i.e. Of his Works. h i.e. Of his Power and Wiſdom, and Providence and Actions. The greateſt part of what we ſee or know of him, is the leaſt part of what we do not know and of what is in him, or is done by him. i Either 1. of his mighty and terrible Thunder, which is oft mentioned as an eminent work of God; as Job 28. 25. & 40 9. Pſalm 29. 3. & 77. 18. Or, 2. of his mighty Power, which is aptly compared to Thunder, in regard of its irreſiſtible force, and the terrour which it cauſeth to wicked men: This Metaphor being uſed by others in like caſes, as among the Grecians, who uſed to ſay of their vehement and powerful Orators, that they did thunder and lighten; and in Mark 3. 17. where powerful Preachers are called Sons of Thunder.

CHAP. XXVII.

1. MOreover, Job † continued a his parable b, and ſaid,

a When he had waited a while to hear what his Friends would reply, and perceived them to be ſilent. b His grave and weighty, but withal dark and difficult diſcourſes, ſuch as are oft called Parables, as Numb. 23. 7. & 24. 3, 15. Pſal. 49. 4. & 78. 2. Prov. 26. 7.

2. As God liveth c, who hath taken away my judgment d, and the Almighty, who hath † vexed my ſoul;

c He confirms the truth and ſincerity of his Expreſſions by an Oath, becauſe he found them very hard to believe all his profeſſions. d Or, my right, or my cauſe, i.e. who, though he knows my Integrity and Piety towards him, yet doth not plead my cauſe againſt my Friends, nor will admit me to plead my cauſe with him before them, as I have ſo oft and earneſtly deſired, nor doth deal with me according to thoſe terms of Grace and Mercy wherewith he treateth other men and Saints, but uſeth me with great rigour and by his ſoveraign Power puniſheth me ſorely without diſcovering to me what ſingular cauſe I have given him to do ſo.

3. All the while my breath e is in me, and ‖ the ſpirit of God f is in my noſtrils;

‖ That is, the breath which God gave him.

e Which is the conſtant Companion and certain ſign of Life both coming in with it, Gen. 2. 7. and going out with it, 1 Kings 17. 17. Pſal. 146. 4. Or, my Soul, or Life. f That Spirit or Soul which God breathed into me, Gen. 2. 7. and preſerveth in me. Or rather, the breath of God, i.e. which God breathed into me, which eminently appears in a mans noſtrils.

4. My

4 My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit g.

g I will speak nothing but the truth with all plainness and impartiality, neither defending myself and cause, by vain and false professions of those Vertues or Graces which I know I have not; nor yet in compliance with your desire and design, falsly accusing myself of those crimes wherewith you charge me, whereof I know myself to be innocent.

5 God forbid that I should justifie you h: till I die, ‡ Chap. 2. 9. † I will not remove i my integrity from me.

h i.e. Your opinion and censure concerning me, as one convicted to be impious or hypocritical; by God's unusual and severe dealing with me. i To wit, declaratively, as real words are frequently understood, or by renouncing or denying my Integrity, of which God and my own Conscience bear me witness. I will not, to gratifie you, say that I am an hypocrite, which I know to be false.

6 My righteousness I hold fast k, and will not let it go: my heart l shall not reproach me m ‖ so long as I live n. ‖ Heb. from my days.

k Heb. I have held fast, i. e. I have not only begun well, but continued in well-doing; which is a plain evidence that I am no hypocrite. Or, the past tense is put for the future, as is usual, I will hold fast, declaratively, as before, I will maintain it, that howsoever you calumniate me, I am a righteous person. l i. e. My Conscience, as the heart is oft used, as 1 Sam. 24. 5. & 25. 31. Ezek. 14. 5. 1 Joh. 3. 20, 21. m Either 1. with betraying my own cause and innocency, and speaking what I know to be false, to wit, that I am an hypocrite. Or 2. for my former impiety or hypocrisie, wherewith you charge me. n Heb. From, or for, or concerning my days, i. e. the time of my Life, whether past or to come: Or the course of my Life, days or times being put here, as it is elsewhere, for actions done in them by a Metonymy.

7 Let mine enemy be as the wicked o, and he that riseth up against me p, as the unrighteous.

o I am so far from loving and practising wickedness, whereof you accuse me, that I abhor the thoughts of it, and if I might and would wish to be revenged of mine Enemy, I could wish him no greater mischief than to be a wicked man. p Either 1. You my Friends, who instead of comforting me, are risen up to torment me, Or rather, my worst Enemies.

‡ Mat. 16. 26. 8 * For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained q, when God taketh away r his soul?

q There is no reason why I should envy or desire the portion of wicked men, for though they oft-times prosper in the world, as I have said, and seem to be great gainers, yet death, which hasteneth to all men, and to me especally, will shew that they are far greater losers, and die in a most wretched and desperate condition, having no hope either of continuing in this life, which they chiefly desire; or of enjoying a better Life, which they never regarded. But I have a firm and well-grounded hope, not of that temporal restitution which you promised me, but of a blessed immortality after death, and therefore am none of these hopeless Hypocrites, as you account me. r Or expelleth, or plucketh up; which notes violence, and that he died unwillingly: Compare Luke 12. 20. when good men are said freely and chearfully to give themselves or their Souls unto God.

† Psal. 18. 41. & 109. 7. Prov. 1. 28. & 28. 9. Isa. 1. 15. Ezek. 8. 18. Mic. 3. 4. Joh. 9. 31. Jam. 4. 3. 9 † Will God hear his cry s when trouble cometh upon him t?

s An hypocrite doth not pray to God with comfort, or any solid hope that God will hear him, as I know he will hear me, though not in the way which you think. t When his guilty Conscience will fly in his face, so as he dare not pray, and accuse him to God so as God will not hear him.

10 Will he delight himself in the Almighty u? will he always call upon God x?

u Will he be able to delight and satisfie himself with God alone, and with his love and favour, when he hath no other matter of delight? This I now do, and this an hypocrite cannot do, because his heart is chiefly set upon the world, and when that fails him, his heart sinks, and the thoughts of God are unsavoury and troublesom to him. x He may by his afflictions be driven to Prayer, but if God doth not speedily answer him, he falls into despair and neglect of God and of Prayer, whereas I constantly continue in Prayer, notwithstanding the grievousness, and the long continuance of my Calamities.

y i.e. By God's help and inspiration; as God is said to speak to the Prophet with or by a strong hand, Isa. 8. 11. I will not teach you my own vain conceits, but what God himself hath taught me. Or, concerning (as the prefix Beth is oft used, as Exod. 12. 43, 44. Psal. 63. 6. & 87 3. Prov. 4. 11.) the hand of God, i. e. his Counsel and Providence in governing the World, or the manner of his dealing with men, and especially with wicked men, of whose portion he discourseth, v. 13, 14, &c. shewing how far the hand of God is either for them, or upon them, and against them. z i.e. What is in his Breast or counsel, and how he executes his secret purposes concerning them; or, the the truth of God, the Doctrine which he hath taught his Church about these matters.

12 Behold, all ye yourselves have seen it a, why then are ye thus altogether vain b?

a I speak no false or strange things, but what is known and confirmed by your own as well as others experiences. b In maintaining such a foolish and false opinion against your own knowledge and experience. Why do you obstinately defend your opinion, and not comply with mine, for the truth of which I appeal to your own Conscience?

13 This c is the portion of a wicked man with God d, and the heritage of Oppressors e, which they shall receive of the Almighty.

c That which is mentioned in the following Verses. In which Job delivers either, 1. The opinion of his Friends, in whose person he utters them, and afterwards declares his dissent from them. Or rather, 2. His own opinion, and how far he agreeth with them; for his sence differs but little from what Zophar said, Chap. 20. 29. d Either laid up with God, or in his counsel and appointment; or, which he shall have from God, as the next words explain it. e Who are mighty, and fierce, and terrible, and mischievous to mankind, as this word implies; whom therefore Men cannot destroy, but God will.

14 * If his children be multiplied, it is for the sword f: and his off-spring shall not be satisfied with bread g. * Deut. 28. 41. Hos. 9. 13.

f That they may be cut off by the Sword either of War, or of Justice. g Shall be starved, or want necessaries. A Figure called Meiosis.

15 Those that remain of him h shall be buried in death i; and * his widows k shall not weep l. * Psal. 78. 64.

h Who survive and escape that Sword and Famine. i Either, 1. Shall die, and so be buried. Or, 2. Shall be buried as soon as ever they are dead, either because their Relations or dependents feared lest they should come to themselves again, and trouble them and others longer; or because they were not able to bestow any Funeral Pomp upon them, or thought them unworthy of it. Or, 3. Shall be in a manner utterly extinct in or by death; all their hope, and glory, and name, and memory (which they designed to perpetuate to all Ages) shall be buried with them, and they shall never rise again to a blessed Life, whereas a good man hath hope in his death, and leaves his good-name alive and flourishing in the World, and rests in his Grave in assurance of Redemption from it, and of a glorious Resurrection to an happy and eternal life. k For they had many Wives, either to gratifie their Lust, or to encrease and strengthen their Family and Intereft. l Either, because they durst not lament their death, which was entertained with publick joy: or, because they were overwhelmed and astonished with the greatness and strangeness of the Calamity, and therefore could not weep: or, because they also, as well as other persons, groaned under their Tyranny and cruelty, and rejoyced in their deliverance from it.

16 Though he heap up silver as the dust, and prepare raiment as the clay m.

m i.e. In great abundance.

17 He may prepare it, but the just shall put it on n, and the innocent shall divide o the silver.

n Either because it shall be given to him by the Judge to recompence those Injuries which he received from that Tyrant: Or because the right of it is otherwise transferred upon him by divine Providence. o Either, 1. To the poor: he shall distribute that which the oppressors hoarded up, and kept as wickedly as he got it. So this suits with Prov. 28. 8. Eccles. 2. 26. Or, 2. With others, or to himself. He shall have a share of it, when by the Judges sentence those ill-gotten goods shall be restored to the right owners.

18 * He buildeth his house as a moth p, and as a booth that the keeper maketh q. * Chap. 8. 15.

p Which settleth itself in a Garment, but is quickly and unexpectedly brushed off, and dispossessed of its dwelling, and crushed to death. q Which the Keeper of a Garden or Vineyard suddenly rears up in Fruit-time, and as quickly and easily pulls it down again. See Isa. 1. 8. Lam. 2. 6.

19 The rich man shall lie down r, but he shall not be * gathered s: he openeth his eyes t, and he is not u. * 2 King. 22. 20.

r Either, 1. To sleep, as this word is used, Gen. 19. 35. Deut. 6. 7, &c. Or, 2. In death, of which it is used, 2 Sam. 7. 12. s To wit, in burial, of which this word is used, 2 Kings 22. 20. Jer. 8 2. & 25. 33. Instead of that honourable Interment and Burial with his Fathers, which he expected, he shall be buried with the burial of an Ass, his Carkass shall lie like dung upon the Earth. t So the sence is either, 1. He awaketh in the morning, promising to himself an happy day. Or, 2. He looks about him for help and relief in his extremity. But the words are and may be rendred thus; One openeth his eyes, i.e. whilst a man can open his Eyes, in a moment or in the twinkling of an Eye. u He is as if he had never been, dead and gone, and his Family and Name extinct with him.

20 * Terrors take hold on him x as waters y, a tempest stealeth him away in the night z. * Ch. 18. 11.

x From the sence of his approaching Death or Judgment. y Either, 1. In abundance, one terror after another. Or, 2. violently and irresistibly, as a River breaking its Banks, or a Deluge of Waters bears down and overwhelms all that is before it. ץ God's Wrath and Judgment cometh upon him forcibly like a Tempest, and withal secretly and unexpectedly, like a Thief in the night.

21 The east-wind a carrieth him away b, and he departeth: and as a storm hurleth him out of his place.

a i.e. Some violent and terrible judgment, fitly compared to the East-wind, which in those Parts was most vehement and furious, and withal pestilent and pernicious; of which see Exod. 10.13. & 14.21. Psal. 48.7. & 78.26. Hos. 13.15. Jona. 4.8. b Out of his place, as it follows, out of his stately Palace wherein he expected to dwell for ever; whence he shall be carried either by an Enemy that shall take him and carry him into captivity, or by Death.

22 For God shall cast upon him c, and not spare d: † he would fain flee out of his hand e.

c His darts or plagues, one after another. d i.e. Shall shew no pity nor mercy to him, when he crieth to God for it. e He earnestly desires and endeavours by all ways possible to escape the judgment of God, but all in vain.

23 Men f shall clap their hands g at him, and shall hiss him h out of his place i.

f Who shall see and observe these things. g Partly in token of their joy at the removal of such a publick Pest and Tyrant: and partly by way of astonishment: and partly in contempt and scorn, or derision; all which this gesture signifies in Scripture use, of which see Lam. 2. 15. Ezek. 25. 6. Nah. 3. 19. h In token of their amazement, detestation and derision. See 1 King. 9. 8. 2 Chron. 28.9. Jer. 25.9. Mich. 6. 16. i Now that he is out of his place and power, which they durst not do whilst he was in his place. Or, the Men of his place that lived with him or near him, and daily felt the effects of his Tyranny.

CHAP. XXVIII.

SUrely there is ‖ a vein for the silver a, and a place for gold, ‖ where they fine it b.

a Where it is hid by God, and found, and fetched out by the art and industry of man. The connexion of this Chapter with the former, is difficult, and diversly apprehended; but this may seem to be the fairest account of it, Job having in the last Chapter discoursed of God's various Providences and carriages towards wicked men, and shewed that God doth sometimes, for a season, give them Wealth and Prosperity, but afterwards calls them to a sad account, and punisheth them severely for the abuse of his Mercies; and having formerly shewed that God doth sometimes prosper the wicked all their days, so as they live and die without any visible token of God's displeasure against them, when on the contrary, good men are exercised with many and grievous Calamities, and perceiving that his Friends were, as men in all ages have been, scandalized at these methods of Divine Providence, and denied the thing, because they could not understand the reason of such unequal Dispensations: In this Chapter he declares that this is one of the depths and secrets of Divine Wisdom, not discoverable by any mortal man in this world, and that although men had some degree of Wisdom whereby they could dig deep, and search out many hidden things, as the Veins of Silver, Gold, &c. yet this was a Wisdom of an higher nature, and out of man's reach. And hereby he secretly checks the arrogance and confidence of his Friends, who, because they had some parts of Wisdom, the knowledge of natural things, such as are here contained, and of human Affairs, and of some divine matters, therefore presumed to fathom the depths of God's Wisdom and Providence, and to judge of all God's ways and works by the scantling of their own narrow understandings. Possibly it may be connected thus, Job having been discoursing of the wonderful ways of God both in the works of Nature, Chap. 26. from v. 5. to the end, and his providential Dispensations towards wicked men, Chap 27. from v. 13. to the end, he here returns to the first Branch of his Discourse, and discovers more of God's Wisdom and Power in natural things. And this he doth partly that by this manifestation of his singular skill in the ways and actions of God, he might vindicate himself from that contempt which they seemed to have for him, and oblige them to hear what he had further to say with more attention and consideration, and partly that by this representation of the manifold Wisdom and Power of God, they might be wrought to a greater Reverence for God and for his works, and not presume to judge so rashly and boldly of them, and to condemn what they did not understand in them. b Or rather, as it is in the Margent of our Bibles, which they, to wit, the Refiners, do fine. For he speaks not here of the works of Men and of Art, but of God and of Nature, as is manifest from the foregoing and following words.

‖ Or, dust.

2 Iron is taken out of the ‖ earth c, and brass d is molten out of the stone e.

c Being made of Earth concocted by the heat of the Sun into that hardness, and by Miners digged out of the Earth. d Or, Copper. e Wherewith it is mixed and incorporated in the Earth, and by Fire, and the Art of the Metallist, it is separated from it, and taken out of it, as Pliny observes 34. 1, 10. & 36. 27.

* Ch. 12. 22.

3 He f setteth an end g * to darkness, and searcheth out all perfection h: the stones i of darkness, and the shadow of death k.

f Either, 1. Man the Miner: Or, 2. God, of whose works of Nature he here speaks: Or, 3. God as the chief Author and Director and Man as God's Instrument in the work. g Or, abound, how far the darkness shall reach, and how far the dark and hidden parts and Treasures of the Earth shall be searched, and discovered, and brought to light. h i.e. Metals and Minerals, which are nothing else but Earth concocted, and hardned, and brought to maturity and perfection. Or, unto all perfection, i.e. he perfectly and exactly searcheth them out, although the Hebrew Lamed may be here only a Note of the Accusative Case, as our Translation takes it. i Either Gems and Precious-stones, which are called by this word, Prov. 26.8. or those Stones out of which the Metals fore-mentioned are taken. k Which lie hid in the dark and deadly shades and bowels of the Earth.

4 The flood breaketh out l from the inhabitants m, even the waters n forgotten of the foot o: they are dried up, they are gone away from men p.

l This Verse speaks either, 1. Of another great and remarkable work of God, whereby in some places either new Rivers break forth, or old Rivers break in upon the Inhabitants, and drive them away; and in other places, Rivers or other Waters are dried up, or derived into other channels or grounds, by which means these Lands are rendred more useful and fruitful. Or rather, 2. Of an accident which commonly happens in Mines, where, whilest men are digging, a flood of Waters breaks in suddenly and violently upon them, and disturbs them in their work. m Heb. from with the Inhabitants, i.e. out of that part of the Earth which the Miners in a manner inhabit, or where they have their fixed abode, and for the most part dwell. Or, so that there is no Inhabitant or abider, i.e. so that the Miners dare continue there no longer, but are forced to come away. n Which word is easily and fitly understood out of the fore-going word flood. Or, without this supplement, the flood may be said to be forgotten, &c. that singular word being collectively taken, and so conveniently joyned with this word of the plural number. o i.e. Untrodden by the foot of man, such Waters as men either never did pass over, or, by reason of their depth, cannot pass over, or, such as though the Miners at first for a while did pass over, yet now cannot, or dare not do so any more. Forgetfulness is here ascribed to the foot, as it is to the hand, Psal. 137.5. and it is put for ignorance or unacquaintedness, as all sinners are said to forget God, though many of them never remembred nor minded him. p Heb. they are dried up (or, drawn up, to wit, by Engines made for that purpose) from men, (i. e. from the Miners, that they may not be hindred in their work. Or, with, or by men, the prefix Mem being oft put for Beth, i. e. by the labour of men) they remove, or vanish, or pass away, and so the Miners return to their work.

5 As for the earth, out of it q cometh bread r, and under it s is turned up t as it were * fire u.

* Ezek. 28. 14.

q Out of the upper parts of the Earth r Bread-corn, or other food for man's use. s Either, 1. under the same Earth, which either at the same time yields bread out of its upper, and fire out of its lower parts; or at several times; that Earth which once was fruitful, becoming, by the disposition of Divine Providence, barren and sulphureous, &c. Or, 2. Under other parts of the Earth. t i. e. Is digged out and fetched up. u Either Gold and Precious-stones, which glitter and sparkle like fire: or Coals, and Brimstone, and other materials of Fire.

6 The stones of it are the place of sapphires x: and it hath y ‖ dust of gold z.

x i. e. Of Precious-stones, the Sapphire, as one of the most eminent, being put for all the rest. In some parts of the Earth, the Sapphires are mixed with stones, and cut out of them and polished. Of this Stone, see Exod. 24. 10. Ezek. 1. 26. Cant. 5. 14. Lam. 4 7. y i. e. The Earth containeth in or under it. ץ Which is a distinct thing from that Gold which is found in the mass or lump, of which v. 2. both sorts of Gold being found in the Earth.

7 There is a path a which no fowl knoweth, and which the vultures b eye hath not seen.

c To wit, in the dark depths and bowels of the Earth. b Whose Eye is very quick and strong, and which searcheth all places for its Prey, but cannot reach to these places, which yet the Wisdom of Man, by the direction of God's Providence, findeth out.

8 The lions whelps c have not trodden it, nor the fierce lion d passed by it.

c Heb. The sons of pride, a fit name for Lions, which are lofty and stately Creatures, despising both Men and all other Beasts that oppose them. d Which rangeth all places for Prey, and findeth out the deepest Dens and Caves of the Earth. The Birds and Beasts have oft-times led men to such places as otherwise they should never have found out; but they could not lead men to these Mines, but the finding out of them is a special gift of God, and an act of that Wisdom which he hath put into man.

9 * He puteth forth his hand upon the ‖ rock e; he overturneth the mountains by the roots f.

* Chap. 9. 5.

e This and the two next Verses are meant either, 1. Of other eminent and considerable works of God, who sometimes overturneth Rocks, and produceth new Rivers in unlikely places. Or rather, 2. Of the same work of mining and digging for Gold, or other precious things of the Earth, and of other effects of Man's Art and Wisdom in that work. The Miners resolve to break through all opposition, and by Iron tools, or by Fire or other ways, dig through

through the hardeſt Rocks. f He undermineth the very Mountains to find out the Metals lying at the bottom of them.

10 He cutteth out Rivers among the Rocks g, and his Eye ſeeth every precious thing h, g He maketh channels there to convey away that water which was breaking in upon him, and if not thus diverted, would have ſpoiled his work: of which ſee on v. 4. h Having with great art and indefatigable Induſtry broke through all difficulties, he at laſt arrived at his end, and finds out thoſe precious Treaſures which he ſought for.

†Heb. from weeping. 11 He bindeth the floods † from overflowing i, and the thing that is hid, bringeth he forth to light k.

i He reſtraineth them, and as it were bindeth them to their good behaviour, that they may not overflow the Mine. k Thoſe Metals which did lie hid in the ſecret parts of the Earth he diſcovers to himſelf and others.

12 But where ſhall Wiſdom l be found? and where is the place of Underſtanding m?

l Heb. that Wiſdom, for here is an article which ſeems to be emphatical. The ſence is, I confeſs that man hath one kind of Wiſdom in a great meaſure, to wit, to diſcover the works of Nature, and to perform the operations of Art; but as for that ſublime and eminent Wiſdom, which conſiſts in the exact knowledge of all Gods Counſels and Ways, and of the ſeveral manners and reaſons of his governing the world, and dealing with good and bad men, this is far above man's reach, and is the Prerogative of God alone. m There is no vein for that upon Earth, as there is for Gold or Silver.

13 Man knoweth not the price thereof n, neither is it found in the Land of the Living o.

n Man knoweth neither where to purchaſe it, nor how much it is worth, nor what to offer in exchange for it. o Amongſt mortal men that live upon Earth, but only amongſt thoſe bleſſed Spirits that dwell above.

*Ver. 22. Rom. 11. 33, 34. 14 * The depth p ſaith, It is not in me: and the Sea ſaith, It is not with me.

p To wit, of the Earth, becauſe the Sea here follows as a differing place. This is a very common figure, whereby Speech is aſcribed to dumb and ſenſleſs Creatures: The meaning is, this is not to be found in any part of the Land or Sea, yea, though a man ſhould dig or dive never ſo deep to find it, nor to be learned from any Creatures: For though theſe diſcover the Being, and Power, and in part, the Wiſdom of God, yet they do not inſtruct us in the methods and grounds of Gods providential diſpenſations to good and evil men: theſe are ſecrets of Wiſdom reſerved for God himſelf.

†Heb fine gold ſhall not be given for it. *Prov. 3. 13, 14. & 8. 11, 19. & 16. 16. 15 † It * cannot be gotten for Gold q, neither ſhall Silver be weighed r for the price thereof.

q The choiceſt Gold laid up in Treaſures, as the word ſignifies. r To wit, in the ballance: for in thoſe times Money was paid by weight, not by tale. See Gen. 23. 16. Jer. 32. 9, 10.

16 It cannot be valued with the gold of Opher s, with the precious Onyx t, or the Saphire.

s Which was the beſt ſort of gold. See 1 King. 9. 28. Job 22. 24. t Or, Sardonyx, See on Exod. 28. 20.

‖Or, veſſels of fine gold. 17 The gold and the cryſtal u cannot equal it: and the exchange of it ſhall not be for ‖ jewels x of fine gold.

u Or Amber, which in thoſe parts was of very great price. Or, the Diamond. The Hebrew word is not elſwhere uſed, and it hath in it the ſignification of purity, or clearneſs, or brightneſs. x Or, veſſels, wherein there is not only the excellency of the materials, but the curioſity of art, which renders the other much more valuable.

‖Or, Remoth. 18 No mention ſhall be made y of ‖ coral, or of pearls: for the price z of Wiſdom is above rubies.

y They are of no value, nor worthy to be named the ſame day with this, nor fit to be mentioned as a price or recompence, wherewith to purchaſe this. z Or, the attraction, or acquiſition: or rather, the Extraction, or drawing forth. For Job uſeth the word of art which was proper in the taking of Pearls, as the following word, rendred by our Tranſlators Rubies, is underſtood by divers, both Hebrew and Chriſtian Interpreters, and amongſt others by the late eminently learned Bochart, who proveth it by divers Arguments. Now theſe Pearls are and were taken by men that dived to the bottom of the Sea, and drew them out thence, which is the very word which both Arabick and Latine Authors uſe in the caſe, as indeed the ſame word is uſed of all Fiſher-men, who are ſaid to draw forth with their Hook, or Net, or otherwiſe, Fiſhes, or any other thing for which they are fiſhing. Moreover this diving, as it produced great profit, ſo it was not without ſome danger and difficulty; for if they heedleſly put their fingers into the gaping ſhell, within which the Pearl was, it ſpeedily cloſed upon them, and put them to exquiſite pain, to the loſs of their finger, and ſometimes of their Life. Which is a fit repreſentation of the ſtate of thoſe perſons who ſearch after the knowledg of Gods Counſels, and ways, and the grounds of them, who as when they modeſtly enquire into them, and truly diſcover them, they have infinite advantage and ſatisfaction therein, ſo if they prie into them too boldly, ſearching into thoſe things which God hath concealed, and raſhly judging of them above what they know, which Job judged to be his Friends caſe, they expoſe themſelves to manifold ſnares and dangers. And this extraction, or drawing forth, is aptly uſed concerning this Wiſdom, which lying very deep and remote from the reach of ordinary men, is not to be obtained without diligent ſearch and conſideration. And ſo the place may be thus tranſlated, the extraction or drawing forth of Wiſdom is above that (to wit, the extraction) of Pearls.

19 The topaz a of Ethiopia b ſhall not equal it, neither ſhall it be valued with pure gold.

a Of which ſee Exod. 28. 17. & 39. 10. b Or, of Arabia: for Cuſh ſignifies both Ethiopia and Arabia; and the Topaz was found in the Red-Sea, which lay between both, and ſo might be aſcribed to either.

20 * Whence then cometh wiſdom? and where is the place of underſtanding c? *Ver. 12.

c Where this precious Treaſure lies, and whence a man may fetch it.

21 Seeing it is hid from the Eyes of all living d, and kept cloſe from the fowls of ‖ the air e. ‖Or, heaven.

d Of all men that live upon the Earth. e Though they flie high, and can ſee far and well, yet they cannot diſcern this: Men of the moſt raiſed underſtandings cannot diſcover it. It is to be found no where in this viſible World, neither in the upper nor lower parts of it.

22 * Deſtruction and death f ſay, we have heard the fame thereof g with our ears. *Ver. 14.

f Either 1. Men that are dead, and thereby freed from the encumbrance of their bodies, which depreſs their minds, and have more raiſed thoughts than men that live here. Or 2. The Grave, the place of the dead, to which theſe things are here aſcribed, as they are to the depths, and to the Sea, v. 14. by a Figure called Proſopopœia. If a man ſhould ſearch for this Wiſdom, either amongſt living men, or amongſt the dead, he could not find it; yea, though he ſhould and might enquire of all men that formerly lived in the World, ſome of whom were perſons of prodigious Wit, and Learning, and of vaſt Experience, as having lived nigh a Thouſand Years, and made it their great buſineſs in that time to ſearch out the depths of this divine Wiſdom in the adminiſtration of the World. g We know it only by ſlight and uncertain rumours, but not fully and perfectly.

23 God h underſtandeth the way thereof i, and he knoweth the place thereof k.

h i. e. God alone; as appears by the denial of it to all other things. i Either the way how it is to be obtained: Or rather, the methods or courſes which it takes in the management of all affairs in the World, together with its grounds and ends in them. k Where it dwells, which is only in his own Breaſt and Mind, and in the beſt of men but in part, and only as far as it pleaſeth him to afford it.

24 For he looketh to the ends of the Earth, and ſeeth under the whole heaven l.

l He, and he only knows it, becauſe his Providence, and that only, is infinite and univerſal, reaching to all places, and times, and things, paſt, preſent, and to come; whereas the moſt acute and knowing men have narrow underſtandings, and ſee but very few things, and ſmall parcels of the works of God, and therefore are very unfit to paſs a judgment upon them, becauſe the Wiſdom, and Juſtice, and Beauty of Gods works is not clearly nor fully ſeen till all the parts of them be laid together.

25 To make the weight for the winds m, and he weigheth n the waters o by meaſure p.

m Which of themſelves are moſt light, and without any weight, and inconſtant, and ſuch as no Creature can order or govern them: But God manageth them all by weight, appointing to every Wind that blows, its ſeaſon, its proportion, its bounds and limits, when, and where, and how much, and how long each Wind ſhall blow, and for what ends, whether for Mercy, as to refreſh men in hot ſeaſons with its gentle gales, to cheriſh the fruits of the Earth, to waft Ships on the Sea to their deſired Havens, &c. or whether for Judgment, as to corrupt the air, and thereby the Bodies of men, and Fruits of the Earth, to blow down Houſes upon their Inhabitants, as he was pleaſed to deal with my poor unhappy Children. He only doth all theſe things, and he only knows why he doth them. He inſtanceth but in ſome few of Gods works, and thoſe which ſeem to be moſt trivial, and caſual, and uncertain, that thereby he might more ſtrongly imply and prove that God doth the ſame in other things which are more conſiderable, and are managed by more conſtant cauſes, and certain methods; that he doth all things in the moſt exact order, and weight, and meaſure. n But it ſeems a very improper ſpeech, to weigh things by meaſure; and therefore this word may more fitly be otherwiſe rendred, he examineth, or diſpoſeth, or fitteth, or directeth, for ſo this verb is elſewhere uſed, as 1 Sam. 2. 3. Pſal. 75. 3. Prov. 16. 2. & 21. 2. o To wit, the Rain-waters, as appears from the next Verſe, which God layeth up in his Store-houſes, or Bottles, the Clouds, and thence draws them forth, and ſends them down upon the Earth in ſuch times and proportions as he thinks fit, and as may ſerve his ſeveral deſigns and ends. p For liquid things are examined by measure, as other things are by weight: and here is both weight and measure to signifie with what exact and perfect Wisdom God doth govern the World.

26 When he made q a decree for the rain r, and a way s for the lightning of the thunder.

q Which was either from eternity, or at the first Creation, when he settled that course and order which should afterwards be continued. Or, when he maketh: But our Translation seems best to suit with the then in the next Verse, where the sence is compleated. r An appointment, and as it were a Statute Law, that it should fall upon the Earth, and that in such times, and places, and proportions, and manner, as he should think fit, either for correction, or for mercy, as Elihu speaks, Job 37. 13. s Or path, how it should get out of the thick Cloud in which it was shut up, and as it were imprisoned: or, a course, which should for the future be observed, as to the time, and measure, and ends, and other circumstances belonging to it.

‖Or, number it. 27 Then t did he see it u, and ‖ declare it x, he prepared it y, yea, and searched it out z.

t Either from eternity, when he decreed what he would do, or when he first created them. u i. e. Wisdom, which is the subject matter of the present discourse. This God saw not abroad, but within himself, he looked or reflected upon it in his own mind, as the rule by which he would proceed in his Creation and Government of all things, managing them in such ways and methods as were most agreeable to his own most wise and unsearchable Counsels, which no humane or created Wit can reach or pierce into. Or, he saw it so as to declare it, as it follows, so as to make it visible and manifest in some measure to his Creatures. Or, he saw it, i. e. he enjoyed it, seeing being oft put for enjoying, as Psal. 27. 13. & 34. 12. Eccles. 3. 13. & 2. 1. Compare Prov. 8. 22. x i. e. He made it evident, he discovered his deep Wisdom which lay hid before in his own breast; or he laid the foundation of that discovery of it, which then was, or afterward should be made to Angels and Men, as the Heavens did in themselves declare the glory of God, Psal. 19. 1. before there was such a Creature as man to take notice of it, because the object was visible in it self, and not made so by the Eye which afterwards beheld it. Or, did number it, i. e. shewed it as it were by number, not only in gross, but as it were by retail, in all the several works which he made. y i. e. He had it in readiness for the doing of all his works, as if he had been for a long time preparing materials for them. So it is a speech of God after the manner of men. Or, he disposed it, i. e. used or employed it in his works. Or, he settled, or established it, i. e. he firmly purposed to do such and such things in such manner as he thought meet, and he established the order which he first made in the World, that it should continue in after ages. Or, he directed it, and directed and ordered all things by it. z Not properly; for so searching implies Ignorance, and that a man is at a loss, and requires time and industry, all which is repugnant to the Divine Perfections; but figuratively, as such expressions are oft used concerning God, i. e. He did, and doth, all things with that absolute and perfect Wisdom, and he knoweth all his own Counsels and Actions, and the reasons of them, so exactly, and perfectly, as if he had bestowed a long time in searching, and judging, to find them out. And this, and the other Acts mentioned in this Verse, are to be understood of God solely and exclusively, it being here, as it is oft elsewhere in this Book, sufficiently implied, that this kind of divine Wisdom, which consists in the accurate knowledge of all Gods Counsels and works, is far above, out of man's reach: Man doth not see this Wisdom, but only so far as God is pleased to reveal it to him, and therefore he cannot declare it to others; man did not prepare, nor order, nor contrive it, and therefore no wonder if he cannot search it out. And so this is most fitly connected with the following Verse: For as here he tells us what Wisdom is denied to man, so there he informeth us what is granted to him.

* Psal. 111. 10. Prov. 1. 7. & 9. 10. Eccles. 12. 13. 28 And a unto man b he said c, behold d, * the fear of the LORD e, that his wisdom f, and to depart from evil g is understanding h.

d Or rather, But: For this is added by way of opposition, to shew that mans Wisdom doth not lie in a curious enquiry into, or an exact knowledge of the secret paths of Gods Counsel and Providence, but in things of another, and of a lower nature. b Unto Adam at first, and in, and with him, to all his Race and Posterity. c i. e. God spake it, partly and at first inwardly to the mind of Man, in which God wrote this with his own Finger, and engraved it as a first Principle for his direction, and partly afterwards by the holy Patriarchs, and Prophets, and other Teachers of his Church, whom God sent into the World to teach men true Wisdom; which accordingly they did, not by acquainting the People with the secrets and intricacies of Gods Counsel and Providence, but by declaring the revealed Will of God, and instructing them in their duty towards God and Men, making this their great if not only business, to make men wise unto Salvation. See Deut. 4. 6. & 29. 29. d Which expression notes the great importance of this Doctrine, and withal man's dulness and backwardness to apprehend and consider it, and man's proneness to place his Wisdom in vain and curious speculations. e i. e. True Religion, and the right Worship of God, both inward and outward, all which cometh under this name. f In that only consists mans true Wisdom, because that, and that only, is his duty, and his safety, and happiness, both for this Life and for the next, and withal this is attainable, whereas the depths of Gods ways are unknown, and unsearchable to humane or created Capacities. g i. e. From sin, which is called evil eminently, as being the chief if not the only Evil, and the cause of all other evils, and that which is constantly and immutably evil, whereas afflictions are frequently made good and highly beneficial. Religion consists of two Branches, doing good and forsaking evil; the former is expressed in the former clause of this Verse, and the latter in these words. h Is the best kind of Knowledge or Wisdom to which man can attain in this Life. The same thing is here twice expressed in several Phrases. And the design of Job in this close of his Discourse, is not only to shew the mistake, and reprove the Arrogance and boldness of his Friends, in prying into Gods secrets, and passing such a rash censure upon him, and upon Gods ways and carriage towards him; but also to vindicate himself from the imputation of Hypocrisie and Profaneness, which they fastened upon him, by shewing that he had ever esteemed it to be his best Wisdom, and true Interest, to fear God, and to depart from evil.

CHAP. XXIX.

1 MOreover, Job † continued his Parable, and said, † Heb. added to take up.

2 Oh that I were as in months past, as in the days when God preserved me a:

a To wit, from all those miseries which now I feel. This he desires, not only for his own Ease and comfort, but also for the vindication of his Reputation, and of the honour of Religion, which suffered by his means: For as his calamities were the only ground of all their hard Speeches and censures of him, as a man forsaken and hated by God, so he rightly judged that this ground being removed, and his prosperity restored, his Friends would take it for a token of Gods favour to him, and beget in them a milder and better opinion of him.

3 When his ‖ Candle b shined upon my head c, and when by his light I walked through darkness d. ‖ Or, lamp b i. e. His Favour and Blessing, oft signified by the name light, as his displeasure, and a state of affliction is frequently called darkness. c Or, over my head, to comfort and direct me. The ground of the Expression is this, that lights used to be carried and set on high, that men may make the better use of them, as the Sun for that end was placed above us. d I passed safely through many difficulties, and dangers, and common calamities, which befell others who lived round about me, and overcame those troubles which fell upon my self.

4 As I was in the days of my youth e, when the secret of God was upon my Tabernacle f:

e i. e. In my former and flourishing days, which he calls the days of Youth, because those are commonly the times of mirth and comfort, as Old-age is called evil days, Eccles. 12. 1. f When there was a secret Blessing of God upon me, and my Family, protecting, directing, and succeeding us in all our affairs, which the Devil observed, Ch. 1. 10. whereas now there is a visible curse of God upon me and mine.

5 When the Almighty was yet with me g, when my Children h were about me:

g i. e. On my side, whereas now he is against me, and hath forsaken me. h Or, servants, or both, and therefore he useth this word which comprehends both.

6 When I washed my steps with ‖ butter i, and the Rock poured † me out Rivers of Oyl k: ‖ Or, cream. Chap. 20. 17. † Heb. with me.

i i. e. When I abounded in all sorts of Blessings; which is oft signified by this or the like Phrases, as Gen. 49. 11. Deut. 33. 24. Job 20. 17. Psal. 81. 16. When I had such numerous Herds of Cattle, and consequently such plenty of Butter, that if I had needed it, or been pleased so to use it, I might have washed my Feet with it. k When not only fruitful fields, but even barren and rocky places (such as that part of Arabia was where Job lived) yielded me Olive-Trees and Oyl in great plenty. See on Deut. 32. 13.

7 When I went out l to the gate m, through the City n, when I prepared my seat o in the street p.

l From my dwelling. m To wit, of the City, as the following words shew, to the place of Judicature, which was in the Gates, as hath been oft observed. n Through that part of the City which was between my House and the Gate. Or, to the City, i. e. the Gate belonging to the City: So Job might live in the Country adjoyning to it. o When I caused the seat of Justice to be set for me. By this, and divers other Expressions, it appears that Job was a Magistrate, or Judge in his Country. p i. e. In that void and open place within, or near the Gate, where the People assembled for the administration of Justice among them.

8 The young men saw me, and hid themselves q: and the aged arose, and stood up r.

p Either out of a profound Reverence to my Person and Dignity, or out of a Conscience of their own Guilt or Folly, which they supposed I might either understand by Information from others, or discover by their countenances or carriages in my presence, for which they knew I would reprove them, and bring them to shame or other punishment. r Whilest I either passed by them, them, or was present with them. See Levit. 19. 32. 1 Kings 2. 19. So great a veneration they had for my Person, in regard of that Wisdom, and Justice, and Faithfulness which they discerned in me, and in all my proceedings. And therefore they judged quite otherwise of me than you now do.

9 The princes refrained talking s, and laid their hand on their mouth t.

s Either fearing that I should discern their weakness by their words; or desiring to hear my words and sentence which they readily approved of, and fully assented to. Such an opinion had they of my Wisdom, and did not think me such a foolish, erroneous, and impertinent Person as you fancy or represent me to be. t In token both of their wonder at Job's wise Speeches and Sentences, and of their resolution to be silent. See Job 21. 5. Prov. 30. 32.

10 † The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth u.

u It lay as still as if it had done so, and they could not have spoken.

11 When the ear heard me, then it blessed me x, and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me y:

x i.e. Pronounced me to be a man blessed of God with eminent Gifts and Graces; or heartily prayed for God's Blessing upon me, because of that Wisdom and Integrity which they saw in all my actions, and of the satisfaction which I gave to all, and the relief which I gave to the oppressed, by my righteous and equitable Decrees in all causes which were brought before me. y When my appearance gave them occasion to speak of me, they gave Testimony to my pious, and just, and blameless conversation. So far was I from being, or being thought to be, guilty of those crimes wherewith you charge me; of which see Ch. 22. 9.

* Psal. 72. 12. Prov. 21. 13.

12 Because * I delivered z the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him a.

z From his potent oppressour. They did not honour me for my great Wealth or Power, but for my impartial Justice and Pity to the afflicted, and courage in maintaining their cause and right against their mighty Adversaries. a None would own or help them, partly because they were poor, and unable to recompence them for it: and partly because their Enemies were great, and likely to crush both them and their helpers. Which made Job's vertue more glorious.

13 The blessing b of him that was ready to perish c came upon me: and I caused the widows d heart to sing for joy e:

b Wherewith both he and others for his sake blessed me, and begged that God would bless me. c To lose his life or estate by the malice and tyranny of wicked men. d Who are the common object of injuries and oppressions, because for the most part they are unable, either to offend those who molest them, or to defend themselves from their violence. e For her great and unexpected deliverance.

* Isa. 59. 17. Eph. 6. 14. 1 Thess. 5. 8.

14 * I put on righteousness, and it cloathed me f: my judgment was as a robe and diadem g.

f As a Garment covers the whole Body, and is worn continually all the day long, so I was constantly just in the whole course of all my administrations, publick and private, and never put off this Garment out of a partial respect to myself, or to the persons of other men, as the manner of many Judges is. g My judgments or decrees were so equal and righteous, that they never brought shame and reproach upon me, but always Honour and great Reputation.

15 I was eyes h to the blind i, and feet was I to the lame k.

h i.e. Instead of Eyes to instruct, and direct and assist. i Either 1. Corporally. Or rather 2. Spiritually; such as through Ignorance or weakness were apt to mistake, and to be seduced or cheated by the craft and artifices of evil-minded men. These I cautioned, and advised, and led into the right way. k i.e. Ready to help him who was unable to help himself.

16 I was a father l to the poor: and the cause which I knew not m I searched out.

l i.e. Had the care and bowels of a Father to them. m Either 1. Those which were not brought to my knowledge or tribunal, either through neglect, or because the injured persons durst not complain, I diligently enquired after. Or 2. Those which were hard and difficult. and possibly were made so by the frauds or arts of the oppressours, or their advocates, which the poor injured person could not find out, I took pains to discover.

17 And I brake † the jaws n of the wicked, and † pluck'd the spoil out of his teeth o.

n Or, the jaw-bones: or, the grinders, the sharpest and strongest Teeth in the Jaw, i.e. their power and violence wherewith they used to oppress others. It is a Metaphor from Wild-beasts which break their Prey with their Teeth. Compare Psalm 38. & 57. 4. & 58. 6. o i.e. Forced them to restore what they had violently and unjustly taken away.

18 Then I said p, I shall die in my nest q, and I shall multiply my days as the sand r.

p i.e. I persuaded myself, being thus strongly fortified with the Conscience of my own universal integrity, and with the singular favour of God and of all men. But although this was sometimes Job's opinion, yet at other times he was subject to fears, and expectation of changes, as appears from Chap. 3. 25, 26. q Not a violent or untimely, but a natural, and peaceable, and seasonable death, sweetly expiring in my own Bed and Habitation, in the midst of my Children and Friends, leaving the precious perfume of a good Name behind me, and a plentiful Inheritance to all my posterity. r Which is innumerable: See Gen. 22. 17. & 41. 49.

† Heb. opened. * Psal. 1. 3. Jer. 17. 8.

19 My root was † spread out * by the waters, and the dew lay all night upon my branch s.

s I was continually watred by divine favour and blessing, as a tree which is constantly supplied with moisture, both in its root and branches, and consequently must needs be fruitful and flourishing.

20 My glory was † fresh t in me u, and my * bow x was † renewed y in my hand.

t The reputation which I had gained by my just and vertuous Life was not decaying, but growing, and every day augmented, with the accession of new honours. u Heb. with me. x i.e. My strength, which is signified by a Bow, Gen. 49. 24. 1 Sam. 2. 4. because in ancient times the Bows and Arrows were principal instruments of War. y Heb. changed itself, i.e. grew as it were a new Bow, when other Bows by much use, grow weak and useless. Or, changed its strength, which word may be here understood, as it is expressed, Isa. 40. 31. i. e. hath got new strength.

21 Unto me men gave ear, and waited and kept silence at my counsel z.

z Expecting till I spoke, and silently listening to my Counsel, which they were confident would be like the Oracle of God, wise, and just, and good, and preferring it before their own judgment.

22 After my words they spake not again a, and my speech dropped upon them b.

a Either to confute them as false, or to add to them as lame and imperfect. b To wit, as the rain, as the next Verse explains it, which when it comes down gently and droppingly upon the earth, is most acceptable and beneficial to it, not so when it comes in great and violent showers.

23 And they waited for me, as for the rain c, and they opened their mouth d for me as for the latter rain.

c As the Earth or the Husbandman waiteth for the rain, to wit, the former rain; of which see Deut. 11. 14. because the latter rain is here opposed to it: See Jam. 5. 7. d To receive my words, and therewith to satisfie their thirst, as the dry and parched Earth gapes or opens its mouth to receive the Rain.

24 If I laughed on them e, they believed it not f, and the light of my countenance they cast not down g.

e Or sported, or jested with them, i. e. carried myself familiarly and pleasantly with them. f It was so acceptable to them to see me well-pleased with them, that they could scarce believe their Eyes and Ears that it was so: Compare Gen. 45. 26. Psalm 126. 1. g My familiarity did not breed contempt or presumption in them to say or do any thing that might grieve me, or make my countenance to fall, as it doth in case of shame or sorrow, Gen. 4. 5. They were very cautious not to abuse my smiles, nor to give me any occasion to change my Countenance or Carriage towards them.

25 I chose out their way f, and sat g chief h, and dwelt as a king in the army i, as one that comforteth the mourners k.

f They sought to me for my advice in all doubtful and difficult Cases, and I chalked out their Path, and directed them what methods they should take to accomplish their desires. g As a Prince or Judge, whilest they stood waiting for my counsel. h Or Head, as their Head or Ruler, and my mind and word was as a Law or Oracle to them. i Whose presence puts life, and courage and joy into the whole Army. And no less acceptable was my presence to them. k As I was able and ready to comfort any afflicted or sorrowful persons, so my Consolations were always grateful and welcom to them. Or, when he, to wit, the King, comforteth the mourners, i. e. his Army, when they are under some great Consternation or Dejection by reason of some great loss or danger, but are revived by the presence and speech of a wise and valiant King or General.

CHAP. XXX.

1. BUT now a they that are † younger than I b, have me in derision c, whose fathers I would have disdained d to have set with the dogs of my flock e.

† Heb. of fewer days than I.

a My Condition is sadly changed for the worse. b Whom both universal Custom and the light of Nature taught to reverence rence their Elders and Betters. c Make me the Object of their contempt and scoffs: Thus my glory is turned into shame. d Or rather, I might have disdained, i. e. Whose condition was so mean and vile, that in the opinion and according to the custom of the World, they were unworthy of such an employment. e To be my Shepherds, and the Companions of my Dogs which watch my Flocks. Dogs are every where mentioned with contempt as filthy, unprofitable, and accursed Creatures; as 2 Sam. 16. 9. 2 Kings 8. 13. Phil. 3. 2. Rev. 22. 15.

2 Yea, whereto might the strength of their hands profit me f, in whom old age was perished g?

f Nor was it strange that I did, or would, or might refuse to take them into any of my meanest services, because they were utterly impotent, and therefore unserviceable. g Or, lost, either 1. Because they never attain to it, but are consumed by their lusts, or cut off for their wickedness by the just hand of God or men in the midst of their days. Or 2. Because they had so wasted their strength and spirits by their evil courses, that when they came to old age, they were feeble and decrepit, and useless for any labour. Or 3. Because they had not that prudence and experience which is proper and usual in that age, by which they might have been useful if not for work, yet to oversee and direct others in their work. But the words may be thus rendred, In whom vigorous age was perished, i. e. who were grown impotent for service. For the word here rendred old age, is used only here, and Job 5. 26. where also it may be so rendred, Thou shalt come to thy grave in a vigorous or mature age, having the vigour of youth even in thine old age and until thy death, as Moses had. And if this word do signifie old age, yet it signifies not every, but only a flourishing and vigorous old age; as the Hebrew note, and the word may seem to imply: Whence the seventy Interpreters also render it perfection, to wit, of age, and of the endowments belonging to age.

3 For want and famine h they were ‖ solitary: fleeing into the wilderness, † in former time desolate and waste:

h Brought upon them either by their own sloth or wickedness, or by God's just Judgment. Heb. In want and famine, which aggravates their following solitude. Although want commonly drives persons to places of resort and company for relief, yet they were so conscious of their own guilt, and contemptibleness, and hatefulness to all persons, that they shunned all company, and for fear or shame fled into and lived in desolate places.

4 Who cut up mallows i by the bushes k, and juniper l roots for their meat.

i Or Purslain, or Salt, or bitter Herbs, as the word seems to import, which shews their extreme necessity. k Or, by the shrubs, nigh unto which they grew. Or, with the barks of trees, as the Vulgar Latine renders it. l Possibly the word may signifie some other Plant, for the Hebrews themselves are at a loss for the signification of the Names of Plants.

5 They were driven forth from among men m, (they cried after them, as after a thief n)

† Heb. holes.

6 To dwell in the clifts of the valleys, in † caves of the earth, and in the rocks.

m As unworthy of humane society, and for their beggery and dishonesty, suspected and avoided of all men. n Giving one another warning of their danger from them.

7 Among the bushes they brayed o, under the nettles p they were gathered together.

o Like the wild Asses, Job 6. 5. for hunger or thirst. p Which seem not proper for that use. This Hebrew word is used but twice in Scripture, and it is acknowledged both by Jewish and Christian Writers, that the signification of the Hebrew words which express Plants, or Beasts, or Stones, &c. is very uncertain; and therefore this is by others, and may well be understood of some kind of Thorns: And so this is the same thing with the bushes in the former Branch of the Verse, under which they hid themselves, that they might not be discovered when they were sought out for justice.

8 They were children of fools q, yea, children of † base men r: they were viler than the earth s.

q Either 1. the genuine Children of foolish Parents, their Children not only by Birth, but by Imitation; as they only are esteemed the children of Abraham, who do the works of Abraham, John 8. 39. Or 2. Fools, by a common Hebraism, as the sons of men are put for men, and the children of wisdom, for wise men, &c. r Heb. men without name, i. e. without any degree of Credit or Reputation; as men of name is put for renowned persons, Gen. 6. 4. s Which we tread and spit upon, and are not willing to touch.

* Chap. 17. 6. Psal. 35. 15. & 69. 12. Lam. 3. 14, 63.

9 * And now am I their song t, yea, I am their by-word.

t The matter of their song and derision: They now rejoyce in my Calamities, because formerly I used my authority to punish such Vagrants and Miscreants.

† Heb. and withhold not spittle from my face.

10 They abhor me, they flee far from me u, † and spare not to spit in my face x.

u In contempt of my person and loathing of my sores. x Not literally, for they kept far from him, as he now said; but figuratively, i. e. they use all manner of contemptuous and reproachful expressions and carriages towards me, not only behind my back, but even to my face.

11 Because he y hath loosed my cord z, and afflicted me a, they have also let loose the bridle b before me c.

y To wit, God, for it follows, He afflicted me, which was God's work. z Either 1. He hath slackned the string (as this word sometimes signifies) of my Bow, and so rendred my Bow and Arrows useless, either to offend others, or to defend myself; i. e. He hath deprived me of my strength or defence: So this is opposed to that expression, Chap. 29. 20. Or 2. He hath taken away from me that power and authority, wherewith as with a Cord, I bound them to the good behaviour, and kept them within their bounds. The like expression is used in the same sence, Job 12. 18. a When they perceived that God who had been my faithful Friend and constant Defender had forsaken me, and was become mine Enemy, they presently took this advantage of shewing their malice against me. b They cast off all former restraints of law, or humanity, or modesty, and gave themselves full liberty to speak or act what they pleased against me. c They durst now do those things before mine eyes, which formerly they trembled lest they should come to my ears.

12 Upon my right hand d rise e the youth f, they push away my feet g, and they raise up against me the ways h of their destruction i.

d This Circumstance is noted either because this was the place of Adversaries or Accusers in Courts of Justice, Psal. 109. 6. Zach. 3. 1. Or to shew their boldness and contempt of him, that they durst oppose him even on that side where his chief strength lay. e To wit, in way of contempt and opposition, or to accuse and reproach me, as my Friends now do; as one who by my great but secret wickedness have brought these miseries upon myself. f Heb. Young striplings, who formerly hid themselves from my presence, Chap. 29. 8. g Either 1. Properly, they trip up my heels. Or rather 2. Metaphorically, they endeavour utterly to overwhelm my goings, and to cast me down to the ground. h i. e. Cawseways, or Banks: So it is a Metaphor from Soldiers, who raise or cast up Banks against the City which they besiege. Or, they raise up a Level, or smooth the Path by continual treading it: they prepare, and contrive, and use several methods to destroy me. i Either 1. passively; so the sence is, they raise or heap upon me, i. e. impute to me, the ways, i. e. the causes of their ruine. They charge me to be the Author of their ruine. Or rather 2. actively, of that destruction which they design and carry on against me: Which best suits with the whole Context, wherein Job is constantly represented as the Patient, and wicked men as the Agents.

13 They mar my path k, they set forward my calamity l, they have no helper m.

k As I am in great misery, so they endeavour to stop all my ways out of it, and to frustrate all my counsels and courses of obtaining relief or comfort. And although Job had no hopes of a temporal deliverance or restitution, yet he could not but observe and resent the malice of those who did their utmost to hinder it. Or the sence is, They prevent all my ways, putting perverse and false constructions upon them, censuring all my conscientious discharges of my duty to God and men as nothing but craft and hypocrisie. l Increasing it by their bitter Taunts and Invectives, and Censures. Or, they profit by, or are pleased and satisfied with my calamity. It doth them good at the heart to see me in misery. m This is added as an aggravation of their malice, they impudently persisted in their malicious designs against me, though none encouraged or assisted them therein. Or, even they who had no helper, who were themselves in a forlorn and miserable condition; and yet they could so far forget or over-look their own calamities as to take pleasure in mine.

14 They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters n; in the desolation o they rolled themselves upon me p.

n As fiercely and violently as a River doth when a great breach is made in the Bank which kept it in. Heb. as at a wide breach; as a besieging Army having made a breach in the Walls of the City, do suddenly and forcibly rush into it. o Or for, or instead of a desolation; i. e. that they might utterly destroy me and make me desolate. Or, in the waste place; i. e. in that part of the Bank or Wall which was wasted or broken down. p As the Waters, or Soldiers come rolling or tumbling in at the Breach.

15 Terrours q are turned upon me r: they pursue † my soul s as the wind t: and my welfare u passeth away as a cloud x.

q To wit, from God who sets himself against me, and in some sort joyns his Forces with these Miscreants. r Are directed against me to whom they seem not to belong, as being the portion of wicked men. s Heb. my principal or excellent one, i. e. my Soul, which is fitly so called, as being the chief part of man; as it is called a man's glory, Gen. 49. 6. and his only One, Psal. 22. 20. and which is the proper seat and object of Divine Terrours, as his Body was of his outward Pains and Ulcers. t i. e. Speedily, vehemently, hemently, and irresistibly. u All the happiness and comfort of my life. x Which is quickly dissolved into Rain, or dissipated by the Sun, or driven away with the Wind.

16 And now my soul is poured out y upon me z: the days of affliction have taken hold upon me.

y All the strength and powers of my Soul are melted, and fainting, and dying away, through my continued and insupportable sorrows and calamities. z Or, within me, as this Hebrew Particle is elsewhere used, as Psal. 42. 5, 6. Isa. 26. 9. Hos. 11. 8.

17 My bones are pierced a in me b, in the night-season c: and my sinews d take no rest.

a Heb. It; to wit, the Terror or Affliction last mentioned: Or, He, i. e. God, hath pierced my bones. This is no slight and superficial, but a most deep wound, that reacheth to my very heart, and bones, and marrow. Nothing in me is so secret, but it reacheth it, nothing so hard and solid, but it feels the weight and burthen of it. b Heb. from above me, by an Arrow shot from Heaven, whence my Calamities come, and that in a singular and eminent manner. Or, by that which is upon me: the sores which are upon my skin or outward flesh, do pierce and pain me even to the bones. For now he is come from describing the terrors of his Mind, to express the torments of his Body. c When others do, and I should receive some rest and refreshment. d And the flesh of my body, which covereth the Sinews, and is mixed with them, and may seem to be synecdochically expressed by the Sinews, which are the strength and support of the flesh. So he signifies that neither his bones nor his flesh resteth. Or, and my Veins or Arteries, which rest or move slowly when the Mind and Body are well composed; but in Job did move vehemently and restlesly by reason of his great heat and pain, and passion.

18 By the great force of my disease is my garment changed e: it bindeth me about f as the collar of my coat g.

e My Disease is so strong and prevalent, that it breaks forth every where in my Body in such plenty of purulent and filthy matter, that it infects and discolours my very garments. Others, By the great power of God my garment is changed. In both these Translations the words, of my disease, and of God, are not in the Hebrew Text, but are supplied by the Translators. But the words are by some not untruly nor unfitly rendred thus, without any supplement, With great force my garment is changed; for so this Verb is used, 1 Kings 22. 30. So the sence is, I cannot shift or put off my garment without great strength and difficulty; the reason whereof is rendred in the following words. f It cleaveth fast to me, being glewed by that filthy matter issuing from my Sores. g As my Collar girdeth in and cleaveth to my Neck. He alludes to the fashion of the Eastern outward Garments, which were seamless and all of a piece, and had a strait mouth at the top which was brought over the head, and contracted and fastned close about the Neck.

19 He hath cast me into the mire h, and I am become like dust and ashes i.

h He hath made me contemptible, and filthy, and loathsom for my Sores, my whole Body being a kind of Quagmire in regard of the filth breaking forth in all its parts. i Like one dead and turned to dust, more like a rotten Carkass, than a living Man.

20 I cry unto thee, and thou dost not hear me k: I stand up l, and thou regardest me not m.

k To wit, so as to answer or help me. l Or, I stand, to wit, before thee, i. e. I pray, as this phrase signifies, Jer. 15. 1. & 18. 20. this being a gesture of Prayer, Mat. 6. 5. And so the same thing is here repeated in other words after this manner: Or, I persist, or persevere in praying; I pray importunately and continually, as thou requirest. m So the Particle not is supplied out of the former Clause. Or, without the Negation, thou knowest or observest me, and all my Griefs and Cries, and yet doest not pity nor help me, but rather takest pleasure in the contemplation of my Calamities, as the following words imply. Or it may be taken Interrogatively, Dost thou regard me? i. e. thou doest not.

21 Thou art † become cruel n to me: with † thy strong hand thou opposest thyself against me o.

n Heb. Turned to be cruel, as if thou hadst changed thy very Nature, which is kind, and merciful, and gracious; and such thou hast been formerly in thy carriage to me: but now thou art grown severe, and rigorous, and inexorable. o Thy power wherewith I hoped and expected that thou wouldest have supported me under my troubles, thou usest against me.

22 Thou liftest me up to the wind p: thou causest me to ride upon it q, and dissolvest my ‖ substance r.

p Thou doest not suffer me to rest or lie still for a moment, but disquietest me and exposest me to all sorts of storms and calamities; so that I am like chaff or stubble lifted up to the wind, and violently tossed hither and thither in the air, without the least stop or hindrance. q i. e. To be carried and hurried about by it. r By this restlessness and the vehemency of these winds, my Body is almost consumed and wasted, and my heart is melted within me.

23 For I know that thou wilt bring me to death s, and to the house appointed for all living t.

s I see nothing will satisfie thee but my death which thou art bringing upon me in a lingering and dismal manner. t To the grave, to which all living men are coming and hastening.

24 Howbeit he will not stretch out his hand to the † grave, though they cry in his destruction u.

u There is great variety and difficulty in the sence and connexion of these words: They may be joyned either 1. with the following Verse, as describing Job's compassion to others in affliction, which by the Principles of Reason and Religion should have procured him some pity from God and men in his affliction. And to that purpose the words are or may be translated thus; But was not my prayers for them (which words may be understood out of the following Clause) when he stretched out his hand? (to wit, against them to destroy them) in his destruction or oppression (understand it actively, i. e. when God was about to destroy any other man or men) was not (the Negation being understood out of the former Branch of the Verse, as is usual) my cry for them? the Feminine Gender being put for the Masculine, as it is elsewhere; or for these things, the Feminine being put for the Neuter; that is, for those destructive Calamities which were upon them? Or 2. with the foregoing Verse. And so these words contain either 1. a Consolation against the evil last mentioned: So the sence is, Though God will undoubtedly bring me to the Grave by these Torments, yet this comforts me, that surely he will not stretch out his hand (to wit, to afflict or punish me further, as this phrase is used, Exod. 3. 20. Isa. 9. 12, 13.) in the grave, though they, i. e. the perishing persons cry or roar (i. e. be sorely pained and tormented) in his destruction, i. e. whilest God is destroying them. Or this last Clause may be read interrogatively, Is there any cry in his destruction? When a man is cut off or destroyed by death, doth he then cry and complain? No, there is an end of all these Miseries. Or rather 2. a Confirmation of what he last said. For the whole Context shews that Job is not taking any comfort to himself, but rather aggravating his Sufferings. I know, saith he, that I am a dead man, and my Condition is desperate, for surely he, i. e. God, will not stretch out his hand (to wit, to save or rescue me, as this phrase is used, Psalm 18. 17. & 144. 7. compared with Acts 4. 30.) to or in the grave (i. e. to a dead man, such as I am in effect, having not only one foot, but in a manner both feet in the grave, as being upon the very brink of the Pit) though they cry (to wit, unto God, i. e. though there be a great and a general Cry and Lamentation for him among his Friends or others, and an earnest desire of him, if possibly he might be restored to life again) in his destruction, i. e. when he is destroyed or dead; yet all these Cries would be in vain.

* Psal. 35. 13. 14. Rom. 12. 15. † Heb. for him that was hard of day.

25 * Did not I weep † for him that was in trouble x? was not my soul grieved for the poor y?

x Whence is it that neither God nor man shew any compassion to me, but both conspire to afflict me and encrease my torments? Doth God now mete out to me the same measure which I meted out to others? Have I now Judgment without Mercy, because I afforded no mercy nor pity to others in misery? No, my Conscience acquits me from this inhumanity: I did not sleightly resent, but bitterly mourn and weep over others in their miseries; and therefore I had reason to expect more Compassion than I find. y Even for him who was not capable of requiting my kindness in case of his recovery: which shews that my sympathy was real, and not feigned, as it is in some who pretend great sorrow for the rich in their troubles, hoping thereby to insinuate themselves into their favour and friendship, and thereby to procure some advantage to themselves.

26 When I looked for good, then evil came unto me z: and when I waited for light, there came darkness.

z Instead of the return of the like pity to me, which I might justly challenge and expect whensoever I should stand in need of it, I meet with a sad disappointment, and my pity is recompensed with others cruelty to me.

27 My bowels boiled and rested not a: the days of affliction prevented me b.

a i. e. My inward parts boiled without ceasing. The Bowels are the seat of Passion and of Compassion; and therefore this may be understood, either 1. of his compassionate and deep sence of others miseries; which is oft expressed by bowels, as Isa. 16. 11. Col. 3. 12. and elsewhere, of which he spake v. 25. to which he subjoyns the contrary usage which he met with, v. 26. And then in this first part of v. 27. he renews the mention of his compassion to others, and in the latter part he adds by way of Antithesis or Opposition, that his mercy was requited with cruel afflictions. Or 2. of the grievousness of his troubles, which is sometimes expressed by the troubling or boiling of the Bowels or Inward Parts; as Lam. 1. 20. b i. e. Came upon me suddenly and unexpectedly, when I promised to myself peace and prosperity, as the usual recompence which God promiseth and giveth to such as fear and please him, as I have done.

* Psal. 38. 6. & 42. 9. & 43. 2.

28 * I went c mourning without the sun d: I stood ~~stood~~ up e, and I cried f in the congregation g.

c Or, I walked hither and thither as I could. Or, I converse or appear among others. d Spending my days in mourning without without any Sun-light or comfort: or ſo oppreſſed with ſadneſs, that I did not care nor deſire to ſee the light of the Sun. Heb. black not by the Sun. My very Countenance is changed and become black, but not by the Sun, which makes many other perſons black; Cant. 1. 5, 6. but by the force of my Diſeaſe and deep Melancholy which oft-times makes a man's Viſage black and diſmal. See Pſalm 119. 83. Lam. 5. 10 And this he repeats in plainer terms, v. 30. as an eminent token of his exceſſive grief and miſery. e Either becauſe my diſeaſe and pain made me weary of other poſtures: Or that others might take notice of me and be moved with pity towards me. f With a loud and direful clamour through great and ſudden anguiſh. g Where prudence and modeſty taught me to forbear it, if extream neceſſity and miſery had not forced me to it.

* Pſal. 102. 6. || Or, Oſtriches. Mic. 1. 8.

29 * I am a brother h to dragons i, and a companion to || owls k.

h To wit, by imitation of their cries: Perſons of like qualities are oft called brethren, as Gen. 49. 3. Prov. 18. 9. i Which howl and wail mournfully in the Deſerts, Mich. 1. 8. either through hunger or thirſt, or when he fights with and is beaten by the Elephant. k Whoſe ſad and mournful noiſes are known. Or Oſtriches, which alſo is noted to make lamentable out-cries.

* Pſa. 119. 83. Lam. 4. 8. & 5. 10.

30 * My skin is black upon me l, and my bones are burnt with heat m.

l Either by his dark-coloured Scabs, wherewith his Body was in a manner wholly over-ſpread; or by grief, as before m The effect of his Feaver and Sorrow, which dried up all his moiſture, and cauſed great Inflammations and burning heats within him.

31 My harp alſo is turned to mourning n, and my organ into the voice of them that weep.

n Either, 1. I have now nothing but bitter lamentations inſtead of my former expreſſions of joy. Or, 2. Thoſe very things which formerly were occaſions and inſtruments of my delight, do now renew and aggravate my ſorrows.

CHAP. XXXI.

1 I Made a covenant with mine eyes a: why then ſhould I think upon b a maid c?

a So far have I been from wallowing in the mire of Uncleanneſs, or any groſs wickedneſs wherewith you charge me, that I have abſtained even from the leaſt occaſions and appearances of evil, having made a ſolemn Reſolution within my ſelf, and a ſolemn Covenant and promiſe to God that I would not wantonly or luſtfully fix mine Eyes or gaze upon a Maid, leaſt mine Eyes ſhould affect my heart and ſtir me up to further filthineſs. Hereby we plainly ſee, that that Command of Chriſt, Mat. 5. 29. was no new Command peculiar to the Goſpel, as ſome would have it, but the very ſame which the Law of God revealed in his Word, and written in man's heart by nature, impoſed upon men in the times of the Old Teſtament. See alſo 2 Pet. 2. 14. 1 John 2. 16. b i.e. Indulge my ſelf in filthy and luſtful thoughts. Seeing I was obliged and accordingly took care to guard mine eyes: I was upon the ſame reaſon obliged to reſtrain my Imagination. Or, why then ſhould I conſider, or contemplate, or look curiouſly or thoughtfully, or diligently. Since I had made ſuch a Covenant, why ſhould I not keep it? c Which is emphatically added, to ſhew that that Circumſtance which provokes the Luſt of others, had no ſuch power over him, and that he reſtrained himſelf from the very thoughts and deſires of filthineſs with ſuch perſons wherewith the generality of men allowed themſelves to commit groſs Fornication, as deeming it to be either none, or but a very little ſin. Withal he inſinuates, with how much more caution he kept himſelf from uncleanneſs with any married perſon.

2 For what portion of God is there d, from above e? and what inheritance of the Almighty from on high f?

d The reaſon of my Continency and Chaſtity, was, the conſideration of God's Preſence, and Providence, and Judgments. e What fruit or recompence might be expected from God for thoſe who do ſuch things? Nothing but deſtruction, as it follows, v. 3. I conſidered that though theſe practices might at firſt pleaſe me, yet they would be bitterneſs in the latter end. f An emphatical Phraſe to note, that how ſecretly and ſliely ſoever unchaſt perſons carry the matter, ſo as men cannot reprove or reproach them, yet there is one who ſtands upon an higher place whence he hath the better proſpect, who ſeeth both when, and in what manner, and with what deſign they do theſe things.

† Heb alienation: So Gr.

3. Is not deſtruction to the wicked f? and a † ſtrange puniſhment g to the workers of iniquity?

f Deſtruction is their portion. g Some extraordinary and dreadful Judgment, which of right and courſe belongs to them, and only to ſuch as they are, although it hath pleaſed God out of his Soveraign Power to inflict it upon me who have lived in all good Conſcience before him. Heb. an alienation or eſtrangement, to wit, from God and from his favour: Had I been ſuch an one, I

* 2 Chr. 16. 9. Chap. 34. 21. Prov. 5. 21. & 15. 3. Jer. 32. 19.

neither could nor ſhould have expected any kindneſs or mercy from God, as now I do.

4 * Doth not he ſee my ways h, and count all my ſteps?

h i.e. All my counſels and courſes: This is another reaſon why he was ſo circumſpect and exact in reſtraining his Thoughts and Senſes, and whole man from ſinful practices, becauſe he knew that God would diſcern them, and therefore puniſh them; as he ſaid Verſe 3.

5 If I have walked k with vanity l, or if my foot hath haſted to deceit m; k i.e. Converſed in the world, dealt with men, l i.e. with lying or falſhood, or hypocriſie, as this word it oft uſed, as Pſalm 4. 2. & 12. 3. & 36. 3. Prov. 30. 8 and as the next words explain it. m If when I have had any temptation or opportunity of enriching myſelf, by defrauding or wronging others, I have readily and greedily complied with it, as hypocrites (ſuch as you account me) uſe to do, and have not rejected and abhorred it: for more is here underſtood than is expreſſed. This ſence is imperfect, and ſuppoſeth an Imprecation, which is either underſtood, after the manner of the Hebrews, or expreſſed in the next Verſe.

6 † Let me be weighed in an even balance n, that God may know mine integrity o.

n This is either 1. an Imprecation: or rather 2. a Submiſſion to tryal, as the following words ſhew. The ſence is, I am ſo far from being conſcious to my ſelf of any hypocriſie or ſecret wickedneſs whereby I have brought theſe unuſual judgments upon myſelf, as you traduce me, that I deſire nothing more than to have my heart and life weighed in juſt Balances, and ſearched out by the all-ſeeing God. o Heb. and let him know, (i.e. let him acknowledge and ſhew that he knoweth and approveth: or let him make known to my Friends and others who cenſure or condemn me. Or, and he will know; i.e. upon ſearch he will find out: which is ſpoken of God after the manner of men;) mine integrity. So this is an appeal to God to be witneſs of his ſincerity, and to vindicate him from the imputation of hypocriſie.

7 If my ſtep hath turned out of the way p, and mine heart walked after mine eyes q, and if any blot r hath cleaved to mine hands:

p If I have wittingly and willingly, and cuſtomarily (as you accuſe me) ſwerved from the way of truth and juſtice which God hath preſcribed to me: For otherwiſe no man here is ſo juſt, but he ſometimes takes a wrong ſtep, Eccleſ. 7. 20. q If I have let my heart looſe to covet and ſeek after forbidden things which mine eyes have ſeen; which may deſign either 1. the luſt of uncleanneſs. But of that he had ſpoken v. 1. and reneweth the diſcourſe v. 9. Or rather 2. the luſt of Coveteouſneſs, which is called the luſt of the eyes, 1 John 2. 16. partly becauſe it is oft cauſed by ſight, as Joſ 7. 21. and partly becauſe oft-times all the ſatisfaction it gives, is to pleaſe the ſight, Eccleſ. 5. 11. And this ſin is moſt legible in the following puniſhment, v. 8. where his loſs anſwers to this evil gain. The phraſe notes the common method and progreſs of ſin, which is to enter by the eye to the heart, Gen. 3. 6. Num. 15. 39. Eccleſ. 2. 10. & 11. 9. r Or, blemiſh, to wit, any unjuſt gain. If I have in my hands or poſſeſſion any Goods gotten from others by fraud or violence, which would be a great ſcandal and a blot to my reputation.

8 Then let me ſow, and let another eat s; yea, let my off-ſpring t be rooted out.

s Let ſtrangers enjoy the fruit of my labours, according to God's Curſe, Levit. 26. 16. Deut. 28. 30. t As this word is uſed, Job 5. 25. & 27. 14. Or rather, my encreaſe, or growths, or ſprouts; i.e. all my Plants and Fruits, and improvements. For 1. ſo the word properly ſignifies. 2. So this latter Branch of the Verſe explains the former, as is moſt frequent in this and ſome other Books of Scripture. 3. He had not now any Children to be rooted out.

9 If mine heart have been deceived by a woman u, or if I have laid weight at my neighbours door x:

u To wit, by a ſtrange Woman, or rather by my Neighbours Wife, as the next words limit it; for of a Maid he ſpoke before, v. 1. and this cannot be meant of his own Wife. He ſaith, by a woman; i.e. either by gazing upon her Beauty, ſo as to be enamoured with it, and to luſt after her; or by her perſuaſions or allurements. Or, concerning a woman, i.e. concerning impure converſation with a forbidden woman. The phraſe is very emphatical, taking from himſelf and others the vain excuſes wherewith men uſe to palliate their ſins, by pretending that they did not deſign the wickedneſs, but were meerly drawn in and ſeduced by the ſtrong enticements and provocations of others. All which Job ſuppoſeth, and yet neverthleſs owns the great guilt of ſuch practices even in that caſe, as well knowing that temptation to ſin is not juſtification of it. x Watching for a fit opportunity to defile his Wife. Compare Prov. 7, 8, 9.

10 Then let my wife grind unto another y, and let others bow down upon her z.

y Either 1. let her be taken captive and made a ſlave to grind in other mens Mills; which was a ſore and vile ſervitude, Exod. 11. 5. Judg. 16. 21. Iſa. 47. 2. Mat. 24. 41. Or rather 2. let her be defiled by another man, as the next words expound it, and as the Hebrews underſtand it, and as the very Phraſe is uſed by very ancient both Greek and Latine Authors: [Of which ſee my Latine Synopſis on this place.] And this is to be cautiouſly underſtood, not as if Job deſired or would permit a requital in the ſame kind, but only, that if in that caſe God ſhould give up his Wife to ſuch a wic-

a wickedneſs, he ſhould acknowledge his juſtice in it, and (though with abhorrency of the ſin) accept of that puniſhment of it. ꝛ Another modeſt expreſſion of a filthy action; whereby the Holy Ghoſt gives us a Pattern and Precept, to avoid not only unclean actions, but alſo all immodeſt expreſſions.

11 For this a is an heinous crime; yea, it is an iniquity to be puniſhed by the judges b.

a To wit, Adultery, whether committed by choice and deſign, or by the ſollicitation of the Woman, v. 9. b Heb. an iniquity of the judges, i. e. which belongs to them to take cognizance of, and to puniſh, and that with death, and that not only by the Law of Moſes, Deut. 22. 22. but even by the Law of Nature, as appears from the known Laws and Cuſtoms of Heathen Nations in that caſe. See alſo Gen. 38. 24. This is oppoſed to thoſe ſecret and leſſer ſins, which are only known to and puniſhed by God.

12 For it is a fire that conſumeth to deſtruction c, and would root out all mine encreaſe d.

c For this ſin would be as a ſecret but conſuming fire, waſting my Eſtate and Reputation, and Body and Soul too, provoking God, and enraging the Huſband, and bringing down ſome extraordinary Vengeance upon me: And therefore the fear of God kept me from this and ſuch like wickedneſs. d i. e. All my Eſtate. Compare Prov. 6. 27.

13 If I did deſpiſe the cauſe of my man-ſervant e, or of my maid-ſervant, when they contended with me f; e If I uſed my power over him to overthrow him or his juſt rights. And ſeeing it is known that I was ſo juſt and kind to them over whom I had ſuch unlimited power, it is not probable that I ſhould be guilty of ſuch cruelty to others, as you impute to me. f Either for impoſing heavier burthens than they could bear, or for not providing for them thoſe ſupports which their nature and neceſſity required, or for any other plauſible cauſe. I heard them patiently and indifferently, and did them right even againſt myſelf, if by any miſ-information or paſſion I had done them any injury.

ꝛ Pſal. 44. 21. 14 What then ſhall I do when *ꝛ God riſeth up g? and when he viſiteth h, what ſhall I anſwer him i?

g To wit, to plead the Cauſe of the Oppreſſed againſt the Oppreſſor, and to execute judgment, as this Phraſe is uſed, Pſal. 68. 1, Zach. 2. 13. and elſewhere, I uſed my Servant like one who was alſo myſelf a Servant, and had a Maſter in Heaven, Col. 4. 1. to whom I was to give an account of my carriage to my Servant, and to all Men. h i. e. When he ſhall call me to his Tribunal, and ſeverely examine all my actions, and particularly the Cauſe between Me and my Servant. i What Apology ſhall I make for myſelf?

ꝛ Ch. 34. 19. Prov. 14. 31. & 22. 2. Mal. 2. 10. || Or, did he not faſhion us in one womb? 15 *ꝛ Did not he that made me in the womb, make him k? and || did not one faſhion us in the womb l?

k I conſidered, that though he was my Servant, yet my Fellow-creature, made by the ſame God, and therefore one of God's Subjects, whom I could not abuſe without the injury of his ſupreme Lord. l Heb. Did he not form us in one womb? Not in one individual Womb, but in a Womb of the ſame kind, in an humane Womb, with a Body and Soul of the ſame nature and quality, a reaſonable and immortal Creature, and made after God's Image no leſs than myſelf, to whom therefore I owed ſome reſpect for God's ſake.

16 If I have with-held the poor from their deſire m, or have cauſed the eyes of the Widow to fail n:

m i. e. Denied them what they deſired of me either in juſtice, or from neceſſity: For he was not obliged to grant their vain or inordinate deſires. n To wit, with tedious expectation of my juſtice or charity. I durſt neither deny nor delay my help when they required and needed it.

17 Or have eaten my morſel myſelf alone o, and the fatherleſs p hath not eaten thereof:

o Without communicating part of my Proviſions or Eſtate to the Poor, as it follows. p This one kind of neceſſitous perſons is put for all the reſt.

18 (For from my youth q he was brought up with me r, as with a father s, and I have guided || That is, the widow. || her t from my mothers womb u)

q As ſoon as I was capable of managing my own Affairs, and of doing good to others. r In my Family, or at leaſt under my care and protection. s i. e. With all the diligence and tenderneſs of a Father. t i. e. The Widow, mentioned, v. 16. and commonly joyned with the Fatherleſs. u i. e. From my tender years; ever ſince I was capable of diſcerning good and evil, I have made conſcience of this Duty; and this my continuance in well-doing, is a good Evidence of my ſincerity therein.

19 If I have ſeen any periſh for want of cloathing x, or any poor without covering:

x When it was in my power to cloath and arm them againſt cold and nakedneſs.

20 If his loyns have not bleſſed me y, and if he were not warmed with the fleece of my ſheep z:

y i. e. Given him occaſion to bleſs and praiſe me, and to pray to God to bleſs me for covering them; the loyns being put ſynecdochically for the whole Body: See the like expreſſion, Deut. 24. 13. and compare Gen. 4. 10. Luke 16. 9. z With cloathing made of my Wool.

21 If I have lift up mine hand againſt the fatherleſs a, when I ſaw my help in the gate b:

a To ſmite him with the Fiſt of wickedneſs, as the Phraſe is, Iſa. 58 4. to bring him to the Judgment-ſeat, that under colour of Juſtice, I might take away his Right, as powerful Oppreſſors uſe to do, or any ways to threaten, injure, or cruſh him. b When I underſtood my advantage againſt him, and that I could influence the Judges to do what I pleaſed.

22 Then let mine arm fall from my ſhoulder-blade c, and mine arm be broken from the || bone. || Or, the chanel-bone.

c I am contented that that arm which hath been ſo wickedly employed, may either rot off, or fall out of joynt, and ſo be uſeleſs and burthenſom to me.

23 For *ꝛ deſtruction from God was a terror to me d, and by reaſon of his highneſs e I could not endure f. * Iſa. 13. 6. Joel. 1. 15.

d I was ſo far from denying or queſtioning God's Providence, wherewith you ſeem to charge me, that I always reverenced it; and, when by reaſon of my great Wealth and Power, and Intereſt, I had little reaſon to fear man; I ſtood in awe of God and of his Judgments, and made it my care and buſineſs to pleaſe God. e Or, Excellency or Majeſty, which is moſt glorious and terrible. f I found myſelf utterly unable either to oppoſe his power, or to bear his wrath, and therefore I durſt not provoke him by any impiety or injuſtice.

24 *ꝛ If I have made gold my hope g, or have ſaid to the fine gold, Thou art my confidence; * Mar. 10. 24. 1 Tim. 6. 17.

g i. e. The matter of my hope and truſt, placing my chief joy and ſatisfaction in worldly Wealth, expecting ſafety and happineſs from it. Compare Pſalm 62. 10.

25 *ꝛ If I rejoyced h becauſe my wealth was great, and becauſe mine hand had † gotten much i. * Pſal. 62. 10. † Heb. found much.

h To wit, carnally and exceſſively, eſteeming myſelf happy therein without God's love and favour; for otherwiſe it is not only lawful, but a duty and gift of God moderately and thankfully to rejoyce in the good things of this life; of which ſee Deut. 12. 7. Eccleſ. 2. 24, 25, 26. & 3. 12, 13. & 5. 18, 19. i Aſcribing my Wealth to my own wit or induſtry, rather than to God's goodneſs and mercy. And theſe ſins he the rather mentions, partly for his own vindication, leſt it ſhould be thought that God took away his Eſtate, becauſe he had abuſed it to pride, or carnal confidence or luxury, or the oppreſſion of others, &c. and partly for the inſtruction of Mankind in ſucceeding Generations, that they might take notice of the malignity and odiouſneſs of theſe practices, which by moſt men are reputed either laudable or harmleſs, or at worſt, but light and trivial miſcarriages.

26 *ꝛ If I beheld k † the ſun l when it ſhined m, or the moon walking † in brightneſs n: * Deut. 4. 19. & 11. 16. & 17. 3. † Heb. the light. † Heb. bright.

k Not ſimply, nor only with admiration (for it is a glorious work of God, which we ought to contemplate and admire) but for the end here following, or ſo as to aſcribe to it the honour peculiar to God. l Heb. the light, to wit, the Sun, as appears by the oppoſition of the Moon following, which is called the light here, and Gen 1. 16. Pſalm 136. 7, 8. by way of eminency, becauſe it is the great light, and the fountain of light to this viſible World. And this is underſtood either, 1. of Job's worldly glory or proſperity, which is oft compared to light in Scripture, as the contrary is to darkneſs: And ſo the ſence of thoſe and the following words, is, If I reflected upon my wealth and glory, with pride, and admiration, and ſatisfaction. But this he had now mentioned in plain and proper terms, v. 25. and therefore it is not likely that he ſhould now repeat the ſame thing in dark and metaphorical expreſſions. And although this be a great ſin before God, yet this is not one of thoſe ſins which fall under the cognizance of humane Judges, as it here follows, v. 28. Or rather, 2. of the Sun in the Firmament: and ſo this place ſpeaks of the Idolatrous Worſhip of the Hoſt of Heaven, and eſpecially of the Sun and Moon, the moſt eminent and glorious of that number, which was the moſt ancient kind of Idolatry, and was moſt frequent in the Eaſtern Countries, in one of which Job lived. m i. e. In its full ſtrength and glory; for then it did moſt affect mens eyes and hearts with admiration at its beauty and benefits, and ſo move them to adore it. Or, when it began to ſhine, (the compleat Verb being uſed at the beginning of it, as he reigned, is oft put for he began to reign) i. e. at its firſt riſing, which was a ſpecial and chief time for its Adoration. n When it ſhines moſt clearly; or when it is at the full, for then eſpecially did the Idolaters Worſhip it.

27 And my heart hath been ſecretly o enticed p, or q † my mouth hath kiſſed my hand r. † Heb. my hand hath kiſſed my mouth.

o In my inward thoughts or affections, whileſt I made open profeſſion of my adherence to God, and to the true Religion. p Or, ſeduced or deceived, by its plauſible and glorious appearance, which might eaſily cheat a credulous and inconſiderate perſon to believe that there was ſomething of a Divinity in them, and ſo induce him to worſhip it. This Emphatical expression seems to be used with design to teach the World this necessary and useful truth, that no mistake or error of Mind would excuse the practice of Idolatry. q Heb. and, which seems more proper here, because the secret error of the Mind, without some such visible action and evidence, as here follows, had not been punishable by the Judges. r In token of Worship, whereof this was a sign, whether given to men, as Gen. 41. 40. Psalm 2. 12. or to Idols, 1 Kings 19. 18. Hos. 13. 2. And when the Idols were out of the reach of Idolaters, that they could not kiss them, they used to kiss their hands, and as it were, to throw kisses at them; of which we have many examples in Heathen Writers: Of which see my Latine Synopsis on this place.

28 This also s were an iniquity to be punished by the judge t: for I should have denied the God u that is above x.

s No less than the other fore-mentioned sins, Adultery, Oppression, &c. t i. e. By the civil Magistrate; who being advanced and protected by God, is obliged to maintain and vindicate his Honour, and consequently to punish Idolatry. And this did not cease to be his duty, altho' the Magistrates of the World in Job's time were so far from this, that they themselves also were Idolaters. Yet considering that both Job and his Friends who lived in his time and neighbourhood, were most probably the Posterity or Kindred of Abraham and his Family, and by him or his instructed in the knowledge of the true God, and were also Men of great Power and Authority in their Places; it seems most likely that they did restrain and punish Idolatry in their several Jurisdictions, or at least in their own large and numerous Families, where the Masters anciently had power of Life and Death without controll. u Not directly, (for nothing is more evident than this, that divers of the wiser Heathens who did worship the Sun and Moon, did yet acknowledge and adore the sovereign and supreme God over and above all) but by consequence and construction, because this was to rob God of his Prerogative, by giving to the Creature that religious honour or worship which is peculiar to God. x Who is above the Sun and Moon, not only in Place, his glorious Mansion and Palace being far above all visible Heavens, but also in Power and Dignity, or adorable Excellency.

* Prov. 17. 5. 29 * If I rejoiced at the destruction of him that hated me y, or lift up myself z when evil found him.

y I was so far from malice and revenging myself of mine Enemy, which is the common and allowed practice of ungodly men, that I did not so much as desire or delight in his ruine, when it was brought upon him by other hands. Compare Exod. 23. 4. Prov. 24. 17, 18. Whence we may judge whether the great Duty of loving and forgiving our Enemies be a peculiar Precept of Christianity, or whether it be a natural and moral Duty, and a part and act of that Charity which now is, and ever was the Duty of one man to another in all Ages. z Heb. stirred up myself to rejoice and insult over his misery.

* Mat. 5. 44. Rom. 12. 14. † Heb. my palate. 30 * Neither have I suffered † my mouth a to sin, by wishing a curse to his soul.

a Heb. my palate, which being one of the Instruments of Speech, is put for another, or for all the rest. The sence is, If any secret passion or desire of his hurt did arise in me, I forthwith suppressed it, and did not suffer it to grow and break forth into an Imprecation of hurt to him.

31 If the men of my tabernacle b said not, O that we had of his flesh c! we cannot be satisfied d.

b i. e. My Domesticks and familiar Friends, who were much conversant with me in my House, and were Witnesses of my carriage to others, and of their carriages to me, and therefore best able to judge in the case. c Either, 1. Of Job's flesh, which is thought to be an expression either, 1. Of their fervent love to him, caused by his great tenderness and kindness to them. But his meek and gentle carriage to his Servants he had expressed before in plain terms, v. 13. and therefore it is not likely he would repeat it at least in such an obscure & ambiguous phrase, as is no where used in this sence, and is used in a contrary sence, Chap. 19. 22. Or, 2. Of their hatred and rage against him for the excessive trouble he put upon them in the entertainment of strangers, which follows, v. 32. But it is very improbable, either that so just and merciful a man as Job, would put intolerable burthens upon his Servants; or that some extraordidary trouble brought upon them by hospitality, would enflame them to such an height of rage as this phrase implies, against so excellent and amiable a Master. Or, 2. Of the flesh, and other provisions made by Job for strangers; He feeds them liberally, but scarce alloweth us time to satisfie ourselves therewith; which also is very unlikely. Or rather, 3. Of the flesh of Job's enemy, of whom he last spoke, v. 29, 30. And so this is an amplification and further confirmation of Job's charitable disposition and carriage to his Enemy, although his cause was so just, and the malice of his Enemies was so notorious and unreasonable, that all who were daily conversant with him, and were Witnesses of his and their mutual carriages, did condemn and abhor them for it; and were so concerned and zealous in Job's quarrel, that they protested they could eat their very flesh, and could not be satisfied without it. And yet notwithstanding all these provocations of others, he restrained both them and himself from executing vengeance upon them, as David afterwards did in a like case, 1 Sam. 24. 5. & 2 Sam. 16. 9, 10. d To wit, without eating his flesh.

* Rom. 12. 1. Heb. 13. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 9. || Or, to the way. 32 * The stranger e did not lodge in the street f: but I opened my doors || to the traveller:

e Or traveller, as it follows. f But in my house, according to the Laws of Hospitality, and the usage of those times, when there were no publick Inns provided for the conveniency of such persons. See Gen. 18. 3. & 19. 2. Judg. 19. 15, 21.

|| Or, after the manner of men. 33 If I covered my transgressions g, || as Adam h; by hiding mine iniquity in my bosom i:

g This he adds to prevent or answer an Objection. So the sence is, either 1. And whereas amongst these and other Vertues it may well be presumed, that I had divers failings; as I do not now deny them, so I never covered them, but was forward to confess them to God or to Men, as I had occasion. Or (which I propose with submission to better judgments.) 2. If I used all this care and caution in my carriage toward strangers and enemies, and others, only as a cloak to any secret and subtle way of wickedness, such as you accuse me of, and did not seek to purge out all sin as in God's sight, but only to hide my sins from men, and to have the better opportunity for oppressing others, or indulging myself in any other close sin, under a colour, and with a reputation of justice and holiness. h Either, 1. as Adam did in Paradise: Which History is recorded by Moses, Gen. 3. 7, &c. and was doubtless imparted by the godly Patriarchs to their Children before Moses his time. Or, 2. like a man, or after the manner of men in their corrupt estate. Compare Hos. 6. 7. i In my own breast, and from the sight of all men.

34 Did I fear a great multitude, or did the contempt of families terrifie me, that I kept silence, and went not out of the door k?

k This Verse either 1. contains new Matter and another Argument, or evidence of his Integrity, taken from his courage and faithfulness in the discharge of his duty as a Magistrate. The Interrogation implies a denial, and so the sence is, either 1. This, I did not for fear of a great multitude, or for any contempt, or reproach, or other inconvenience which might befall me from great and numerous families, or combinations of People, who were ingaged for him, who had an unrighteous Cause, forbear to speak for the poor oppressed and injured Person whom they all opposed, or deny to go out of the door of my house to plead his Cause, as a timerous and man-pleasing Judge would have done. Or, 2. This, though I could have terrified, or, violently oppressed a great multitude, because of my great power and interest, yet did the most contemptible Persons, or, families terrifie me; i. e. I was afraid to do them any injury, not for fear of them, as appears from the former Clause, but for fear of God; therefore I kept silence, and went not out of the door; i. e. I durst neither move Tongue, nor Hand, nor Foot against them. Or, 2. It contains an Amplification or Confirmation of what he said, v. 33. Either thus, Did I cover, or conceal my Transgressions, because I was afraid of the rage of the multitude, or of the contempt of families, which would be brought upon me by the confession of my wickedness? Did I therefore keep silence, i. e. forbear to confess my sin, and not go out of my door? but keep at home as one in that case ashamed or afraid to be seen abroad? No, the fear of shame or contempt from men, did not hinder me from giving glory to God, by confessing my faults. Or rather thus, Did I therefore cover all my oppressions, and frauds, and other wickednesses (wherewith you tax me) with the mask of Vertue and Piety, and use all possible caution and cunning in my evil courses, because I feared the great multitude, (who were my Friends and Admirers, but in case of the discovery of my wickedness, would have hated and persecuted me;) Or because the contempt of so many families (whose favour or good opinion I needed or desired) terrified me? Then (as the Particle Vau is oft used, i. e. If that were really my case,) I should be silent, (I should silently and patiently bear all the strokes of God, and all the reproaches of my friends) and not go out of the door of my house, as one ashamed to shew his face before men. But my condition being through God's mercy far otherwise, and my Conscience bearing me witness of my integrity in these and many other things, I dare now lift up my head and open my mouth to plead my Cause, and I desire nothing more than a fair Hearing: O that one would hear me! As it follows in the next Verse.

|| Or, behold my desire is that the Almighty will answer me. 35 O that one would hear me l! || behold, my desire is that the Almighty would answer me m, and that mine adversary n had written a book o.

l O that I might have my Cause heard by any just and impartial Judge! m i. e. Answer my desire herein, either by hearing me himself, or by appointing some indifferent Person to Judge whether I be such an Hypocrite as my Friends make me, or an upright Person, and whether I have not cause to complain. n Whosoever he be that shall contend with me, or accuse me, God himself not excepted, nay, possibly being chiefly intended, though for reverence to him he forbear to express it. So this is another of Job's irreverent and presumptuous expressions, for which he is so sharply reproved afterwards. o i. e. Had given me his charge written in a book or paper, as the manner was in Judicial Proceedings, that I might put in my Answer into the Court, which I am ready to do.

36 Surely I would take it p upon my shoulder q, and bind it as a crown to me.

p i. e. That p i.e. That book containing my charge or accusation. q As a Trophy or Badge of Honour. I should not fear nor smother it, but glory in it, and make open shew of it as that which gave me the happy and long desired occasion of vindicating myself, which I doubt not fully to do.

37 I would declare unto him r the number of my steps s, as a prince t would I go near unto him u.

r i.e. To my judge, or adversary. s i.e. The whole course of my life and actions, which I would exactly number to him, step by step, so far as I can remember. I would not answer his allegations against me, but furnish him with further matter of the same kind, and then answer all together t i.e. With undaunted courage and confidence and assurance of success, as being clearly conscious of my own sincerity, not like a self-condemned Malefactour, as my Friends suppose me to be. u And not run away, or hide myself from my Judge, as guilty persons desire to do.

38 If my land cry against me x, or that the furrows likewise thereof † complain.

x To wit, to God for revenge, as the like phrase is used, Gen. 4.10. Hab. 2.11. Because I have gotten it from the right owners by fraud or violence, as my Friends charge me, and as is implied in the next Verse.

† Heb. the strength thereof.
† Heb. caused the Soul of the owners thereof to expire, or breath out.

39 If I have eaten † the fruits thereof without money y, or have † caused the owners thereof to lose their life z.

y Either without paying the price required by the right owner for the land, or by defrauding my Workmen of the wages of their labours. z Killing them that so I might have undisturbed possession of it, as Ahab did Naboth.

40 Let thistles grow instead of wheat, and ‖ cockle instead of barley. The words of Job ‖ are ended.

‖ To wit, in answer to his Friends: for he speaks but little afterwards, and that is to God.

CHAP. XXXII.

1 SO these three men ceased † to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes a.

a i.e. Was self-conceited and obstinately resolved to justifie himself both against God and men: therefore they give him over as incorrigible.

2 Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu the Son of Barachel the Buzite b of the kindred of Ram c: against Job was his wrath kindled, because he justified † himself rather than God d.

† Heb. his Soul.

b Of the Posterity of Buz, Nabors Son, Gen. 22. 21. c Or, of Aram; for Ram and Aram are used promiscuously; comp. 2 Kings 8.28. with 2 Chron. 22.5. and Ruth. 4.19. with Mat. 1.3. Others, of Abraham, who as he was called Abram possibly was at first called only Ram. His Pedegree is thus particularly described, partly for his honour, because his speech declares him to be both a wise and a good Man, and principally to evidence the truth of this History, which otherwise might seem to be but a Poetical fiction. d He justified himself not without reflection upon God as dealing too severely with him, and denying him that hearing which he so passionately desired. He took more care to maintain his own innocency than God's glory.

3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, because they had found no answer e, and yet had condemned Job f.

e To Job's allegations and arguments as to the main cause. f As an Hypocrite or ungodly Man.

† Heb. expected Job in words.

4 Now Elihu had † waited g till Job h had spoken, because they were † elder than he i.

g With Patience, as the word notes. h Add, and his three Friends, as appears from the following words: It is a Synecdoche, whereof instances have been given before. i And therefore he expected more satisfaction from them, and gave them the precedency in the discourse. Wherein he shewed his prudence and modesty.

5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite, answered and said, I am † young, and ye are very old, wherefore I was afraid k, and † durst not shew you mine opinion.

k To wit, of discovering my weakness and folly, and of being thought forward and presumptuous.

* Ch. 12. 12.

7 I said, * Days l should speak m, and multitude of years should teach wisdom n.

l i.e. Multitude of days; by comparing the next Clause of the Verse. Or men of days, i.e. of many days or years, old men. m To wit, wisely and pertinently, as the next words limit it. n Should instruct us that are younger in the paths of wisdom, and concerning the wise counsels and ways of God, about which the present controversie lay.

8 But o there is a spirit p in man: and * the inspiration of the Almighty q giveth them understanding r.

* Ch. 35.11. & 38. 36. Prov. 2.6. Eccles. 2.26. Dan. 1.17. & 2.21. Jam. 1.5.

o Or, surely: It must be confessed. p To wit, which gives him understanding, as is easily and fitly gathered out of the last words of the Verse. And this is to be understood either 1. of the humane Spirit, or reasonable Soul, which is in every man. So the sence of the place is, Every man, as a man, whether old or young, hath a reasonable Soul, by which he is able in some measure, to discern between Good and Evil, and to judge of mens Opinions and Discourses: And therefore I also may venture to deliver my opinion. Or 2. of the Spirit of God, the latter Clause being explicatory of the former, according to the manner. So the sence is, I expected a true and full discovery of the truth in this controversie from persons of your years, wisdom and experience. But upon second thoughts I consider that the knowledge of these deep and divine Mysteries is not to be had or expected from any man as such, though never so aged or wise, but only from God's Spirit, which alone knoweth the deep things of God. And this Spirit he saith is in man, not in every man, for the words are not universal, but indefinite, and man in this Branch is no larger than them who receive divine inspiration in the next Branch. And so the sence is, God is pleased to give his Spirit unto Mankind, unto men of all ages and qualities, as he pleaseth; and having given it in some measure to me, I may take the boldness to utter my thoughts. q i.e. God's Spirit, or the gracious Gifts thereof breathed or infused into man's Soul by God. r To wit, in divine and spiritual matters, which are the matter of this Debate and Book.

9 Great men s are not always wise: neither doth the aged understand judgment t.

s i.e. Men of eminency for age or learning or dignity and power, such as Job's three Friends seem to have been. t What is just and right: Or the judgment of God, and the methods and reasons of his administrations.

10 Therefore I said u, Hearken to me x: I also will shew mine opinion.

u Within myself, and now I say it with my mouth. x Thou Job especially, who art more nearly concerned (to whom therefore he speaketh in the Singular Number) and thy Friends with thee.

11 Behold, I waited y for your words: I gave ear to your † reasons z, whilest ye searched out † what to say a.

y With silence and patience, and diligent attention: which therefore I now expect from you. z Or, reasonings, Heb. understandings, or minds, the depth and strength of your Discourses, your most intelligent and forcible Arguments against Job; I searched and examined them to the bottom. a Whilest you put your Inventions upon the rack, and studied to find out all that could be said against him, and to furnish yourselves with the most convincing words and reasons.

12 Yea, I attended to you: and behold, there was none of you that convinced Job b, or that answered his words:

b By solid and satisfactory answers to his Assertions and Allegations.

13 Lest ye should say c, We have found out wisdom: God thrusteth him down, not man d.

c It is a defective speech, and may be thus supplied; Thus it was, or God thus left you to your own weakness and mistakes, and impertinent Discourses, lest ye should say, &c. i.e. lest you should ascribe the conquering or silencing of Job to your own wisdom, age, and experience: or lest you should boastingly say, We have discovered and said all that can or need be said in the cause, the sum and substance of the thing, that which may fully and finally end the Controversie, which is contained in the following words. d These are alledged by Elihu in the person of Job's three Friends, or as their words. The sence is, The stupendious judgments which are upon Job, have not been brought upon him by man solely and originally, for then there might have been some ground for Job's complaints, there might have been injustice or cruelty in them, but immediately by the hand of God, of that God, who being omniscient, and just, and true, and merciful, would never have dealt thus hardly with Job, if he were not an hypocrite and guilty of some very gross, though secret sins: which is the ground-work of our discourses. But, saith Elihu, this Argument doth not satisfie me, and therefore bear with me if I seek for better.

14 Now he hath not † directed his words against me e: neither will I answer him with your words f.

e I am not engaged in this discourse by any provoking words of Job as you have been, which hath drawn forth your passions, and byassed your judgments, but meerly from zeal for the vindication of God's honour and love to truth and justice, and a fincero desire to administer to Job matter both of conviction and of comfort. f i.e. With such words or arguments as yours, either weak and impertinent, or fierce and opprobrious.

15 They g were amazed h, they answered no more i, † they left off speaking.

g i.e. Job's three Friends, of whom he speaks sometimes in the second, and here in the third person, directing his speech to Job, and the Auditors of this disputation. h They stood mute like persons amazed, not knowing what to reply to Job's arguments, and wondring at his bold and confident assertions of his Integrity, and of his interest in God, under such sad and manifest tokens of God's just displeasure against him. i Although Job gave them just occasion to reprove and confute him for his intemperate speeches, and presumptuous and irreverent expressions concerning God.

16 When I had waited, (for they spake not, but stood still; and answered no more k;)

k Which he repeats as a strange and unreasonable thing that they should be silent when they had such obligations to speak for the vindication both of God's justice, and of their own truth and reputation.

17 I said, I will answer also my part l, I also will shew mine opinion.

l I will take my turn and speak what they have omitted.

† Heb. words. † Heb. the spirit of my belly.

18 For I am full of † matter m, † the spirit within me n constraineth me o.

m i.e. I have many things to say in this cause. n Either my own Spirit or Soul, which is wholly dissatisfied with what hath been hitherto spoken, and clearly apprehends what may silence Job and end the dispute. Or, God's Spirit which he hath put in me, the Spirit of Understanding, which hath discovered the truth of the matter to me, and the Spirit of Zeal, which urgeth me to plead God's Cause against Job. o Forceth me to speak: It is a Metaphor from a man or woman whose Belly is full with Wind, or with a Child, and is never at rest till it be emptied and eased of its burden.

19 Behold, my belly p is as wine q which † hath no vent, it is ready to burst like new bottles r:

p i.e. My mind or heart, which is oft called a man's belly, as Job 15.35. Psal.40.8. Hab.3.16. Job.7.38. q As new Wine pent up close in a Bottle, as the following words explain and determine it. The Wine is here put for the Bottle in which it is, by a common Metonymy. r i.e. Bottles of new Wine, by the same general Figure; for otherwise old Bottles are most apt to burst; Matth. 9. 17.

† Heb. that I may breath.

20 I will speak, † that I may be refreshed s, I will open my lips, and answer t.

s That I may ease my mind of those thoughts which now oppress it. t I will not utter impertinent words, but solid answers to Job's arguments.

21 Let me not, I pray you, accept any mans person u: neither let me give flattering titles unto man x.

u Do not expect that I should out of fear or respect to any of you speak partially, but bear with my free and plain dealing with you all. x As I shall not censure and reproach Job as an hypocrite or prophane person, which you have done, so neither shall I flatter him, but faithfully reprove him for his exorbitant speeches of God.

22 For I know not to give flattering titles y: in so doing z, my maker would soon take me away.

y i.e. I have neither skill nor will to flatter Job or any man so as to debauch my Conscience, or corrupt the Truth, or speak falsly for his sake. z i.e. If I should be guilty of that sin, God would quickly and sorely punish me for it. Or, without this supplement, My maker will quickly take me away; to wit, out of this world. I dare not flatter any man, because I consider I must shortly die and go to judgment, to give an account of all my words and actions.

CHAP. XXXIII.

1. WHerefore, Job, I pray thee a, hear my speeches, and hearken to all my words b.

a Perceiving the errour of Job's Friends, and that by their violent and opprobrious speeches they had exasperated Job's mind, and thereby hindred the success of their discourses, he applies himself to him in milder ways, and treats him kindly, thereby to gain his attention and affection, that his words might have more acceptance with him. b Not only to what may please thee, but also to what may convince and reprove thee.

2 Behold, now I have opened my mouth c, my tongue hath spoken † in my mouth d.

c Now I have begun to speak, and intend with thy good leave to proceed in my discourse with thee. d Heb. in or with my palate, for both Tongue and Palate are Instruments of Speech: and that a man should speak plainly and distinctly (which he designed to do) it is necessary that his Tongue should oft-times touch the Palate or Roof of the mouth.

3 My words shall be of the uprightness of my heart e: and my lips shall utter knowledge clearly f.

e I shall not speak passionately or partially, as one resolved to defend what I have once said, whether true or false, but from an honest mind, or what I verily believe to be true, and from a sincere desire to do thee good. f I shall not speak my own fancies or devices, but only that which by diligent study, and divine inspiration I know to be true, and this I shall do plainly and clearly.

4 The spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life g.

g I am thy Fellow-creature, made by God's Spirit, Gen. 1.2. and quickned by that Soul which God breathed into man, Gen. 2.7. and therefore fit and ready to discourse with thee upon even and equal terms, according to thy desire.

5 If thou canst answer me h, * set thy words in order before me, stand up i. * Ch.32.14.

h I shall allow thee all freedom of discourse, I cannot terrifie thee, as God would; I shall not reproach thee, nor cavil at thee, as thy Friends have done. i To contend with me as thine Adversary in this Cause.

6 * Behold, I am † according to thy wish in God's stead k: I also am † formed out of the clay. * Ch.9.35.& 13.20,21. † Heb. according to thy mouth. † Heb. cut out of the clay.

k I will plead with thee in God's Name and stead, and on his behalf, which thou hast oft wished that God would do upon equal terms, and laying aside his terrible Majesty, &c. Or, I am as thou art with or towards God; i.e. God's Creature like thyself, as the next words explain it.

7 Behold, * my terrour shall not make thee afraid, neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee l. * Ch.13.21.

l Which was the condition of that disputation which thou didst offer to undertake with God, Chap.9.34. & 13.21.

8 Surely thou hast spoken † in mine hearing m, and I have heard the voice of thy words, saying, † Heb. in mine ears.

m I shall not charge thee with hypocrisie, as thy Friends do, which God only can discern, but with those words which I have heard from thee.

9 * I am clean without transgression, I am innocent, neither is there iniquity in me n. * Ch.9.17.& 10.7. & 16, 17. & 23.10, 11. & 27.5.& 29.14. & 31.1

n Not simply and absolutely none, for he oft confesseth himself to be a sinner, as Chap.9.1,2, &c. and 14.4. but no such transgression or iniquity, as might give God just occasion to punish him so severely, as is implied in the next Verse, where he blameth God for finding occasions against him, implying that he had given him none by his sins. And thus far Elihu's charge was just and true, and herein it differs from the charge of Job's three Friends, who oft accuse him, and that in words much like these, for asserting his own righteousness and innocency; although they did it, because they thought him a secret Sinner and an Hypocrite, whereas Elihu doth it upon other grounds, even because Job's justification of himself was accompanied with reflections upon God, as hath been said.

10 Behold he findeth occasions against me o, * he counteth me for his enemy p. * Ch. 16.9.

e He picketh quarrels with me, and watcheth over and searcheth after all my errors and frailties, as Job said, Chap.10.6. and 14.16,17. severely marking what is amiss in me that thence he may take occasion to punish me worse than mine iniquities deserve. p Though I have endeavoured to be his friend and faithful servant all my days, yet he treats me like an enemy. This Job said, Chap.13.24. & 19.11.

11 * He putteth my feet in the stocks, he marketh all my paths q. * Ch.13.27. & 14.16.

q He narrowly pries into all my actions, that he may find matter for further severities against me.

12 Behold, in this thou art not just r: I will answer thee, That God is greater s than man.

r I do not accuse thee of hypocrisie, nor rip up the former errors of thy life; but in this thou art unjust and much to blame, that thou boastest so much of thine own integrity, and chargest God with rigorous dealing, and callest him to an account before thy Tribunal, and offerest to dispute the matter with him. s Not only in Power and Majesty, which thou acknowledgest, but also in Justice, and Wisdom, and Goodness, and therefore thou doest very foolishly, and presumptuously, and wickedly, in contending with him, and censuring his Judgments: thou forgettest thy distance from him, and castest off that awe and reverence which thou should'st constantly maintain towards thy Soveraign Lord.

13 Why t dost thou strive against him u? for † he giveth not account of any of his matters x. † Heb. he answereth not.

t Upon what grounds and for what ends? What advantage dost thou expect from it? u To wit, in a judicial way. See *ch.*13.6. x He neither useth nor is by any Law obliged to give an account to any of his creatures of the grounds and reasons of his Judgments or Dispensations, as being the Supreme and Absolute Governor of all Persons and Things, in whose will and pleasure it becometh all Men to acquiesce. And therefore, O Job, thou exceedest all bounds of modesty and humility and reverence and submission which thou owest to thy Maker in that thou presumest to demand a reason for his dealings with thee, and to quarrel with him for not giving it to thee at thy desire. Or, he answereth not all his words, i. e. He doth not say, or hath not said all that he can to justifie his actions, which he can do many more ways than we can imagine, but hath revealed so much of his will and ways to Mankind, as he hath thought meet, and as their narrow capacity can comprehend; as he declareth in the following Verses.

14 For y God ſpeaketh z once, yea twice a, yet man b perceiveth it not c.

y Or, Neverthleſs, as this Particle is ſometimes uſed. Although God doth not give men an account of his matters, yet he doth that for them which is much better and which is ſufficient for them. z To wit, unto men by way of inſtruction or admonition, as appears from the following Verſes. a i.e. Again and again, or oftimes, this number being ſometimes put indefinitely, as below *v.*29. 2 King. 6.10. *Pſal.*62.11. When once ſpeaking doth not awaken men, God is graciouſly pleaſed to give them another admonition. So God though he will not gratifie mens curioſity in enquiring into his hidden Judgments, yet he will ſupply their neceſſity and acquaint them with their duty and intereſt ſo far as is fit, and they are concerned to know. b Which is eaſily and fitly underſtood here from the former branch of this Verſe, as being the Perſon to whom God ſpeaketh, as appears from the next Verſe. And ſuch ſupplements are not unuſual in the Hebrew Language, and eſpecially in theſe Poetical Books, where the Style is very conciſe and ſhort, and many things to be underſtood. c Through his inadvertency or negligence or dulneſs. Man therefore hath no reaſon to charge God as if he were deficient in his notices and manifeſtations of his will, but to accuſe himſelf for not improving revealed things to his own advantage but deſiring rather to pry into God's ſecret counſels, which was Job's errour.

15 In a dream d, in a viſion of the Night e, when deep ſleep falleth upon men f, in ſlumbrings g upon the bed.

d This he mentions as the uſual way of Gods revealing his mind and will to men in thoſe days before Gods word was committed to writing, as *Gen.*20.6. & 41.1,28. e This is added by way of explication and limitation, to ſhew that he ſpeaks not of every dream, but of thoſe divine dreams in which God was pleaſed to vouchſafe ſome viſion or repreſentation of his will to the mind of a Man. f When mens ſenſes are bound up and their minds free from all deſtracting cares and buſineſs of the World and wholly at leiſure to receive divine impreſſions. g This is added, becauſe in this caſe the Man is like one that ſlumbereth, or between ſleeping and waking, or uncertain in which ſtate he is, as Paul could not tell whether he was in the Body, or out of the Body, when he was in his extaſie, 2 Cor. 12. 1, 2.

16 Then † he openeth the ears of men h, and ſealeth their inſtruction i.

h i.e. He revealeth his will to the ears and hearts of men, as this phraſe is uſed, Job 36.10. *Pſal.*40.6. *Iſa.*50.4. i He imprinteth thoſe inſtructions which he hath revealed to their ears upon their minds, that after they have heard and received them, they do not let them ſlip, as men commonly do moſt things which they hear, whether from God or men, but do retain and hold them faſt, and are fully ſatisfied and aſſured of the truth and importance of them. Or, he ſealeth their chaſtening, or correction for ſo this word ſignifies as well as inſtruction, i. e. He gives them aſſurance of his purpoſe of correcting them for their ſins, if they do not prevent it by a ſpeedy repentance. Or, he ſealeth it (i.e. his Word conveyed to their Ears and Minds) with chaſtening them, i. e. He gives them aſſurance of the truth and reality of his revelation by ſtriking them with a Sacred dread and horror, as was uſual in ſuch dreams or night-Viſions, as we ſee, Job 4.13,14. Which he did that they might remember it the better, and diſtinguiſh this from ſuch vain dreams as are only the productions of Man's fancy.

17 That he k may withdraw man from his † purpoſe l, and hide pride m from man.

k i.e. God, who was expreſſed, v. 14. and deſigned by this Pronoun he both in the foregoing and following Verſes. l i.e. From the execution of his purpoſe. Heb. from his work, i. e. from his evil work, as the Chaldee and Seventy underſtand it, from ſin, which is truly and fitly called Man's work, becauſe it hath its riſe in and from him, and is his own proper work, and very agreeable to his Nature in his preſent corrupt eſtate, as on the contrary all the good that is in Man is God's proper and peculiar work, and is generally aſcribed to him in Scripture. So this is noted as the deſign of God's giving Man this warning to keep him from executing that evil work which poſſibly he had deſigned to do; of which ſee examples, Gen. 20.5,6 & 31.24. m i.e. either, 1. To take it away, as God is ſaid to hide ſin, when he quite removes and forgives it, *Pſal.*32.1. and ſorrow is ſaid to be hid, Job 3.10. when it never is nor was: and underſtanding is ſaid to be hid, when it periſheth, *Iſa.*29.14. And Pride is here mentioned as the root of thoſe evil purpoſes or works laſt mentioned; which for the moſt part proceed from haughtineſs of ſpirit, whereby men ſcorn to ſubmit themſelves, and their wills and actions to God's Authority, and preſume to advance themſelves above God, and reſolve to follow their own wills and luſts in ſpight of God, and with contempt of him. Or, Pride may be here put for all matter or occaſion of Pride. And God by this means is ſaid to hide Pride from Man, becauſe by theſe glorious and terrible repreſentations of his divine Majeſty to a Man, he takes him off from the contemplation and admiration of his own excellency, which men are generally very prone to reflect upon, and brings him to a ſight of his own nothingneſs and weakneſs, and to a ſenſe of his dependency upon God, and to an humble and ready ſubmiſſion to his will and pleaſure.

18 * He keepeth back l his ſoul from the pit n, and his life † from periſhing by the ſword o.

* Verſ. 28.

l To wit, by theſe gracious admonitions whereby he leads them to repentance. m Either the Man, who is oft expreſſed by this part, or, his life, as the next branch explains it. n i.e. From the Grave, from death or deſtruction. o i. e. By ſome dreadful Judgment of God which was ready to fall upon him.

19 He is chaſtned alſo with pain p upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with ſtrong pain q.

p Or grief, with ſome painful and dangerous diſeaſes, or bodily diſtempers, which is the ſecond way whereby God inſtructs men and excites them to repentance: which alſo was Job's caſe. q The pain pierceth his very Bones, even all of them. Or, even the ſtrong multitude of his Bones, i. e. his Bones which are both many and ſtrong. Or, according to another reading, the contention of his Bones, i e. the pain of his Bones whereby God contends with him) is ſtrong. This alſo was Job's caſe, Chap.30.17.

20 * So that his life r || abhorred bread s, and his ſoul † dainty meat t.

† Heb. meat of deſire.

r i.e. His Soul, as the next clauſe explains it: or his Appetite which is a ſign and an act of life. s i.e. Common and neceſſary food. t Such as others do, and he formerly did much deſire and prize.

21 His fleſh is conſumed away u, that it cannot be ſeen x, and his bones that were not ſeen y, ſtick out.

u Through pain and pining ſickneſs. x Becauſe there is none left to be ſeen, but he who before was fat and flouriſhing is now become a meer Skeleton. y Formerly, becauſe they were covered with fleſh and fat. But this Clauſe is, and may be rendred thus, and his Bones are broken and are not ſeen: which is to be metaphorically underſtood.

22 His ſoul draweth near unto the † grave z, and his life to the deſtroyers a.

z He ſeems to himſelf and others to be loſt and paſt all hopes of recovery. Which he adds for Job's comfort in his deſperate condition. a To the inſtruments of death or deſtruction, whether it be Angels, whom God ſometimes uſeth in thoſe caſes, or Devils, who have the power of Death, Heb.2.14. or Diſeaſes, which by God's appointment are ready to give the fatal blow.

23 If there be a meſſenger b with him c, an * interpreter d, one among a thouſand e, to ſhew unto man his uprightneſs f.

* Iſa. 43. 27.

b Either 1. an Angel ſent to him from Heaven upon this errand; for the Angels are miniſtring Spirits, *Pſal.*103.20. *Heb.*1. 14. and are, and eſpecially in that time and ſtate of the Church, were frequently employed by God upon Meſſages to men. But why then ſhould he ſay, one of a thouſand Angels, ſeeing any the meaneſt Angel was very competent for this work? Or rather 2. a Prophet or Teacher, for ſuch are oft called by this Name; as *Judg.*2.1. *Mal.*2.7. & 3.1. *Rev.*1.20. and ſuch perſons are appointed by God for, and are moſt commonly employed in, this work. c Either 1. with God to plead man's Cauſe, and to pray to God for man, Or rather 2. with man, who is expreſſed in the laſt clauſe of this Verſe, and of whom this ſame Pronoun him is twice uſed in the next Verſe. Nor is it ſtrange that the Pronoun Relative is put before the Noun to which it belongs, but uſual in the Hebrew Language, as Exod. 2.6. Prov. 5. 22. & 14. 33. and elſewhere. d One whoſe Office and work it is to declare the mind of God unto the ſick man, and wherefore God contends with him, and what God would have him to do. e. A perſon rightly qualified for this great and hard work, ſuch as there are but very few, ſcarce one of a thouſand; which expreſſion is uſed to denote the rarity and fewneſs of perſons, *Eccleſ.*7.28. By which words he doth covertly reflect upon Job's three Friends, and imply that they were not ſuch perſons, though they had undertaken to perform this office or work to Job; and withal modeſtly intimates, that although he was in himſelf mean and inferiour to all of them (as he acknowledgeth) yet he was ſelected by God for this work; which he ſaith, not out of a deſire of vain boaſting of himſelf, but to diſpoſe Job to a more diligent attention unto, and a more ready entertainment of his preſent diſcourſes. f Or, rectitude, or righteouſneſs. His, i.e. either 1. God's: To convince a man that God is juſt and right in all his dealings with him, though never ſo ſevere; of which Job was not yet convinced. Or rather 2. man's; to teach man his duty, or to direct him to the right way and method how he may pleaſe God, and procure that mercy and deliverance which he thirſts after; which is not by quarrelling with God, as Job did, but by an humble confeſſion, and hearty deteſtation and forſaking of his ſins, and ſupplication to God for mercy in and through Chriſt the Redeemer, of whom Job ſpoke before. Or thus, To diſcover to man, that although he be afflicted, yet he is an upright and righteous perſon, and conſequently in God's favour; about which good men oft doubt, and need the help of a skilful Miniſter to ſatisfie them therein. But this ſeems not ſo well to ſuit Job's caſe, who was ſufficiently and more than enough perſuaded of his own Integrity, and needed no Miniſter to preach that Doctrine to him.

24 Then g he h is gracious unto him i, and ſaith, k Deliver him l from going down into the pit, I have found || a ranſom m.

g In that case, or upon the sick man's knowledge and practice of his duty. h Either 1. the Messenger or Interpreter last mentioned, who is pitiful unto the sick man, and in compassion to him doth all that he can for him, counselling and comforting him, and praying to God for his recovery in the following words, Deliver him, &c. for the sake of that ransom which thou hast revealed, and I have discovered to him. Or rather 2. God, who is oft in this Book designed by this Particle he, or him; whose property and prerogative it is, to be gracious unto man; and who alone can speak the following words with power and authority. i Pardoning his sins, and delivering him from his dangerous disease, and from death, and from the Hell which attends upon it. k To the Angel or Messenger. l To wit, ministerially and declaratively; in which sence the acts of forgiving Sins, and reconciling Sinners, and saving Souls, are ascribed to God's Ministers; as John 20.23. 2 Cor. 5.19,20. 1 Tim. 4.16. Declare to him that I have pardoned and will heal him. m Although I might justly destroy him, and should do it if I were severe to mark what is amiss in him, yet I will spare him, for I have found out an expedient and a way of ransoming and redeeming Sinners from Death both temporal and eternal, which they by their sins have deserved, which is by the death of my Son the Redeemer of the World, which shall be in the fulness of time, and with respect to which I will pardon this sick man, and others that shall repent and sue to me for mercy as he hath done.

25 His flesh shall be fresher † than a child's n: he shall return to the days of his youth o.

n i.e. More sound and tender: These joyful tidings delivered to him by Gods Messenger shall revive his spirit, and by degrees restore his former health and vigour. o i.e. To the same healthful and strong constitution of body which he had in his youth.

26 He p shall pray unto God q: and he will be favourable unto him r, and he shall see his face with joy s: for he will render unto man his righteousness t.

p Either, 1. the Messenger, or rather 2. the sick man. q Being engaged and encouraged to do so either by the foresaid gracious Message; or by his miraculous recovery through Gods goodness. r In hearing and answering his Prayers, which before he seemed to neglect. s Either, 1. God will look upon the Man with a smiling or well-pleased countenance, whereas before he either hid his Face from him or frowned upon him. Or, 2. The Man shall then be emboldened and encouraged to look God in the Face with comfort and joy; which before he was not without cause afraid to do: but now he shall find that God is reconciled to him by the blessed effects of it, both in his Body, and in his Conscience. t i.e. According to his righteousness, or the fruit of his righteousness, as on the contrary iniquity is oft put for the punishment of iniquity. The sence is, He will deal with him as with one reconciled to him through the Mediatour, and sincerely repenting of and turning from his former sins unto the serious practice of righteousness and true holiness, and therefore must needs be favourable to him, as he hath declared and engaged himself to be in such cases.

27 ‖ He looketh upon men u, and if any say, I have sinned x and perverted that which was right y, and it profited me not z.

u Either, 1. the sick Man shall look upon and converse with Mankind, his Friends or others, as he did before, and shall say (as the following word is and may be rendred) I have sinned, &c. i. e. He shall confess to them, that God was not to be blamed, but that he by his own sin and folly did bring that evil upon himself. And then he shall acknowledge Gods great goodness to him, and shall add what follows in the next Verse, He hath delivered my soul, &c. and my life, &c. as they render it. Or rather 2. God diligently observes all Mankind and their several carriages, especially in sickness and distress. x If there be any Man that sincerely saith thus, God hears it and will pardon, and heal him, as it follows. y Either 1. I have judged perversly of the just and right ways of God, censuring his proceedings against me as too severe and rigorous, whereas in truth I only was to be blamed. Or 2. I have perverted God's righteous Law by bending it, and making it comply with my crooked ways. Or, I have swerved from the right and good way of God's commands: or, I have made crooked paths. So he repeats in other words what he said in the former branch of the Verse, I have sinned. z I got no good by so doing, as I vainly promised myself, but I got much hurt by it, even diseases and griefs and extreme dangers. This was the just fruit of my sins. It is a Meiosis whereby less is said and more is understood, of which we have seen many examples before.

28 ‖ He a will deliver his soul b from going into the pit, and his life c shall see the light d.

a i.e. God, whose work alone this is. b Himself, or, as it follows, his life. c See v.18. d i.e. Shall enjoy either 1. prosperity, which is oft called light, as darkness is put for affliction, or 2. the light of the living, as it follows, v.30. the light of this World, i. e. His life which was endangered, shall be restored and continued. This is opposed to his going down into the pit, in the former branch.

29 Lo, all these things worketh God e † oftentimes with man f.

e All these ways and methods doth God use to awaken and convince and save sinners. f Either severally, one way with one, and another way with another, or with the same Man, trying several means one after another, to bring him to repentance, and prepare him for deliverance.

30 * To bring back his soul from the pit, to be enlightned with the light of the living g. * Psal. 56. 13.

g i. e. That he may enjoy the light of life, and continue in the Land of the Living, out of which he was going.

31 Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me, hold thy peace h, and I will speak.

h Attend to what I have further to say to thee with patience and silence.

32 If thou hast any thing to say i, answer me: speak, for I desire to justifie thee k.

i For thy own justification, or in answer to the charge that I have already brought against thee. k To wit, as far as may consist with Truth and Justice. I do not speak with evil design, or a bitter mind, or as one resolved to condemn thee whatsoever thou sayest, and I shall be glad to hear any thing from thee, which may make for thy just vindication.

33 If not hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I shall teach thee wisdom l.

l i. e. What thy wisdom and duty is in thy circumstances.

CHAP. XXXIV.

1 Furthermore, Elihu answered. and said,

2 Hear my words, O ye wise men a, and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge.

a Who are here present: do you judge of the truth and reason of what I have said, and am further to say; for I am willing to submit all to the judgment of the truly wise.

3 * For the ear trieth words b, as the † mouth tasteth meat. * Chap. 6. 30. & 12. 11. † Heb. palate.

b i. e. Man's mind judgeth of things spoken and heard. The ear, the sense of Discipline is put for the mind, to which things are conveyed by it. See the Note on Job. 12. 11.

4 Let us chuse to us judgment c: let us know d among ourselves what is good e:

c i. e. Justice and equity, judgment being oft synecdochically used for just judgment, as Job 8.3. & 19.7. & 32 9. Psal. 37.28. Let us not contend for Victory, but only for Truth and Justice. This shall be my only care and business. Let us lay aside all prejudices and animosities, which I perceive have had too great an influence upon thee and thy friends, and impartially consider the naked truth and right of the cause. d i. e. Let us discover or make it known one to another. e Who hath the best cause.

5 For Job hath said, * I am righteous f: and my God hath taken away my judgment g. * Chap. 27. 2.

f Either 1. I am perfectly righteous. But this Job did not say, but the contrary, Job 9.2,3. & 14.4. Or, 2. I am a sincere Person, no Hypocrite, as my Friends make me. But this Elihu doth not deny. Or 3. I am so far righteous, and have been so holy and blameless in my life, that I have not deserved, nor had any reason to expect such hard usage from God. And this Job had oft intimated, and Elihu doth justly blame him for it, that he blazoned his own righteousness with tacit reflections upon God for dealing so severely with him. g For so Job had said, Ch. 27.2. i.e. He denies me that which is but just and equal, to give me a fair Hearing, to suffer me to plead my Cause with or before him, to shew me the reasons of his contending with me, and what sins, besides common infirmities, I have been guilty of, whereby I have deserved such extraordinary judgments. Which Elihu justly taxeth him with, as a very irreverent and presumptuous expression.

6 Should I lie against my right h? † my wound is incurable without transgression i. † Heb. mine arrow. Chap. 6. 4. & 16. 12.

h So Job had said in effect, Ch. 27. 4,5,6. Should I falsly accuse myself of such sins of which I am no way conscious to myself? Should I betray mine own cause, and deny my integrity, and say that I deserved worse than I have done? i i. e. Without any great, or hainous, or crying sin, as this word commonly signifies, which might reasonably bring down such terrible judgments upon my head.

7 What man is like Job, who drinketh up scorning like water?

k i.e. Abundantly and greedily: who doth so oft and so easily break forth into scornful and contemptuous expressions, not only against his Friends, but in some sort even against God himself, whom he foolishly and insolently chargeth with dealing rigorously with him. The words may be thus read, What man being like Job, would drink up, &c? That a wicked or foolish Man should do thus, is not strange, but that a Man of such Piety, Gravity, Wisdom and Authority, as Job, should be guilty of such a sin, this is wonderful.

8 Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men l?

l Although I dare not say, as his three Friends do, that he is a wicked Man, yet in this matter he speaks and acts like one of them.

9 For he hath said m, * It profiteth a man nothing, that he should delight himself with God n. * Chap. 9. 22. & 35. 3.

m Not absolutely and in expreſs terms, but by unforced conſequence, and as concerning this life, and with reference to himſelf; becauſe he ſaid that good Men were no leſs, nay ſometimes more miſerable here than the wicked, ch. 9.22, &c. & 30. 26. and that for his part he was no gainer as to this life by his Piety, but a loſer, and that God ſhewed him no more kindneſs and compaſſion than he uſually did to the vileſt of men. Which was a very unthankful and ungodly opinion and expreſſion, ſeeing godlineſs hath the promiſe of this life, as well as of that to come; and Job had ſuch ſupports, and ſuch aſſurances of his own uprightneſs, and of his future happineſs, as he confeſſeth, as were and ſhould have been accounted even for the preſent, a greater comfort and profit, than all which this World can afford. n That he ſhould chuſe and delight to walk with God, and make it his chief care and buſineſs to pleaſe him, and to do his commandments: which is the true and proper Character of a godly Man.

† Heb. men of heart.

10 Therefore hearken unto me, ye † men of underſtanding o: * far be it from God that he ſhould do wickedneſs p, and from the Almighty, that he ſhould commit iniquity.

* Deut. 32. 4. Chap. 8. 3. & 36. 23. Pſal. 92. 15. Rom. 9. 14.

o You who are preſent, and underſtand theſe things, do you judge between Job and me. p This I muſt lay down as a Principle that the righteous and holy God neither doth nor can deal unjuſtly with Job, or with any Man, as Job inſinuates that God had dealt with him.

* Pſal. 62. 12. Prov. 24. 12. Jer. 32. 19. Ezek 33. 20. Mat. 16. 27. Rom. 2. 6. 2 Cor. 5. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 17. Rev. 22. 12.

11 * For the work q of a man ſhall he render unto him, and cauſe every man to find according to his ways.

q i. e. The reward of his work; or according to his work. Job's afflictions, tho' great and ſharp, are not undeſerved, but juſtly inflicted upon him both for his original corruption, and for many actual tranſgreſſions which are manifeſt to God, tho' Job through his partiality may not ſee them. And Job's Piety ſhall be recompenſed it may be in this life, but undoubtedly in the next. And therefore Piety is not unprofitable, as Job ſaith.

12 Yea, ſurely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment r.

r As Job hath wickedly affirmed. For the Phraſe, ſee ch. 8. 3.

† He, all of it.

13 Who hath given him a charge over the earth s? or who hath diſpoſed t † the whole world?

s i. e. Over the Inhabitants of the Earth, to rule them according to his Laws, and to give an account to him of it? Who or where is his Superior that made the World, and then delivered the Government of it to God? There is no ſuch Perſon. God himſelf is the ſole Creator, the abſolute and ſupreme Lord and Governor of all the World, and therefore cannot do unjuſtly. The reaſon is, partly becauſe all unrighteouſneſs is a tranſgreſſion of ſome Law, and God hath no Law to bound him but his own Nature and Will: partly becauſe the Creator and Lord of the World muſt needs have all poſſible Perfections in himſelf, and amongſt others perfect Juſtice, and muſt needs be free from all imperfections and obliquities, and therefore from Injuſtice: and partly, becauſe he is of himſelf all-ſufficient and independent upon all other Perſons, and able to do and procure whatſoever pleaſeth him, and therefore as he hath no inclination, ſo he hath no temptation, to any unrighteous actions, this being generally the reaſon of all unrighteous actions in the World; becauſe the perſons who do them, either are obliged to do it, to gratifie ſome Superior Authority, who commands them to do it, or elſe do want or deſire ſomething which they cannot juſtly obtain. For he is a Monſter and not a Man, who will take away any thing by injuſtice or violence, which he may have by right. t Or committed, to wit, to him, to be governed by him in the Name, and for the uſe and ſervice of his Superior Lord, to whom he muſt give an account.

* Pſ. 104. 29. † Heb. upon him.

14 * If he ſet his heart † upon man u: if he gather unto himſelf x his ſpirit and his breath y:

u Heb. upon him, i. e. Man, as may ſeem probable from v. 11. & 15. where Man is expreſſed, and from the next Clauſe of this Verſe, where he ſpeaks of that Spirit and Breath which is in Man. If his eye and heart be upon man, if he diligently and exactly obſerve him and all his ways, and whatſoever is amiſs in him, and which follows upon it of courſe, reſolve to puniſh him. Or, if he ſet his heart againſt (as this Particle El is uſed, Amos 7. 15. and elſewhere, as hath been noted before) him, to wit, to cut him off. x If it pleaſe him to gather to himſelf, to wit, by death, whereby God is ſaid to take away mens Breath, Pſal. 104. 29. and to gather mens Souls, Pſal. 26. 9. and the Spirit it ſaid to return unto God, Eccleſ. 12. 7. y i. e. That Spirit and Breath, or that living Soul that God breathed into Man, Gen. 2. 7. and gives to every Man that cometh into the World

* Gen. 3. 19. Eccleſ. 12. 7.

15 * All fleſh z ſhall periſh together a, and man ſhall turn again unto duſt.

z i. e. Every Man, who is called Fleſh, Gen. 6. 3. 17. Iſa. 40. 6. a Or, alike, without any exception, be they great or mean, wiſe or fooliſh, good or bad, if God deſign to deſtroy them, they cannot withſtand his power, but muſt needs periſh by his ſtroake. The deſign of this and the fore-going Verſe is the ſame with that of v. 13. (where ſee the Notes) namely, to declare God's abſolute and uncontrol'able Sovereignty over all Men, to diſpoſe of them either to life or to death, as it pleaſeth him, and conſequently to ſhew that Job had cauſe to be thankful to God, who had continued his life ſo long to him, which he might have taken away as ſoon as ever he had given it, & had no cauſe to complain of him, or to tax him with injuſtice, for afflicting him as he did.

16 If now thou haſt underſtanding, hear this b: hearken to the voice of my words.

b As thou art a Man of underſtanding, hear and conſider what I ſay.

17 Shall even he that hateth right c, † govern d? and wilt thou condemn him that is moſt juſt e?

c i. e. That is unrighteous. But this he expreſſeth in a moſt emphatical manner, the reaſon and weight whereof ſeems to me to be this; If God be unjuſt, he is not ſo from fear of any Superior (as Inferior Magiſtrates do many unrighteous things againſt their Conſciences to pleaſe their Prince or Chief Ruler, or to avoid his diſpleaſure) but meerly from an intrinſecal hatred of Juſtice, or love of unrighteouſneſs: which being moſt abſurd to imagine concerning God, therefore he cannot poſſibly be unjuſt, or do any unjuſt action. d So this word, which properly ſignifies to bind, is fitly rendred by moſt Interpreters, and ſo it is uſed Iſa. 3. 7. becauſe Governors have a power to bind their Subjects by Laws and Penalties, and they are as it were the ligaments by which Societies are bound and keep together, which without them would be diſſolv'd and broken to pieces. Elihu's argument here is the ſame with that of Abraham's, Gen. 18. 25. and that of St. Paul's, Rom. 3. 5, 6. If God be unrighteous, how ſhall he judge or govern the world? And the argument is undeniable: If God were unjuſt, there would be nothing but injuſtice, and confuſion, and miſchief in the World, whereas we ſee there is a great deal of Juſtice adminiſtred by Rulers in the World, and all this muſt proceed from him who is the Fountain and Author of all Juſtice, and Rule, and Authority. And as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. 94. 9. He that formed the eye, ſhall not he ſee? So ſay I, He that makes Men juſt, ſhall he be unjuſt? e i. e. God, who hath given ſo many clear and unqueſtionable evidences of his Juſtice, in giving juſt and holy Laws, in encouraging and rewarding very many righteous Perſons in this life, & in inflicting dreadful and remarkable Judgments upon Tyrants and Oppreſſors. Or, him that is juſt and mighty; for the next Verſe ſpeaks of ſuch who were generally in thoſe times more conſiderable for their Power and Authority, than for their Juſtice. So here is a double argument againſt Job's cenſures of God's Juſtice. He is juſt, and therefore giveth thee no cauſe to condemn him, and withal potent, and therefore can puniſh thee yet far worſe for ſo doing.

18 Is it fit to ſay to a king, Thou art † wicked f? and to princes, Ye are ungodly?

f Or, Thou art Belial or a Son of Belial. Though a King may really be unjuſt and wicked, yet their Subjects neither may nor dare preſume to call them ſo, Exod. 22. 28. And therefore if ſome evil Thought did ariſe in thee, yet how waſt thou not afraid to utter ſuch unworthy and almoſt blaſphemous expreſſions againſt God?

19 How much leſs to him that * accepteth not the perſons of princes g, nor regardeth the rich more than the poor: for ‖ they all are the work of his hand h.

* Deut. 10. 17. 2 Chron. 19. 7. Act. 10. 34. Rom. 2. 11. Gal. 2. 6. Epheſ. 6. 9. Col. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17. ‖ Chap. 31. 15.

g i. e. To God, who reſpecteth not the greateſt Princes ſo as to do any unjuſt thing to gain their favor or to avoid their anger, to whom Princes and Peaſants are equally ſubject and infinitely inferior; who therefore is free from all temptation to injuſtice which commonly proceeds from reſpect of Perſons, Lev. 19. 15. and to whom therefore thou didſt owe more reverence, than thy words have expreſſed. h And therefore of equal worth and price with him, and equally ſubject to his power and pleaſures.

20 In a moment i ſhall they k die, and the people l ſhall be troubled m at midnight n, and paſs away o: and ‖ the mighty ſhall be taken away p without hand q.

‖ Heb. they that take away the

i Whenſoever God doth but give the word, and ſend his Summons for them. k i. e. The Rich and the Prince, no leſs than the Poor, muſt ſubmit to the Law of death, which God hath impoſed upon all Men without exception, and they cannot charge God with injury therein. l Whole Nations or People are no leſs ſubject to God's power, than any particular Perſons their numbers cannot ſecure them from God's hand. m i. e. Diſturbed and terrified with thoſe calamities which God ſhall bring upon them. n Suddenly, and when they are moſt ſecure. o Either, 1. go into captivity, or run, or fly away they know not whither, for their lives. Or, 2. periſh or die, as he ſaid before, and as this word is oft uſed, as Job 14. 20. Pſal. 37. 36. Eccleſ. 1. 4. So the ſame thing is ſaid of the People, which in the firſt branch of the verſe was ſaid of the Princes. p Either from their Place or Power, or out of this Life. q Without any hand or help of Man, by ſome ſecret and ſtupendious work and judgment of God, which he oft inflicts upon thoſe who are out of the reach of Men.

21 * For his eyes are upon the ways of man r, and he ſeeth all his goings

* 2 Chr. 16. 9. Chap. 31. 4. Pſal. 34. 15. & 118. 168. Prov. 5. 21. & 15. 3. Jer. 16. 17.

r This is added as the reaſon of the Judgments mentioned in the fore-going Verſe; God doth not afflict or deſtroy either Princes or People unjuſtly, no not out of his meer pleaſure and abſolute Sovereignty (to which Job ſeemed to impute his calamities) but for their ſins, which God ſees exactly, although they uſe all poſſible arts and tricks to hide them from him. Therefore no Man hath cauſe to complain of God, but of himſelf, for all that he may ſuffer in the World.

22 * There is no darkneſs, nor ſhadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themſelves s

* Pſal. 139. 12 Amos 9. 2, 3. Heb. 4. 13.

s They may flatter themſelves, or cheat others by covering their wicked actions with plauſible pretences and profeſſions, but they cannot deceive God, nor keep their hearts and ways from his ſight.

23 For he will not lay upon man more than right t: that he ſhould † enter into judgment with God u.

t More or heavier puniſhments than they deſerve, or than are proportionable to their ſins, which he accurately obſerves, as was now ſaid, and therefore can ſuit puniſhments to them. u Thereby to give him any pretence or occaſion of entring into judgment with him, or condemning his proceedings; for which there might ſeem to be ſome colour, if God did lay upon Man more than right. And therefore thou, O Job, hadſt no cauſe for thy complaints againſt God.

24 He ſhall break in pieces mighty men † without number x, and ſet others in their ſtead y.

x Neither their greatneſs, nor their numbers can ſecure them from the ſtroke of God's juſtice. y i.e. Give away their power and dignity to others who ſhall come in their place.

25 Therefore he knoweth their works z, and he overturneth them in the night a, ſo that they are z i.e Hence it appears that he knows all their evil works, becauſe he judgeth them, for them. God or men are oft-times ſaid in Scripture to know or do a thing when they only manifeſt their knowing and doing of it. Or, Becauſe, &c. as this Particle is uſed, Iſa. 26. 14. & 61. 7. So this is ſubjoined as the ground or reaſon why he puniſheth them, as is related both in the foregoing and in the following words, becauſe he ſees all their wicked deſigns and actions. a i.e. When they are at reſt and ſecure, at midnight, as it is v. 20. Or, he turneth or bringeth upon them the night, to wit, of calamity and tribulation, as the next words explain it, and as the words night and darkneſs are oft uſed. Or, he turneth the night, to wit, into day, i.e. He knoweth all their deeds of darkneſs, and bringeth them to light. See above, v. 22. b Heb. and (or then, or therefore; for both theſe ways this Particle is ſometimes uſed) they ſhall be deſtroyed, or, broken to pieces.

c i.e. As he uſeth to ſmite wicked men, with a grievous and terrible ſtroke. Comp. Iſa. 27. 7. Or, for wicked men, or, becauſe they are wicked men, therefore he deſtroys them without any regard to their quality. d In publick view for their greater ſhame, and for the greater glory of God's juſtice, and for the greater terrour of other oppreſſours, and comfort of the oppreſſed.

† Heb. from after him.
* Pſal. 28. 5. Iſa. 5. 12.

27 Becauſe they turned back † from him e: and * would not conſider f any of his ways g.

e From the God whom they or their Progenitors had owned, and his Laws which God hath written in the minds of all men, Rom. 2. 14, 15. and it may be from the practice of the true Religion which ſometimes they profeſſed. f Or, underſtand. They did not deſire nor endeavour to know them, at leaſt practically or to any good purpoſe. g Either, 1. God's providential ways. They did not lay to heart any of God's judgments inflicted upon ſuch Oppreſſours as themſelves, which ſhould have given them warning, but boldly perſiſted in the ſame wicked courſes. Or 2. His precepts, oft called his ways, becauſe he hath appointed them for us to walk in. For theſe ways they were in a ſpecial manner obliged to conſider and practiſe: and the next Verſe giveth us an inſtance of their backſliding from theſe ways.

28 So that they cauſe the cry of the poor to come h unto him i, and he heareth the cry of the afflicted k.

h Heb. To bring, &c. which is ambiguous, and may be read, either 1. that he, i. e. God, might bring, &c. So this is a reaſon why God ſmote them, &c. as is ſaid, v. 26. Or 2. that they, i. e. thoſe wicked men, might bring, &c. and ſo theſe words contain either 1. a reaſon of what was laſt mentioned, to wit, why they would not conſider nor walk in God's ways, becauſe they were reſolved to oppreſs the poor, and give them cauſe to cry unto God; which they neither would nor could have done if they had throughly underſtood and conſidered God's ways: or 2. an evidence or inſtance of it wherein it did appear, that they had turned back from God, &c. i i.e. Unto God, as the following words imply, it being God's work to hear the cry and plead the cauſe of the afflicted or oppreſſed. Others, Upon him, or upon them, or upon each of them, to wit, of the oppreſſours; upon whom the cry of the oppreſſed is ſaid to come, becauſe the vengeance of God is by that cry brought down upon them. k He delivereth the oppreſſed by taking the oppreſſour away.

* Chap. 12. 14.

29 * When he giveth quietneſs, l who then can make trouble m? and when he hideth his face n, who then can behold him o? whether it be done againſt a nation, or againſt a man only p.

l Either to the poor and oppreſſed Perſons laſt mentioned, or to any other Perſon or People as it follows. m No Man or Creature can hinder God's deſign and work. n i.e. Withdraws his favour and help from them, and thereby expoſeth them to all oppreſſions or calamities. o i.e. Who can look up to God with chearfulneſs or confidence, to deſire or expect his help? Or rather, who then will look upon him, or regard him, to wit, ſo as to pity or ſuccour him! If God be againſt him, what man will or dare be for him? all men will forſake and oppoſe him, and ſo he will be utterly loſt. For this who anſwers to the who in the former branch of the Verſe, and both of them ſpeak of Man and his act as oppoſed unto God, and to his act. p The caſe is the ſame in both: God can carry on his work either of Mercy or Juſtice, as eaſily and as irreſiſtibly upon an whole Nation or People as upon one particular Perſon.

30 That the hypocrite reign not, leſt the people be enſnared q.

q Having ſaid that God could and would carry on his own work and deſign effectually, whether againſt one Man, or againſt an whole People, he now proceeds to give a further inſtance of God's mighty power above and againſt the greateſt Monarchs, in whom their own and Peoples ſtrength ſeem to be united, yet all together cannot oppoſe God in his work. God when he pleaſeth can and doth ſo order affairs, that the Hypocrite (i.e. the profane wicked Prince, as one of the Kings of Judah is called, Ezek. 21. 25. Bad Princes being called Hypocrites, becauſe they do commonly cover all their oppreſſions, and injuries, and impieties too, with the ſpecious pretence of juſtice and the publick good, and the diſcharge of their truſt and duty) may not reign (i.e. may not continue his reign and tyranny, that he may and ſhall by his Sovereign Power and Omnipotent Providence be deprived of his Kingdom) leſt the people be enſnared, i.e. leſt the people ſhould be longer, and more and more kept and held in the ſnares or fetters of tyranny and oppreſſion: i.e. God doth this to free poor oppreſſed People from the ſnares which ungodly and unrighteous Princes lay for them. Or, that the People be not enſnared any longer, Heb. that there be no ſnares of or for the People. Or, for the ſnares, or ſcandals, or ſins (which are oft ſo called) of the People. So the ſence is, That ſuch a wicked Prince may not continue to reign over that People, although by their ſins, they had provoked God to give them ſuch a Prince and to continue his power over them.

31 Surely it is meet r to be ſaid unto God ſ, I have born chaſtiſement t, I will not offend any more u.

r Certainly it is but fit and reaſonable that Man ſhould ſay thus, to his Maker and Supreme Lord, and that inſtead of contending with God he ſhould ſubmit to him, Or (which comes to the ſame thing) But hath he ſaid? So the ſence is, I have ſhewed the abſolute power which God hath over all his Creatures, and that he may juſtly, and doth oft-times ſeverely puniſh all ſorts of men as he ſees fit: and this Job ſhould have applied to his own caſe. But, I appeal to all of you, hath he, i.e. Job (who is the principal ſubject of this whole diſcourſe, and to whom he now begins to direct his diſcourſe) ſaid, that which here follows? which is a kind of form of confeſſion or humiliation, which Elihu puts into Job's mouth, as fit to have been uſed by him. Nay, hath not his ſpeech and carriage been of a directly contrary nature and tendency? Inſtead of humbling himſelf under God's hand which was his duty, hath he not been full of murmurings and complaints againſt God? ſ Unto one ſo much thy Superiour, ſo mighty and ſo righteous in all his ways: with ſuch an one, a weak and ſinful creature (as thou art) ſhould not preſume to conteſt. t Or, I do, or ſhall bear it, to wit, quietly and contentedly; I will bear the Lord's indignation, and accept of the puniſhment of my own iniquity, and not accuſe God falſly and fooliſhly, as I have done. u Heb. I will not corrupt, to wit, myſelf or my ways; which is oft underſtood in like caſes. Or, I will take or demand no Pledge: for ſo this Verb is oft uſed. So the ſence may poſſibly be, I confeſs I have been too bold with God in deſiring that he would come with me into judgment, and that I could have a Pledge or Surety that he would do ſo, but I will no longer deſire it, but ſubmit myſelf wholly to him.

32 That which I ſee not, teach thou me x; if I have done iniquity, I will do no more y.

x I will no longer maintain mine innocency, but from thy judgment I will conclude and have reaſon to believe that there are ſome ſecret ſins in me, for which thou doſt chaſtiſe me, and which I through mine ignorance or partiality cannot yet diſcover, and therefore do beg that thou wouldſt by thy Spirit manifeſt them to me. y I will amend my former errours.

† Heb. ſhould it be from with thee?

33 † Should it be according to thy mind z? he will recompenſe it; a whether thou refuſe, or whether thou chooſe b, and not I c: therefore ſpeak what thou knoweſt d.

z Having adviſed and directed Job how to behave himſelf, and what to ſay to God in his caſe, he now proceedeth to enforce his advice by ſolid arguments. Should it (to wit, God's chaſtening of thee, about which the great controverſie was) be according to thy mind? Heb. from with thee, as thou would'ſt have it? Shall thy Opinion or Affection give Laws and Meaſures to God that he ſhall afflict only ſuch Perſons and in ſuch a manner and meaſure, and ſo long as thou would'ſt have him? Doth God need or ſhould he ſeek for thy advice how to govern the World, and whom, and when to reward or puniſh? Doſt thou quarrel with God, becauſe he puniſheth thee worſe and longer than thou expecteſt or deſireſt? a To wit, thy iniquity expreſſed, v. 32. b Whether thou art ſatisfied or offended with his proceedings, he regards not, as not being obliged to give thee an account of his matters, whether thou would refuſe his puniſhments or accept of them. c It is not I, nor thou, that muſt preſcribe to God, but he will do what he pleaſeth. Or, but not I, i. e. do thou refuſe or chuſe as thou pleaſeſt, and contend with God for doing with thee otherwiſe than according to thy opinion or good will; but ſo would not I do, if it were my caſe, and I can ſay nothing for this courſe which thou takeſt, and therefore do thou ſpeak what thou knoweſt, or what thou canſt ſay for it, as it here follows. d If thou canſt ſay any thing for this practice, here I am ready to hear thy defence and to juſtifie thee as far as I can truly and righteouſly do. But this Verſe is, and may well be otherwiſe rendred, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew, though ſtill the ſence will be the ſame, Shall he, i.e. God, render, or recompenſe it (to wit, thy iniquity) according to thy mind, (i.e. no further than thou doſt like and conſent) becauſe thou refuſeſt? (to wit, his Chaſtiſement. Is he obliged to forbear puniſhing thee becauſe thou art not pleaſed with it? Shall not he diſpenſe either favours or afflictions as he ſees fit without thy conſent?) ſhalt thou chuſe, and not I? (So Elihu ſpeaks this in the Name and Perſon of God: ſuch ſudden changes of Perſons being not unuſual in this Book. Shalt thou, O Job, chuſe for me, and not I for myſelf?) therefore ſpeak what thou knoweſt. If this be thy opinion ſpeak what thou canſt in defence of it: and here am I ready to plead for God againſt thee. So here Elihu returns to ſpeak in his own Perſon.

34 Let men † of underſtanding tell me, and let a wiſe man hearken unto me e.

e I am content that any wiſe Man ſhould judge of my words, and let ſuch conſider what I ſay. Or, as others tranſlate the place, Men of Underſtanding will ſpeak for or with (as the prefix Lamed is ſometimes uſed, as Gen. 46.26. Numb. 18.11. Job 17.5.) me, and wiſe men will hearken or aſſent unto me.

35 Job hath ſpoken without knowledge f, and his words were without wiſdom.

f Fooliſhly and inconſiderately.

‖ Or, my Father, let Job be tried.

36 ‖ My deſire is that Job may be tried g unto the end h, becauſe of his anſwers i for wicked men k.

g Either 1. that he may be further tried by God or exerciſed with afflictions till he be throughly convinced or humbled. But it ſeems harſh that he ſhould pray for the continuance or increaſe of Job's afflictions. Or rather 2. that his words and cauſe which I am now debating may be examined and ſifted, that you that are here preſent or any other wiſe men may conſider and judge thereof, as he deſired above, v. 2, 10, 34. h i.e. Thoroughly and exactly, till the cauſe be brought to an iſſue. Or, unto victory, i.e. till judgment be brought forth unto victory. i Or, concerning his anſwers, or replies or diſcourſes; for anſwering is oft uſed in Scripture both in the Old and New Teſtament for ſpeaking. So he limits and changeth the ſtate of the controverſie: I do not meddle with Job's former life nor charge him with Hypocriſie, as his three Friends have done, but I juſtly reprove him for his hard ſpeeches againſt God whereby he hath reproached his juſtice and goodneſs. k i.e. On their behalf or for their uſe. He hath put arguments into their mouths againſt God and his Providence. Or, with or among wicked men, as if he were one of them: or ſuch anſwers as they uſe to make, which therefore are very unbecoming ſuch a Man as Job is or pretends to be.

37 For he addeth rebellion unto his ſin l, he clappeth his hands m amongſt us, and multiplieth his words againſt God n.

l He ſinned before, as other ways, ſo by impatience under his afflictions, which may be aſcribed to human infirmity; but now he is grown obſtinate and incorrigible, and inſtead of repenting and humbling himſelf for his ſins he excuſeth them, and juſtifieth himſelf and accuſeth the bleſſed God. Or thus, For otherwiſe, unleſs he be throughly tried and rebuked, he will add rebellion unto his ſin, he will break forth into open rebellion againſt God, and (as it follows) he will clap, &c. For the Hebrew words are of the future tenſe, altho' ſuch are oft rendred by the paſt tenſe. m In token of joy and victory, as this phraſe is uſed, Pſ. 47.1. & 98.8. inſulting and triumphing not only over us, as if none of us were able to anſwer him, but in a ſort over God himſelf, inaſmuch as he hath again and again deſired leave of God to debate his cauſe with or before him, and in that caſe did not doubt to maintain it, but could not obtain the favour or juſtice of a fair hearing. n Whereas the reverence which he oweth to God and his infinite diſtance from him ſhould teach him to be very modeſt and ſparing in his ſpeeches of God, Job on the contrary poureth forth whole flouds of bold and preſumptuous expoſtulations with God and reflections upon God's proceedings with him.

CHAP. XXXV.

1 ELihu ſpake moreover and ſaid,

2 Thinkeſt thou this to be right a, that thou ſaidſt, My righteouſneſs is more than God's b?

a Canſt thou in thy conſcience upon ſecond thoughts approve of what thou haſt ſaid? b Not that Job ſaid this in expreſs terms, but he ſaid thoſe things from which this might ſeem to follow, as that God puniſhed him more than he deſerved or expected, all things conſidered; and that if he might be admitted to debate his cauſe with or before God he did not doubt to carry it, and to obtain that eaſe and favour from God which otherwiſe God would not afford him. But this charge againſt Job he proves in the next Verſe.

* Ch. 34.9.

‖ Or, by it more than by my ſin.

3 For * thou ſaidſt c, what advantage will it d be unto thee e? and what profit ſhall I have ‖ if I be cleanſed from my ſin f?

c This Verſe contains the proof of the fore-going charges: Job had oft affirmed, that he was and ſtill continued to be righteous, though he had no preſent benefit by it, but much bitterneſs with it: and God was not kind to Job notwithſtanding all his former and preſent Piety, but dealt with him as if he had been a moſt wicked Man: which was in effect to ſay, that he was more righteous than God. d To wit, his righteouſneſs laſt mentioned. e i.e. Unto me, ſuch changes of Perſons being very frequent in the Hebrew Language. f Or, by the expiation of my ſin: for the ſame Hebrew word ſignifies both to ſin and to purge out or expiate ſin. Or, by it (to wit, by my righteouſneſs) more than by my ſin. So the ſence is, I have no more preſent benefit by all my care to pleaſe and ſerve God than wicked men have by their ſins againſt him. God regards my crys no more than theirs, and ſhews no more kindneſs or pity to me, than he doth to the moſt profligate wretches. But ſtill remember, Job ſpeaks not here of the future life, wherein he knew he ſhould have much advantage, as he profeſſed before, but only of this preſent ſtate.

† Heb. I will return to the Word.

4 † I will anſwer thee, and thy companions g with thee.

g i.e. Thoſe who are of thy opinion, or with whom thou doſt aſſociate thyſelf in thoſe ſpeeches and carriages. Which ſeems to be meant not of Job's three Friends (as many underſtand it, for their opinions were contrary to Job's in this point) but of wicked men, with whom Job is ſaid to walk and go in company for this ſame opinion or aſſertion, ch. 34.8, 9. And theſe men he here calls Job's companions, partly becauſe they are very forward to harp upon the ſame ſtring, and to accuſe God and juſtifie themſelves upon all occaſions; and partly, that he might awaken Job to a more ſerious review of his former aſſertions by repreſenting to him whoſe cauſe he pleaded, and who were his confederates and colleagues in this Opinion.

* Ch. 22.12. † Heb. skies.

5 * Look unto the heavens, and ſee, and behold the † clouds which are higher than thou h.

h How much more is God who is far above all Heavens higher than thou? And therefore God is out of the reach of all profit or loſs by thy actions; if thy goodneſs do not profit thee, it is certain it doth not profit him, and therefore doth not lay any obligation upon him to indulge or recompenſe thee for it, ſave only ſo far as he hath graciouſly obliged himſelf; and therefore thou canſt not accuſe him of injuſtice for afflicting thee, nor pretend that thou haſt deſerved better uſage from him. And this infinite diſtance between God and thee, ſhould cauſe thee to think and ſpeak more modeſtly and reverently of that glorious Majeſty.

6 If thou ſinneſt, what doeſt thou againſt him i? or if thy tranſgreſſions be multiplied, what doeſt thou unto him?

i Thy ſins do him no hurt, and therefore thy righteouſneſs brings him no benefit, as it follows.

* Ch. 22. 3. Pſal. 16. 2. Rom. 11. 35.

7 * If thou be righteous what giveſt thou him? or what receiveth he of thine hand k?

k He gaineth nothing by it, nor can indeed receive any good from thee, becauſe all thy good comes from him. And therefore thou haſt no reaſon to boaſt of, nor to upbraid God with thy Piety, which is much to thy advantage, but nothing to his.

8 Thy wickedneſs may hurt a man as thou art l, and thy righteouſneſs may profit the ſon of man.

l If God were ſuch an one as thou art, he might have benefit or hurt by thine actions: but being an infinite, independent and ſelf-ſufficient being, he is far exalted above all thy good or evil.

9 By reaſon of the multitude m of oppreſſions, they make the oppreſſed to cry n: they cry out by reaſon of the arm of the mighty o.

m Or, greatneſs. This Verſe is ſuppoſed to contain an argument to prove what he ſaid, v. 8. that one man's wickedneſs may hurt another. But he rather ſeems to begin a new matter, and having anſwered one of Job's Objections to proceed to another, which may be either 1. that which Job had oft complained of, that he cried to God, and God did not hear his cry, which Elihu anſwers by a parallel caſe of men, crying out for oppreſſion; whom yet God doth not hear, nor help, and that for juſt reaſons, which he leaves to Job to apply to himſelf. Or, 2. that which Job had alledged, ch. 24.12. and which might ſeem to reflect upon God's providence. This therefore Elihu repeats in this Verſe, and anſwereth in the following. n Not only to murmur and complain, but to cry out by reaſon of ſore oppreſſion, and to cry to the oppreſſors, or others for pity and help. o Becauſe their oppreſſors are too ſtrong for them.

* Pſal. 42.8.

10 But none p ſaith q, where is God r my Maker s? who giveth * ſongs t in the night u!

p Few or none (for few are oft called and accounted as none both in Scripture, and other Authors) of the great numbers of oppreſſed perſons. q To wit, ſeriouſly or ſincerely, and it may be not ſo much as in word and profeſſion. r They howl and cry out of men, and to men, but they ſeek not after God, they do not acknowledge him in all their ways: they praiſe him not for that eaſe, and liberty, and eſtate, and other mercies which God gave them; and by this unthankfulneſs they forfeit their mercies; and therefore if God ſuffer oppreſſors to take them away, they have no cauſe to complain of God, but only of themſelves;

selves: they will not vouchsafe to pray to God seriously and fervently, either to continue or to restore their lost mercies; and therefore if God do not hear, nor regard their bruitish crys arising only from a natural sence of their misery, it is not strange nor unjust. s Who alone made me, and whose power and providence preserveth me every day, and who only can protect and deliver me. All which were obligations upon them to praise God and pray to him, and depend upon him, and aggravations of their gross neglect of God. Heb. my Makers, in the Plural Number Which being used not only here, but also Eccles. 12. 1. Isa. 54. 5. and that without any necessity, when it might as well have been put in the Singular Number, yea, tho' Elohim be Plural, as it is Gen. 1. 1. plainly implys a Plurality of Persons in the Divine Essence, of which see on Gen. 1. 26. t i.e. Matter of Songs: great occasion to rejoyce and praise God. u Either 1. metaphorically taken, i.e. in the night of affliction; implying, that they want not cause to bless God even in their afflictions. Or rather, 2. properly, as this word is always used in Job, one place excepted, which is doubtful, to wit, ch. 36. 20. which he may mention rather than the day; either because oppressed Persons, who in the day-time are cruelly used by their Oppressors, are permitted to rest in the night: or because the hand and mercy of God is more manifest in the preservation, and rest, and sleep of the night, than in the Blessings of the day which are procured by Man's industry: or because the Day is the time of Action, the Night of Contemplation, when we do and ought to remember God's Mercies with thanksgiving: Compare Psal. 42. 8. & 119. 62.

11 Who teacheth us more than the beasts x of the earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven.

x This is mentioned as a further aggravation of Mens neglect of God in their misery. God hath given to Men those gifts which he hath denied to Beasts, Reason and Religion, Wisdom to know God and themselves, and their obligation to God, and their dependance upon him. And therefore it ill-becometh them to lye like Brute-creatures, roaring and crying out in their miseries, without taking any notice of God in way of Prayer or Praise; and if they do so, it is no wonder if God takes no notice of them.

12 There y they cry, (but none giveth answer) because of the pride of evil men z.

y Or, Then, as this Particle is used, Ps. 14. 5. Eccles. 3. 17. Zeph. 1. 14. In that time or condition. z Either, 1. of the Oppressors. So this is the reason not of the last Clause, why none answereth, but of the former why they cry, the latter Clause being therefore shut up within a Parenthesis, and the words thus are to be transposed, as some place them, There they cry, because of the pride of evil men, but none giveth answer. The reason whereof followeth in the next verse. Or rather, 2. of the oppressed Persons. And so these words contain one reason of the words immediately fore-going, which is most natural, and easie, and usual, to wit, why none giveth answer, i.e. why God doth not answer nor regard their cries, because of their pride, &c. because they are both evil, wicked and impenitent, and proud, unhumbled for those sins for which God brought these miseries upon them, & unsubdued to the obedience of God.

*Chap. 27. 9. Prov. 1. 28. & 15. 29. Isa. 1. 13. Jer. 11. 11.

13 * Surely God will not hear vanity a, neither will the Almighty b regard it.

a Either, 1. vain and light Persons, that have no true Wisdom or solid Piety in them, but are wholly addicted to vain and worldly things, rejoycing immoderately when they have them, and crying out for want of them, as here they do. Or, 2. vain cries, which proceed not from Faith or Piety, but only from self-love, and a natural sence of their misery; which is common to them with Brute-beasts. The abstract is here put for the concrete, as wickedness is oft put for wicked men, and pride for proud persons, and the like. b Though God be able to help them, as the title of God implies, and though he be the Judge of the World, as the former Name of God signifies, to whom therefore it belongs to right the Oppressed against the Oppressor, yet in this case he justly refuseth to help them.

14 Although thou sayest thou shalt not see him c, yet judgment is before him d, therefore trust thou in him e.

c Or, thou canst not see him, the Future-tense of the Indicative Mood being oft put Potentially; i. e. Thou canst not have thy desire in appearing and pleading thy Cause before him. So this is a new matter, and Elihu answers another Objection of Job's; of which see Chap. 23. 8, 9. and tells him that he is not to judge of God by present appearance; because tho' God may for a season hide his face, and delay to give him an answer, yet he will certainly do him right. d i. e. Before God, or in his presence, or at his Tribunal, or in all his ways and administrations: And judgment is put for Justice, or just judgment, as it is Job. 8. 3. Ps. 37. 28. & 99. 4 and oft elsewhere. So the sence is, God is and will shew himself to be just in all his ways, and therefore thou dost wickedly in reflecting upon God's justice. Or, yet judge thyself before him, instead of accusing God, condemn thyself, acknowledge thy sins, and then thou mayest hope for Mercy. Compare 1 Cor. 11. 31. e Instead of murmuring against him, put thy trust in him, repent of what is past, and humble thyself under God's hand, and do not despond for the future, but wait upon God patiently in his way, till deliverance come to thee; for it will certainly come, if thou dost not hinder it.

15 But now because it is not so f, ‖ he g hath visited in his anger h, yet ‖ he knoweth it not i in great extremity k.

‖ That is, God. ‖ That is, Job.

f i.e. Because Job doth not acknowledge God's justice and his own sins and wait upon God in his way for Mercy, according to the last advice given to him, v. 14. g To wit, God, to whom this great work of visiting is ascribed every where in Scripture. h i.e. Hath laid grievous afflictions upon him; all which is too little to bring Job to compliance with God. i Job is not sufficiently sensible of it, so as to be humbled under God's hand. k Or, tho' (which Particle is sometimes understood, of which examples have been before) in great extremity, or abundance, to wit, of afflictions. Tho' Job hath hitherto been, & still is exercised with very sore calamities, yet they have not brought Job to the knowledge of God and of himself. But this verse is and may be rendred thus; And now know, that his (i.e. God's) anger hath visited thee little or nothing, (to wit, in comparison of what thou hast deserved, and mightest reasonably expect) neither hath he known (i.e. judged or punished, as this word is used, Prov. 10. 9. and elsewhere) thee in or according to (as the Prefix Beth is sometimes used) the great abundance, to wit, of thy sins. And therefore thy complaints against God are very unrighteous and unreasonable.

16 Therefore l doth Job open his mouth in vain m: he multiplieth words without knowledge n.

l Hence it is manifest. m i. e. Pour forth his complaints without any success, and gets no ease by them. n Thereby discovering his ignorance of God and of himself.

CHAP. XXXVI.

1 ELihu also proceeded, and said,

2 Suffer me a little a, and I will shew thee † that I have yet to speak on God's behalf b.

† Heb. that there are yet words for God.

a Give me thy patient attention but a little longer, and I have done. b That I have not said all that can be said to justifie God's proceedings against thee.

3 I will fetch my knowledge from afar c, and will ascribe righteousness to my Maker d.

c i. e. From remote times, and places, and things. I will not confine my discourse to thy particular case, but will justifie God by declaring his great and glorious works of Creation and Providence both in the Heaven and Earth, and the manner of his dealing with Men in other Parts and Ages of the World: for these are the chief Heads of the following Discourse, and therefore the best comment upon this general expression. d I will acknowledge that which is true, that God is righteous. He adds the words, my Maker, either, 1. as an argument or evidence of God's righteousness; partly because it is not likely that God should be unjust to his own Creatures, since even Men are not only just, but kind to their own Works and Relations: and partly because the Work of Creation gave unto God an absolute right and power to dispose of Job as he saw fit, as the Potter hath power over the Clay, Rom. 9. 21. and therefore there was no foundation for unrighteousness, nor any temptation upon God to do it: and partly, because Man's Maker must needs be a Being of all possible perfection, and therefore one of perfect righteousness. Or, 2. as a motive or obligation upon him to plead God's Cause. I do not engage myself in this Controversie out of a pragmatical or contentious humour, nor out of any prejudice or ill-will to thee, but meerly from the sense of my duty to my blessed Creator. Withal he reflects upon Job, as guilty of great folly and ingratitude in contending with him, in or by whom he lived, and moved, and had his being.

4 For truly, my words shall not be false e: * he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee f.

*Ch. 37. 16.

e I will not speak any thing against my own Conscience, nor against Truth, either to flatter God, or to vex thee, as thou supposest thy other Friends have done, Chap. 13. 7. and elsewhere. f This is meant either, 1 of God. Thou hast to do with a God of perfect knowledge, by whom all thy words and actions are weighed; and therefore hast need to be more wary and circumspect in thy expressions and behaviour. Or rather, 2. of himself, as the former part of the Verse is. And he speaketh of himself in the third Person, for modesty's sake. He speaks not of absolute, but of comparative Perfection. And whatsoever perfection of Knowledge he had, he doth not ascribe it to himself, but to God's Spirit, Chap. 32. 8. And the meaning may be this, Thou hast not to do with a Novice, but with one who hath accurately considered, and through God's grace doth fully understand these matters. Therefore hearken to me. But the word rendred perfect, signifieth also sincere, or upright, or right. And this may seem best to agree with the former Clause, wherein he saith that he would not speak what he knew to be false; and now he adds, that he was and would be upright in the use of his knowledge, or in the delivery of his opinion in this matter, and not be byassed by any passion or prejudice either to speak otherwise than he thought, or to judge otherwise than he should.

5 Behold, God is mighty, and despiseth not any g: * he is mighty in strength and † wisdom h.

* Chap. 9. 4. & 12. 13, 16. & 37. 23. † Heb. heart.

g His greatness doth not make him (at it doth men) to scorn, or despise, or oppress the meanest. Tho' he may do what he pleaseth and none can hinder him, yet he will not use it to do any Man wrong, as Job seemed to insinuate, ch. 10. 3. & 19. 7. & 23. 13. h His strength is guided by wisdom, and therefore cannot be employed ployed to do any thing unbecoming God, or unjuſt to his Creatures; for either of theſe is folly. Or, in ſtrength, or virtue of heart; for the and is not in the Heb. So the ſence is, He is truly magnanimous, of a great and generous mind or heart, and therefore not unrighteous; for all injuſtice proceeds from littleneſs or weakneſs of Heart. Truly great Souls ſcorn unjuſt actions.

6 He preſerveth not the life of the wicked i: but giveth right to the ‖ poor k.

i To wit, for ever; but will in his due time forſake them, and give them up to the Deſtroyer. Or, he doth not or will not preſerve is put for, he will certainly and dreadfully deſtroy, by the Figure called Meioſis, uſed Prov. 17.21. and oft elſewhere. k He doth uphold, and he will certainly in his due time deliver his poor oppreſſed Ones from all their Oppreſſors.

* Pſal. 33. 18. & 34. 15.

7 * He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous l: but with kings are they on the throne m; yea, he doth eſtabliſh them for ever n, and they are exalted o.

l He never ceaſeth to care for and watch over them, no not when they are afflicted or perſecuted, when he may ſeem to neglect them. m Though they may be oppreſſed for a time, yet oft-times he not only delivers them, but alſo raiſeth them to the higheſt Honour and Happineſs in this life; Compare 1 Sam. 2.8. Pſal. 113.7,8. n Their felicity is more ſtable and permanent than that of the wicked. o Having mentioned the cauſe, that God did eſtabliſh them, he now mentions the effect, that they are or continue to be exalted; rhey are not caſt down from their Dignity, as the wicked commonly are.

* Pſal. 107. 10.

8 * And if they be bound in fetters p, and be holden in cords of affliction:

p If through the viciſſitude of worldly Affairs, and the righteous judgment of God upon them for their ſins, they be brought from their Throne into a Priſon, as ſometimes hath been done.

9 Then he ſheweth them their work q, and their tranſgreſſions, that they have exceeded r.

q i.e. Their evil works, as the next Clauſe explains and limits it. By theſe afflictions he brings them to a ſight of their ſins, and to repentance, which is the way and means of their recovery. r That they have greatly ſinned, by abuſing their Power and Proſperity, which even good men are too prone to do.

* Ch. 33. 16.

10 * He openeth alſo their ear s to diſcipline t, and commandeth u that they return from iniquity x.

s i.e. He enableth and enclineth them to hearken to what God ſpeaks by the Rod, who would not hear in the time of their Proſperity, like them, Jer. 22.21. t Or, to inſtruction, i. e. to receive inſtruction: or to chaſtening, i.e. to hear the Rod, and who hath appointed it, as is ſaid, Micb. 6.9. u Either by his Word or Spirit accompanying the affliction, and diſcovering the mind and will of God in this diſpenſation. x Which is the chief cauſe of their Calamity.

* Ch. 21. 13.

11 If they obey y and ſerve him, they ſhall * ſpend their days in proſperity z, & their years in pleaſures a.

y God's admonition and command. z They ſhall be reſtored to their former Proſperity, and ſhall live and die in it. This he ſpeaks according to the Tenor of God's promiſes, eſpecially in the Old Teſtament-ſtate of the Church, and according to the common courſe and method of God's Providence which Elihu & other good men had obſerved. a Abounding in worldly comforts, and being enabled by God to rejoyce in them, which is God's gift, Eccleſ. 3. 13. and delighting themſelves in God's love and favour to them.

12 But if they b obey not, † they ſhall periſh by the ſword, and they ſhall die without knowledge c.

b The righteous ſpoken of v. 7. oppoſed to the Hypocrites here following, v. 13. for even good men may ſometimes be diſobedient to Divine admonitions, and may ſuffer deeply, yea, even death itſelf, for their folly; ſee 1 Cor. 11. 30. c In or for their ignorance, or inadvertency, or folly. Or, becauſe they are without knowledge, becauſe they are fooliſh, or brutiſh, and will not learn the Leſſons which God ſo plainly teacheth them.

Chap. 33. 18.

* Rom. 2. 5.

13 But the hypocrites in heart d * heap up wrath e: they cry not f when he bindeth them g.

d Such as are truly void of that Piety which they profeſs. Whereby he either ſecretly inſinuates that Job was ſuch an one: or gives him this occaſion to ſearch himſelf whether he were not ſo: or rather admoniſheth him not to carry himſelf like ſuch an one, as he had hitherto done, and for which he reproved him, ch. 34.8. e i.e. by their impious and obſtinate carriage in all conditions, they treaſure up God's wrath againſt themſelves. f Unto God for help. They live in the groſs neglect of God, and of Prayer. g To wit, with the cords of affliction, expreſſed v. 8. which is mentioned as an aggravation of their wickedneſs, becauſe even wicked men, if not profligately bad, will ſeek God in a time of affliction. Hoſ. 5.15. Withal he ſecretly reflects upon Job, as one that behaved himſelf like a wicked Man, becauſe though he cried out of God, in way of complaint, yet he did not cry unto him by humble ſupplication.

* Ch. 15. 32. & 22. 16. Pſal. 55. 23. † Heb. their ſoul dieth. ‖ Or, Sodomites.

14 * † They die in youth h, and their life is i among the ‖ unclean k.

h They provoke God to cut them off before their time. Heb. Their ſoul i.e. they themſelves) ſhall die in youth. i Or rather, life ſhall die or be extinct; which Verb is underſtood out of the former Clauſe after the manner of the Hebrews. k Or, the filthy, or the Whoremonger, or Sodomites; to whoſe deſtruction (which happened not long before this time) he may ſeem to allude. The ſence is, They ſhall die by ſome dreadful and exemplary ſtroke of Divine vengeance.

15 He delivereth the ‖ poor in his affliction, and openeth their ears l in oppreſſion m.

l i.e. Cauſeth them to hear, and underſtand, and to do the Will of God, hearing being oft put for obeying. And this latter Clauſe ſeems to be added to intimate, that he will not deliver all afflicted Perſons, but only thoſe whoſe ears he openeth to receive his Counſels. m i.e. In the time of their oppreſſion. Or, by oppreſſion or tribulation, as the means of opening their ears and Hearts.

† Heb. the reſt of thy table. * Pſal. 23. 5.

16 Even ſo would he n have removed thee o out of the p ſtrait into a broad place q, where there is no ſtraitneſs, and † * that which ſhould be ſet on thy table, ſhould be full of fatneſs.

n If thou hadſt opened thine Ear to God's Counſels, and humbled thyſelf under his correcting hand, and ſued to God for Mercy. o As this Verb is uſed, 2 Chron. 18.31. Or, allured, or enticed, or perſuaded thee, as the word properly ſignifies: which poſſibly may here be emphatical, and may imply as that Job had by his ſins brought himſelf into theſe ſtraits, ſo that God would have brought him out of them by the uſual and regular way, to wit, by perſuading him to turn from his ſins, and humbly and earneſtly to cry to God for Mercy, which if he had complied with, God would have delivered him. p Heb. out of the mouth or jaws of tribulation; which like a wild Beaſt, was ready to ſwallow him up. q i. e. Into a ſtate of eaſe and freedom. r Thy Diſhes, or the Food in them.

‖ Or, judgment and juſtice ſhould uphold thee.

17 But thou haſt fulfilled the judgment s of the wicked: ‖ judgment and juſtice take hold on thee t.

s Or, the cauſe or ſentence, as the word moſt properly ſignified. Thou haſt fully pleaded their cauſe, and juſtified the hard and reproachful ſpeeches which wicked men in their rage utter againſt God, condemning God, and juſtifying themſelves. t Or, therefore (which is oft underſtood) the ſentence and judgment (or, the judicial ſentence, to wit, of the wicked now mentioned) ſhall take hold on thee. Thou haſt maintained their cauſe againſt God, and God ſhall paſs againſt thee their ſentence, or the Sentence of Condemnation due to ſuch wicked men.

* Pſal. 49. 7. † Heb. turn thee aſide.

18 Becauſe there is wrath u, beware x leſt he take thee away with his ſtroke y: then a * great ranſom cannot † deliver thee z.

u To wit, conceived by God againſt thee. Becauſe by thy pleading the cauſe of the wicked, thou haſt deſerved that God ſhould give ſentence againſt thee, as was now ſaid, and haſt provoked God's wrath againſt thee, therefore look to thyſelf, and reconcile thyſelf to God by true repentance whilſt thou mayeſt, and before ſentence be executed upon thee. x This is not in the Hebrew, but is neceſſarily to be underſtood to make up the ſence, and is oft underſtood in the like caſes, and that before this Hebrew Particle Pen, as Gen. 3.22. & 11.4. & 42.4. Iſa. 36.18. See the like alſo, Mat. 25.9. Act. 5.39. y Properly, with the ſtroke of his hand or foot. It is an alluſion to men who oft expreſs their anger by clapping their hands, or ſtamping with their feet. z For if once God's wrath take hold of thee, and ſentence be executed upon thee before thou doſt repent and humble thyſelf to thy Judge, neither Riches, nor Friends, no nor any Perſon, or thing in Heaven and Earth can redeem thee, no Ranſom or Price will be accepted for thee.

19 Will he eſteem thy riches? no not gold, nor all the forces of ſtrength a.

a If thou couldſt recover thy loſt Wealth or Srength, or thy Friends would employ theirs on thy behalf, neither could the one ranſom thee, nor the other reſcue thee.

* Ch. 7. 5. * Ch. 34. 20.

20 * Deſire not the night b, when c people d * are cut off e in their place.

b Either, 1. properly, that in it thou mayeſt find ſome eaſe or reſt, as men uſually do. But this Job did not much deſire, for he complains that his nights were as reſtleſs as his days. Or rather, 2. metaphorically, the night of Death, which is called the night both in Scripture, as Job. 9.4. and in other Writers; and which Job had oft and earneſtly deſired and even thirſted after, as this Verb notes. See ch. 7.15. And this ſeems beſt to agree with the foregoing counſel, v. 18. beware leſt he take thee away with his ſtroke, for then, ſaith he, thou art irrecoverably loſt and gone; and therefore take heed of thy fooliſh and oft repeated deſire of death, leſt God inflict it upon thee in great anger. c Or, by which: which words are oft underſtood in divers Texts of Scripture. d Even whole Nations and Bodies of People, which are all God's Creatures as well as thou, and yet are not ſpared by him, but cut off in wrath, and many of them ſent from one death to another; take heed therefore thou beeſt not added to the number. e Heb. are made to aſcend, i. e. to vaniſh, or periſh, or die, as this Verb is oft uſed, as Job 18.16. Pſ. 102.25. f In their ſeveral places where they are; or ſuddenly, before they can remove out of the place where the hand and ſtroke of God finds them; or in the place where they are ſettled and ſurrounded with all manner of Comforts, and Supports, and Friends, all which could not prevent their being cut off. Poſſibly this Phraſe may allude to that expreſſion of Job's, ch. 29. 18. I ſhall die in my neſt.

21 Take heed, regard not g iniquity: for this haſt thou choſen rather than affliction h.

g Or, look not to it, to wit, with an approving or coveting eye, as this word is uſed, Prov. 23.31. h Thou haſt choſen rather to quarrel with God, and cenſure his judgments, than humbly and quietly to ſubmit to them, and to wait upon God by Faith and Prayer for deliverance in his time and way.

* Pſal. 116. 12, 26, 27. Iſa. 40. 13. Rom. 11. 34. 1 Cor. 2. 16.

22 Behold, God exalteth i by his power: * who teacheth like him k?

i Or, is high, or exalted, the active Verb being taken intranſitively; which is not unuſual in the Hebrew Tongue. This is a proper argument to force the fore-going counſels. God is omnipotent, and therefore can with great facility, either puniſh thee far worſe, if thou beeſt obſtinate and refractory; or deliver thee, if thou doeſt repent and turn to him. k He is alſo infinitely wiſe as well as powerful, and as none can work like him, ſo none can teach like him. Therefore do not preſume to teach him how to govern the World, or to order thy affairs, but know that whatſoever he doth with thee, or with any other men, is beſt to be done. And therefore be willing to learn from him: learn obedience by the things which thou ſuffereſt from him, and do not follow thine own fancies or affections, but uſe the methods which God hath taught thee to get out of thy troubles, by ſubmiſſion, and prayer, and repentance. The words may be rendred, What Lord is like him? For the word Moreh in the Chaldee Dialect, ſignifies a Lord. This Tranſlation ſuits with the former Clauſe of this Verſe, but ours agree well enough with that, and is confirmed by the following Verſe.

* Ch. 34. 13. * Ch. 34. 10.

23 *Who hath enjoyned him his way l? or *who can ſay, Thou haſt wrought iniquity m?

l Wherein he ſhould walk, i. e. what courſes and methods he ſhall uſe in the adminiſtration of humane affairs? If he had a Superior Lord who gave him Laws for his actions, he might be accountable to him, and queſtionably for what he did: but he is Supreme, Abſolute and Uncontrollable, who hath no Law to regulate him, but his own holy Nature and bleſſed Will. And therefore how raſh, and impudent, and abſurd a thing it is, for any Man to cenſure his proceedings? m Thou haſt ſwerved from the Law and Rule given to thee.

n Call to mind this thy duty, and take this matter into thy more ſerious thoughts, and it will prevent thy horrible miſtakes and miſcarriages. o So this Hebrew Particle is uſed here, v. 10. and ch. 3.12. p Or, his works, the ſingular number being put for the plural; every work which he doth; do not condemn any of his providential works towards thee or others, but adore and glorifie them as done with admirable wiſdom, and juſtice, and faithfulneſs. q To wit, with admiration and aſtoniſhment: which by their greatneſs and glory draw the eyes and minds of all men towards them; which deſerve to be entertained with adoration and reverence of all men, not with cenſure and reproach.

25 Every man may ſeek it r: man may behold it afar off s.

r To wit, his work, laſt mentioned. The power, and wiſdom, and greatneſs of God is ſo manifeſt in all his works, that all who are not blind or ſtupid, muſt needs ſee & acknowledge it. s The works of God are ſo great and conſpicuous, that they may be ſeen at a great diſtance; whereas little things cannot be ſeen, unleſs we be near them. This Tranſlation and Interpretation ſeems better to agree with the context, than that which is more common, Man doth behold it (i.e. God's work or works) afar off, i.e. They ſee them darkly and imperfectly, as things at a great diſtance but not clearly and plainly as things near at hand, and therefore they are ſo apt to miſtake them, and miſ-judge of them.

* Pſal. 90. 2. & 102. 24, 27. Heb. 1. 12.

26 Behold, God is great t, and we know him not u, * neither can the number of his years be ſearched out x.

t Infinite in Majeſty, and Power, and Wiſdom, and all Perfections, and therefore juſt in all his ways. u To wit, perfectly. Tho' we ſee ſomething of him in his works, as was now ſaid, yet we ſee and know but little of him in compariſon of that which is in him. He is incomprehenſibly great in his Eſſence, and in his Works, and therefore be not ſo raſh, O Job, as to cenſure thoſe ways of God which thou canſt not fully underſtand. x He is from everlaſting to everlaſting eternal, as in his being ſo in all his counſels, which therefore muſt be infinitely wiſe and above the comprehenſion of ſhort liv'd men.

27 For y he maketh ſmall the drops of water y, they z pour down a rain according to the vapour thereof b.

y Having affirmed that God's works are incomprehenſibly great and glorious, he now enters upon the proof of it; and he proveth it from the moſt common and viſible works of Nature and Providence, which if thoroughly conſidered, are full of wonder, and paſt the reach of the greateſt Philoſophers, who indeed, ſpeak of them only by gueſs, and by their innumerable diſputations about them, diſcover their ignorance in them. And hence he leaves it to Job to conſider how incomparably more deep and unconceivable the ſecret Counſels and Judgments of God muſt needs be, and therefore how fooliſh and preſumptuous a thing it was for him to judge and cenſure them. y i.e. He orders matters ſo wiſely and graciouſly, that the Waters which are in the Clouds, do not fall down at once in Spouts, or Rivers, or Seas; which would be both unprofitable and pernicious to the Earth, and to Mankind; but by degrees, and in drops, which is beſt for mens ſafety and comfort, and for the refreſhment of the Earth. And this he obſerves as a wonderful work of God; without whoſe Providence herein, thoſe Waters might conſtantly or commonly fall in Spouts, as ſometimes part of them hath done. z Either the Waters laſt mentioned, or the Clouds, as it is expreſſed in the next Verſe: or the active Verb is uſed impersonally, which is frequent in the Hebrew Language, they pour down rain, for, the rain is poured down. a Or, melt or diſſolve, which word is borrowed from Metallifts, who diſſolve Metals with Fire, and then pour them forth by degrees and in parcels, as the Clouds are diſſolved, and then poured forth in drops, as was now expreſſed. b i.e. According to the proportion of vapours which the heat of the Sun hath drawn up from the Earth or Sea into the Clouds. Or, into the vapour thereof. So it notes that great work of God by which the Rain is firſt made of Vapours, and afterwards reſolved into Vapours, or into the matter of ſucceeding Vapours, by a conſtant rotation and reciprocation.

28 Which the † clouds do drop, and diſtill upon man abundantly c.

† Heb. skies.

c In ſuch plenty as the neceſſities of the Earth require; which alſo is a wonderful work of God.

29 Alſo can any underſtand the ſpreadings of the † clouds d, or the noiſe of his tabernacle e.

† Heb. cloud.

d Or rather, of a cloud, as it is in the Hebrew, whence it comes to paſs that a ſmall Cloud, no bigger than a Man's hand, doth ſuddenly ſpread over the whole Heavens, how the Clouds come to be ſuddenly gathered together, and ſo condenſed as to bring forth Thunder and Lightning, which here follows. e i.e. The Thunder produced in the Clouds, which are oft called God's Tent or Tabernacle, as Pſ. 18.11. & 104.3. becauſe there he oft times ſeems to dwell, and gives forth tokens of his powerful and glorious preſence in thoſe mighty works of Thunder and Lightning, wherewith men are frequently aſtoniſhed and affrighted.

30 Behold, he ſpreadeth his light f upon it g, and covereth † the bottom of the ſea h.

† Heb. the roots.

f i.e. The Lightning, of which the whole context ſpeaks, which is fitly called God's Light, as it is called God's Lightning, Pſ. 144.6. becauſe God only can light it. g i.e. Upon the Cloud, which is in a manner the Candleſtick, in which God ſets up his Light. h The Lightning ſpreads far and wide over all the Parts of the Sea, and pierceth deep, reaching even to the bottom of it, and ſpreading itſelf upon it, and ſo covering it like a gay and glorious Garment ſuddenly caſt over and covering the Body of a Man or Woman, or as God is ſaid to cover himſelf with light as with a garment, Pſal. 104. 2.

31 For * by them judgeth he the people i; he giveth meat in abundance k.

* Ch. 37. 13, & 38. 23.

i By Thunder and Lightning, he manifeſts his diſpleaſure, and executes his judgments againſt ungodly People or Countries. k Or, and (which Conjunction is oft underſtood) he giveth meat, &c. i.e. by the ſelf-ſame Clouds he puniſheth wicked Men by Thunder and Lightning, and provideth for others by thoſe plentiful Showers which accompany them.

32 With clouds l he covereth the light m, and commandeth it not to ſhine n, by the cloud that cometh betwixt o.

l With thick and black Clouds, ſpread over the whole Heavens, as it is in times of great Thunder and Lightning. Heb. with hands; either the Clouds are ſo called for their reſemblance to hands, 1 Kings 18.44. as being hollow and ſpread abroad: or the meaning is, that God covereth the light as it were by the hollow of his Hand, as a Man ſometimes covers the light of a Candle. m Either the Lightning, or rather the Sun, which is fitly called Light, Job 31.26. Pſ. 136.7. as being the Fountain of Light. n Or, giveth a charge concerning it, to wit, that it ſhall be covered: Or, forbiddeth it, as this Hebrew word joyned with this Propoſition uſually ſignifies, as Gen. 2.17. & 28.6. 1 Kings 2.43. & 11.11. and elſewhere, i. e. hindreth it, as it were by an expreſs command or prohibition, from its uſual and proper work, to wit, from ſhining. o Which God interpoſeth as a vail between the Sun and Earth; by which he doth as it were deliver his command or prohibition to the Sun, that he ſhould not ſhine.

33 The noiſe thereof p ſheweth concerning it q; the cattel alſo concerning † the vapour r.

† Heb. that which goeth up

p To wit, of or within the black and thick Cloud, ſpoken of v. 3. Or, his, i.e. God's, noiſe, to wit, the Thunder, which is called God's voice, Pſ. 24.4, 5. q To wit, the Rain, which is the Principal ſubject of theſe Verſes, of which he ſpeaketh expreſly, v. 27, 28. and of his Companions, the Clouds, and Thunder, and Lightning in all the following Verſes. The ſence is, The Thunder gives notice of the approaching Rain. r And as the Thunder, ſo alſo the cattel ſheweth (which Verb is underſtood out of the fore-going Clauſe, after this manner) concerning the vapour, i.e. concerning the coming of the Rain: but he puts Vapours for the Rain, becauſe divers Cattle are very ſagacious in this matter, and do not only perceive the Rain when it is ready to fall, but fore-ſee it at ſome diſtance by the Vapours which are drawn up by the Sun in great abundance, and by divers motions and actions, give Men timely notice of it, as hath been obſerved not only by Huſbandmen, but alſo by learned Authors.

CAAP.

CHAP. XXXVII.

1 AT this also a my heart trembleth, and is moved out of his place b.

a Of which I have already spoken, and am now to speak further, to wit, the Thunder, which hath oft-times made even Atheists, and other wicked Men to tremble with a fear of horrour, and good Men to tremble with a fear of reverence, and a due dread of God's Judgments. b Leaps and beats excessively, as if it would leap out of my Body.

* Heb. hear in hearing. † Heb. his voice with trembling.

2 * Hear attentively c † the noise of his voice d, and the sound that goeth out of his mouth e.

c It seems not improbable, that whilst Elihu was speaking, it Thundered greatly, and that Tempest was begun, wherewith God ushered in his Speech, as it here follows, ch. 38. 1. and that this occasioned his return to that subject of which he had discoursed before, and his exhortation to them to mind it with deeper attention. d Or, his voice, (to wit, the Thunder, which is called a Voice, Exod. 20. 18. & God's Voice, Psal. 29. 4.) with trembling; because the Thunder is an effect or evidence of God's mighty Power, and oft-times of his Anger also: e As the voice (and Thunder is God's Voice) goeth out of Man's Mouth. Or, that is produced by God's Word or Command, which is oft signified by his Mouth.

3 He directeth it f under the whole heaven g, and his † lightning unto the † ends of the earth h.

f To wit, his Voice, which he shooteth or guideth like an Arrow to the Mark, so disposing it, that it may do that work for which he sends it. g Far and wide, through all the Parts of this lower World. h From one end of the Heaven, to the opposite end or part of the Earth, as from East to West, Mat. 24. 27.

* Psal. 29. 3.

4 After it *a voice i roareth: he thundereth with the voice of his excellency k, and he will not stay l them m when his voice is heard.

i i.e. After the Lightning. For tho' the Thunder be in order of Nature before the Lightning, yet the Lightning is seen before the Thunder is heard. k Or, with his excellent, or high, or lofty Voice, both loud and full of Majesty and Awfulness. l Or, delay; Heb. take them by the heel, as Jacob did Esau in the Womb, to delay or stop him from entring into the World before him. m Either, 1. the Lightnings spoken of in the beginning of the Verse. But these do not stay till the Voices be heard, but come before it. Or rather, 2. The Rains and Storms, of which he spoke before, and will speak again, v. 6.

* Chap. 5. 9. & 36. 26.

5 God thundereth marvellously n with his voice: * great things doth he, which we cannot comprehend o.

n With a wonderful and terrible noise, and so as to produce many wonderful effects, as the breaking down of great and strong Trees or Buildings, the killing of Men in a stupendious manner, &c. o Even in the course of Nature, and in visible things; which all Men see, but scarce any can give the true and satisfactory reasons of them; for the greatest Philosophers speak only by guess, and are greatly divided among themselves about them. And therefore it is not strange if the secret and deep counsels of Divine Providence be out of reach; and it is great arrogancy in thee, O Job, to censure them, because thou dost not fully understand them.

* Psal. 147. 16, 17. † Heb. and to the shower of rain, and to the showers of rain of his strength.

6 For * he saith to the snow, be thou on the earth p: † likewise to the small rain: and to the great rain of his strength q.

p By his powerful Word and Will the Snow is made in the Air, and falls upon the Earth where and when he seeth fit. q i.e. Those great storms and showers of Rain which come with great force and irresistable violence.

7 He sealeth up the hand of every man r, that all men may know his work s.

r By these great Snows and Rains, he drives Men out of the Fields, and seals or binds up their hands from all that work, and drives them home to their Houses, and in a manner shuts them up there. See Gen. 7. 16. Exod. 9. 19. Or, By his Hand, or Power (i.e. By those powerful works of his Hand here mentioned) he sealeth, or shutteth up, or keepeth close every man, to wit, in his House, as the Beasts in their Dens, v. 8. s That Men being hindred from action and their own work, and so being idle and at perfect leisure, may fall to a serious contemplation of these, and other great and glorious works of God. Or, that he (i.e. every man, as was now expressed) may know (or enquire into, or take account of) all his workmen: for which the proper season is when they are all hindred from their work, and brought together into the House.

8 Then t the beasts go into dens u, and remain in their places.

t In great Rains or deep Snows. u For shelter and comfort.

† Heb. out of the chamber. † Heb. scattering winds.

9 † Out of the south x cometh the whirlwind y: and cold z out of the † north.

x Heb. out of the inner Chamber; as the Southern part of the World is called, because in a great part it was, and is hid and unknown to those who live in the Northern Hemisphere, in which Job's Habitation lay: Or, out of the Chamber of the South, as it is more largely expressed, Job 9. 9. for this is opposed to the North in the following Clause. y Violent and stormy Winds, which in those parts most frequently came out of the South, whence they are called whirlwinds of the South, Zech. 9 14. Isa. 21. 1. z i.e. Cold and freezing Winds, which generally come from that quarter.

* Chap. 38. 29, 30. Psal. 147. 17, 18.

10 * By the breath of God a frost is given: and the breadth of the waters is straitned b.

a i.e. By the Word of God, as this very Phrase is explained, Psal. 33. 6. By his will or appointment, to which as the Principal cause, all these works are ascribed. b The Frost dries up the Waters in great measure, and bringeth the remainder into a narrow compass, as we see.

* Or, clearness wearieth. † Heb. the cloud of his light. ‖ Or, the cloud scattereth his rain. Isa. 18. 4.

11 Also by * watering c he wearieth the thick clouds d: he scattereth † ‖ his bright cloud e.

c To wit, the Earth. By causing them first to receive and return, and then to pour forth abundance of water. d By filling and burthening them with much water, and making them to go long Journeys to water remote Parts, and at last to spend and empty themselves there: all which things make men weary; and therefore are here said to make the Clouds weary by a common figure called Prosopopœia. e As for the white and light som Clouds (which are opposed to the thick and black Clouds in the former Clause) he scattereth or dissolveth them by the Wind or Sun. Or, he scattereth other Clouds by his light, i.e. by the beams of the Sun. So he gathereth some and scattereth others, as he pleaseth, causing either clear, or dark and rainy weather.

12 And it is turned round about f by his counsels g: that they may do whatsoever he commandeth them h upon the face of the world in the earth.

f The Clouds (now mentioned) are carried about to this or that place. g Not by chance (tho' nothing seems to be more casual and uncertain than the motions of the Clouds) but by his order and governance. h Either be dispersed and pass away without effect to the disappointment of the Husbandmens hopes, or be dissolved in sweet and fruitful showers.

* Exo. 9. 18, 23. 1 Sam. 12. 18, 19. Ezra 10. 9. Chap. 36. 27, &c. † Heb. a rod.

13 * He causeth it to come i, whether for † correction k, or for his land l, or for mercy m.

i Heb. He maketh it (to wit, the Cloud or Clouds, and the Rain which is in it) to find, to wit, a path, or to find out the Persons or Place, to which God intends either good or hurt by it. k Heb. for a rod, to scourge or correct Men by immoderate showers. Or, for a Tribe, or certain Portion of Land, which God intends particularly to punish in that kind. l i.e. For God's Land, whereby he understands either, 1. the Land which he favoureth, and where his Servants live, such as Canaan was, which for that reason God blessed with Rain, as is noted Deut. 11. 12. Psal. 68. 9, 10. But in Job's time, God's People were not in Canaan, but in Egypt, where little or no Rain fell. Or, 2. the uninhabited or desert parts of the World, which may be called God's Land peculiarly, because it is immediately and only under God's care, as being not regarded nor possessed by any man. For is noted as a special act of God's Providence, that he causeth Rain to fall upon such places, Job 38. 26, 27. Or, 3. his Earth, as it may he rendred, to wit, the whole Earth, which is said to be the Lord's, Psal. 24. 1. & 50. 50. 12. and which may be here opposed to a Tribe, or little part of the Earth. And so this may note a general judgment by excessive Rains inflicted upon the whole Earth, and all its Inhabitants, even the universal Deluge, which was then in a manner of fresh memory, which came in a great measure out of the Clouds. And thus these two first members speak of Correction, and the last of Mercy. m For the comfort and benefit of Mankind, by cooling and cleansing the Air, and refreshing and improving all the Fruits of the Earth, and other ways.

14 Hearken unto this, O Job: stand still, and consider the wondrous works of God n.

n If there be so much matter of wonder and adoration in the most obvious and sensible works of God, how wonderful must his deep and secret counsels and judgments be? And therefore it would better become thee humbly to admire, and quietly to submit to them, than to murmer or quarrel with them.

15 Dost thou know when God disposed them o, and caused the light of his cloud to shine p?

o To wit, the things before mentioned, the Clouds, Rain, Snow, Thunder and Lightning, and other Meteors. Did God ask counsel of thee to acquaint thee with his counsels in the producing and ordering of them? God ordereth all these things, not as pleaseth thee, but as he thinks meet; and in like manner he disposeth of all humane Affairs, and of thine among the rest. p Which may be understood either, 1. of the light of the Sun breaking through the Clouds, when it is most glorious and comfortable. But tho' this light break through the Clouds, yet it is very improper to call it the light of the Clouds. Or, 2. The Lightning, which is properly so called, as being produced by and in a Cloud. Or, 3. The Rainbow, which is a light som and glorious work of God, and therefore not likely to be omitted in this place, and which is seated in a Cloud which also may well be called God's Cloud, because therein God puts his Bow, as the Rainbow is called, Gen. 9. 13.

16 Dost thou know the blancings q of the clouds, the wondrous works of him which is perfect in knowledge r?

q How God doth as it were weigh and suspend the Clouds in Balances, so that altho' they are ponderous and full of Water, yet they are by his power kept up in the thin Air from falling down upon us in Spouts and Flouds, as sometimes they have done, and generally would do, if not over-ruled by an higher Providence.

Providence. r Who exactly knows the weight. These are effects and evidences of his infinite power and knowledge.

17 How thy garments are warm s, when he quieteth the earth t by the south wind u; s How and why thy Garments keep the warm; of which as there are some natural causes, so it is certain that they are not sufficient to do it without God's blessing, as experience shews Hag. 1.6. t i. e. The Air about the Earth. u Which though sometimes it brings Tempests, v. 9. yet commonly it ushereth in hot weather, Luke 12.55. as the North-wind brings cold, v. 9. Or, from the South-wind, i. e. from the Tempest which was noted to come out of the South, v. 9. Heb. from or by the South, i e. by the Suns coming into the Southern parts, which makes the Air quiet and warm.

* Gen. 1.6. 18 Hast thou with him * spread out the skie x, which is strong y, and as a molten looking-glass z.

x Wast thou his co-worker or assistant in spreading out the Skie like a Tent or Canopy over the Earth? Or, canst thou spread out such another Skie? Then indeed thou mayest with some colour pretend to be privy to his counsels, and to judge of his works. y Which tho' it be very thin and transparent, yet is also firm, and compact, and stedfast, and of great force when it is pent up. z Made of Brass or Steel, as the manner then was.

* Ch. 32. 14. 19 Teach us what we shall say unto him a; for we cannot * order our speech b by reason of darkness c.

a i. e. Unto God, either by way of Apology for thee: or rather by way of debate and disputation with him about his counsels and ways; about which we know not what to say, and therefore are willing to be taught by thee who pretendest to such exquisite knowledge of these matters. So it is a reproof of his presumption and arrogance. b We know neither with what words or matter, nor in what method and manner, to maintain discourse with him, or plead against him. The words, our speech, are easily understood out of the former Clause of the Verse. c Both because of the darkness of the matter, God's counsels and ways being a great depth, and far out of our reach; and because of the darkness or blindness of our minds.

20 Shall it be told him that I speak d? if a man speak e, surely he shall be swallowed up f.

d Heb. That I will speak. Shall I send, or who dare carry a Challenge from me to God, or a Message that I am ready and desirous to debate with him concerning his proceedings? This indeed thou hast done in effect, but far be such presumption from me. e If a Man should be so bold and venturous to enter the Lists with God. f With the sense of God's infinite Majesty and spotless Purity.

21 And g now h men see not i the bright light which is in the clouds k, but the wind passeth l and cleanseth them m.

g Or, For, as this Particle is oft rendred; the following words containing a reason of those that go before. h This Particle is either, 1. a note of time, and so it intimates a sudden change which then was in the Weather, which having been very dark, began now to clear up: Or rather, 2. a note of inference, to usher in the argument. i Either, 1. do not observe (as seeing is oft used, nor consider these glorious works of God: or, 2. cannot behold, or at least not gaze upon it. k Or, in the Skies; for the Hebrew word signifies both Clouds and Skies. This is to be understood either, 1. of bright and lightsom Clouds: or rather, 2. of the Sun, which is oft and emphatically called light, as was noted before, and here the bright light: which men oft-times cannot behold, either when it is covered with a black an thick Cloud; or when, as it follows, the Skie is very clear, and consequently the Sun-shine is very bright. And therefore it is not strange if we cannot see God, who dwelleth in darkness, 1 Kings 8.12. nor discern his counsels and ways, which are covered with great obscurity; and if we dare not approach to him, with whom is, as it here follows, terrible Majesty, and if we presume to do so, we must needs be swallowed up, as was said, v. 20. l Or rather, when (as this Particle is of used) the wind passeth. m Either the Clouds, i.e. cleanseth the Air from them: or the Skies, by driving away those Clouds which darkned it.

† Heb. gold. 22 † Fair weather n cometh out of the north o: with God is terrible Majesty p.

n Or, when (which Particle may well be understood out of the fore-going Verse; and so this may be a further description of the time when men cannot see or gaze upon the Sun, namely when) fair weather, &c. Heb. Gold, either 1. properly. And so this may noted as another wonderful work of God, that the choicest of Metals, to wit, Gold should be found in, and fetched out of the bowels of cold Northern Countries: or 2. metaphorically, as this word is oft used of bright and shining things; as we read of golden Oyl, Zech. 4.12. and we call happy times, golden Days. And so bright and fair Weather, may well be called golden, because then the Sun gilds the Air and Earth with its beams, which also are called by Poets golden Beams. o i e. From the Northern Winds, which scatter the Clouds, and clear the Skie, Prov. 25.23. p And therefore we neither can nor may approach too near to him, nor speak presumptuously or irreverently to him or of him. And so this is the Application of what he had now said, that we could not see the Sun, &c. much less God: and withal, it is an Epiphonema or Conclusion of the whole fore-going Discourse. Those glorious works of his which I have described, are Testimonies of that great and terrible Majesty which is in him; which should cause us to fear and reverence him, and not to behave ourselves so insolently towards him, as Job hath done. * Tim. 6.16.

* Ch. 36.5. † Lam. 3.33. 23 Touching the Almighty * we cannot find him out q, he * is excellent in power r, and in judgment s, and in plenty of justice t, † he will not afflict u.

q To wit, to perfection, as it is expressed, Job 11.7. We cannot comprehend him: His Being, Power, Wisdom, Justice, and his counsels proceeding from them, are past our finding out; and therefore it is most absurd and intolerable, that thou, O Job, presumest to censure what thou dost not understand. r And therefore as he doth not need any unrighteous action to advance himself, so he cannot do it, because all such things are acts and evidences of impotency or weakness. s i.e. In the just and righteous administration of judgment, as this word is oft used, and as the thing itself, and the following words plainly evince. And this he adds to intimate, that altho' God had indeed a power to crush Job or any other Man, yet he never did nor can exercise that power unjustly or tyrannically, as Job seem'd to insinuate. t In great and perfect Justice, such as no man can justly reproach. u To wit, without just cause, and above measure; as it may and must be limited both from the fore-going words, and from Job's complaint, which was of that very thing; and from the nature of the thing, because otherwise this Proposition, that God will not afflict, is not simply and universally true. Or these last words may be joyned with the former; and so some render the place, He is excellent in Power, and, or but, or yet, he will not afflict any Man with judgment and much (i. e. too much) justice, i. e. with extremity or rigour of Justice.

24 Men do therefore fear him x: he respecteth not y any t hat are wise of heart z.

x For this cause, to wit, because of God's infinite and excellent Perfections, and especially those mentioned in the fore-going Verse, men do, or should (for the Future-tense is oft used potentially, as Hebricians know) fear or reverence him, and humbly submit to him, and not presume to quarrel or dispute with him, as thou, O Job hast done. y Heb. He doth not, or will not behold, to wit, with respect or approbation, he beholdeth them afar off with scorn and contempt. z i.e. Such as are wise in their own eyes, that lean to their own understandings, and despise all other men in comparison of themselves, and scorn all their counsels, that are so puffed up with the opinion of their own wisdom, that they dare contend with their Maker, and presume to censure his counsels and actions. Which he hereby intimates to be Job's fault, and to be the true reason why God did not respect nor regard him, nor his Prayers and Tears, as Job complained. And so this is also a tacit Advice and Exhortation to Job to be humble and little in his own eyes, if ever he expected or desired any favour from God.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

* Nah. 1.3. THen the LORD answered Job a * out of the whirlwind b, and said, a i.e. Began to debate the matter with him, as Job had desired. b i.e. Out of a dark and thick Cloud, from which he sent a terrible and tempestuous Wind, as the harbinger of his presence. In this manner God appears and speaks to him; partly because this was his usual method in those times, as we see Exod. 19 18. Numb. 9.15, 16. 1 King. 19.11. Ezek. 1.4. partly to awaken Job and his Friends to the more serious and reverend attention to his words; partly to testifie his displeasure both against Job and against his three Friends; and partly that all of them might be more deeply and throughly humbled and abased within themselves, and prepared the better to receive, and longer to retain the instructions which God was about to give them.

2 Who is this c that darkneth counsel d by words e without knowledge f?

c It is a question of admiration and reprehension, What and where is he that presumeth to talk at this rate? This Language becomes not a Creature, much less a Professor of Religion. The Person here designed, is not Elihu that spoke last, but Job who had spoken most, as is apparent from v. 1. and from ch. 42. 3. where Job takes the following reproof to himself, and from the following Discourse: wherein God convinceth Job by divers of the same kind of arguments which Elihu had used against him. d Either, 1. his own counsel, i. e. that expresseth his own mind darkly and doubtfully. But that was not Job's fault. He spake his mind too plainly and freely: or rather, 2. God's counsel, which is called simply counsel, by way of eminency, as the word and the commandment are oft put for the word and command of God. For the great matter of the Dispute between Job and his Friends, was concerning God's counsel, and purpose, and providence in afflicting Job; which being a wise, and just and glorious action of God, Job had endeavoured to obscure and mis-represent and censure. And God's decrees and judgments, are frequently called his counsels, as Ps. 33.11. Prov. 19.21. Acts 2.23. e God doth not charge Job, as his three Friends had done, with hypocrisie and wickedness in the course of his life, nor with Atheistical opinions of God, or his Providence, as some of the Hebrew Writers do, but confines his reproof to his hard speeches. f Proceeding from ignorance, and mistake, and inconsiderateness; not from malice or rage against God, as his Friends accused him.

* Chap. 43.7. † Heb. make me know. 3 * Gird up now thy loyns g like a man; for I will demand of the h, and † answer thou me.

g As Warriours then did for the Battel. Prepare thyself for the Combate with me, which thou hast oft desired. I accept of thy Challenge, ch. 13.22. and elsewhere. h Or, I will ask thee Questions; which he doth in the following Verses.

* Psal. 104. 5. Prov. 8. 29, & 30. 4. † Heb. if thou knowest understanding.

4 * Where wast thou i, when I laid the foundations of the earth k? declare, † if thou hast understanding l.

i Then thou wast no where, thou hadst no being; thou art but of yesterday; and dost thou presume to judge of my Eternal Counsels? I made the World without thy help, and therefore can govern it without thy counsel, and I do not need thee to be the Controller or Censurer of my works. k When I made the Earth, which is as the Foundation or lower part of the whole World, and settled it as firm and fast upon its own Center as if it had been built upon the surest Foundations. l But if thou art ignorant of these manifest and visible works, do not pretend to the exact knowledge of my secret Counsels and mysterious Providences.

5 Who hath laid the measures thereof m, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line n upon it?

m Who hath prescribed how long and broad and deep it should be. n To wit, the measuring line to regulate all its dimensions, so as might be most convenient both for beauty and use.

†Heb. Sockets. †Heb. made to sink.

6 Whereupon are the † foundations thereof † fastened o? or who laid the corner-stone thereof p?

o This strong and durable Building hath no foundations but in God's power and word which hath marvellously established it upon itself. p By which the several walls and parts of the Building are joined and fastened together, and in which, next to the Foundations, the stability of any Building does consist. The sence is, Who was it that did build this goodly Fabrick, and establisht it so firmly that it cannot be moved without a miracle.

‖ Or, then, so Gr.

7 When the morning-stars q sang together, ‖ and all the sons of God r shouted for joy s.

q Either 1. the Stars properly so called, who are said to sing and praise God, objectively, because they give men ample occasion to do it in regard of their glorious light and stupendious motions, &c. Comp. Ps. 19.1. & 148,1, &c. But, 1. these stars are not here the objects or matter, but the authors or instruments of God's praises for the founding of the Earth. 2. The Stars were not created when the Earth was founded, but upon the fourth day. 3. There is no satisfactory reason given why all the Stars should be called Morning-stars, especially when there is but one Star known by that Name. Or rather 2. the Sons of God, as it here follows, the latter Clause of the Verse being explicatory of the former, as is most frequent in this and some other Books of Scripture, to wit, the Angels, who may well be called Stars, as even men of eminent note, and particularly Ministers of God's Word are called. Dan. 8.10. & 12.3. Rev. 1.16, 20. and Morning-stars, because of their excellent lustre and glory, for which they are called Angels of Light, 2 Cor. 11.14. and Christ for the same reason is called the Morning-star, Rev. 22.16. r The blessed Angels; for man not being yet made, God had then no other Sons; and these are called the Sons of God, partly because they had their whole being from him, and partly because they were made partakers of his divine and glorious Image. And all these are said to join in this work of praising God, probably because none of the Angels were as yet fallen from their first estate, tho' they did fall within a very little time after. s Rejoyced in and blessed God for his works. Whereby he intimates, that they neither did advise or any way assist him in his works, nor dislike or censure any of his works, as Job had presumed to do with the works of his Providence, which are not inferior to those of Creation.

‖ Gen. 1. 9.

8 * Or who shut up the sea with doors t, when it brake forth u as if it had issued out of the womb.

t Who was it, thou or I, that did set bounds to the vast and raging Ocean, and shut it up as it were with Doors within its proper place and store-house that it might not overflow the Earth; which without God's powerful restraint it would do? See Psal. 33.7. & 104.9. This sence seems most proper and to be confirmed by the following Verses. u Or, after it had broken forth, to wit, from the womb or bowels of the Earth, within which the Waters were for the most part contained, Gen. 1.2. Comp. 2 Pet. 3.5. and out of which they were by God's command brought forth into the proper place or channel which God had appointed for them.

9 When I made the cloud the garment thereof x, and thick darkness y a swadling band for it z:

x When I covered it with Vapours and Clouds which arise out of the Sea, and by God's appointment hover above it and cover it like a garment. y i.e. Black and dark Clouds, called Darkness by an usual Metonymy of the Adjunct. So the same thing is repeated in other words after the manner. z Having compared the Sea to a New-born Infant he continues in the same Metaphor, and makes the Clouds as swadling-bands to keep the Sea within its bounds: though indeed neither Clouds, nor Air, nor Sands, and Shores, can bound the Sea, but it is God alone who doth it in and with these things.

‖ Or, established my decree upon it. * Ch. 26. 10.

10 And ‖ * brake up for it my decreed place a, and set bars, and doors b, a i.e. Made those vallies or channels, and hollow-places in the Earth, which might serve for a Cradle to receive and hold this great and goodly Infant when it came out of the Womb. See Gen. 1.9, 10. Psal. 33.7. Or, ordained or established my Decree upon or concerning it. b i.e. Fixed its bounds as strongly as if they were fortified with Bars and Doors.

11 And said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here c shall † thy proud waves f be stayed.

† Heb. the pride of thy waves.

c To wit, at the Sand and Shore of the Sea, Jer. 5.22. f Which rage and swell as if they would over-whelm all the Earth.

12 Hast thou commanded the morning g since thy days h? and caused the day-spring to know his place i?

g i.e. The Morning-light, or the Sun which is the cause of it. Didst thou create the Sun and appoint the order and succession of day and night? h Since thou wast born. This work was not done by thee but by me, and that long before thou was born. i To observe the punctual time when and the point of the Heavens where it should arise; which varies every day. Was this thy contrivance or mine?

† Heb. wings. Chap. 37.3.

13 That it might take hold of the † ends of the earth k, that the wicked might be shaken out of it l?

k That this Morning-light should in a moment spread itself over the face of the whole Earth, from one end of the Hemisphere to the other. l From the face of the Earth. And this effect the Morning-light hath upon the wicked, partly because it discovers them and drives them into their lurking-holes whereas the darkness hides them and draws them forth and gives them opportunity to execute their villanies without observation, Job 24.15, 16, 17. and partly because it brings them to condign punishment, the Morning being the most fit and the most usual time for executing judgment: of which see Ps. 101.8. Jer. 21.12.

14 It m is turned n as clay ‖ to the seal o, and they p stand q as a garment r.

m To wit, the Earth mentioned in the next foregoing Verse. n Is transformed and changed in its shape and appearance. o Or, by the seal, which makes a beautiful or valuable impression upon that Clay, which in itself hath no form, nor worth, nor comeliness in it. So the Earth, which in the darkness of the night lies like a confused heap without either form or beauty, when the light ariseth and shineth upon it appears, in excellent order and great glory. p Either 1. the Inhabitants of the Earth, and particularly the wicked, mentioned both in the foregoing and following Verses. Or, 2. More generally, the men and things of the Earth, whether Natural, as Living Creatures, Herbs and Trees, &c. Or Artificial, as Houses or other Buildings. q i.e. Present themselves to our view, for which that posture of standing is most convenient. Or consist, or abide, or are constituted r Wherewith the Earth is in a manner clothed and adorned as with a garment, as the blessed God himself is said to cover himself with light as with a garment, Psal. 104.2.

* Psal. 10. 15.

15 And s from the wicked their light t is withholden, and * the high arms u shall be broken.

s Or, But, for the following words seem to be added by way of opposition to what went before. The Earth and the men and the things in it have the comfort and benefit of the light, but so have not the wicked. t i.e. Their portion of Light: That Light which is enjoyed by others is with-holden from them, either by their own choice, because they love and chuse darkness rather than light; or by the judgment of God, or the Magistrate, by whom they are cut off from the light of the living, as it is called, Job 33.30. or at least deprived of their peace, and comfort, and prosperity, which frequently goes under the name of Light in Scripture, and may be so called here by an elegant allusion to the Natural Light of the Sun mentioned before. u Their strength which they used tyrannically to the oppression and crushing of others.

‖ Or, currents. Heb. weeping.

16 Hast thou entred into the ‖ springs x of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth y?

x Heb. the Tears, i.e. the several Springs out of which the Waters of the Sea flow as tears do from the eyes. y Hast thou found out the utmost depth and bottom of the Sea which in divers places could never be reached by the wisest Mariner, or the longest Cables? And how then canst thou fathom the depths of my Counsels?

* Psal. 9. 13.

17 Have * the gates of death been opened unto thee z? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death a?

z Hast thou seen, or dost thou perfectly know the place and state of the Dead: the depths and bowels of that Earth in which the generality of dead men are buried; or the several ways and methods of Death; or the various states and conditions of men after death? a The same thing repeated.

18 Hast thou perceived the breadth of the earth b? declare c, if thou knowest it all.

b Dost thou exactly know the whole compass and all the parts of the Earth, and the state and quality of all Countreys and of the men and things in them? c Give me an answer to these Questions, which is far more easie to do than to answer me to many other Questions which I could put to thee about my secret Counsels and Providences, and the Reasons of my dealing with thee as I do.

19 Where

19 Where is the way d where light dwelleth e? and as for darkneſs where is the place thereof?

d Or rather, the place, as the next Clauſe explains it, and the Hebrew phraſe will bear. e i.e. Hath its conſtant and ſettled abode. For in the place where Job lived, and in moſt other parts of the inhabited world, it is like a Traveller that cometh and goeth continually every day. This may be referred, either 1. to the places under the two Poles, where firſt the light, and then the darkneſs continues for ſix Months together. Or rather 2. to the Sun the Fountain of Light. And as this is a Poetical Book, ſo this may be a Poetical Expreſſion and Queſtion, Whether goes the Sun when it departs from this Hemiſphere? Where is the Tabernacle and the Chamber in which both ſacred, as Pſal. 19.4,5. and prophane Poets ſuppoſe the Sun to reſt? Doſt thou know the place where the Sun when it ſets may be found, and whence thou canſt fetch it back again. For it is to be carefully obſerved that he ſpeaks not here of a bare and ſimple knowledge of this matter, which was plain and eaſie to Job and many others, who were not ignorant that the Sun was the Fountain of Light from whoſe approach light comes, and by whoſe departure darkneſs is cauſed, but of an operative knowledge, even ſuch as could and did enable him to take it to the bound thereof, as it follows, v. 20. And withal he ſeems here to ſpeak not only of the daily courſe and motion of the Sun, and the viciſſitude of Day and Night, but alſo and eſpecially of the firſt production of the light which was before Job was born, as is evident from v. 21. And this makes the Queſtion more difficult and more conſiderable, the ſence whereof may be this; Seeing there was a time when there was nothing but groſs and comfortleſs darkneſs upon the face of the Earth, what way came light into the World? Which was the place where light dwelt at that time, and whence it was fetched? and whence came that orderly conſtitution and conſtant ſucceſſion of Light and Darkneſs? Was this thy work? Or waſt thou privy to it, or a Counſellor, or Aſſiſtant in it? Or was it not done by me alone, long before thou hadſt a being?

20 That thou ſhouldſt take it f, ‖ to the bound thereof g, and that thou ſhouldſt know h the paths to the houſe thereof i?

f i.e. Taking, bring or lead it, as this Verb is oft uſed, as Exod. 25.2. Pſal 68.29. compared with Eph. 4.11. 1 Kings 3.24. & 17.10. Hoſea 14.2. And many other ſuch pregnant Verbs there are in the Hebrew Language having the ſignification of two Verbs included in one. And this it refers principally to the Light, and ſecondarily to Darkneſs, as the conſequent of the other. g i.e. Its whole courſe from the place of its abode whence it is ſuppoſed to come to the end of its journey which it is to go. Didſt thou direct or guide the Light or the Sun that he ſhould at firſt take and afterward conſtantly continue in that courſe which now it holds, that it ſhould go from Eaſt to Weſt, and riſe ſometimes in one point or part of the Heaven, and ſometimes in another, and that its days journey ſhould be longer in one ſeaſon of the Year, and ſhorter in another? This regular and excellent courſe muſt needs be the effect of great Wiſdom. And whoſe wiſdom was it? thine or mine? h To wit, practically, ſo as to direct or lead it in the manner now expreſſed. i Where thou mayeſt find it, and whence thou mayeſt fetch it.

21 Knoweſt thou it becauſe thou waſt then born? or becauſe the number of thy days is great k?

k An ironical Queſtion, If thou pretendeſt that thou knoweſt theſe things and canſt readily anſwer theſe Queſtions, how comeſt thou by this knowledge? Was it from hence becauſe thou waſt born when I made the World, and that firſt conſtitution of the Light and Darkneſs in that order and ſucceſſion which continues to this day, and thereby hadſt the opportunity of inſpecting my works and ſeeing whence the Light came, and becauſe thou haſt gained this knowledge by long experience as having lived ever ſince the Creation of the World until this time? Whereas in truth thou art but of yeſterday, and knoweſt nothing, as was ſaid, ch. 8.9. But the words are, and may be otherwiſe rendred, doſt or didſt thou know, either by thy own remembrance, or by the information of others, that thou waſt then born (to wit, when I made the World? Or, didſt thou know that thou ſhouldſt then be born, then, to wit, when thou waſt born? Or, didſt thou then know, the two Hebrew Particles being tranſplaced, as is not unuſual in that Language, that thou ſhouldſt be born? How couldſt thou know this when thou hadſt no being?) and that the number of thy days ſhould be great? That thou ſhouldſt live ſo long as thou haſt lived. Thou couldeſt neither foreknow the time of thy Birth, nor the length of thy Life. Or, and is the number of thy days great? i.e. So great that it reacheth to the time of the World's Creation.

22 Haſt thou entred into the treaſures of the ſnow? or haſt thou ſeen the treaſures of the hail l.

l Doſt thou know where I have laid up thoſe vaſt quantities of Snow and Hail which I draw forth when I ſee fit? doſt thou know the cauſes of them, and the way to produce them? But if thou art unacquainted with theſe treaſures, it is intolerable preſumption in thee to pretend that thou knoweſt thoſe treaſures of Wiſdom which lye hid in my own Breaſt.

23 Which m I have reſerved againſt the time of trouble n, againſt the day of battel and war?

m i.e. Which ſnow, and eſpecially hail n i.e. When I intend to bring trouble or calamity upon a Countrey or People for their ſins, or for their tryal. Or, Againſt the time of the enemy, i.e. when I intend to puniſh mine or my Peoples enemies, and to fight againſt them with theſe weapons. Of which ſee inſtances, Exod. 9.14. Joſ. 10.11. Compare 1 Sam. 7.10. Job 36.31. Iſa. 30.30.

24 By what way o is the light parted p, which ſcattereth the eaſt-wind upon the earth q?

o Doſt thou know all the cauſes, means, methods and circumſtances of this work of God? p Or, diſperſed, or diſtributed, to wit, in the Air, or upon the face of the Earth. By light he underſtands either, 1. the Lightning, which breaks forth ſuddenly out of a Cloud, and with ſtrange ſwiftneſs diſperſeth itſelf and fleeth from Eaſt to Weſt, as is noted, Mat. 24.27. But this word light, put by itſelf, and being underſtood properly, is conſtantly uſed in this Book for the light of the Sun, and never for the Lightning, and where it is meant of the Lightning, there is ſome other word added to it, as Ch. 37.15. where it is called the light of his Cloud. And beſides, he ſpeaks of the Lightning in the next Verſe; which were ſuperfluous if it were here mentioned. Or rather, 2 of the light of the Sun, which is commonly called light without any other word added to it, as Job 3.4,9,16. & 24.14. & 25.3. &c. And this light of the Sun is variouſly parted or diſtributed in the World, ſhining in one place and time, when it doth not ſhine in another, or for a longer time, or with greater brightneſs and power and vertue than it doth in another. All which are the effects of God's infinite Wiſdom and Power, and ſuch as were out of Job's reach to underſtand, or at leaſt to effect. q i.e. Which light ſcattereth, &c. i.e. raiſeth the Eaſt-wind and cauſeth it to blow hither and thither upon the Earth. For as the Sun is juſtly called by the Poets and others, the Father of the Winds, becauſe he draws up thoſe exhalations which give matter to the Winds, and for other reaſons; ſo in particular the Eaſt-wind is oft obſerved to riſe together with the Sun, from which alſo it hath both its Latin and Greek Name. But ſome make this a diſtinct Queſtion from the former, and render the words thus, and (repeat, by which way) the Eaſt-wind (under which all the other Winds may be comprehended) ſcattereth itſelf upon the Earth, i.e. Whence the Winds come and whither they go, which is mentioned as a ſecret in nature, Job. 3.8. and how it comes to paſs that they blow in ſuch ſeveral manners, and with ſuch various and even contrary effects. Or thus, and by which way, the Eaſt-wind ſcattereth (to wit, the Clouds, or other light things: for this is noted in Scripture to be a moſt vehement Wind and to ſcatter the Clouds, Exod. 14 21. Jonah, 4.8.) upon the earth; i.e. whence it comes to paſs that the Eaſt-wind was ſo violent and furious. But the words may be rendred thus, Which (i.e. which light of the Sun, or when it, to wit, this light) ſcattereth itſelf (as divers here render this word, that Conjugation being often uſed reciprocally, as is confeſſed) from (the prefix Mem being underſtood, as it is very frequently in the Hebrew Text) the Eaſt (for this Hebrew word doth not only ſignifie the Eaſtern Wind, but alſo the Eaſt, or the Eaſtern part of the Heavens or Earth, as Ezek. 40.19. & 42.16. Hab. 1.9. and in many other places) and Kedem the root of this word is conſtantly ſo uſed) upon or over the Earth, all over the Earth. And this is juſtly mentioned as a wonderful work of God that as ſoon as ever the Sun ariſeth, it parteth or ſcattereth its light in an inſtant from one end of the Hemiſphere to another; But this I propoſe with ſubmiſſion.

25 Who hath divided a water-courſe for the overflowing of waters r? or a way for the lightning of thunder s.

r For the ſhowers of Rain which come down out of the Clouds, orderly, moderately and gradually, as if they were conveyed in Pipes or Channels; which without the care of God's Providence would fall confuſedly and all together, and inſtead of refreſhing would overwhelm the Earth. s i.e. For that Lightning which breaking out of the Cloud with violence, cauſeth Thunder. Or, for Lightning and Thunder. Who opened a paſſage for them out of the Cloud in which they were impriſoned? And theſe are here joyned with the Rain, becauſe they are commonly accompanied with great ſhowers of Rain: which is here noted as a wonderful work of God that Fire and Water ſhould come out of the ſame Cloud?

26 To cauſe it to rain t on the earth where no man is; on the wilderneſs wherein there is no man u.

t That the Clouds being broken by Lightning and Thunder might pour down Rain. u To wit, to water thoſe parts by art and induſtry, as is uſual in cultivated and inhabited places. Which makes this work of Divine providence more neceſſary and more remarkable in providing for the relief of the wild Beaſts and Plants and other fruits of theſe forſaken Lands, which otherwiſe would periſh with drought.

27 * To ſatisfie u the deſolate and waſt ground, and to cauſe the bud of the tender herb to ſpring forth u. * Pſal. 107. 35.

u By raining not ſparingly, but liberally and abundantly upon it. x There being many excellent and uſeful Herbs found in deſert places, which otherwiſe would be utterly neglected and deſpiſed.

28 Hath the rain a father y? or who hath begotten the drops of the dew?

y To wit, beſides me. Is there any Man upon Earth that can beget or produce Rain at his pleaſure? No, this is my peculiar work. And therefore ſeeing thou knoweſt and canſt do nothing as to the government of these ordinary effects of Nature, how great presumption is it to arrogate to thyself the knowledge and management of the secret and mysterious affairs of my Providence in the disposal of men.

29 Out of whose womb came the ice? and the hoary frost of heaven who hath gendred it z?

z What Man either can produce them, or doth fully understand where or how they are engendred? For Philosophers speak of these things only by guess, and the reasons which some assign for them are confuted by others, and so they will confute one another to the end of the World and prove nothing solidly, but their own ignorance and the reasonableness of these Questions.

30 The waters are hid as with a stone a, and the face of the deep b † is frozen.

a i.e. With Ice as hard as a stone. b i.e. The great Sea, which is oft called the deep, as Gen. 7.11. Psal. 107.24. Isa. 51.10. & 63.13. 2 Cor. 11.25. which in some parts is frozen, which is a wonderful work of God.

31 Canst thou bind c the sweet influences d of ‖ † Pleiades e, or loose the bands f of † Orion g?

‖ Or, the seven stars. † Heb. Cimah. † Heb. Sesil.

c i.e. Restrain or hinder them. Canst thou bind or shut up the Earth when they open it? d Or the delights, because this Constellation by its benign and opening influences brings in the Spring, the Herbs and Flowers, and other delights of the Earth. e Called, also the Seven Stars. Of this and the following Constellation, see Job 9.9. f By which it binds up the Air and Earth by bringing storms of Rain or Hail, or Frost and Snow, and withal binds or seals the hands of Workmen, as is noted, Job 37.7. g This is another Constellation which riseth in November and brings in Winter. So the sence of the Verse is, Thou canst not bind the Earth when the one looseth or openeth it, nor loose or open it when the other binds or shutteth it up.

‖ Or, the twelve signs. † Heb. guide them.

32 Canst thou bring forth h ‖ Mazzaroth i in his season, or canst thou † guide Arcturus k with his sons l?

h To wit, into view. Canst thou make him to arise and appear in thy Hemisphere? i By which he designs either 1. all the Constellations, and especially the Twelve Signs of the Zodiack: or rather 2. some particular Constellation, as all the rest here mentioned are understood. But whether this be that which is called the Chambers of the South, ch. 9.7. Or the Dog-star, or some other visible in Job's Countrey, but not in ours, we may be safely and contentedly ignorant, seeing even the Hebrew Doctors are not agreed therein. k A Northern Constellation, of which see on Job 9.9. l To wit, the lesser Stars which belong to it, and are placed round about it; and attend upon it as Children upon their Parents.

* Jer 1.35.

33 Knowest thou m * the ordinances of heaven n? canst thou set the dominion thereof in the earth o?

m Either 1. simply and by speculation dost thou understand them. Or 2. practically or operatively so as to establish or rule them, as the next Clause implies. n The Laws which are firmly established concerning their order, motion or rest, and their powerful influences upon this lower World. Didst thou give these Laws? Or dost thou perfectly know them? o Canst thou manage and over-rule their influences that they shall bring such Weather as thou wouldst have?

34 Canst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds p, that abundance of waters may cover thee q?

p Either thundering in them: or calling to them with a loud voice commanding them to rain. q i.e. Thy land when it needs and requires rain.

35 Canst thou send r lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, † Here we are s?

† Heb. behold us.

r At thy pleasure and upon thy errand. s An expression of Servants declaring their readiness to obey their Masters commands; of which see Gen. 22.1. Isa. 6.8.

* Chap. 32.8. Eccles. 2.26.

36 * Who hath put wisdom in the inward parts t, or who hath given understanding to the heart u?

t To wit, of a Man. Comp. Job 19.27. Psal. 51.6. Who gave thee that wit and understanding which thou hast, and which thou now usest so arrogantly and wickedly to contend with me, and to censure my actions? u So he limits the former general expression of the inward parts. The heart is made by the Hebrews the seat of the understanding, and is commonly put for it in Scripture.

‖ Or, declare the skies. † Heb. who can cause to lie down.

37 ‖ Who can number the clouds in wisdom x? or † who can stay the bottles of heaven y?

x Who can wisely search out and exactly find the number of the Clouds? They are numberless and filled with Water, as the next Clause implies. y To wit, the Clouds, in which the Rain is kept as in Bottles, out of which God poureth them when he sees fit.

‖ Or, when the dust is turned into mire. † Heb. is powred.

38 ‖ When the dust † groweth into hardness, and the clods cleave fast together z?

z This Verse containeth a description, either 1. of a great drought, when the Earth grows very hard and close and compact: Or 2. of the condition of the Earth presently after the fall of Rain, when the Earth, which in time of drought was much of it dissolved into dust, is now by the Rain cemented or united together. In either of these cases it is the work of God alone to keep the Clouds from pouring down more Rain upon the Earth.

39 * Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion a? or fill † the appetite of the young lions.

* Psal. 104. 21.

a Is it by thy care and providence that the Lions who live in desert places are furnished with necessary provisions? This is justly mentioned as another wonderful work of God.

40 When they couch in their dens b, and abide in the covert to lie in wait c?

b When through age and infirmity they cannot range abroad for Prey, as the young Lions do, but lye still in their Dens, as it were expecting their food from God, from whom also they receive it. c Watching till some Beast comes that way upon which they may Prey.

41 * Who provideth for the raven d his food? when his young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of meat.

* Psal. 147.9. Mat. 6.26.

d Having mentioned the noblest of Brute-creatures, he now mentions one of the most contemptible and loathsom to shew the care of God's Providence over all Creatures both great and small. Which is more remarkable in Ravens because 1. they devour flesh, which it is not easie for them to find. 2. They are greedy and eat very much. 3. They are generally neglected and forsaken by Mankind. 4. Their young ones are so soon forsaken by their Dams, that if God did not provide for them in a more than ordinary manner they would be starved to death.

CHAP. XXXIX.

1 KNowest thou the time a when the wild goats of the rock b bring forth c? or canst thou mark when the * hinds do calve d?

* Psal. 29.9.

a That thou mayest then go to them and afford them thy help in their hard work. b Which dwell in high and steep Rocks where no Man can come. See 1 Sam. 24.2. Psal. 104.18. c Which they do with great difficulty as is implied, Psal. 29.9. and noted by Philosophers, wherein they have no assistance from men but only from God. d When God by his secret instinct directs them to a certain Herb called Seseli, which, as Naturalists report, doth hasten and help forward their Birth.

2 Canst thou number the months that they fulfil? or knowest thou the time when they bring forth e?

e Dost thou exactly know when they did conceive, and when they will bring forth: which is more uncertain in these than in other Creatures, because there fall out many accidents which cause them to bring forth before their time, as thunder, Psal. 29.9. and other like causes of sudden fear which may be many and various in those desert places where they live.

3 They bow themselves f, they bring forth their young ones g, they cast out their sorrows h.

f Being taught by a Divine instinct to dispose themselves in such a posture as may be fittest for their safe and easie bringing forth. g To wit, with great pain being almost torn or rent asunder with the Birth, as the word signifies: or without any of that help, which tame Beasts oft have. h i.e. Their young ones and their sorrows together. Or, though (which Particle is oft understood) they remit, or put away their sorrows, i.e. Though instead of cherishing and furthering their sorrows, which for their own ease and safety they should do, they foolishly hinder them, so increase their own danger, yet by God's good Providence to them they are enabled to bring forth, as was now said.

4 Their young ones are in good liking i, they grow up with corn k: they go forth, and return not unto them l.

i Or, grow strong or fat; notwithstanding their great weakness caused by their hard entrance into the World. k Which they find and feed upon in the Fields. l Or, as with Corn, i. e. as if they were fed with Corn; the Particle as being oft deficient and to be supplied. Or, in the Field, as this word in thee Chaldee or Syriack Dialect signifies. l Finding sufficient Provisions abroad by the care and conduct of God's Providence.

5 Who hath sent out the wild ass free m? or who hath loosed the bands of the wild ass n?

m Who hath given him this disposition that he loves freedom, and avoids and hates that subjection which other Creatures quietly and contentedly endure? n Which is not to be understood privatively, as if God took off the bands which men had put upon him, but Negatively, that he keeps him from receiving the bands and submitting to the service of Man. Who hath made him so untractable and unmanageable? Which is the more strange, because home-bred Asses are so tame and tractable.

6 * Whose house I have made the wilderness o, and the † barren land p his dwellings.

* Chap. 24.5. † Heb. Salt places.

o Who useth and loveth to dwell in desert Lands, Jer. 2.24. Hosea 8.3.9. p Called barren, not simply, for then he must be starved there, but comparatively, unmanaged, and therefore in a great measure unfruitful Land.

7 He scorneth q the multitude of the city r, neither regardeth s he the crying † of the driver t.

† Heb. of the extraction.

q Either 1. he feareth them not, when they pursue him, because he is swift and can easily escape them. Or 2. he values them not, nor any provisions or advantages which he may have from them, but prefers a vagrant and solitary life in the Wilderneſs before them. Or 3. he diſdains to ſubmit himſelf to them, and reſolutely maintains his own freedom. r He mentions the City rather than the Countrey, partly becauſe there is the greateſt Multitude of People to purſue and overtake and ſubject him: and partly becauſe there is the greateſt plenty of all things to invite him; the Fruits of the Countrey being laid up in Cities in greateſt abundance. s Heb. heareth, i.e. obeyeth. t Heb. of the Task-maſter, or Exactor of Labour, i.e. He will not be brought to receive his Yoke, nor to do his Drudgery, nor to anſwer to his cries or commands, as tame Aſſes are forced to do.

8 The range of the mountain u is his paſture, and he ſearcheth after every green thing.

u That which he ſearcheth out or findeth in the Mountains. He prefers that mean proviſion and hardſhip with his freedom before the fatteſt Paſtures with ſervitude. Why ſo weak and harmleſs a Creature as the wild Aſs ſhould be untamable when the moſt ſavage Lions and Tigers have been tamed; and how there comes to be ſo vaſt a difference between the tame, and the wild Aſs, thou caſt give no reaſon, but muſt refer it wholly to my good pleaſure, to which alſo thou ſhouldſt upon the ſame grounds refer all the various methods of my providence and dealings with thee and with other men, and not ſo boldly cenſure what thou doſt not underſtand.

9 Will the unicorn x be willing to ſerve thee y, or abide by thy crib z?

x It is much diſputed among the Learned, but is not needful to be known by others, whether there be or ever was ſuch a Creature as we call the Unicorn, or whether this Reem, which is the Hebrew name of it, be the Rhinoceros, as ſome would have it; or a certain kind of wild Goat called Oryx, which is very tall and ſtrong and untractable; or one of that kind of wild Oxen or Bulls called Uri; which may ſeem moſt probable both from the deſcription of this Creature here and elſewhere in Scripture which exactly agrees with its deſcription given by other Authors; and from the deſcription of his work in this place; which muſt in all reaſon be agreeable to Creatures of that general kind; and from the conjunction of this Creature with Bullocks in Scripture, Deut. 33.17. and eſpecially Iſa. 34.6,7. where having put Lambs, and Goats, and Rams together, v. 6. as Creatures of the ſame or very like ſort; he mentions Bullocks, and Bulls, and Reems, v.7. as belonging to the ſame general ſort of Creatures But this I ſhall not poſitively determine here. He that would know more may ſee what the Reverend and Learned Mr. Caryl hath upon this Text out of Bochius and others, and my Latin Synopſis on Numb. 23.22. y Canſt thou tame him and bring him into ſubjection to thy command. z Will he ſuffer himſelf to be tied or confined there all Night, and to be reſerved to the work of the next day, as the oxen do? Surely no. And if thou canſt not rule ſuch a Creature as this, much leſs art thou able to govern the World, or to teach me how to govern it, which thou preſumeſt to do.

10 Canſt thou bind the unicorn with his band in the furrow a? or will he harrow the valleys b after thee c?

a i.e. In thy furrowed Field, by a Metonymy. Or, to or for (as the prefix Beth is oft uſed, as Gen. 11.4. Lev. 16.22. Job 24.5.) the furrow, i. e. to make Furrows, or to Plow: for which work Cattel uſe to be bound together that they may be directed by the Husbandman, and may make right Furrows. b To wit, the low grounds: which are moſt proper for, and moſt imployed in the work of Plowing. c Under thy conduct, following thee ſtep by ſtep.

11 Wilt thou truſt him d becauſe his ſtrength is great e? or wilt thou leave thy labour f to him g?

d To wit, for the doing of theſe works? e Becauſe he is very able for thy work. And wilt thou by thy power make him willing or force him to put forth and ſpend his ſtrength in thy ſervice? f Either 1. thy work of Plowing and Harrowing. Or rather 2. the fruit of thy labour, or the goods gotten by thy labour, as this word is oft uſed, as Deut. 28. 33. Job 20. 18. Pſal. 78. 46. & 128. 2. Hoh. 4.38. to wit, the Fruits of the Earth procured by God's bleſſing upon thy induſtry. g To be brought home by him into thy Barns, as the next Verſe explains it.

12 Wilt thou be believe him that he will bring home thy ſeed h, and gather it into thy barn?

h Heb. will return thy ſeed; either 1. by Plowing and Harrowing thy Land ſo well that it ſhall make a good return to thee for thy ſeed. Or rather 2. by bringing into thy Barn, as it follows, thy ſeed, i.e. the product of thy Seed, or thy ſheaves of Corn, as this word is uſed, Hagg. 2. 19.

13 Gaveſt thou i the goodly k wings l unto the peacocks m? or || wings and feathers unto the oſtrich n?

|| Or, the feathers of the Stork and Oſtrich.

i The Stile of this Book is very conciſe and ſome Verb is manifeſtly wanting to ſupply the ſence; and this ſeems to be fitly underſtood out of v. 19. where it is expreſſed. k Or, triumphant, that wherein it triumpheth or prideth itſelf. l Or, feathers. Heb. wing or feather. The Peacocks beauty lies in its tail; which may well enough be comprehended under this Name, as it is confeſſed that the Latin word Ala, which properly ſignifies a wing, is uſed by Martial and Claudian to expreſs the Peacock's tail. m Or, as ſome render it, to the Oſtrich: whoſe wings are much more great and goodly than thoſe of the Peacock. And for the other word in the next Clauſe which is rendred Oſtrich, they tranſlate it another way. For that the Hebrew word Haſidah doth not ſignifie an Oſtrich, ſeems plain from the mention and deſcription of that Bird, Pſal. 104.17. Jer. 8.7. Lam. 4.3. Zech 5.9. which doth not at all agree to the Oſtrich. And foraſmuch as the following Verſes do evidently ſpeak of the Oſtrich, and it is abſurd to diſcourſe of a Bird which had not been ſo much as named, and conſequently the name of it muſt be found in this Verſe, and there is no other word in this Verſe which bids ſo fair for it, it may ſeem probable that this word is not to be rendred the Peacock (tho' it be ſo taken by moſt) but the Oſtrich. Nor is it likely that both the Peacock and the Oſtrich ſhould be crouded together into one Verſe: eſpecially when all the following Characters belong only to the latter of them. Add to this, that it is confeſſed even by the Hebrew Writers themſelves, that there is a great uncertainty in the ſignification of the Names of Birds and Beaſts; and therefore it is not ſtrange if many Interpreters were miſtaken in the ſignification of this word. n Or, or the wings or feathers of the Stork (or, or) the Oſtrich? Or, didſt thou give (which may be repeated out of the former branch) the wings and feathers to the Stork? Or, verily (the Particle im being oft uſed as a note of confirmation, as Pſal. 59.16. & 63.7. Prov. 3.34. & 23.18.) it hath wings and feathers like thoſe of a Stork; for ſo indeed they are, black and white like them. And this may be noted as a great and a remarkable work of God, that it ſhould really have wings and feathers as other Birds have, and particularly the Stork, who comes neareſt to it in bulk and colour, although otherwiſe by its vaſt bulk it might ſeem to be a Beaſt rather than a Bird, as it is called by Ariſtotle and Pliny, and others.

14 Which o leaveth her eggs in the earth p, and warmeth them in the duſt q, o i.e. Which Oſtrich; whoſe property this is noted to be by Naturaliſts. Or, But: for this unnatural quality is oppoſed to the goodlineſs of her wings or feathers. p In the place where ſhe lays them: where ſhe leaves them, either 1. from care leſt ſhe ſhould cruſh and break them if her vaſt body ſhould ſit upon them: or rather 2. from forgetfulneſs, or careleſneſs, or unnaturalneſs, or folly; to which it is manifeſtly aſcribed in the following Verſes. q Either 1. covering them with ſand that they may be warmed and hatched by that together with the heat of the Sun. But this is judged a fabulous report; for the Arabians, amongſt whom this Bird is moſt frequent and beſt known, affirm that ſuch Eggs do quickly periſh and putrifie. Or rather 2. expoſing them to the heat of the Sun, which being exceſſive in thoſe hot Countreys, doth and muſt needs quickly deſtroy or ſpoil them. And the Oſtrich is ſaid to warm them, becauſe her leaving them there is not only the occaſion, but in ſome ſort the cauſe of the Sun's warming them.

15 And forgetteth that the foot r may cruſh them, or that the wild beaſt may break them.

r To wit, of wild Beaſts (as it follows) paſſing that way.

16 She is hardned s againſt her young ones t, as though they were not hers u: her labour x is in vain without fear y;

s Or, He, i.e. God, hardens her. Or, ſhe hardneth herſelf. t i.e. Againſt her eggs, which he calls her young ones emphatically, to aggravate her fault and folly in deſtroying thoſe Eggs, which, if not neglected, would have been young ones. u As if they were laid by ſome other Bird. Or, that they may not be to her, i.e. that they may be utterly loſt and deſtroyed; or as if it were her deſign to deſtroy their very being. x To wit, in laying her Eggs is wholly loſt. y This may be added as a farther aggravation. She doth this, not becauſe ſhe is compelled to forſake her Eggs for fear of men or beaſts, but meerly out of an unnatural careleſneſs. Or, ſhe is without fear, or, for want of fear, to wit, of a provident fear and care about them.

17 Becauſe God hath deprived her of wiſdom, neither hath he imparted to her underſtanding z.

z Becauſe God hath not implanted in her that natural inſtinct and providence and affection which he hath put into other Birds and Beaſts towards their young. And yet no man preſumes to reproach me for making this difference in my Creatures. And as little reaſon haſt thou to blame me for afflicting thee, when others not ſo bad as thou for the preſent go unpuniſhed: becauſe I have no leſs authority over thee, than over them, and can diſpoſe of all my Creatures according to my good pleaſure. The great folly of this Bird is noted by Arabick Writers who beſt know her, and that not only for this property of forſaking her own Eggs, but alſo for other things, as that ſhe eats any thing which is offered to her, as Iron, Stones, Glaſs, hot Coals, &c. Whereas other Birds and Beaſts have ſo much ſagacity as to reject improper & unwholſom things; that being purſued by the hunter ſhe thinks herſelf ſafe and unſeen by hiding her head in the ſand: For which and other ſuch qualities it is a Proverb among the Arabians, More fooliſh than an Oſtrich.

18 What time ſhe lifteth up herſelf on high a, ſhe ſcorneth the horſe and his rider b.

a To flee from her purſuer: to which end ſhe lifteth up her head and body, and ſpreads her wings. b She deſpiſeth them in regard of her greater ſwiftneſs; for tho' ſhe cannot fly becauſe of her great bulk, being ſaid to be as big as a new-born Camel, yet by the aid of her wings ſhe runs ſo faſt that Horſemen cannot reach her, as both Greek and other Authors have noted.

19 Haſt thou given the horſe ſtrength c? haſt thou clothed his neck with thunder d?

c Either ſtrength of body: or rather courage and generous confidence, for which the Horſe is highly commended d i.e. With ſnorting and neighing; in the making of which ſound, the Neck, in regard of the Throat which is within it, and a part of it, is a principal inſtrument: which noiſe may not unfitly be called thunder, becauſe of the great vehemency and rage wherewith it is attended, and the great terrour which it cauſeth, eſpecially in War and Battel, of which ſee Jer. 8. 16. and compare 1 Sam. 12. 17, 18. where this very term of thundering is aſcribed to a far lower and leſs terrible noiſe. Nor is this (as ſome alledge) an improper Speech, becauſe this thunder or neighing is rather cloathed with the Neck, as being within it, than the Neck with it; for nothing is more common in Scripture than to ſay, that men are cloathed with righteouſneſs, humility, and other graces, which yet are, in ſtrictneſs of ſpeech, within the man, and not he within them. But becauſe this word, in this form, is not elſewhere extent, ſome render it otherwiſe, with a mane, with a thick, and full, and deep mane, as the Phraſe of being cloathed with it implies. For this is mention'd by all Writers of Horſes, as a notable mark of a generous Horſe; which therefore they conceive would not be omitted here, where ſo many ſeveral properties and excellencies are deſcribed. And the Verb Raam, whence this comes, in the Syriack Language, ſignifies not only to thunder, but alſo to be high, or lofty; which fitly agrees to the mane, which is in the higheſt part of the Horſe.

20 Canſt thou make him afraid as a graſhopper e? † Heb. terrors. the glory of his noſtrils f is † terrible.

e Which is eaſily affrighted and chaſed away by the leaſt noiſe of a Man. Or, as divers others renders this place, didſt thou make him to move like a graſhopper, ſkipping and leaping as he goes! So he deſcribes the poſture of a gallant and generous Horſe, who carvets and praunſeth, and as it were danceth as he walks. f That ſnoring, or ſound, and ſmoke which cometh out of his Noſtrils, eſpecially when he is intraged and ingaged in a Battle, which is another note of a generous Horſe, and ſtrikes a terrour into his Adverſary. Or, the vehemency, or majeſty, or magnificence of his ſnorting, or ſnoring, as this word is rendred, Jer. 8. 16.

|| Or, his feet dig. † Heb. the ornaw. 21 || He paweth g in the valley h, and rejoyceth in his ſtrength i: he goeth on to meet † the armed men k.

g Or, He diggeth. Through courage and wantonneſs he cannot ſtand ſtill, but is beating as it were, digging up the Earth with his feet. h This he adds, partly becauſe the ground being there more plain and ſmooth, he hath the better conveniency for his prauncing and pawing with his feet, which in hilly and uneven ground he cannot ſo well do, aud partly becauſe Battels uſe to be pitched in Valleys or low grounds, eſpecially Horſe Battels. i Making ſemblance of great pride and complacency in it. k With great readineſs and undaunted courage.

22 He mocketh at fear l, and is not affrighted: neither turneth he back from the ſword m.

l i. e. At all Inſtruments and objects of terrour, as fear is oft uſed, as Prov. 1. 26. & 10. 24. He deſpiſeth what other Creatures dread. m Or, becauſe of the ſword: or, for fear of the ſword, as this Phraſe is uſed, Iſa. 21. 15. & 31. 8. Jer. 14. 16. & 50. 16.

† Heb. the flame of the ſpear. 23 The quiver n ratleth againſt him, † the glittering ſpear and the ſhield o.

Or, although the Quiver, &c. So this comes in as an aggravation of his courage, notwithſtanding the juſt cauſes of fear which are mentioned in this Verſe. And the Quiver is here put for the Arrows contained in it by a Metonymy very uſual in this very caſe, and in all ſorts of Authors, which being ſhot againſt the Horſe and Rider, make this ratling noiſe here mentioned. o Or rather the Launce or Javelin. For that this was not a defenſive, but an offenſive weapon, ſeems plain both from this place where it is mentioned among ſuch, and as an object of fear, which the Shield is not, and from Joſ. 8. 18. 1 Sam. 17. 45. where it is ſo oft uſed.

24 He ſwalloweth the ground p with fierceneſs and rage: neither believeth he that it is the ſound of the trumpet q.

p The ſence is either, 1. he is ſo earneſt and eager upon the Battel, that he ruſheth into it with all ſpeed, and runs over the ground ſo ſwiftly, that he might ſeem to have ſwallowed it up. Or, 2. he is ſo full of warlike rage and fury, that he not only champs his Bridle, but is ready to tear and devour the very ground on which he goes. And the Phraſe here uſed, is not unuſual both in Arabick, and in other Authors: Of which ſee my Latine Synopſis on this place. q i. e. He is ſo pleaſed with the approach of the Battel, and the ſound of the Trumpet calling to it, that he could ſcarce believe his Ears for gladneſs. Compare Gen. 45. 26. Luke 24. 41. Or thus, He cannot ſtand ſtill, or firm (as this Verb and the Derivative from it is uſed, not only in the Chaldee and Syriack Dialect, but alſo in the Hebrew, as Deut. 28. 59, 1 Sam. 2. 35.) when the trumpet ſoundeth: His Rider can hardly keep him ſtill, but he ſtrives and longs to run to the Fight.

25 He ſaith among the trumpets, ha, ha n; and he ſmelleth s the battel afar off t, the thunder of the captains u, and the ſhouting.

r An Expreſſion of Joy and Alacrity, declared by his proud neighings, whereby he doth in ſome ſort anſwer the ſound of the Trumpets, in way of ſcorn and challenge. s i.e. He perceiveth, as this Phraſe is uſed, Judg. 16. 9. t At ſome diſtance, either of place, or rather of time, as the word is moſt frequently uſed. He perceives by the motion of the Soldiers, and the clattering of the Arms, that the Battel is at hand, which is very welcom to him. u By which he underſtands either the Military Orations which the Captains make and deliver with a loud voice, to animate their Soldiers to the Battel: or rather, the loud and joyful clamour begun by the Commanders, and followed by the Soldiers when they are ready to joyn Battel, that thereby they may both daunt their Enemies, and encourage themſelves.

26 Doth the hawk flie x by thy wiſdom y, and ſtretch her wings toward the ſouth z?

x In ſo ſingular a manner, ſo ſtrongly and ſteddily, ſo conſtantly and unweariedly, ſo ſwiftly and ſpeedily, ſo regularly and cunningly to catch her Prey. y Didſt thou inſpire her with that Wiſdom? z Which ſhe doth either, 1. when ſhe caſts her old Feathers, and gets new ones, which is furthered either by the warmth of Southerly Winds, or by the heat of the Sun, which was Southward from Job's Countrey, as it is from ours. Whence it is, that as wild Hawks do this by natural Inſtinct, ſo the places which Men build for the keeping of tame Hawks, are built towards the South. Or in, or towards Winter, when wild Hawks flie into warmer Countries, as being impatient of cold weather.

27 Doth the eagle mount up a † at thy command, and make her neſt on high b? † Heb. by thy mouth.

a Flies directly upward, till ſhee be out of thy ſight: which no other Bird can do. b In the higheſt and inacceſſible Rocks. Compare Jer. 49. 16. Obad. v. 4.

28 She dwelleth and abideth upon the rock, upon the crag of the rock c, and the ſtrong place.

c Which ſhe doth, partly for the ſecurity of herſelf and her Young: and partly that ſhe may thence have the better proſpect to diſcern her Prey, as it followeth.

29 From thence ſhe ſeeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off d.

d Her ſight is exceeding ſharp and ſtrong, ſo that ſhe is able to look upon the Sun with open Eyes, and to behold the ſmalleſt Prey upon the Earth or Sea, when ſhe is mounted out of our ſight; which when ſhe ſpies, ſhe flies to it, with incredible ſwiftneſs, even like an Arrow out of a Bow.

30 Her young ones alſo ſuck up blood e: and * where the ſlain are f, there is ſhe g. * Mat. 24. 28. Luk. 17. 37.

e Either of the Prey which the Eagle hath brought to her Neſt for them, or of that which themſelves catch and kill, being betimes innured to this work by their Dams. Naturaliſts note of the Eagle, that ſhe drinketh no Water, but Blood only. f Where any dead Carkaſſes are, yea, or are like to be: For natural Hiſtorians of the Eagles, that they can preſage or ſmell a Battel ſome days before it be fought. And although ſome Writers affirm, that there are divers Eagles who do not feed upon Carkaſſes, and will not meddle with them, yet that many Eagles do feed on them, is ſufficiently evident by the Teſtimony both of Scripture, as Mat. 24. 28. and of divers both ancient and later Writers. g To wit, in an inſtant, flying thither with admirable celerity.

CHAP. XL.

1 MOreover the LORD anſwered Job a, and ſaid, a Having made a little pauſe to try what Job could anſwer to his queſtions, and Job being it ſeems aſtoniſhed with God's Rebukes, or expecting what God would further ſay, continued ſilent.

2 † Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty, inſtruct him b? he that reproveth God c, let him anſwer it d. † Heb. to plead with the Almighty, is it to inſtruct?

b Shall Job, who preſumeth to contend with me in Judgment, and to diſpute the reaſonableneſs and equity of my proceedings, give me inſtructions or directions how to manage my own Affairs, and govern my Creatures? He juſtly mentions his Almightineſs, as a convincing Argument of his Juſtice. For how can he be unjuſt to his Creatures, who hath no obligation to them, and never did nor can receive any thing from them, and who hath an abſolute, ſovereign and uncontrollable Dominion over them, and who being infinitely and neceſſarily perfect, and all-ſufficient within himſelf, can neither have any inclination to Unrighteouſneſs, which is an imperfection, nor any temptation to it, from any need he hath of it to accompliſh his deſigns, which he can do by his own Omnipotence, or from aby advantage accruing to him by it? c That boldly cenſureth his ways or works; which thou haſt done. d Let him anſwer my former and further queſtions at his peril.

3 Then Job anſwered the LORD, and ſaid,

4 Behold, I am vile e, what ſhall I anſwer thee f? * I will lay my hand upon my mouth g.

e What am I, a mean and contemptible Creature, that I ſhould preſume to contend with my Maker and Judge? I confeſs my fault and folly. f I neither deſire nor am able to diſpute with thee. g I will for the future bridle my Tongue, and inſtead of conteſting with thee, do here humbly and willingly ſubmit myſelf to thee. * Pſal. 39. 9.

5 Once have I ſpoken, but I will not anſwer h: yea, twice i, but I will proceed no further k.

h Or, ſpeak again, anſwering being oft put for ſpeaking. I will con-contend no more with thee. i i.e. Oft-times, or again and again, the definite number being uſed indefinitely k In ſuch bold and preſumptuous Expreſſions and Accuſations of thy Providence towards me. Vain therefore are the Excuſes which ſome Interpreters make for Job, as if he were faultleſs in his fore-going Diſcourſes, when both God chargeth him with faultineſs therein, and Job himſelf confeſſeth it.

6 Then anſwered the LORD unto Job out of the whirlwind l, and ſaid, l Which was renewed when God renewed his charge upon Job, whom he intended to humble more throughly than yet he had done. Both this and the next Verſe are repeated out of Ch. 38. 1, 3. where they are explained.

* Chap. 38. 3. * Chap. 42. 4. 7 * Gird up thy loyns now like a man: I will *demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

* Pſal. 51. 4. Rom. 3. 4. 8 *Wilt thou alſo diſanul my judgment m? Wilt thou condemn me that thou mayeſt be righteous n?

m Every word is Emphatical, Wilt (Art thou reſolved upon it) thou thou Job, whom I took to be one of a better mind and temper; had it been a Stranger, or my Enemy, who had ſpoken thus of me, I could have born it, but I cannot bear it from thee) alſo (not only vindicate thyſelf, & thy own Integrity, but alſo accuſe me) diſanul (not only queſtion and diſpute, but even condemn, repeal and make void, as if it were ungrounded and unjuſt) my judgment? i. e. my Sentence againſt thee, and my Government and Adminiſtration of humane Affairs? n Wilt thou make me unrighteous, that thou mayeſt ſeem to be righteous?

9 Haſt thou an arm like God o? or canſt thou thunder with a voice like him p?

o Thou art infinitely ſhort of God in Power, and therefore in Juſtice; for all his perfections are equal and infinite. Injuſtice is much more likely to be in thee, an impotent Creature, than in the Almighty God; of which ſee the Notes on v. 2. p Therefore do not preſume to contend with him.

* Pſal. 104. 1. 10 * Deck thyſelf now with majeſty and excellency q, and aray thyſelf with glory and beauty.

q Seeing thou makeſt thyſelf equal, yea, ſuperior to me in Juſtice, and conſequently in Power and Majeſty, take to thyſelf thy great Power, come and ſit in my Throne, and diſplay thy divine Perfections in the ſight of the World. Theſe and the following are Ironical Expreſſions, to make Job more ſenſible of his diſtance from, and ſubjection to God.

11 Caſt abroad the rage of thy wrath r: and behold every one that is proud, and abaſe him s.

r Inflict heavy Judgments upon thine Enemies, the Chaldeans and Sabeans, and others who have injured or provoked thee. s Deſtroy him with an angry look, as I can do and delight to do with ſuch Perſons.

12 Look on every one that is proud, and bring him low: and tread down the wicked in their place t.

t Either, 1. Whereſoever they are. Or, 2. Where they are in their greateſt ſtrength and glory, and therefore are moſt ſecure and confident. Or, 3. Forthwith, upon the ſpot, that the quickneſs and immediateneſs of the ſtroke may diſcover that it comes from a Divine hand.

13 Hide them in the duſt together u, and bind their faces x in ſecret y.

u Kill everyone of them (as he ſaid, v. 12.) at one blow as I can do, and bring them all to their Graves, that they may ſleep in the duſt, and never offend thee, nor trouble others more. x i.e. Condemn or deſtroy them. He alludes to the manner of covering the faces of condemned Perſons, Eſth. 7. 8. and of dead men, Joh. 11 44. & 20. 7. See Job 9. 24. y Either in a ſecret place; bury them in their Graves: or, ſecretly, with a ſecret and inviſible ſtroke, that it may appear it comes from the hand of a God.

14 Then will I alſo confeſs unto thee, that thine own right hand can ſave thee z.

z i.e. That thou art mine equal, and mayeſt venture to contend with me. But ſince thou canſt do none of theſe things, it behoves thee to ſubmit to me, and to acquieſce in my dealings with thee.

‖ Or, the Elephant, as ſome think. 15 Behold now ‖ Behemoth a which I made with thee b; he eateth graſs as an ox c.

a That ſome particular Beaſt is deſigned by this word, is evident from v. 15. and from the peculiar Characters given to him, which are not common to all great Beaſts. But what it is, is matter of ſome diſpute among the Learned. The generality of them are agreed that this is the Elephant, and the following Leviathan the Whale; which being two of the goodlieſt and vaſteſt Creatures which God made, the one of the Land, the other of the Sea, and withal ſuch to whom the deſcription here given, for the moſt part manifeſtly agrees, and the like is preſumed concerning the reſt, may ſeem to be here intended. And the difficulty of reconciling ſome few paſſages to them, may ariſe either from our ignorance of them, or from the different nature and qualities of Creatures of the ſame general kind in divers Parts. But ſome late and very Learned Men, take the Leviathan to be the Crocodile, and the Behemoth to be a Creature called the Hippopotamus, which may ſeem fitly to be joyned with the Crocodile, both being very well known to Job and his Friends, as being frequent in the adjacent Parts, both Amphibious living and preying both in the Water and upon the Land, and both being Creatures of great bulk and ſtrength. I ſhall not undertake to determine the Controverſie, but ſhall ſhew how each part of the following deſcription is or may be applied to them ſeverally. And this being no point concerning Faith or a good Life, every one may take the more liberty to underſtand the place of one or other of them. b Either, 1. upon the Earth where thou art, whereas the Leviathan is in the Sea. Or, 2. as I made thee, for this Hebrew Particle is oft uſed as a note of compariſon, as Job 9. 26. Pſal. 143. 7. and elſewhere, in the ſame manner, and upon the ſame day. Whereby he may intimate, that being equally the Creator and Sovereign Lord both of Job, and of this Behemoth, he had equal right to diſpoſe of them in ſuch manner as he thought meet. Or, nigh (as this Particle oft ſignifies) unto thee, i.e. in a place not far from thee, to wit, in the River Nile, where the Hippopotamus, as well as the Crocodile, doth principally abide. But altho' thoſe Creatures were now in that River, yet they were made elſewhere, even where the firſt Man was made. c This is mentioned as a thing ſtrange and remarkable, as indeed it is, either, 1. of the Elephant, in which God hath wiſely and mercifully planted this diſpoſition, that he ſhould not prey upon other Creatures, which if he had, being ſo ſtrong and vaſt a Creature, he muſt needs have been very pernicious to them, but feed upon Graſs as an Ox doth. Or, 2. of the Hippopotamus; of whom Hiſtorians relate, that he comes out of the River upon the Land, to feed upon Corn, and Hay, or Graſs, as an Ox doth, to whom alſo he is not unlike in the form of his Head and Feet, and in the bigneſs of his Body, whence the Italians call him the Sea-Ox.

16 Lo now, his ſtrength is in his loins d, and his force is in the navel of his belly e.

d He hath ſtrength anſwerable to his bulk, but this ſtrength by God's wiſe and merciful Providence is not an offenſive ſtrength, conſiſting in, or put forth by horns or claws, as it is in ravenous Creatures, but only defenſive and ſeated in his Loins, as it is in other Creatures, whereby he is rendred more ſerviceable to men by the carrying of vaſt burthens. e Which tho' in the Elephant it be weaker than his loins, whence the Rhinoceros fighting with him, aims at that part, yet hath a more than ordinary ſtrength in it, as appears by the binding of the heavieſt burthens under and about it. This alſo agrees to the Hippopotamus in an eminent degree, whoſe whole ſkin is noted by ancient Writers to be harder than any other Creatures, and almoſt impenetrable.

17 ‖ He moveth his tail f like a cedar: the ſinews of his ſtones g are wrapt together. ‖ Or, he ſtands up.

f Which tho' it be but ſhort both in the Elephant and in the Hippopotamus, yet when it is erected, is exceeding ſtiff and ſtrong. But this may be underſtood, either 1. of his generative part, which is oft called by that or the like name, which the following Clauſe of the Verſe may ſeem to favour. Or, 2. of the Elephant's Trunk, which being ſo eminent and remarkable a part, would not probably be omitted in this deſcription, to which theſe words very fitly agree, becauſe of its admirable motion and ſtrength. Nor is it ſtrange that this is called his Tail, becauſe that word is oft uſed improperly for any end of a thing, as Iſa. 7 4. See alſo Deut. 25. 18. & 28. 13, 44. g This may be noted, becauſe the Elephants Teſticles do not hang down below the belly, as they do in other Beaſts, but are contained within his belly, where they are faſtened by Ligaments of extraordinary ſtrength. Or, the Sinews of the terrour thereof, to wit, of the Trunk laſt mentioned under the name of the Tail, i. e. its terrible Sinews are ſtrongly and ſtrangely wrapp'd together, that he can move it as he liſteth with wonderful dexterity and ſtrength. Or, the Sinews of his Thighs, as the latter word oft ſignifies in the Arabick Tongue, which is very near a-kin to the Hebrew. The Thighs and Feet of the Hippopotamus are noted to be ſo ſinewy and ſtrong, that one of them is able to break or overturn a Boat.

18 His bones h are as ſtrong pieces of braſs i, his bones are like bars of iron.

h Under which title are comprehended his Ribs (as the LXX. here render it,) and his teeth. i Exceeding hard and ſtrong, as they are in both theſe Creatures.

19 He is the chief of the ways of God k: he that made him, can make his ſword to approach unto him l.

k i. e. Of God's works, to wit, of that ſort, or among living and brute Creatures. This is eminently and unqueſtionably true of the Elephant, in regard of his vaſt bulk and ſtrength joyned with great activity, and eſpecially of his admirable ſagacity and aptneſs to learn, and of his ſingular uſefulneſs to Mankind, his Lord and Maſter, and God's Vicegerent in the World, and many other commendable qualities. And the Hippopotamus alſo is, in ſome ſort, as others note, the chief, or one of the chief of God's works, in regard of his great bulk, and ſtrength, and ſagacity, and the manner of his living both in the Water and upon the Land. But it muſt be granted, that the Elephant doth exceed the Hippotamus in many things. l Tho' he be ſo ſtrong and terrible, yet God can eaſily ſubdue and deſtroy him either immediately, or by arming other Creatures, as the Rhinoceros or Dragon, or Tiger againſt him. Or, he that made him, hath applied or given to him his Sword, or arms, to wit, his Trunk, which may not unfitly be called his Sword, becauſe thereby he doth both defend himſelf, and offend his enemies. And this Trunk of his being ing a thing very observable and admirable in him, and therefore not likely to be neglected in his description, if it were not intended by his Tail, v. 17. may seem to be designed in these words.

20 Surely the mountains bring him forth food m: where all the beasts of the field play n.

m Tho' this Creature be vastly great, and require much food, and no Man careth for it, yet God provides for it out of his own stores, and makes even desert Mountains to afford him sufficient sustenance. The Hippopotamus also, tho' he live most in the Water, fetched his food from the Land, and from the Mountains or Hills, which are nigh unto the River Nile. n They not only feed securely, but sport themselves by him or with him, being taught by experience that he is gentle and harmless, and never preys upon them.

21 He lieth under the shady trees, in the covert of the reeds and fens p.

o The Elephant lies down to rest himself: and it is but fabulous which some Writers affirm, that they have no joynts in their Legs, and so cannot lye down, but sleep or rest themselves standing or leaning against a Tree. Which is denied and confuted by Aristotle in his History of Living Creatures, 2 4. and by later Writers. p For the Eliphant being a Creature naturally hot, and living generally in hot Countries, diligently seeks for and delights in shady and waterish places, as is noted by Aristotle, and after him by Pliny and Ælian.

22 The shady trees cover him with their shadow, the willows of the brook q compass him about.

q Or, of Nilus, of which this word is oft used in Scripture. And this seems to be the chief argument by which the learned Bochart proves this to be meant of the Hippopotamus, whose constant residence is in or near the River of Nilus, or the Willows that grow by it. But it is well alledged by our learned and judicious Caryl, that this word Naal is never used to express Nilus when it is put by itself, as here it is, but only where the word Egypt is added to it, as it is in all the places which Bochart produceth. And this very Phrase, the Willows of the Brook, is used of other Brooks or Rivers besides Nilus, as Lev. 23.40. Comp. Isa. 15.7.

23 Behold, † he drinketh up r a river s and hasteth not t: he trusteth that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth u.

r Or, He snatcheth, or draweth, or drinketh up as it were with force and violence, as the word signifies. s i.e. A great quantity of water hyperbolically called a River, as it is Ps. 78.16. & 105. 41. This may be fitly applied to the Elephant, which because of its great bulk and vehement thirst, drinks a great deal of Water at one draught, as Naturalists and Historians have observed. t He drinks not with fear and caution and sparingly, as the Dogs do at Nilus for fear of the Crocodile; but such is his courage and self-confidence, that he fears no enemy either by Water or by Land, but drinketh securely and liberally. u He drinks as if he designed, or hoped, or desired to drink up the whole River. He mentions Jordan, either as a River well known in and nigh unto Job's Land; or because possibly there were many Elephants which used to drink at it; or as a River in some parts of it, but small, which therefore might give more colour to the Hyperbole, and to the Elephants fancy or expectation, than a vaster River, such as Euphrates, would have done. Bochart expounds this also of the Hippopotamus, which, tho' he cannot swim, and may be drowned, as Naturalists report, yet will continue securely under Water at the bottom of Nilus for some days together, and he renders the Verse thus, Behold, if a River oppress or cover him, he fears not, he is confident or secure, though Jordan (which is here put for any River) should break forth or over-flow above his mouth, i. e. should overwhelm him. But the judgment of this, I leave to the Reader.

‖ Or, will any take him in his sight? or bore his nose with a gin?

24 ‖ He taketh it with his eyes: his nose pierceth through snares x.

x According to this Translation, the sence is this, He taketh, or snatcheth, or draweth up (as was now said, v. 23.) it (to wit, the River Jordan) with his Eyes, i. e. when he sees it, he trusteth that he can drink it all up; as we use to say, The Eye is bigger than the Belly, his Nose or Snout pierceth, &c. i. e. He securely thrusteth his Snout into the River, even to the bottom of it, to stir up the mud, because he delights to drink muddy Water, and if there be any Snares laid for other Creatures, he breaks them to pieces. But this Verse is otherwise translated by others, Will or Can any man take him in his Eyes? i.e. openly, and by manifest force? Surely no. His force and strength is too great for Man to resist or overcome; and therefore Men are forced to use many wiles and engines to catch him; which is true both of the Elephant and of the Hippopotamus) Or pierce his Nose with Snares or Gins? No. He may be taken by art and cunning, but not by violence.

CHAP. XLI.

‖ That is, a Whale, or a Whirlpool.

† Heb. which thou drownest.

1 CAnst thou draw out ‖ Leviathan with an hook? or his tongue with a cord † which thou letteſt down a?

a Canst thou take him with a Hook and a Line, as Anglers take ordinary Fishes? Surely no. Quest. What is this Leviathan? Ans. This is granted on all hands, that it is a great and terrible Monster living in the Sea or Rivers, as Behemoth is a Land-Monster. It is the general and received Opinion that it is the Whale which is unquestionably called the Leviathan, Ps. 104.25, 26. which having been discovered in the Seas next bordering upon Arabia, probably was not unknown to Job, who was a very inquisitive Person, and well studied in the works of God, as this Book manifests. But some later and very learned Interpreters conceive that it is the Crocodile; which was very well known in Egypt, and all the Parts adjacent to it. And this is evident, that the Hebrew word Thannin (which is parallel to this word Leviathan, these two words being synonymous, & the one promiscuously used for the other, as appears from Psal. 74.13, 14. Isa. 27.1. Ezek. 32.2.) is used of the Crocodile, Ezek. 29.3,4. & 32.2,3. But I shall not positively determine this Controversie, but only shew how far the Text may be understood of both of them, and then submit it to the Readers Judgment, this being a matter of no great moment, wherein Christians may vary without any hazard. Only this I will say, That whatever becomes of the Behemoth of the former Chapter, whether that be the Elephant, or the Hippopotamus, that doth not at all determine the sence of this Leviathan, but leaves it indifferently to the Whale or the Crocodile, as the context shall determine, which I confess seems to me to favour the latter more than the former. To which may be added, that it seems more probable that God would speak of such Creatures as were very well known to Job and his Friends, as the Crocodile was, than of such as it is very uncertain whether they were known in those Parts, and in Job's time. This Verse, noting either the impossibility, or rather the great and terrible difficulty, of taking this Monster with his Hook or Line, or such like instruments, may agree to either of them. For the Whale there is no doubt; nor much doubt as to the Crocodile, the taking whereof was generally esteemed by the Ancients to be very difficult and perillous; whatsoever peculiar vertue or power from Nature or Art the Tentyritæ had against them, as the Psylli were said to have against Serpents. Some indeed object, that the last Clause cannot agree to the Crocodile, because that hath no Tongue, as is affirmed by Aristotle, Pliny, and other ancient Authors. But that is a mistake, and the ground of it is plain, because their Tongues are but small in proportion to their vast Bodies, and withal fastned to their under Jaws, as the self-same Authors note. And that the Crocodile hath a Tongue, is positively affirmed by the said ancient Authors, and by the Hebrew Writers, and by the Arabians, to whom this Creature was best known, and by later Authors.

2 Canst thou put an hook b into his nose c? or bore his jaw through with a thorn d.

b Heb. a Bulrush, i.e. an Hook like a Bulrush with its head hanging down, as is expressed, Isa. 58.5. c To hang him up by it for Sale, or to carry him home for use, after thou hast drawn him out of the Sea or River, of which he spake in the former Verse. d Or, with an Iron-Hook or Instrument as sharp as a Thorn, wherewith thou usest to carry little Fishes.

3 Will he make many supplications unto thee? will he speak soft words unto thee e?

e Doth he dread thine anger or power? or will he humbly and earnestly beg thy favour, that thou wouldest spare him, and not pursue him, or release him out of Prison? It is a Metaphor from men in distress and misery, who use these means to them to whose power they are subject.

4 Will he make a covenant with thee f? wilt thou take him for a servant for ever?

f To wit, to do thee faithful service, as the next words explain it. Canst thou bring him into bondage, and force him to serve thee?

5 Wilt thou play with him as with a bird g? or wilt thou bind him for thy maidens h?

g As Children play with little Birds kept in Cages, or tied with strings; which they do at their pleasure, and without any fear h? For thy little Daughters; which he mentions rather than little Sons, because such are most subject to fear.

6 Shall the companions i make a banquet of him k? shall they part him among the merchants l?

i Thy Friends or Assistants in the taking of him. k i.e. Feed upon him. Or, for him, i. e. for joy that thou hast taken him. l As is usual in such cases, that all who are Partners in the labour and hazard, may partake of the profit also, and divide the spoil.

7 Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons, or his head with fish-spears m?

m This may be understood either, 1. of the Whale. And whereas it is objected, that the Whales at this day are taken in this manner, and therefore this cannot be understood of them, it may be replied, both that this art and way of taking Whales is a late Invention, and was not known in Job's time, and that he doth not speak of the absolute impossibility, but of the great difficulty of taking them. Or, 2. of the Crocodile, whose skin is so hard that an Iron or Spear will not pierce it, as we shall see hereafter.

8 Lay thine hand upon him n, remember the battel o, do no more.

n Either, 1. in a familiar and friendly manner, that thou mayest catch him by deceit, when thou canst not do it by force. Or rather, 2. in way of Hostility, seize upon him, and take him by a strong hand, if thou dare st do so. o But e'er thou do attempt that, consider what thou art doing, and how hazardous thy enterprize is, and with whom, and with what disadvantage thou art going to fight, and as it follows, do no more, proceed no further, draw back thy hand, and be thankful for so great a deliverance.

Or

Or the Verſe may be rendred thus. If (which Particle is oft underſtood) thou offereſt or attempteſt to lay violent hands on him, thou wilt have cauſe to remember (the Imparative being put for the Future, which is frequent in the Hebrew Language) the battel, and thou wilt do ſo no more; If thou doeſt eſcape, thou wilt never forget thy danger, nor attempt any thing of like nature for the time to come.

9 Behold, the hope of him p is in vain: ſhall not q one be caſt down, even at the ſight of him r?

p Either, 1. of the Fiſh, i. e. the hope of taking or conquering him. Or rather, 2. of the Man who laid hands upon him, as hoping to take him by force, but in vain. q The prefix He being put for Halo, as as it is oft-times in the Hebrew Text, as *Gen.*27. 36. 1 *Sam.*2.28. *Jer.*3.6. & 31.20. *Ezek.*20.30. r Not only the ſight, but the very ſight of him is moſt frightful. Such is the ſight of the Whale to Mariners, who fear the overturning of their Veſſel. And ſuch is the ſight of the Crocodile, by which alone ſome have been affrighted out of their wits.

10 None is ſo fierce that dare ſtir him up: who then is able to ſtand before me t?

s When he ſleepeth or is quiet. None dare provoke him to the Battel. t To contend with me his Creator, as thou Job doſt, when one of Creatures is too hard for him.

* Rom. 11. 35. Pſal. 24. 1. & 50. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 26.

11 *Who hath prevented me u, that I ſhould repay him x? whatſoever is under the whole heaven, is mine y.

u To wit, with offices or ſervice done for me, by which he hath laid the firſt obligation upon me, for which I am indebted to him. Who can be before-hand with me in kindneſſes, ſince not only the Leviathan, but all Men, and (as it follows) all things under Heaven, are mine, made by my hand, and enriched with all their endowments by my favour, without which, O Job, thou wouldſt not have had either reaſon or ſpeech to uſe ſo perverſly to reproach my Providence? Having now ſaid, and largely proved, that Man could not contend with God in power, he now adds, that he cannot do it in juſtice, becauſe God oweth him nothing, nor is any way obliged to him. Which having briefly hinted, to prevent an objection, he returns to his former argument, the deſcription of the Leviathan. u That I ſhould be engaged to requite his favours. y Created by my power and favour, and wholly in my poſſeſſion, and at my diſpoſal, and therefore cannot poſſibly prevent me, as was now ſaid.

† Heb. bars. Chap. 18. 13.

12 I will not conceal z his † parts a, nor his power, nor his comely proportion b.

z i. e. I will particularly ſpeak of them. Here is a Meioſis, as there is, Chap. 14. 11. & 15. 18. and oft elſewhere. a Heb. his bars, i. e. the Members of his Body, which are ſtrong, like bars of Iron. b Which is more amiable and admirable in ſo vaſt a bulk.

‖ Or, within.

13 Who can diſcover c the face of his garment d? or who can come to him with his double bridle e?

c Or, uncover, or take off from him. d The upper or outward part of his garment, or, the garment itſelf, the word face being oft redundant, as *Gen.*1.2. & 23.3. and oft elſewhere. And by the garment is meant the skin, which covers the whole Body, and may be taken off from the Body like a garment. Who dare attempt to touch his very outward ſkin? much leſs dare any venture to approach to him, to give him a deep or deadly wound. e To put it into his mouth, and lead him by it to thy Stable and Service, as thou doſt by an Horſe. Or rather, (becauſe he plainly ſeems to perſiſt in deſcribing the ſeveral parts of his Body; of which he ſpeaks both in the fore-going and following word,) Who can come within his double Bridle? to wit, his vaſt Jaws, which have ſome reſemblance to a double Bridle; whence the Greeks call thoſe parts of the face which reach to the Jaws on both ſides, the Bridles.

14. Who can open the doors of his face f? his teeth are terrible round about g.

f To wit, his Mouth. If it be open, none dare enter within it, as he now ſaid; and here he adds, that if it be ſhut, none dare open it. g This is true of ſome kinds of Whales, though others are ſaid to have either none or no terible teeth: but it is more eminently and unqueſtionably true of the Crocodile, of which this very thing is obſerved by all Authors who write of it.

† Heb. ſtrong pieces of Shield

15. His † ſcales are his pride h, ſhut up together as with a cloſe ſeal i.

h He prides and pleaſeth himſelf in his ſtrong and mighty ſcales. Heb. his ſtrong ſhields (i. e. ſcales) are his pride. Or (as other both ancient and modern Interpreters render it) His body (or, His back, as this word is uſed, Iſa. 38. 17. which, if meant of the Crocodile, is emphatical, becauſe his ſcales and ſtrength is in his Back, whereas his Belly is very ſoft and eaſily pierced,) is the ſtrength of ſhields, i. e. fortified with ſcales ſtrong as Shields. This is meant either, 1. of the Whale, whole ſkin, though it be ſmooth an intire and without ſcales, may be ſaid to be, as (which Particle is oft underſtood) ſtrong ſhields, becauſe it is, as Galen reports, exceeding hard and ſtrong, and almoſt impenetrable and like a Shield, eſpecially then when Shields were made of Leather; and ſo it is not only on the back, as in the Crocodile, but alſo in the belly all over. Or, 2. of the Crocodile, which hath ſcales properly ſo called, and thoſe moſt truly ſuch as are here deſcribed, as all Authors and Eye-witneſſes conſent. p Cloſely compacted together, as things that are faſtned together by a Seal.

16. One is ſo near to another k, that no air can come between them.

k Which plainly ſhews that the Shields or Scales are ſeveral; which agrees better to the Crocodile, than to the Whale, whoſe ſkin is all of one entire piece, unleſs there were a ſort of Whales having thick and ſtrong Scales; which ſome have affirmed, but is not yet known and proved.

17 They are joined one to another, they ſtick together, that they cannot be ſundred l.

l It is exceeding difficult and almoſt impoſſible by any power of art to ſever them one from anoher.

18. By his neeſing m a light doth ſhine, and his eyes are like the eye-lids of the morning n.

n Which may be underſtood, either, 1. of any commotion or agitation of the body like that which is in neeſing, as when the Whale ſtirreth himſelf, and caſteth or ſhooteth up great ſpouts of water into the Air by the Pipes which God hath planted in his head for this uſe; which water being thin and tranſparent and illuminated by the Sun-beams caſts forth a ſhining light. Or, 2. of neeſing properly ſo called, which the Crocodile is ſaid frequently to do, becauſe it commonly turneth its eyes to the Sun as Strabo, and others note; which when a Man doth he is apt to neeze. n To which they ſeem very fitly compared, becauſe the Eyes both of the Whale and Crocodile are dull and dark under the water, but as ſoon as they appear above water, they caſt forth immediately a bright and clear light, though not like that of the Sun at noon day, which had been too great an Hyperbole, yet like the Morning light ſuddenly breaking forth after the dark Night.

19 Out of his mouth go burning Lamps o, and ſparks of fire leap out.

o i. e. His breathings and blowings are very hot, or flaming, as the following Verſes explain this. This alſo may ſeem better to agree to the Crocodile, which breaths (as Ariſtotle affirms) like the Hippopotamus, of which ancient Authors affirm, that his Noſtrils are very large, and he breaths forth a fiery ſmoak like that of a Furnace, than to the Whale, which rather caſts forth ſtreams of water, as was noted before, than flames of Fire, there being no ſuch great heat obſerved in Whales, nor as far as I know, in other fiſhes.

20 Out of his noſtrils goeth ſmoak, as out of a ſeething pot or caldron p.

p Heb. Pool. So a great Caldron is called, becauſe it ſends forth a great ſmoak as a Pool doth vapours; as in like manner the great brazen Lavour in the Temple is called a Sea, for the great quantity of water which it held.

† Heb. Soul.

21 His † breath kindleth Coals q, and a flame goeth out of his mouth.

q An Hyperbolical Expreſſion, noting only extraordinary heat.

† Heb. ſorrow rejoyceth.

22 In his neck remaineth ſtrength r, and † ſorrow is turned into joy before him s.

r His Neck is exceeding ſtrong. This is meant either, 1. Of the Whale, who though he hath no Neck no more than other Fiſhes have, yet he hath a part in ſome ſort anſwerable to it, where the Head and Body are joined together. Or, 2. Of the Crocodile, whom Ariſtotle (who made it his buſineſs to ſearch out the ſeveral Natures and Parts of all living Creatures, and had all the helps and advantages which he deſired to find them out,) and Scaliger, and others, affirm to have a Neck, though ſome deny it. s i. e. The approach of any Enemy, which uſually cauſeth fear and ſorrow in others, fills him with joy, as being deſirous of nothing more than fighting. Or, ſorrow rejoyceth, or danceth, or triumpheth, &c. i. e. is prevalent and victorious, and quickly invades and conquers all thoſe Men, or other Creatures, which are in his way. Sorrow is his Companion, or Harbenger, which attends upon him whereſoever he goes. This may be a Poetical Expreſſion, like that of the Poets, when they bring in Anger and Fear going along with or before Mars into the Battle.

† Heb. the flakes of his flesh.

23 † The flakes t of his fleſh u are joined together: they are firm in themſelves, they cannot x be moved y.

t Or, Parts, which ſtick out, or hang looſe, and are ready to fall from other Fiſhes, or Creatures. u The word Fiſh is uſed of Fiſhes alſo, as *Lev.*11.11. 1 *Cor.*15.39. x Without difficulty. y To wit, out of their place, or from other Members of the Body.

24 His heart z is as firm as a ſtone, yea, as hard as a piece of the nether mill-ſtone a.

z Either, 1. That part of the Body is moſt firm, and hard, and ſtrong. Or, 2. His courage is invincible, he is void of fear for himſelf, and of compaſſion to others, which is oft called hardneſs of heart. a Which being to bear the weight of the upper, ought to be the harder and ſtronger of the two.

25 When he raiſeth up himſelf b, the Mighty c are afraid:

afraid: by reason of breakings d they purifie themselves e.

b Shewing himself upon the top of the Waters. Or, because of the Height or Greatness, or Majesty, for he is represented as a King, 7. 34. c Even the stout-hearted Mariners or Passengers, who use to be above fear. d Either 1. Of the Sea, caused by his motion, which dasheth the Waves in pieces one against another. Or rather 2. Of their Mind and State: by reason of their great danger and distress; which is expressed by this very word, *Psal.*60.2. Jonah 2.4. e Either 1. Naturally; that being the usual effect of great terrour. See *Ezek.*7.17. Or rather 2. Morally, as this word generally used. Those Mariners who ordinarily live in a gross and general neglect of God, and of Religion, are so affrighted with this eminent danger, that they cry unto God in their trouble, as is said in like case, *Psal.*107.28. and endeavouring to purge their Consciences from the guilt of their sins, by confessing and seemingly forsaking of them, and to make their Peace with God, and obtain his favour and help, by their Vows, and Promises, and Prayers.

‖ Or, Breast-plate.

26 The Sword of him that layeth at him f cannot hold g: the spear, the dart, nor the ‖ harbergeon h.

f That approacheth to him, and dare strike at him. g Heb. cannot stand, i. e. either 1. Cannot endure the stroke, but will be broken by it. Or rather 2. Cannot abide or take hold of him, or be fixed to him; but is instantly beaten back by the excessive hardness of their skin, which cannot be pierced by it, as may be gathered from this and other passages before and after it. This also seems better to agree to the Crocodile, whose skin no Sword, nor Dart, nor Musquet-Bullet, (as others add) can pierce, than to the Whale, whose skin is easily pierced, as Experience sheweth in our Whales; except the Whale here spoken of were of another kind; which is not impossible. h Or, Breast-plate. As offensive Weapons cannot hurt him, so defensive Weapons cannot secure a Man from him. But Men that go upon the design of taking either Whales or Crocodiles, do not use to fortifie themselves in that manner. Some therefore take this to be another offensive Weapon, a kind of Dart, as this word signifies in the Arabick Language; which is but a Dialect of the Hebrew, and from which the true signification of many Hebrew words must be gathered.

27 He esteemeth iron as straw i, and brass as rotten wood.

i He neither fears nor feels the blows of the one more than of the other.

28 The arrow k cannot make him flee: slingstones l are turned with him into stubble m.

k Heb. the son of the bow: as it is elsewhere called the son of the quiver, Lam. 3. 13. the Quiver being as it were the Mother or Womb that bears it, and the Bow as the Father that begets it or sendeth it forth. l Great stones that cast out of Slings; which have a great force and efficacy: of which see on 2 *Chron.*26.14. m Hurt him no more than a blow with a little stubble.

29 Darts are counted as stubble: he laugheth at the shaking of a spear n.

n So far is he from fearing it, and fleeing from it, that he scorns and defies it.

† Heb. sharp pieces of the Pot-sheard.

30 † Sharp stones are under him: he spreadeth sharp-pointed things upon the mire o.

o According to this Translation the sense is, His skin is so hard and impenetrable that the sharpest stones are as ease to him as the mire, and make no more impression upon him. But the words are and may be otherwise rendred as continuing the former sense, They (to wit, the Arrows, Darts or Stones cast at him) are, or fall under him, like (which Particle is oft understood) sharp shreads, or fragments of stones, he spreadeth sharp pointed things (to wit, the pieces of Swords or Darts which were flung at him and broken upon him) upon the mire. The fragments of broken weapons lie as thick at the bottom of the Water in the place of the fight, as little stones do in the mire, or as they do in a Field after some fierce and furious Battle. Or thus, with him (or for him, i. e. For his defence) or sharp stones, he spreadeth himself like an harrow, or threshing instrument (which is filled or fortified with Iron) in the mire or mud in the bottom of the Water: So he doth not describe his resting-place, but rather his Back, which he not unfitly compares to sharp stones or threshing Instruments, because the Darts or Stones cast at him pierce no more into him, than they would do into them if they were thrown at them.

31 He maketh the deep p to boil like a pot q: he maketh the sea r like a pot of ointment s.

p The deep Waters, or the Sea, which is called the deep, Psal. 107.14. Jonah 2.3. as it is explained in the next Clause. q To swell, and foam, and froth by his strong and vehement motion, as any Liquor doth when it is boiled in a pot. r Either the great Sea, the proper place of the Whale, Psal. 104.25. or the great River Nilus, which is called a Sea, both in Scripture, as *Isa.*11. 15. and in other Authors (of which see my Latin Synopsis) as Euphrates is called the Sea of Babylon, Isa.21.1. Jer.51.36. or Lakes or Pools, which are most frequently called Seas both in the Old and New Testament, as every one knows. And in such Lakes the Crocodiles are no less than in Nilus, as it is attested by Herodotus, and Strabo, and others. s This Clause seems to be added very emphatically to intimate that this Leviathan causeth not only a vehement commotion, but also a great fragancy in the Sea of Waters where it is. Which, though it was not observed by the Ancients, yet is unanimously affirmed by later Authors upon their own knowledge and experience, that it casts a perfume like Musk; of which see the Names and Words of the Authors in my Latin Synopsis.

32 He maketh a path to shine after him; one would think the deep to be hoary t.

t When he raiseth himself to the top of the Waters, he doth as it were plow it up and make large furrows, and causeth a white froth or foam upon the Waters.

‖ Or, who behave themselves without fear.

33 Upon earth u there is not his like: ‖ who is made without fear x.

u Either, 1. strictly so called as it is distinguished from the Sea or Rivers. There is no Land-creature comparable to him for strength and courage. Or 2. largely taken. No Creature equals him in all points. Or, upon the dust, as the word properly signifies, i. e. Among all things that creep in the dust, among which this may in some sort be numbred for the shortness of its feet. But this were no great honour to it to be the chief of creeping things; and therefore the former Translation seems more proper for the present design of magnifying this Creature above all others. x Fears no enemy as being full of courage and sensible of his own invincible strength. Or, so as he cannot be bruised or broken, by reason of his prodigious hardness, of which I have spoken before.

34 He beholdeth all high things y: he is a king over all the children of pride.

y He doth not turn his back upon nor hide his face from the highest or proudest Creatures, but looks upon them with a bold and undaunted countenance, as being without any fear of them, as was now said. z He carries himself with Princely Majesty and courage towards the stoutest and loftiest Creatures; which, though of far higher stature than himself, he striketh down with one stroke of his Tail, as he commonly doth Cows, and Horses, and sometimes Elephants.

CHAP. XLII.

1 THen Job answered the LORD, and said,

2 I know that thou canst do a every thing b, and that ‖ no thought can be withholden from thee c.

‖ Or, no thought of thine can be hindred.

a Not only by power, but also by (for that he always thought) right; about which he had in some sort doubted and disputed. It is a Maxim in Law, that a Man can only do that which he hath a right to do. b Whatsoever it pleaseth thee to do with thy Creatures. c He speaks either, 1. Of Job's thoughts. Thou knowest me and all my sinful and unworthy thoughts of thy providential dealings with me, though I was not able to see the evil of them. Or 2. Of God's thoughts. Whatsoever thou thinkest or purposest to do, thou canst or mayest do it; and neither I nor any of thy Creatures can either restrain thee from it, or condemn thee for it, as I have boldly and wickedly presumed to do. So this last Clause of the Verse explains the former.

3 * Who is he d that hideth counsel without knowledge e? therefore f have I uttered that I understood not, * things too wonderful for me, which I knew not g.

* Chap.38.2. * Psal.40.5. & 139. 2.

d i. e. What am I that I should dare to do so? Ah silly audacious wretch that I am, that I should be guilty of such madness! e Which words are prepared out of Chap.38.2. where they are explained. f Because my mind was without knowledge, therefore my speech was ignorant and foolish. Or, Being sensible of my ignorance and rashness, I think fit to make this humble and ingenious confession. g I have spoken foolishly and unadvisedly of things far above my reach, even of God's infinite and sovereign Majesty and of his deep and unsearchable Counsels and Providence.

4 Hear, I beseech thee, and I will speak h: I will demand of thee, i and declare thou unto me.

h Hear and except my humble and penitent confession and recantation. i Or, and enquire, to wit, counsel or instruction as a Scholar doth of his Master, as the following words note. I will no more sawcily dispute the matter with thee, but beg information from thee. The words which God hath uttered to Job by way of challenge, Chap.38.3. & 40.7. Job returns to him again in way of submission.

5 I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee k.

k The knowledge which I had of thy Divine nature, and perfections and counsels was hitherto dark, and doubtful, and conjectural, being grounded chiefly, if not only upon the instructions and reports of other men, but now it is clear and certain, as being immediately inspired into my mind by this thy glorious Apparition and Revelation, and by the Operation of thy Holy Spirit; which makes these things as certain and evident to me as if I saw them with my bodily eyes.

6 Wherefore I abhor l my self m, and repent in dust and ashes n.

l i. e. Dislike, and detest, and loath. m Or, my former words and and carriages. One of these or some like supplement is necessary to compleat the sense, and is clearly gathered from the following words. n Sitting in dust and ashes; which hitherto I have done in token of my grief for my affliction, but now I desire and resolve to do in Testimony of my patience for my sins.

7 And it was so that after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite o, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends p, for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath q.

o As the Eldest of the three, and because he spoke first and by his evil example led the rest into the same mistakes and miscarriages. p To wit, Bildad and Zophar, who are not excused but severely reproved, although they were drawn into the sin by Eliphaz his authority and influence. Elihu is not here reproved, because he dealt more justly and mercifully with Job, and did not condemn his Person, but only rebuke his sinful expressions. q Either, 1. as Job hath now spoken: you have not acknowledged your errours as he hath done. Or rather, 2. as Job did in his discourses with you. Which is not to be understood simply and absolutely (as is manifest from God's censure upon Job for his hard and evil speeches of him) but comparatively; because Job was not so much to be blamed as they, partly because his opinion concerning the methods of God's Providence, and the indifferency, and promiscuousness of its dispensations towards good and bad men was truer than theirs, which was that God did generally reward good men and punish sinners in this Life: partly because their misbelief of God's counsels and dealings with men was attended with horrid uncharitableness and cruelty towards Job, whom they wounded with bitter and injurious speeches, and condemned as an Hypocrite, not only without sufficient evidence as not being able to search his Heart, but upon false and frivilous grounds, to wit, his sore Afflictions, and against many evidences of Piety which Job had given: and partly because Job's heavy pressures might easily cloud and darken his mind and draw forth his impatience and passionate speeches; which although it did not wholly excuse Job, yet did certainly much extenuate his offences: whereas they were under no such temptations or provocations either from God or from Job, but voluntarily broke forth into their hard, and severe, and untrue expressions concerning God's counsels and Job's conditions, thereby adding affliction to him whom God did so sorely afflict, which was most unfriendly and inhumane.

8 Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks, and seven rams, and go to my servant Job r, and offer up s for your selves a burnt-offering, and my servant Job shall pray for you, for † him will I accept t: lest I deal with you after your folly u, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

† Heb. his face, or, person.

r When though you have censured and condemned as an Hypocrite I own for my faithful Servant, humane infirmity excepted. s By the hand of Job, whom I do hereby constitute your Priest to pray and Sacrifice for you. t To wit, on your behalf as well as on his own. u Lest my wrath and judgment take hold of you for your false and foolish speeches.

9 So Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite went, and did according as the Lord commanded them x: the LORD also accepted † Job y.

† Heb. the face of Job.

x Shewing their repentance by their submission to God, and to Job for God's sake, and by taking shame to themselves. y Both for his Friends and for himself, as the next Verse explains it.

10 And the LORD turned the Captivity of Job z when he prayed for his friends a: also b the LORD † gave Job twice as much as he had before.

† He added all that had been to Job unto the double.

z i. e. Brought him out of that state of Bondage, in which he had been so long held by Satan and by his own Spirit, and out of all his distresses and miseries. Or, returned Job's Captivity, i. e. the Persons and things which had been taken from him, not the same which he had lost, but other equivalent to them, and that with advantage. a Whereby he manifested his obedience to God and his true love and charity to them, in being so ready to forgive them and heartily to pray for them; for which God would not let him lose his reward. b An emphatical Particle. He not only gave him as much as he lost, but double to it.

11 Then c came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters d, and all they that had been his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him e in his house: and they bemoaned him f, and comforted him over all the evil g that the LORD had brought upon him: every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an ear-ring of gold h.

c When Job had humbled himself, and God was reconciled to Job, he quickly turned the Hearts of his Friends to favour him, according to Prov. 17.7. as during his impenitency, and for his trial and humiliation he had alienated their hearts from him, of which Job sadly complains. d Largely so called according to the Scripture-use of these Titles, to wit, his kindred distinguished from his other acquaintance. e i. e. Feasted with him, as that phrase is commonly used in Scripture, to congratulate with him for God's great and glorious favour already vouchsafed to him in so eminent a Vision and Revelation. f They declared the sense which they had of his calamities whilst they were upon him, although they had hitherto wanted opportunity to express it. g Or, concerning all the evil; which though it was bitter to endure when it was present, yet the remembrance of it revived in him by the discourses of his Friends was very delightful, as is usual in such cases. h Partly to make up his former losses, and partly as a Testimony of their honourable-respect to him.

12 So the LORD blessed i the latter end of Job more then his beginning: for he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses.

i Not only with Spiritual, but also with Temporal and Earthly Blessings.

13 He had also seven sons and three daughters.

14 And he called k the name of the first, Jemima, and the name of the second, Kezia, and the name of the third, Keren-happuch.

k Giving them such Names as signifie their excellent beauty of which see my Latin Synopsis.

15 And in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job: and their father gave them l inheritance among their brethren.

l Gave his Daughters a share, and possibly an equal share with his Sons in his Inheritance: which in so plentiful an estate he might easily do, especially to such amiable Sisters without the envy of their Brethren: and which peradventure he did to oblige them to settle themselves among their Brethren, and to marry into their own Religious Kindred, not to Strangers. who in those times were generally swallowed up in the gulf of Idolatry.

16 After this lived Job an hundred and forty years, and saw his sons, and his sons sons, even four generations.

17 So Job m died being old, and full of days n.

m After God had turned his Captivity, as is said, v. 10. n By which length of his days it seems most probable that he lived before the times of Moses when the days of humane life were much shortned, as he complains.

PSALMS.

The ARGUMENT.

THE divine Authority of this book of Pſalms is ſo certain and evident, that it was never queſtioned in the Church: Which being fixed, it is of ſmall moment that the Pen-men of ſome of them is not now known: Nor doth this any more leſſen its Authority, than it invalidates the Decree of a Prince, or an Act of Parliament, that it is not certain by whoſe Pen it was drawn up. Moſt of them was Compoſed by David, as is evident both from the title of them, and from the expreſs Teſtimony of the new Teſtament concerning ſome of them, and that by the Inſpiration of God's Spirit, as appears both from the divine matter and frame of them, and from 2 Sam. 23. 1. Mat. 22. 43. &c. Acts 1. 16. and 2. 25. But ſome of them were Compoſed by other Perſons; by Moſes, as Pſal. 90. by Heman, and Ethan, and Aſaph; as the title of the Pſalms ſhew; and by others after their times, whoſe names are not mentioned, as is manifeſt from Pſal. 126. & 137. It is apparent that the Pſalms were not written in the order in which they now lie; and they were put in this order either by Ezra, as the Hebrew Doctors affirm; or by ſome other holy Prophet or Prophets. It is ſufficient for us, that the whole Book is owned as Canonical by our Saviour, Luke 24. 44.

PSAL. I.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm was put firſt as a Preface to all the reſt, as a powerful perſuaſive to the diligent reading, and ſerious ſtudy of the whole book, and of the reſt of the holy Scripture, taken from that bleſſedneſs which attends upon the ſtudy and practice thereof.

BLeſſed * is the man a that walketh not in the counſel of the ‖ ungodly b, nor ſtandeth c in the way d of ſinners e, * nor ſitteth in the ſeat f of the ſcornful g.

* Prov. 4. 14, 15.
* Jer. 15. 17.

a The Hebrew words are very Emphatical: Bleſſedneſs belongs to that man; or, O the bleſſedneſs of that man! Thrice bleſſed is that man; who is here deſcribed negatively, and in the next verſe poſitively. b i. e. That doth not lead his Life according to their counſel, or courſe, or manner of living: That doth not aſſociate himſelf with them, nor follow their evil inſtigations or examples. Walking, notes choice of it, and continuance or progreſs in it, otherwiſe good men do ſometimes ſtep aſide into an evil Action. For the explaining of the Phraſe, ſee Gen. 49. 6. 2 Chron. 22. 3, 4, 5. Prov. 1. 15. and 4. 14. Mic. 6. 16. c Which notes a more ſettled abode, hardneſs and obſtinacy in it. d i. e. In their courſe or manner of Converſation, in the practiſe of thoſe things which they chuſe and uſe to do; which is called a mans way, Pſal. 5. 8. and 25. 4. 2 Pet. 2. 2, 15. e Emphatically ſo called here, as alſo Pſal. 29. 9. Eccleſ. 9. 2. Mat. 26. 45. Luke 7. 37. John 9. 16. 31. who give up themſelves to the power and practice of ſin, making it their great buſineſs and their delight. f Which notes their aſſociation, or incorporation of themſelves with them; a conſtant and reſolved perſeverance in their wicked courſes, with great content and ſecurity; and a great proficiency and eminency in the ſchool of Wickedneſs, and in ability and readineſs to inſtruct others therein. g Of thoſe who are not only diſeaſed, but reject, deſpiſe, and ſcorn all Remedies, who make a mock of ſin, and of God's threatnings and judgments againſt Sinners, who deride all wholeſom reproofs and counſels, and make it their trade to ſcoff at goodneſs and good men. Divers have obſerved a gradation in this verſe; the following clauſe ſtill exceeding the former, for ſtanding is more than walking, and ſitting more than ſtanding. And the way or courſe may ſeem to be worſe than the counſel or deſign, and the ſeat is worſe than the way: And Sinners in Scripture uſe, are worſe than the ungodly, and the ſcornful are the worſt of Sinners. But I would not lay great ſtreſs upon ſuch Obſervations.

2 But his delight is in the law h of the LORD, * and in his law doth he meditate i day and night k.

* Joſh. 1. 8. Pſal. 119. 1.

h i. e. In the ſtudy and practiſe of it, as appears from the Context. The law of God may be here underſtood, of the whole Doctrine delivered by God to the Church conſiſting of Doctrines, Precepts, Promiſes, and Threatnings; &c. as it is taken Pſal. 37. 31. and 78. 1. Iſa. 51. 7. John 10. 34. or more particularly of the preceptive part of it, which is commonly ſo called; and ſo this is noted as the peculiar character of a good man, that he delighteth himſelf not only in the Promiſes, which a bad man may do, Mat. 23. 20. but even in the commands of God, Pſal. 112. 1. and 119. 47, 127. 143. 1 John 5. 3. which are unwelcome and burdenſome to a wicked man. i The word implies a deep, and ſerious, and affectionate thoughtfulneſs about it: ſee Pſal. 19. 14. and 49. 3. Prov. 24. 2. Iſa. 33. 18. k Not ſeldom and ſlightly, as Hypocrites do, but diligently, frequently, conſtantly, and upon all occaſions.

3 And l he ſhall be like a tree * planted by the rivers m of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his ſeaſon n; his leaf alſo ſhall not † wither o, and whatſoever he doth ſhall proſper p.

* Jer. 17. 8. Ezek. 47. 12.

l Or, for, as this Particle is oft uſed, as Pſal. 60. 12. and 108. 13. Prov. 4. 17. This being the proof of that bleſſedneſs of a good man, which he had only aſſerted (v. i.) m i. e. A river; the plural number being put for the ſingular, as it is Judg. 12. 7. Jonah 1. 5. and oft elſewhere. n i. e. In the time of fruit-bearing: Which being applyed to the good man, notes either, 1. His active goodneſs, that he ſeeketh and improveth all opportunities for the doing of good exerciſing godlineſs, juſtice, temperance, charity, patience, &c. according to the ſeveral occaſions offered to him; or rather, 2. His certain proſperity and happineſs, as may be gathered from the end of this verſe, and the oppoſite ſtate of the ungodly, v. 4, 5. That he ſhall have the fruit or benefit of his godly life in due time, or when it is expedient for him; poſſibly in this life, but aſſuredly in the next life. o His happineſs is not ſhort and tranſitory, as all worldly felicity is, but fixed and everlaſting, like thoſe trees that are continually green and flouriſhing: Or, and (like a tree) whoſe leaf never withers. p All his actions ſhall be crowned with ſucceſs, and a bleſſed end or effect; ſee Rom. 8. 28.

4. The ungodly are not ſo q: but are * like the chaff which the wind driveth away r.

* Iſa. 35. 5. Pſal. 17. 13.

q Their condition is far differing from the former. r In regard either, 1. Of their ſinful diſpoſition. They are vain and frothy, unprofitable and hurtful, without any root of true and ſolid goodneſs, without any certain end, or conſtant courſe, toſſed to and fro with every wind of their own luſts or temptations. Or rather, 2. Of their wretched condition. They are reſtleſs and unquiet in their own minds and conſciences: their ſeeming felicity, in which they pleaſe and pride themſelves, hath no firm foundation, but quickly vaniſheth and fleeth away as chaff doth before the wind, and their end is to be burned, ſee Job 21.18 *Pſal.*35.5. *Mat.*3.12.

* Pſal.24.3. 5 Therefore s the ungodly ſhall not * ſtand t in the judgment u, nor ſinners in the congregation of the righteous x.

s To wit, becauſe they are ungodly: Or, Becauſe, as this Particle is ſometimes uſed, as *Gen.*38.26. *Num.*10.31. and 14.43. *Pſal.*42.6. for this verſe is added to enforce or prove what he ſaid in the former. t i.e. Not ſubſiſt or endure the trial; or not be juſtified or carry his cauſe; as this word is oft uſed, being oppoſed to falling, as *Pſal.*18.31. and 20.8. *Mal.*3.2. Luke 21.36. *Rom.*14.4. *Epheſ.*6.13. u Either, 1. in the time of temporal calamities, when God ſhall ariſe to judge and puniſh them: for then the hearts of the wicked fail, and their conſciences are filled with horrour. Or, 2. in that great and general judgment of the whole World, called here that judgment emphatically, in that ſolemn and general Congregation of all mankind, as the next words expreſs it. x i.e. In that ſociety which ſhall conſiſt of none but righteous Perſons, or amongſt the righteous ones on Chriſts right hand *Mat.*25.32.

* Pſal.31.7. Prov.12.10. 6 For y the LORD * knoweth z the way of the righteous: but the way of the ungodly ſhall periſh ‖.

y He now gives a reaſon of this great difference between the righteous and the ungodly, expreſſed in the foregoing verſes. z Either, 1. properly and ſpeculatively he ſearcheth and knoweth all their hearts and ways, or actions; and therefore will preſerve, proſper, and bleſs them; which may be gathered out of the following and oppoſite clauſe of this verſe, and out of v. 1,2. Or, 2. practically and affectionately, as words of knowledge in Scripture do very frequently imply affection, as *Exod.*1.8. *Pſal.*31.7.& 101.4. *Hoſ.*8.4. Amos 3.2. He approveth, loveth, and delighteth in them, and in the courſe of their lives, and therefore will recompence them: Or, he careth for and directeth their actions to a bleſſed Iſſue. ‖ All their wicked deſigns and courſes ſhall come to nothing, and they ſhall periſh with them.

PSAL. II.

The ARGUMENT.

THE Pen-man of this Pſalm was David, as is affirmed, Acts 4. 25. As for the matter of ſubject of it, it may ſeem to have ſome reſpect unto David, and to his advancement to, and ſettlement in the Throne of Juda and Iſrael; but the chief deſign and ſcope of it, and the primary intention of the holy Ghoſt in it, was to deſcribe the Meſſiah and his Kingdom, as is manifeſt. 1. From expreſs teſtimonies of the New Teſtament to that purpoſe, as Acts 4. 25. and 13 33. Heb. 1. 5. and 5. 5. And 2. From the conſent of the ancient Hebrew writers who did unanimouſly expound it ſo, as is confeſſed by their own brethren, particularly by Rabbi Solomon Jarchi upon this place; who hath this memorable paſſage, Our Doctors expounded this Pſalm of the King Meſſiah, but that we may anſwer the Hereticks (by which he means the Chriſtians, as all know) it is expedient to interpret it of David's perſon, as the words ſound. Which words altho' they are left out of the latter Editions of that Book, either by the fraud of Jews or careleſneſs, or miſtake of others, yet are extant in the ancient Editions of it. 3. From divers paſſages of this Pſalm which do not agree to David but to Chriſt only, as the title of Son, of which ſee Heb. 1. 4, 5. The extent of his Kingdom, v. 8. and divine Worſhip, v. 11, 12.

* Act.4. 25. ‖ Or, tumultuouſly aſſemble. † Heb. meditate. 1 WHY a * do the heathen b ‖ rage, and the People † imagine a vain thing d?

a Upon what provocation, or to what end or purpoſe? b Or, Gentiles: who did ſo againſt David, as we ſee 2 Sam. 5. 6, 17. 1 Chr. 14. 8. &c. and againſt Chriſt, Luke 18. 32. Acts 4. 25, &c. c This is either another expreſſion of the ſame thing, as is uſual in Scripture: or as the former word notes the Gentiles, ſo this may deſign the Jews or Gentiles, who alſo combined againſt David, 2 Sam. 2. 8, &c. and againſt Chriſt, Acts 4. 27. tho' they were all of one nation, and deſcended from one and the ſame mother, as this word ſignifies, and it is uſed Gen. 25. 23. d What they ſhall never be able to effect, and if they could, it would do them no good, as they fancy, but great hurt.

2 The kings e of the earth f ſet themſelves g, and the rulers take counſel together, againſt the LORD h, and i againſt his anointed k, ſaying, e Either thoſe mentioned 2 *Sam.*5. and 8. or rather Herod the great, and the other Herod, and Pilate and others with or after them. f So called in way of contempt, and to ſhew their meanneſs in oppoſing the God of heaven. g The word notes their firm purpoſe and profeſſed hoſtility, and the combination of their counſels and forces. h Either directly and profeſſedly; or indirectly and by conſequence, becauſe againſt his anointed, and againſt his counſel and command. i Or, that is, as that Particle is oft uſed, the latter clauſe explaining the former, and ſhewing in what ſence they fought againſt that God whom they pretended to own and worſhip. k Againſt ſuch a King whom God hath choſen and exalted, and wonderfully accompliſhed and ſet up for his work and ſervice, who therefore will certainly defend him againſt all his Enemies.

3 * Let us break their l band m aſunder, and caſt away their cords from us n. * Nah.1.13.

l i.e. The lords and his anointeds. m Which they deſign to put upon our necks that they may bring us into ſubjection. They mean the laws of God, which the King would oblige them to obſerve, which though eaſie and pleaſant in themſelves and to good men, *Mat.*11.29,30. 1 John 5.3. yet are very grievous and burthenſom to corrupt nature, and to men of wicked lives. n The ſame thing expreſſed with a little more emphaſis. Let us not only break off their yoke and the cords by which it is faſtned upon us, but let us caſt them far away, that they may never be recovered, and we may never be brought into bondage again.

4 * He that ſitteth o in the Heavens p ſhall laugh q: the LORD ſhall have them in deriſion. * Pſal.37.13, & 59. 8. Prov.1.26.

o As the Judge upon his tribunal, and as the King of the whole World upon his royal Throne; who without ſtirring from his place, can with one look or word deſtroy all his enemies. p This is oppoſed to their being, and reigning upon earth, *v.*2. and is mentioned here, as it is in other places of Scripture, as an evidence both of God's clear and certain knowledge of all things that are done below, as is noted *Pſal.*11.4. And of his ſovereign and irreſiſtible power, as is hence gathered, *Pſal.*115.3. See the preface to the Lord's Prayer. q i.e. Shall both deſpiſe and deride them and all their crafty devices, which he ſhall manifeſt to the world to be ridiculous, and contemptible follies. Compare 2 Kings 19. 21. *Pſal.*37.13.

5 Then r ſhall he ſpeak to them in his wrath s, and ‖ vex them in his ſore diſpleaſure. ‖ Or, trouble.

r In the midſt of all their plots and confidences of ſucceſs, s He ſhall ſeverely rebuke them, not ſo much verbally as really, by dreadful judgments. For God's ſpeaking is oft put for his actions; and ſo here it is explained by vexing in the next branch. Or, he ſhall pronounce a terrible Sentence againſt them.

6 Yet t have I † ſet u my king x † upon my holy hill of Zion y. † Heb. anointed. † Heb. upon Zion the hill of my holineſs.

t Notwithſtanding all their artifices and powerful combinations. u Heb. I have anointed, i. e. deſigned, appointed, or conſtituted, as this word is commonly uſed in Scripture, as of Prieſts, 1 *Chron.*29.22. and of Prophets, 1 Kings 19.16, 19,20. So alſo of Kings, as *Judg.*9.8,15. 2 Sam 2.4,7. and 3.39. *Ezek.*28.14. x In a ſingular manner, who hath not his kingdom by ſucceſſion from former Kings, nor by election of the people, as other Kings have, but by my ſpecial and extraordinary deſtination; and who ruleth in my ſtead, and according to my will, and for my ſervice and glory. y i. e. Over my Church and People. Sion properly and ſtrictly taken, was an hill on the north part of Jeruſalem, *Pſal.*48.2. where there was a ſtrong fort, which when David had taken he called it the City of David, 2 Sam.5.7,9. and made it the head of his Kingdom. But in a more large and improper ſence it is frequently put for the City Jeruſalem, *Pſal.*48.12.& 87.2. and 110.2. and for the Temple of Jeruſalem, Pſal. 137.3. Iſa. 18.7. *Jer.*51.10. which was built upon the hill of Moriah, which was either a part of mount Sion, or another hill adjoyning to it; and for the Church of the Jews, *Pſal.*65.1. and 69.36.& 97.8. and for the Chriſtian Church, *Heb.*12.22. *Rev.*14.1. And by theſe things it is plain why Sion is here called God's holy Hill.

‖ Or, for a decree.
* Acts 13.33. Heb. 1. 5.

7 I will declare z ‖ the decree a: the LORD hath ſaid unto me, * Thou art my ſon b, this day have I begotten thee c.

z Or, publiſh, that all people concerned may take notice of it, and ſubmit to it upon their peril. Publication or promulgation is eſſential to all laws or ſtatutes. a Or, concerning the decree, i. e. the will and pleaſure and appointment of God concerning my advancement into the throne, and the ſubmiſſion and obedience which the people here following ſhall yield to me. b Which though it may in ſome ſort be ſaid to, or of David, who was in ſome reſpects the ſon of God, and begotten by him, as all believers are, John 1.12. 1 John 3.9. Jam. 1.18. yet much more truly and properly belongs to Chriſt, who is commonly known by this Title both in the old and new Teſtament, as *Prov.*30.4. *Hoſ.*11.1. *Mat.*2.15. and 3.17. and 4.3,6. and oft elſewhere: and to whom this Title is expreſly appropriated by the holy Ghoſt, who is the beſt Interpreter of his own words, Acts 13.33. *Heb.*1.5. and 5. 5. and to whom alone the following Paſſages belong. c This is alſo applied by ſome to David, and ſo this day is the day of his inauguration, when he might be ſaid to be begotten by God, inaſmuch as he was then raiſed and delivered from all his troubles and calamities, which were a kind of death, and brought forth and advanced to a new kind of life, of royal ſtate and dignity; and ſo this was his birth-day tho' not of his Perſon, yet of his Kingdom, as the Roman Emperors celebrated a double birth-day; firſt the Emperor when he was born, and then the Empires, when he was advanced to the Empire. But this is but a lean and far-fetched and doubtful Sence; and therefore not to be allowed by the laws of Interpretation, when the words may be properly underſtood concerning Chriſt. And ſo this may be underſtood either, 1. Of his eternal generation. This day, from all eternity, which is well deſcribed by this day, becauſe in Eternity there is no ſucceſſion, no yeſterday, no to morrow, but it is all as one continued day or moment without change or flux; upon which account one day is ſaid to be with the Lord as long as a thouſand years, and a thouſand years as ſhort as one day, 2 *Pet.*3.8. or rather, 2. Of the manifeſtation of Chriſt's eternal Son-ſhip in time; which was done partly in his birth and life, when his being the ſon of God was demonſtrated by the Teſtimony of the Angel, Luke 1.32. and of God the father, *Mat.*3.17. and 17.5. and by his own words and works; but principally in his Reſurrection, which ſeems to be here mainly intended, of which day this very place is expounded, Acts 13.33. When Chriſt was in a moſt ſolemn manner declared to be the Son of God with power, Rom. 1. 4. And this day or time Chriſt might very well be ſaid to be begotten by God the Father, partly becauſe the Reſurrection from the dead is in Scripture called a regeneration or ſecond birth, *Mat.*19.28. as well it may, being a reſtitution of that very being which man received by his firſt birth, and that by the peculiar and mighty power of God: partly becauſe in this reſpect Chriſt is called the firſt begotten of the dead, Revel. 1. 5. and partly becauſe of that common obſervation, That things are oft ſaid to be done in Scripture when they are only declared or manifeſted to be done; of which ſee Inſtances, Gen 41. 13. *Jer.*1.10. Ezek. 43.3. and elſewhere.

* Pſal.72.8.

8 * Ask of me d and I ſhall give thee the Heathen for thine inheritance e, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth f for thy poſſeſſion.

d Claim or demand it of me, as thy right by my promiſe, and thy birth and purchaſe. e To be poſſeſſed and enjoyed by thee in a manner of an Inheritance, to wit, conſtantly, ſurely, and perpetually. f Either 1. the whole land of Canaan from one end of it to the other, as this Phraſe is uſed, Pſal. 61. 2. and 72.8. which is but a very narrow ſence, and that was but a very ſmall Kingdom, and no way agreeable to thoſe magnificent expreſſions here uſed. Or rather, the whole world, not only the Jewiſh Nation, but the Gentiles alſo, as this phraſe is almoſt univerſally uſed in the old Teſtament, as *Pſal.*19.4. and 22.28. and 46.10. and 65.5. *Iſa.*40.28. and 45.22, &c. And ſo theſe words declare the great amplitude of the Kingdom of the Meſſiah.

* Rev.2.27. & 19. 15.

9 * Thou ſhalt break them g with a rod of Iron h, thou ſhalt daſh them in pieces like a potters veſſel.

g i.e. Thoſe people that will not quietly ſubmit to thee, ſhall be cruſhed and deſtroyed by thee. h With thy mighty power, which they ſhall never be able to reſiſt.

10 Be wiſe i now k therefore, O ye kings l: be inſtructed, ye judges m of the earth.

i Underſtand your true intereſt. k Whileſt you have time and ſpace for repentance and ſubmiſſion. l You and your people. But he ſpeaks of, and to kings only, partly, becauſe they moſt needed the admonition, as preſuming upon their own power and greatneſs; and thinking it below them to ſubmit to him: partly, becauſe their authority and example could do much with their people: and partly, to intimate the greatneſs of this Monarch, and that he was King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. m Or, rulers, or governours. The ſame called Kings in the former branch.

11 Serve the LORD with fear n, and rejoyce o with trembling p.

n i.e. With reverence and an awful ſence of his great and glorious Majeſty, as very careful and diligent to pleaſe him, and affraid to offend him. o Do not eſteem his yoke your diſhonour and grievance; but know that it is a greater glory and happineſs to be the ſubjects of this King, than to be Emperors of the greateſt Empire; and accordingly rejoyce in it, and bleſs God for this ineſtimable grace and benefit. p This is added to expreſs the quality of this joy to which he calls them, and to diſtinguiſh it from that carnal and worldly rejoycing, which is uſually attended with ſecurity and preſumption and licentiouſneſs, and to warn them to take heed that they do not turn this grace of God into wantonneſs, nor ſlacken their dread of Gods tremendous Majeſty, and of his terrible judgments, if they ſhould hereafter revolt from him, or rebel againſt him; but on the contrary work out their Salvation with fear and trembling, as it is preſcribed Phil. 2. 12. Compare Mat. 28. 8.

‖ Or, in the way. Pſal. 102. 23. * Prov.16.20. Iſa. 30. 18. Jer. 17. 7. Rom. 9. 33. & 10. 11. 1 Pet. 2. 6.

12 Kiſs q the ſon r leſt he be angry, and ye periſh ‖ from the way s, when his wrath is kindled but a little t: * bleſſed are all they that put their truſt in him u.

q In token of your ſubjection and adoration; whereof this was a ſign among the Eaſtern Nations, as is manifeſt both from Scripture, as 1 *Sam.*10.1. 1 *King.*19.18. *Hoſ.*13.2. and from Heathen Authors. Submit to his perſon and government. r To wit, the ſon of God, as appears from v. 7. called here the ſon, by way of eminency and in a ſingular manner. Which agrees much better to Chriſt than to David, who is never particularly called by his name. s i.e. Be taken out of the way by death or deſtruction. Or, periſh out of the way, i. e. by loſing the right way, by taking wrong and evil courſes, the end of which will be your certain and utter ruine. Or, for the way, i. e. for your evil way or manner of living, for your perverſe and fooliſh courſe of oppoſing my ſon inſtead of ſubmitting to him. Or, in (which particle is oft underſtood) the way, i. e. in your wicked way or courſe, in the midſt of your plots and rebellions againſt him; and ſo you will die in your ſins, as it is expreſſed John 8. 24. which is a ſad aggravation of their death, and therefore here fitly propoſed as a powerful argument to diſſuade them from ſuch dangerous and deſtructive courſes. t i.e. The leaſt degree of his anger is very terrible, much more the heat and height of it, cauſed by ſuch a deſperate provocation as this is. Or, for his wrath will be kindled ſhortly, or ſuddenly, or within a very little time, as this word is uſed, *Pſal.*81.14. *Cant.*3.4. *Iſa.*26.20. His patience will not laſt always, but will ſhortly be turned into fury; and therefore take heed that you neither deny nor delay ſubjection to him, but ſpeedily comply with his offers and commands before it be too late. u Who put themſelves under his power and protection, believing in him, and expecting ſafety and happineſs from him. Which cannot with any colour be applied to David, who always diſſuades all men from putting their truſt in Princes, or in any men or things beſide or below God, *Pſal.*20.7. and 44.6. and 62. 6,7,8. and 118.8. and 146.3. and every where; and therefore it would very ill have become him to invite others to put their truſt in him. And he is pronounced curſed that truſteth in man, Jer. 17. 5. But Chriſt is every where propounded as an Object of truſt, not only in the new Teſtament, but alſo in the old, as *Iſa.*28.16. and therefore they are moſt truly and fitly ſaid to be bleſſed that put their truſt in him. Under which ſentence the contrary is implied, that they are moſt curſed and miſerable creatures that provoke and oppoſe him; and ſo curſed and miſerable that David dreaded the very thoughts and mention of it, and therefore expreſſeth it by the contrary and bleſſed condition of his Friends atd Subjects. And ſuch like ſignifications of the miſeries of ſinners by the bleſſedneſs of others oppoſed to them, we have *Mat.*23.39. *Rev.*14.13.

PSAL. III.

A Pſalm of David a, * when he fled b from Abſolom his ſon. * 2 Sam.15. 14.

a Compoſed by David, as this phraſe implies, Pſal. 110. 1. compared with *Mat.*22.43. and generally elſewhere. b Or, after he had fled. Either this Pſalm was compoſed in his flight, or the matter of it was then in his thoughts; which afterwards he digeſted into this form and order.

1 LORD, how are they increaſed that trouble me? many are they that riſe up againſt me c.

c He might well ſay ſo: for almoſt all his people joyned in that Conſpiracy.

2 Many there be which ſay of my ſoul d, There is no help for him in God e. Selah f.

d (i.e.) Of me: the ſoul being commonly put for the perſon, as *Iſa.*46.2. Amos 6.8. compare with *Gen.*22.16. e God hath utterly forſaken him for his many crimes, and will never help him more. f This word is no where uſed but in this poetical book of the Pſalms, and in the Song of Habakkuk, chap.3.3, 9,13. Which makes that opinion probable that it was a muſical note, directing the finger either to lift up his Voice, or to make a ſhort ſtop or pauſe, or to lengthen out the tune. But withal, it is generally placed at ſome remarkable paſſage: which gives occaſion to think that it ſerved alſo to quicken the attention or obſervation of the ſinger or hearer.

‖ Or, about. 3 But thou, O LORD, art a ſhield ‖ for me g: my glory h, and the lifter up of my head i.

g Or, about me, on every ſide, where alſo mine enemies are. h Either, 1. The author of my princely Glory and Majeſty. Thou didſt firſt give it, and I doubt not, thou wiltſt defend and reſtore it. Or, 2. The matter of my glorying, thou haſt formerly and frequently given, and wiltſt further give me occaſion of glorying or boaſting of thy power and favour to me. i Thou doſt and wilſt enable me to look up to thee with comfort and chearfulneſs, and upon mine enemies with confidence, and thou wiltſt lift me out of the mire in which I now lie, and reſtore me to my former power and dignity from which I am fallen. For the Phraſe ſee *Gen.*4.7. *Job.*11.15. Luke 18.13.

4 I cried unto the LORD with my voice k, and he heard me out of his holy hill l. Selah.

k The witneſs of my faith and fervency of affections. l Either out of Heaven, ſo called, *Pſal.*15.1. compare Iſa. 66. 1. Or rather, 2. Out of the hill of Sion, where God was eſpecially preſent, the Ark being there at this time: towards which the Saints then uſed to direct their Prayers, and from thence God heard and anſwered and bleſſed them, Pſal. 128. 5. and 134. 3.

* Pſal.4.8. Prov.3.24. 5 * I laid me down and ſlept m; I awaked n, for the LORD ſuſtained me o.

m To wit, ſecurely, caſting all my cares and fears upon God, and relying upon his help. n In due time and manner, after a ſweet and undiſturbed ſleep. o Or, ſupported me, as it were with his right hand, that I ſhould not fall under my burden. He upheld my ſpirit, and perſon, and cauſe.

* Pſal.27.3. 6 * I will not be afraid of ten thouſands of people that have ſet themſelves againſt me round about p.

p So that I ſee no humane way to eſcape.

7 Ariſe q, O LORD, ſave me, O my God r, *Pſal.31.7,8. * for thou haſt ſmitten all mine enemies s upon the Cheek-bone t: thou haſt broken the teeth u of the ungodly.

q Beſtir thy ſelf on my behalf, and be no longer as an idle ſpectator of my Miſeries. r Who art mine by ſpecial relation and covenant, and I am thy ſon and thy ſervant: Lord ſave thine own. s Thou haſt hitherto helped me, do not now leave me. t Which implies either contempt and reproach, as this phraſe ſignifies, 1 Kings 22. 24. Mich. 5. 1. Job 18. 22. and 19. 9. or the ſmartneſs and ſoreneſs of the blow, whereby, as the next clauſe explains it, their teeth were ſtruck out, and ſo they did not only receive hurt themſelves, but were diſenabled from doing that miſchief to others which they deſired and were accuſtomed to do. u (i.e.) Their ſtrength and the inſtruments of their cruelty. He compares them to wild Beaſts.

* Pſal.3.8. Jer. 3. 23. Hoſ. 13. 4. Jer. 2. 9. 8 * Salvation belongeth unto the LORD x: thy bleſſing y is upon thy people z. Selah.

x I expect not ſalvation from my forces, but from thy power and favour alone. y Or rather, let it be. So he cloſeth with a prayer. z Either upon my friends and followers, who alone are thy people, the reſt being Rebels to thee as well as to me. Or, upon all thy people Iſrael, to preſerve my friends, to convince and convert mine enemies, and to ſave the body of the Nation, which without thy mercy are likely by this civil War to be brought to utter ruine.

PSAL. IV.

To the ‖ chief muſician a on Neginoth b, a pſalm of David. ‖ Or, Overſeer.

a The maſter or director of the ſacred muſicians and muſick of the Temple: of whom ſee 1 *Chron.*6.31. and 15.16,17. and 25. 1, 2. 2 *Chron.*20.21. and 34. 12,13. Heb. To him that overcometh, or excelleth, or triumpheth, to wit, in his profeſſion of Muſick. b Or, on ſtringed Inſtruments, as this word is tranſlated, *Heb.*3.19. for the Hebrew verb niggen, whence this is derived, ſignifies to play with the hand upon an Inſtrument, 1 *Sam.*16.23. and 18.10. This Pſalm is for the matter or ſubſtance of it much like the former, and it ſeems to have been made upon the ſame or ſome other like occaſion, when he was diſtreſſed either by Abſolom, or by Saul, or by ſome other great and powerful Enemies.

1 HEar me when I call * O God of my righteouſneſs c: thou haſt enlarged me d when I was in diſtreſs, ‖ have mercy upon me e and hear my prayer. * Pſal.25.5. & 59.10,17. & 109. 1. ‖ Or, be gracious to me.

c Either the witneſs and defender of my righteous cauſe: Or, from whom I expect that righteous judgment and deciſion of my cauſe, which I cannot obtain from mine Enemies, who load me and my cauſe with manifold Injuries and Calumnies. Or, O my righteous God. Or, O God of my mercy; which title is given to God elſewhere, as Pſal. 59. 10, 17. whereas this title, O God of my righteouſneſs, is not given to God in any other place of Scripture, Pſal. 59. 10, 17. O God, to whoſe mercy I owe all that I have or hope for: which was a very fit and powerful Argument in Prayer, and very agreeable to the following words, in which there is an acknowledgment of God's former Mercies, and a petition for mercy. And ſo this and other words in Hebrew and Greek which properly ſignifie righteouſneſs, are oft uſed for mercy or kindneſs, as *Iſa.*58.8. Pſal 31.1. and 36. 10. 2 Cor. 9. 9. and in many other places. d (i.e.) Freed me from my former ſtraits and troubles. So he urgeth God and ſtrengtheneth his own Faith with his former Experiences. e Thou mayeſt juſtly deſtroy me for my many and great ſins, and therefore I flee from thy Juſtice to thy Mercy, on which all my hopes are grounded.

2 * O ye ſons of men f, how long will ye turn my glory into ſhame g? how long will ye love vanity h and ſeek after leaſing i? Selah. * Pſal.62.4.

f (i.e.) Princes and Potentates, as the Hebrew Phraſe ſeems, and is thought to ſignifie, who are engaged with Saul or Abſalom againſt me. g Or, ſhall my Glory be for a ſhame, i.e. be made for your matter of reproach and ſcorn? By his Glory probably he means that high Honour and royal Majeſty which God hath either promiſed to him, or conferred upon him: wherewith, when he was in great ſtraits and dangers, they might poſſibly reproach him in ſome ſort as this. Is this the man whom God ſo highly loves and honours and will exalt, who now flees from one Mountain or Cave to another, who runs away to the Philiſtins, whom his own Son hath baniſhed out of the land? Is this the effect of his glorying and boaſting of God's favour and promiſes? h i.e. Affect and purſue theſe courſes and deſigns of oppoſing me and my Kingdom, which you will certainly find to be vain and to no purpoſe. i Or, lying the ſame thing with vanity; theſe two words Being promiſcuouſly uſed, as *Pſal.*62.9. Only this ſeems to add ſome Emphaſis, and to intimate the fair hopes and promiſing probabilities of Succeſs which they had, and which aggravate their diſappointment. Or, by lying, he may deſign thoſe horrid Calumnies which the Partiſons either of Saul or Abſalom had raiſed againſt him, and which they joyned with their other Indeavours to make him odious to all the people, and ſo the better to effect his Ruine.

3 But know that the LORD k hath ſet apart l him that is godly m, for himſelf n: the LORD will hear when I call unto him o.

k You fight not againſt me but againſt the Lord. l Or, hath wonderfully ſeparated me, hath rejected the other royal Perſon and Family, and hath called me by name, and choſen me out of all the Tribes and Families of Iſrael, and out of my father's Family, tho I was the youngeſt of them, and thought by Samuel and by my Father to be moſt remote from this Honour. m i.e. Me, whom, tho' you traduce and cenſure, as if I were an egregious Hypocrite and Impoſtor, who only pretended Religion for my own ambitious ends, God hath pronounced to be a man after his own heart, 1 Sam. 13. 14. And that I am ſuch in ſome good meaſure, both my own Conſcience and the general courſe of my life bear me witneſs: Which teſtimony David gives to himſelf, not out of a vain-glorious humour, but meerly becauſe he was conſtrained to it by the Calumnies of his Enemies, for his own juſt and neceſſary Vindication.

cation. Or, his favourite, as the word often ſignifies: Him, whom he hath been pleaſed to chuſe and advance, not for any work or merit of mine, but out of his free grace and kindneſs to me; who therefore will maintain the wok of his own hands and grace, although I cannot deny that I have been guilty of divers frailties and miſcarriages, for which God might juſtly reject me, if he ſhould deal with me according to the rigour of his Juſtice: n Either firſt in his ſtead, or to be his Vicegerent, as all Kings are, and eſpecially the Kings of Gods own People. Or rather 2. For his own ſervice and glory, to fulfil all his will, as it is expreſſed Acts 13. 22. which may be ſpoken by way of oppoſition to Saul, who had no regard to God nor his Will and Glory, but minded only his own honour and advantage. o Therefore I am aſſured that God Will hear my Prayers and ſave me out of your hands.

4 Stand in awe p, and ſin not q: commune with your own heart upon your bed r, and be ſtill ſ. Selah.

p Tremble therefore and be afraid, if not of me, yet at leaſt of God, who hath engaged himſelf in my Cauſe or Quarrel, and will be an Adverſary to my Adverſaries, Or, be angry, as this word is here rendred by all the ancient and ſome modern Tranſlators, and, as it is thought, by the Apoſtles. Eph. 4. 26. Or, Are you angry, for it may be taken interogatively: Admit you be angry or diſpleaſed that God hath preferred me an obſcure Perſon and of a mean Family, before ſo many noble and mighty men, yet or but (as it follows) ſin not; (i. e.) do not ſo far indulge your anger as to break forth into murmuring againſt God, or rebellion againſt me: but ſeaſonably ſuppreſs and mortifie your unadviſed and ſinful Paſſion, leaſt it break forth to your own Ruine. This Hebrew word ſignifies in general a vehement commotion of the mind or heart, whether through grief, as 2. Sam 18. 33. or fear, as Exod. 15. 14. Deut. 2. 25. or anger, as Gen. 45. 24. 2. Kings 19. 27, 28. Prov. 29. 9. Ezek. 16. 43. q By cheriſhing and proſecuting your anger and malice againſt me, and your Rebellion againſt Gods Authority. r Calmly and deeply conſider theſe things in your own breaſts in the ſilent night, when you are at leaſure from the crowd of diſtracting buſineſs, and free from the company of crafty and daubing Paraſites. s Either 1. as to your outward Actions: for this Verb oft ſignifies a ceſſation of Actions, as Joſ. 10. 13. Job 30. 27. Proceed no further in your wicked ſpeeches and contrivances againſt me. Or, rather, 2. As to your inward paſſions. Compoſe your tumultuous minds; as this Verb is uſed Pſal. 37. 7. and 62. 2. and 137. 2. Suppreſs your anger and rage, which though directed againſt me only, yet is indeed againſt God and againſt his counſel and providence.

*Pſal. 51. 19. Prov. 15. 8. & 21. 27.

5 Offer t * the ſacrifices of Righteouſneſs u: and put your truſt in the LORD x.

t To wit, unto God, that he may be reconciled to you, and may pardon all your Murmurings and Inſurrections againſt him and againſt me. For it ſeems plain that this, as well as the former verſe, is ſpoken not to David's friends and favourites, as ſome think, but to his enemies, even to thoſe ſons of men, v. 2. to whom he directeth his ſpeech v. 3. But know, and v. 4. Stand in awe, and here Offer. u (i. e.) Righteous Sacrifices; which require that the perſons offering them be righteous and do righteous things, and offer them with an honeſt mind, and with faith, (it follows) and true repentance. Without which he intimates that all their Sacrifices were of no eſteem with God, and would be wholly unprofitable to them. And withal it is probable that he reflects upon the followers of Saul or of Abſalom, who had the only place of Sacrifice in their poſſeſſion, whileſt David was debar'd of the opportunity of ſacrificing, as he complains 1. Sam. 26. 19. and accordingly they gloried in their Sacrifices, and upon that account promiſed themſelves ſucceſs againſt David, who was by Gods providence deprived of the opportunities of reconciling and engaging God by Sacrifices. x (i. e.) And then (i. e.) ſo doing, you may rely upon God, and confidently expect his Aſſiſtance, which otherwiſe it is in vain for you to hope for. Withal he ſeems to reflect upon his enemies who truſted to an arm of fleſh, to their own great numbers and power, and to intimate what his courſe was, to wit, to truſt in the Lord.

*Numb. 6. 25. 26. Pſal. 21. 6. & 44. 3. & 67. 1.

6 There be may y that ſay, who will ſhew us z any good a? LORD * lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us b.

y Either, 1. Of my own followers, who are weary of waiting upon God and ready to diſpair. Or rather 2. Of mine Enemies, and of the Body of the People, who were either engaged againſt him, or at leaſt unconcerned for him, and ſought only their own eaſe and advantage. z Heb. make or give us to ſee, (i. e.) to enjoy, as this phraſe is frequently uſed, as Pſal. 27. 13. and 34. 12. Eccleſ. 2. 1. and 3. 13. a (i. e.) Worldly good, as appears by the oppoſition of the light of Gods Countenance to it in the next words, and by the explication of it of Corn and Wine in the next verſe. (i. e.) Who will put an end to our preſent Broils and Troubles, and give us that tranquility and outward happineſs, which is the only thing that we deſire. Withal he may ſeem to intimate the reaſon and motive which induc'd ſo many perſons to take part againſt him, which was their eager deſign of honour or worldly advantage, which they promiſed to themſelves by appearing againſt David. See 1. Sam. 22. 7. b (i. e.) Upon me and my friends. Give us aſſurance of thy love and favour to us, and evidence it to us by thy powerful and gracious aſſiſtance.

7 Thou haſt put gladneſs in my heart c more than in the time that their corn and their wine increaſed d.

c Whatſoever thou ſhalt do with me for the future, as to my outward diſtreſſes and concernments, I have at preſent unſpeakable pleaſure and full ſatisfaction in the impreſſions and teſtimonies of thy love in and to my Soul; whereby alſo I am encouraged with confidence to expect good ſucceſs to my righteous cauſe. d Than worldly perſons in the time of a plentiful Harveſt, which is a time of great rejoycing, Judg. 9. 27. Iſa. 9. 3. Jer. 48. 33.

8 * I will both e lay me down in Peace f, and ſleep: for thou LORD only makeſt me dwell in † ſafety g.

* Pſal. 3. 5.
† Heb. confidence, or, ſecurity.

e This word relates to the two following Verbs; as ſoon as I am laid down, I will quietly compoſe my ſelf to ſleep; whereas many lye down upon their beds and canot ſleep through diſtracting cares or troubles. Or, in like manner, (i. e.) as they do who have abundance of Corn and Wine, of whom he laſt ſpoke, Luke 12. 19. f. Either 1. In outward peace or ſafety, as the next clauſe explains it. Or, 2. In inward peace or tranquility of mind, as Luke 2. 29. reſting ſecurely upon Gods promiſes, and the conduct of his wiſe and gracious providence. g. I owe not my ſafety to my own valour or wiſdom, nor to the courage of my followers, but thee only. Or, thou Lord makeſt me to dwell alone in ſafety: Either 1. Alone, or apart from mine Enemies. Compare Deut. 33. 28. Or rather, 2. Though I be in a manner alone, (i. e.) forſaken and deſtitute of friends and helpers, as that word is uſed Pſal. 102. 7. Lam. 1. 1.

PSAL. V.

To the chief muſician upon Nehiloth a, A Pſalm of David b a This is no where elſe uſed in Scripture. It is generally and probably thought to be a term belonging to muſick, and to ſignifie either ſome kind of tune: or rather an Inſtrument, and particularly a wind-inſtrument, as Neginoth in the title of the laſt Pſalm ſignified ſtringed Inſtruments. b. This Pſalm ſuppoſeth David to be in ſome great diſtreſs or trouble, either from Saul, or from Abſalom, or ſome of their Courtiers.

1 GIve ear to my words, O LORD conſider my meditation c.

c (i. e.) My prayer, as the words foregoing and following ſhew. Which he calls his Meditation, to note that it was not a lip-prayer only, but that it proceeded from, and was accompanied with the deepeſt thoughts and moſt fervent affections of his Soul.

2 Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King d, and my God: for unto thee will I pray e.

d It is the part and duty of a King, to anſwer the juſt and humble deſires of his Subjects. e. To thee alone I will direct all my prayers, and therefore from thee alone I expect ſuccour and relief.

3 * My voice ſhalt thou hear in the morning f, O LORD, in the morning will I direct my Prayers g, unto thee, and will look up h.

* Pſal. 130. 6.

f Either 1. metaphorically, (i. e.) early, ſeaſonably, in a time when thou wilt ſt be found, and art ready to hear. Or 2. properly, every morning. As ſoon as I awake, I am ſtill with thee, as he ſaith, Pſal. 139. 18. The firſt thing that I do is to pray to thee, I neither neglect nor delay that work. But this is not ſpoken excluſively as to his other times of Prayer, as appears from Pſal. 55. 17. but eminently, to ſhew his conſtancy, diligence, and eagerneſs in the work. g Or, mine eyes: Which may be well underſtood out of the following word; which is uſual in Scripture. Or, it, (So it is only a defect of the Pronoun, which is moſt frequent) to wit, my voice, laſt mentioned; or, which is equivalent, my words, which is alſo underſtood underſtood with this very Verb, Job 33. 5. and is expreſſed with it, Job 32. 14. And the Verb here and there uſed is very emphatical, and notes his great care and exactneſs ſo to direct or order, or compoſe himſelf and his prayers in ſuch a manner as was moſt pleaſing to God. b To wit, unto thee (as he now ſaid) for help. The word implies a confident, and withal, a patient expectation of relief, as Pſal. 130. 6. Mic. 7. 7. Hab. 2. 1. See alſo Pſal. 145. 15. Acts 3. 4.

4 For i thou art not a God that hath pleaſure in wickedneſs k: neither ſhall ‖ evil dwell with thee l.

‖ Or, the evil man. ſo Gr.

i Or, But, or Surely. k Or, in wicked men. Thou doſt not approve of, nor delight in them, or in their Prayers, but doſt hate and wilt deſtroy them, as it here follows, comp. Pro. 17. 15. And this he ſaith partly for the conviction and diſcouragement of his Enemies, who were ſuch; and partly for his own vindication, to ſhew that he was not ſuch a wicked man, as they falſly and malitiouſly repreſented him. l (i.e.) Have any friendſhip or fellowſhip, or quiet abode with thee, as thoſe that dwell together uſually have one with another.

5 * The fooliſh m ſhall not ſtand † in thy ſight n: thou hateſt all workers of iniquity o.

* Hab. 1. 13.
† Heb. before thine eyes.

m Or, the mad men, as the word properly ſignifies, as Eccleſ. 2. 2. 12. and 7. 7. and 10. 13. Iſa. 44. 25. (i.e.) wicked men, as the next words explain it: Who are indeed morally and really mad men in fighting with the Lord God Almighty, and in expoſing themſelves to ſuch dreadful Hazards and Miſchiefs, for ſuch mean and momentary Advantages. n Either in battel againſt thee, as this phraſe is uſed, Deut. 7. 24. Joſ. 1. 5. and 7. 12. Or, in judgment at thy Tribunal; of which ſee on Pſal. 1. 5. Compare 1. Sam. 6. 20. Job 41. 10. o (i.e.) Such as make ſin their choice, deſign, and buſineſs, giving up themſelves to the conſtant and cuſtomary practice of it. Compare Mat. 7. 23. Otherwiſe in a general ſenſe, there is no man that doth not ſin or work Iniquity, Eccleſ. 7. 20.

6 Thou ſhalt deſtroy them that ſpeak leaſing p: the LORD will abhor † bloody and deceitful man q.

† Heb. the man of blood and deceit.

p Or, lies, that make it their buſineſs to raiſe and ſcatter Calumnies and reproaches concerning me; as many did. q Thoſe who deſign Miſchief againſt me or my Friends under a pretence of kindneſs: of whom he oft ſpoke.

7 But as for me, I will come r into thy houſe ſ in the multitude of thy mercy t: and in thy fear u will I worſhip toward † thy holy temple x.

† Heb. the temple of thy holineſs.

r To wit, with holy boldneſs and confidence, as becomes thy Son and Servant: Whereas mine Enemies cannot appear in thy preſence with any comfort and ſafety, v. 5. ſ To wit, the tabernacle: from which tho' I be now excluded through the malice and power of mine Adverſaries, yet thou wilt I doubt not, reſtore me to my former opportunities of coming thither to worſhip thee, which was my conſtant cuſtom and chief joy. t Or, By thy great Mercy, (i.e.) Truſting only to thy great Mercy for admittance thither, and acceptance there. Or, for or becauſe of thy many Mercies to me: for Which I will come to pay my thanks and ſervice to thee. u With an holy dread and reverence of thy Majeſty and of thy Houſe, and a due care to pleaſe thee in my religious worſhip, and in the whole courſe of my Life. Which he oppoſeth to the careleſneſs of his Enemies who came thither ſo rudely and preſumptuouſly, and with the conſcience of ſuch wicked Hearts and Lives. x Looking towards it, when I cannot come to it. Compare Dan. 6. 10. Or, at thy holy Temple, (i.e.) the Tabernacle, which is ſomtimes called by that name.

8 Lead me y O LORD in thy righteouſneſs z, because of † mine enemies a; * make thy way b ſtraight c before my face d.

† Heb. thoſe which obſerve me.

y Direct my heart and counſels, and affairs, and all the courſe and actions of my life. z In thy righteous Laws: which ſomtimes are called righteouſneſs, as Pſal. 119. 172. Mat. 3. 15. Or for or becauſe of, or according to thy righteouſneſs; which is a Phraſe and Argument frequently uſed in this book of Pſalmes. a Either, 1. that I may give them no occaſion of ſlandering me, or religion for my ſake. Or rather, 2. Becauſe they are moſt malicious and miſchievous, and withal cunning and treacherous, as he deſcribes them in the next verſe (which he uſeth as an Argument to enforce this Petition) and they lay ſnares for me, and if thou doſt not aſſiſt me, will be too hard for me, and will triumph over me; which will reflect diſhonour upon thee alſo. b (i.e.) The way wherein thou wouldeſt have me to walk, or the courſe which thou wouldeſt have me to take: for God's Precepts or Counſels are moſt commonly called his way. c Or, plain or ſmooth that I may clearly diſcern it, and readily walk in it without miſtake or lett, or ſtumbling, or offence. This was a needful requeſt, becauſe many good men are oft at loſs what their Duty is in ſeveral Circumſtances. And God granted this requeſt to David, as in many other things, ſo in this, that he ſhould not cut off Saul when he had opportunity and inſtigation to do it, 1. Sam. 24. and 26. but that he ſhould wait till God took him away. d To my view and for my walk: For men walk forward, not backward.

Metonymically; their ſpeech coming out of their Throat tho' ſmooth and ſubtil, yet is moſt pernicious. Or 2. Properly: Their Throat and Mouth are wide opened ready to devour all that come within their reach. A Metaphor from wild Beaſts gaping for the Prey. g They make ſhew of piety and friendſhip, that they may more eaſily deceive and deſtroy me.

10 ‖ Deſtroy thou them h, O God; let them fall ‖ by their own counſels i: caſt them out k in the multitude of their tranſgreſſions, for they have rebelled againſt thee m.

Or, make them deſolate, as the word is uſed Ezek. 6. 6. Joel 1. 18. i (i.e.) Make their counſels not only unſucceſful againſt me, but alſo deſtructive to themſelves. Or, from their, &c. PSAL. VI.

‖ or, upon the eighth.

To the chief muſician on Neginoth a ‖ upon Sheminith b, a Pſalm of David c.

a Of which ſee on Pſal. 4. 1. b Or, upon the eighth. It is thought to be the ſhrilleſt or loftieſt Note, as Alamoth is the loweſt; of which ſee 1. Chron. 15. 20, 21. and, as ſome add, Muth-labben, Pſal. 9. the mean. But all this is only conjecture; and the Jews themſelves have no certain knowledg of their own ancient Muſick, and of the ſignification of the Terms belonging to it. c The occaſion of the Pſalm ſeems plainly to have been ſome grievous Diſtreſs or Diſeaſe of the Body then upon him, accompanied alſo with great trouble of Conſcience for his Sins, whereby he had brought it upon himſelf.

1 O * LORD, rebuke me not d in thine anger e, neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure f.

* Pſal. 38. 1.

d (i.e.) Do

d (i. e.) Do not chasten or correct me, as the next Clause explains it, and as this word is frequently used, as Job. 22. 4. Psal. 50. 21. Isa. 37. 4. Revel. 3. 19. e With rigour or severity, as my sins deserve, but with gentleness and moderation, Jer. 10. 24. and 46. 28. or so as it may not be the effect of thy strict Justice or Anger, but of thy Mercy and Faithfulness. f The same thing repeated after the manner.

2 Have mercy upon me g, O LORD, for I am weak h: O LORD, heal me i for my bones are vexed k.

g I plead not my merit, but thy free Mercy. h Or, I languish, my Body pines away and my Sprit fails through my excessive pains or troubles. (i. e.) The distempers of my Soul and Body, of both which this word is used, Psal. 41. 4. and 107. 18. 20. k My torment is so deep and so general, that it reacheth and is very grievous even to my Bones, tho, they are inward, and might seem to be out of the reach of it, and also strong and senseless, and therefore can best bear it. See the like expressions Job. 4. 14. and 33. 19. Psal. 38. 3. and 51. 8.

My soul is also sore vexed l: but thou O LORD how long m?

l Partly by sympathy with my Body, and partly with the burthen of my Sins and the sense of thy Anger, and my own danger and misery. m Wiltst thou suffer me to lye and languish in this condition? It is a figure called Aposiopesis, very agreeable to men in pain or anguish, who use to cut their words short.

4 Return n O LORD, deliver my Soul o: oh, save me for thy mercies sake.

n Unto me, from whom thou hast withdrawn thyself, and thy smiling Countenance, and thy helping Hand. o (i. e.) Save me, or my life, as the Soul oft signifies, as Gen. 9. 5. and 12. 5. Job. 36. 14. Psal. 33. 19. David and other good men in those times, were much afraid of death, partly because the manifestations of God's Grace to his People were then more dark and doubtful, and partly because thereby they were deprived of all opportunities of advancing God's Glory and Kingdom in the World. Comp. Isa. 38. 1, 2, 3.

* Psal. 30. 9. & 88. 11. & 115. 17. & 118. 17. Isai. 38. 18. † Heb. hell, so Gr.

* 5 For in death p there is no remembrance of thee q: in † the Grave who shall give thee thanks?

p Among the dead: or in the grave, as it follows. To wit, by me David, consisting both of Soul and Body; and no such remembrance, to wit, in way of thankfulness and praise, as the next Clause of the verse limits and explains it; which he might fear would be true, not only because he should not have occasion to praise God for this deliverance, but also because he was in grievous agonies of Conscience, and under terrors of God's wrath, and his eternal damnation; which being oft incident to the Saints of God under the new Testament, it is not strange if it were so also under the old Testament. Besides he speaks of the remembrance or celebration of God's Name and Grace in the Land of the Living, to the enlargement and edification of God's Church, and the propagation of true Religion among men; which is not done in the other Life, and was justly prized at so high a rate by David and other holy men, to whom therefore it must needs be a great grief to be for ever deprived of such opportunities. For otherwise David very well knew, and firmly believed, that Souls departed were not extinct, but did go to God, Eccles. 12. 7. and there remember and adore and enjoy God, tho' quite in another way than that of which he here speaks.

6 I am weary with my groaning, ‖ all the night r make I my bed to swim s; I water my Couch t with my tears.

r He mentions this time, by way of aggravation of his misery, because that season which is to others by God's appointment a time of rest, was to him very sad and doleful, whether from his Disease, which then came upon him more strongly, as it is usual; or from the opportunity which the solitude and silence of the Night gave him to think of his own Sins, or his enemies perfidiousness and malice, or God's displeasure, or his future Estate. s To wit, with tears. See the like Hyperbole Jer. 9. 1. Lam. 3. 48, 49. t Or, my bedstead.

* Job 17. 7. Psal. 31. 9. & 38. 10. Lam 5. 17.

7 * Mine eye is consumed u because of grief x it waxeth old because of all mine Enemies.

u Or, grown dim or dull, through plenty of salt tears which I shed: Or, through the decay of my Spirits. x (i. e.) My greif arising from mine Enemies. as the next Clause interprets it, and from the consideration of their multitude and rage, and falsness.

* Mat 7. 23. & 25. 41. Luke 13. 27. Psal. 119. 115 * Psal. 31. 22.

8 * Depart from me y all ye workers of Iniquity z; for the LORD hath heard a the * voice of my weeping b.

y I advise you for your own sakes to cease from opposing or molesting me, or insulting over me, or approaching to me, With design of deceiving and betraying me; for all your labor will be lost. z All you wicked enemies of mine. a (i. e.) He will hear, the past time being put for the future, as is usual in prophetical Passages, such as this was; David having received by the Spirit of God particular assurance that God would hear and deliver him. b (i. e.) Of my fervent Prayers joyned with my Tears.

9 The LORD hath heard c my supplication; the LORD will receive my Prayer.

c And therefore will hear, as it follows. He draws an Argument from his former Experience.

10 Let all mine Enemies be ashamed d and sore vexed: let them return e and be ashamed suddenly f.

d Of their vain hopes and confidence of conquering and destroying me. Or, they shall be ashamed, because of their great and unexpected disappointment. e To wit, from their wicked Ways, from their hostile and malicious practices against me, and let them come and submit to me, from whom they have revolted. Or, let them turn back, as it is expressed Psal. 56. 9. let them be put to flight. Or, let them be converted. (i. e.) Repent of their sins, and return to their obedience to me. Although it seems more probable both from the foregoing and following words, that this turning or returning is rather penal than penitential. Or they shall turn or return. Or this Verb may be taken adverbially and joined to the following Verb, as it is frequently in other places, and both may be thus rendred, let them, or they shall be ashamed, clothed as it were, with double shame. f Sooner than I could hope, or they did expect or believe.

PSAL. VII.

Shiggaion a of David, which he sang unto the LORD, concerning the ‖ words b of Cush c the Benjamite.

a This seems to be the name of a certain kind either of Song or Tune, or Instrument, which then was very well known, but now is only matter of conjecture; wherewith I think it not fit to trouble the unlearned Reader: And the learned may consult my latin Synopsis: b The false and slanderous Reports raised or fomented by him. This was the occasion of this Psal. c By which he designs either 1. Saul: whom he thought it incident to express by his proper Name, for which he might at this time have divers reasons, and therefore he deciphers him enigmatically, which is not unusual in holy Scripture; where Babylon is called Sheshach, Jer. 25. 26. and 51. 41. and Rome is called Egypt, and Sodom, and Babylon in the Revelation; and John the Baptist is called Elias. And he might call him Cush; partly by a tacit Allusion to his Father's Name, Kish; and partly, with respect to his black and wicked disposition planted and firmly rooted in him: Comp. Jer. 13. 23. Amos 9. 7. Or 2. Some eminent and potent Commander or Courtier under Saul called Cush, tho' he be not elsewhere named, it being the lot of many other persons to be named but once in Scripture. And he is called the Benjamite, because he was one of that Tribe in which Saul put most confidence: See 1 Sam. 22. 7.

1 O LORD my God, in thee do I put my trust d: save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me.

d All my hope and confidence is in thy favour and Faithfulness, to make good thy Promise made to me.

2 Lest he e tear my Soul f like a Lion g, renting it in pieces, while there is † none to deliver h.

e (i. e.) Mine enemy, as it is expressed v. 4. even Saul, or any of his followers. f Out of my Body. Or destroy me and my life, as Psal. 6. 5. g To which he compares him both for Power and Cruelty, and withal intimates his own inability to to oppose or escape his rage without God's almighty help. h Whileft I have no considerable Force to defend myself, but am forced to flee to Mountains and Caves, and Woods for my Safety.

3 O LORD my God, if I have done this i, if there be iniquity in my hands k:

i (i. e.)

i i.e. That which Cush and others falsly lay to my Charge. If I design or have endeavoured to take away Saul's Crown and Life by Violence, as Saul's Courtiers maliciously reported, 1 *Sam.*24. 9, 10. and 26.19. k i. e. In my actions or carriage towards Saul. The hand is oft put for Actions, whereof the hand is a great and common Instrument, as Psal. 78. 42. and 109. 27. Jonah 3. 8. If I design, or have attempted to lay violent hands upon Saul.

4 If I have rewarded evil unto him that was at peace with me l; (yea m, I have delivered him n that without cause o is mine enemy.)

l i. e. To Saul, when he was peaceable and friendly towards me: For David was charged with evil Designs against Saul, before Saul broke out into open Enmity against him. m This Particle is here used by way of correction or opposition, as it is also *Psal.*2.6. *Prov.*6.16. So far I have been from doing this, that I have done the contrary. n When it was in my power to destroy him, as 1 *Sam.*24. and 26. o Without any Provocation on my part.

5 Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it p; yea, let him tread down my life upon the earth, and lay mine honour q in the dust. Selah.

p I am contented, and wish that Saul may so persecute my Life as to overtake it, and take it away. q Either 1. That honourable and royal Estate to which I am chosen and designed. Or 2. My Reputation and Memory. Or rather 3. The same thing which he called his soul and his life in the former branch of the verse, and here his honour; it being very frequent to express one thing in several words or phrases in one verse. And so here may be observed a gradation. Let him 1. Persist to persecute it; 2. Take it; 3. Tread it down, or destroy it, and 4. Lay it in the dust, or bury it, to prevent all hopes of Restitution.

* Isa.30.18. 6 * Arise, O LORD, in thine anger r. lift up thy self s, because of the rage of mine enemies: * Psal.35.23. and * awake for me to the judgment that thou hast commanded t.

r Oppose thy just Anger to their causless and sinful Rage against me. s That thou mayest give them a deadly blow. A Metaphor from men who arise and lift up themselves to do so. Heb. Be thou exalted; glorifie thyself, and shew thy self to be above them. t To execute that just and righteous Sentence of Saul's Deposition, and my Advancement, which thou hast commanded, i. e. appointed, (as that word is used, Psal. 148. 5. 1 Kings 17. 4. and in this very case, 1 Sam. 13. 14.) and declared by thy holy Prophet Samuel.

7 So shall the congregation of the people u compass thee about x: for their sakes y therefore return thou on high z.

u Either, 1. A great number of all sorts of people, who shall observe thy Justice, and Holiness, and Goodness in pleading my righteous Cause against my cruel and implacable Oppressor. Or rather, 2. The whole body of thy people Israel, to whom both these Hebrew words are commonly ascribed in holy Scripture. x They will, and I as their King and Ruler in thy stead will take care that they shall come from all parts and meet together to worship thee, which in Saul's time they have grosly neglected, and been permitted to neglect, and to offer to thee Praises and Sacrifices for thy Favour to me, and for the manifold Benefits which they shall enjoy by my Means, and under my Government. y Or, for its sake. i.e. For the sake of thy Congregation, which now is wofully dissipated and oppressed, and have in a great measure lost all administration of Justice, and exercise of Religion. z Or, return to thy high place. i.e. To thy Tribunal to sit there and judge my cause. An Allusion to earthly Tribunals, which generally are set up on high above the people, 1 Kings 10.19.

8 The LORD shall judge the people a: * Psal.18.20. judge me, O LORD, * according to my righteousness, and according to mine Integrity that is in me b.

a It belongs to thee to judge all persons and people, and to give Sentence between them, especially when they appeal unto thee; which I now do. b If I be guilty of those evil Designs, towards him, wherewith Cush and others charge me, do thou give Sentence against me; but if I be just and innocent towards him, as thou knowest I am and have been, do thou plead my right.

* 1 Sam.16.7. 1 Chr.28.9. Psal.139.1. Jer.11.20. & 17. 10. & 20. 12. Rev. 2. 23. 9 O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end c, but establish d the just e: * for the righteous God trieth the heart and reins f.

c Let the Malice of mine Enemies cease, put a stop to their wicked Practises, either by charging their hearts, or by tying their Hands, or some other way: Say to it, as thou dost to the Sea, Hitherto hast thou gone, but thou shalt go no further, and here shall thy proud Waves be stayed. Or, The wickedness of the Wicked shall have an end, not an end of perfection, which is to be accomplished; but an end of termination, it shall cease; and an end of destruction, it shall be rooted out. Or, Let, I pray thee, Wickedness consume the wicked. i.e. Those that are maliciously and incorruptibly such. And so this Prayer is opposed to that following Prayer for the just. And such Prayers against some wicked Men we find used by prophetical Persons, which are not rashly to be drawn into president by ordinary Persons. d Or, and thou wilt establish, or confirm, or uphold: which is opposed to that coming to an end, or consuming last mentioned. e All just Persons and Causes, and mine in particular which is so. f And therefore he knows that I have not so much as a thought or a desire of that Mischief which Cush and others report I am designing against Saul.

10 † My defence is of God g, which saveth the upright in heart h. † Heb. my buckler is upon God.

g Heb. My shield is upon God. He doth as it were carry my Shield before me. See 1 *Sam.*17.7. He doth and will protect me against all mine enemies. h And therefore me, whom he knoweth to be sincere and honest in my carriage towards him and towards Saul.

11 ‖ God judgeth i the righteous, and God is angry with the wicked k every day l. ‖ Or, God is a righteous judg.

i i. e. Defendeth, or avengeth, or delivereth, as this word is oft used, as *Deut.*32.36. *Psal.*9.4. and 10.18. and 26.1. &c. To judge, is properly to give Sentence; which because it may be done either by absolving and acquitting from Punishment; or by condemning and giving up to Punishment, therefore it is sometimes used for the one, and sometimes for the other, as the Circumstances of the place determine it. k Which tho' it may seem a bold Supplement, yet is necessary, and easily fetched out of the next and following verses. l Even then, when his Providence seems to favour them, and they are most secure and confident.

12 If he m turn not n, he o will whet his sword p, he hath bent his bow q, and made it ready.

m i. e. The wicked man last mentioned, either Cush, or Saul. n From this wicked course of Calumniating or Persecuting me. o i. e. God, who is often designed by this Pronoun, being easily to be understood from the nature of the thing. p i. e. Will prepare, and hasten, and speedily execute his Judgments upon him. q Did I say, He will do it, nay, he hath already done it, his Sword is drawn, his Bow is bent, and the Arrows are prepared and ready to be shot.

13 He hath also prepared for him r the instruments of death s; he † ordained t his arrows against the persecutors u. † Heb. maketh. Psal.45.5.

r Either, 1. For or against the Persecutors, as it follows. Or rather, 2. For himself, for his own use, to wit, to shoot against his Enemies. s i. e. Arrows, or other deadly Weapons. t Heb. maketh or worketh, designeth or fitteth for his very use. u Or, against furious and fiery Persecutors, as the word signifies, and as it is used Gen 31.36. *Psal.*10.2. *Lam.*4.19.

14 * Behold, he x travelleth with iniquity, and hath conceived mischief and brought forth falshood y. * Job 15.35. Psal.59.3. Jam.1.15.

x i.e. The Wicked, and is undeniably manifest from the matter and context. y This Metaphor noteth his deep Design, and continued Course, and vigorous Endeavours for the doing of Mischief, and his restlessness and pain till he have accomplished it.

15 † He made a pit, and digged it, * and is fallen into the ditch which he made z. † Heb. he hath digged a pit. * Job 4. 8. Psal.9.15. & 10.2. & 35.8. & 141.10. Prov.5.22.

z Hath brought that Evil upon himself which he intended against me. Which may be understood either of Saul, who whilest he plotted against David's Life, ran into apparent hazard of losing his own, 1 *Sam.*24. and 26. PSAL. VIII.

To the chief Muſician upon Gittith a, a Pſalm of David b.

a The ſame title is prefixed to Pſal. 81. and 84. This alſo is ſuppoſed to be the Name of a Tune or Song, or Inſtrument ſo called, becauſe it was either invented or much uſed in Gath. Some render it, For the Wine-preſſes, and ſay it was to be ſung at the time of Vintage. b It is a great Queſtion among Interpreters, whether this Pſalm ſpeak of Man in general, and of the Honor which God put upon him in his Creation; or only of the Man Chriſt Jeſus. Poſſibly both may be reconciled and put together, and the Controverſy, if rightly ſtated, may be ended. For the ſcope and buſineſs of this Pſalm ſeems plainly to be this, to diſplay and celebrate the great Love and Kindneſs of God to Man-kind not only in his Creation, but alſo, and eſpecially in his Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt; whom, as he was Man, he advanced to the Honor and Dominion here mentioned, that he might carry on that great and glorious Work. So Chriſt is the principal Subject of this Pſalm, of whom it is interpreted both by Chriſt himſelf, Mat. 21. 16. and by his holy Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 15. 27. Heb. 2. 6, 7.

1. O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name c in all the Earth d! * who haſt ſet thy glory above the heavens e.

* Pſal. 113. 4. & 148. 13.

c (i. e.) Thy Fame or Glory, as it is explained in the next clauſe, and as the Name commonly ſignifies, as Gen. 6. 4. Eccleſ. 7. 1. Phil. 2. 9. And this Glory of God is moſt eminent in the Goſpel and the work of Redemption. d Not only in Iſrael, to which the Name and Knowledg of God was confined, Pſal. 76. 2. and 147. 19. but among all Nations. Which ſhews that this Pſalm ſpeaks of the Meſſias, and the times of the new Teſtament. See Iſai. 40. 5. Mal. 1. 5. &c. e What do I ſpeak of the Earth? thy Glory or Praiſe reacheth to the Heavens, and indeed, above all the viſible Heavens, even to the Heaven of Heavens; where thy Throne of Glory is eſtabliſhed, where the bleſſed Angels celebrate thy Praiſes, where Chriſt ſitteth at thy right Hand in glorious Majeſty, from whence he poureth down excellent Gifts upon Babes, &c. as it followeth.

2. * Out of the mouth of babes and ſucklings f, haſt thou † ordained ſtrength g, becauſe of thine enemies, that thou mighteſt † ſtill h the enemy i and the avenger k.

* Mat. 21. 16.
† Heb. founded.
† Heb. cauſe to ceaſe.

f Either 1. Properly ſuch. For there is much of God's Glory ſeen in Infants in their Conception and ſtrange Progreſs from ſmall and contemptible Beginnings, in their Preſervation and Nouriſhment in the dark Cell of the Womb, in their bringing forth, and bringing up, in providing Breaſts and Milk for them, and keeping them from innumerable dangers, from which they are utterly unable to keep themſelves. But this though it ſets forth God's Praiſe, yet how it ſtills the Enemy and Avenger, ſeems not clear. Or rather 2. Metaphorically ſo called, babes not ſo much in age and years, as in diſpoſition and condition, weak and fooliſh, and contemptible and harmleſs Perſons, who are very frequently called Babes or Children, as 2 Chron. 13. 7. Prov. 1. 4. Eccleſ. 10. 16. Iſa. 3. 4. Mat. 11. 25. Eph. 4. 14. &c. For ſuch are very unfit to grapple with an Enemy: and therefore when ſuch perſons conquer the moſt powerful and malicious Enemies, it muſt needs exceedingly confound and ſilence them, and mightily advance the Glory of God: as indeed it did, when ſuch mean and obſcure Perſons as the Apoſtles, and Miniſters, and Diſciples of Chriſt were, did maintain and propagate the Goſpel in ſpight of all the Wit, and Power, and Rage of their Enemies. See 1 Cor. 1. 25, 27, 28, 29. And of ſuch Babes as theſe, Chriſt himſelf expounds this place, Mat. 21. 16. Of which more, God willing, upon that place. g Or, thou haſt founded (or confirmed, or eſtabliſhed, or firmly ſettled, or fitted, or perfected, as it is rendered by the LXX and vulgar Latin here, and by St. Matthew, Ch. 21. 16. (i. e.) perfectly or firmly ſettled) Strength: By which he ſeems to underſtand either 1. The Celebration or Praiſe of his Strength or Power, by comparing this with Mat. 21. 16. where it is rendered Praiſe. So it is onely a Metonymy of the Adjunct, which is moſt frequent in Scripture and all Authors. And ſo the word Strength ſeems to be taken Pſal. 29. 1. and 96. 7. Or 2. A ſtrong and mighty Kingdom, the Abſtract being put for the Concrete, than which nothing is more frequent, even the Kingdom of Chriſt, or his Goſpel, which is oft called the Arm or Power of God, as Pſal. 110. 2. Iſa. 53. 1. 1 Cor. 1. 18, 24. And this Kingdom being an everlaſting, and invincible, and all-conquering Kingdom, Dan. 2. 44. it is no wonder it is here called Strength. And this Goſpel or Kingdom is here ſaid to be founded or eſtabliſhed, not by the Hands or valiant Actions of Men of Might, as other Kingdoms are, but meerly by the Mouths of Babes, &c. (i. e.) by the Words and Diſcourſes of Chriſts Apoſtles and Diſciples. Which is juſtly obſerved and celebrated here as a wonderful Work of God. h (i. e.) Silence, and Confound, and Conquer either by Convincing and Converting them, or by deſtroying them. i The Enemies of God and of his People, the Devil, the head of them, whoſe Kingdom and Power is aboliſhed by this means, and all Men who fight under his Banner againſt God and Chriſt and his Members. k Which Title moſt truly and fitly agrees, firſt to the Devil, who being ſentenced by God to eternal Flames, and Conquered, and Tormented by Chriſt, maketh it his great buſineſs to revenge himſelf, which becauſe he cannot do upon God and Chriſt, he endeavours to do it upon their Servants and Children; and next, to all theſe Men who are his Vaſſals, and eſpouſe his Quarrel; who alſo are provoked and conceive, though falſly, that they are injured by the Goſpel, and by the Preachers, Profeſſors, and Practiſers of it, and therefore ſeek to revenge themſelves of them. Whereof we have an eminent Inſtance, Revel. 11. 10. Compare Heb. 11. 37.

3. When I conſider thy heavens l, the work of thy fingers m, the moon and the ſtars n which thou haſt ordained o.

l Thine by Creation, as it follows, and m (i. e.) of thy hand, as it is expreſſed Pſal. 102. 25. A part being here put for the whole: God's hand and finger being indifferently uſed to note his power, as Exod. 8. 19. Luk. 11. 20. &c. Though ſome conceive that by this Phraſe he intended to ſignifie, both with what facility God made this glorious Work, even with a touch of his Finger; and with what curious and exquiſite Artifice he framed it; the Fingers being much uſed in ſuch Works. n Either the Son is included under this general Title: or he omitted it, becauſe he made this Pſalm by Night, when the Sun did not fall within his Contemplation. o Or, eſtabliſhed, or directed, or diſpoſed, or ordered, (i. e.) placed in that excellent and unalterable Order, and directed to all their ſeveral Courſes or Motions.

4. * What p is man q that thou art mindful of him r? and the ſon of man s that thou viſiteſt him t?

* Job 7. 17. Pſal. 144. 4. Heb. 2. 6.

p (i. e.) How mean and inconſiderable a thing is Man, if compared with thy glorious Majeſty, who art ſo infinite in Power and Wiſdom, as thou haſt ſhewed in the Frame of the Heavens, &c. q Heb. infirm, or miſerable man. By which it is apparent that he ſpeaks of Man, not according to the ſtate of his Creation, but as fallen into a ſtate of Sin and Miſery, and Mortality. r (i. e.) Careſt for him, and conferreſt ſuch high Favours upon him. s Heb. the Son of Adam, that great Apoſtate from, and Rebel againſt God, the ſinful Son of a ſinful Father, his Son by likeneſs of Diſpoſition and Manners no leſs than by Procreation. All which tends to magnifie the following Mercy. t Not in anger, as that Word is ſometimes uſed, but with thy Grace and Mercy, as it is taken Gen. 21. 1. Exod. 4. 31. Pſal. 65. 9. and 106. 4. and 144. 3.

5. For thou haſt made him a little lower than † the angels u, and haſt crowned him x with glory and honour.

† Heb. the Gods Pſal. 82. 6. & 138. 1.

u Thou haſt in and through Chriſt mercifully and wonderfully reſtor'd Man to his primitive and happy Eſtate, in which he was but one remove below the Angels; from which he was fallen by Sin. x (i. e.) Man, fallen and loſt Man: who is indeed actually crowned and reſtored to the Glory and Dominion here following, not in his own perſon, but in Chriſt his Head and Repreſentative, who received this Crown and Dominion, not ſo much for himſelf, who did not need it, as for Man's good and in his ſtead; which alſo he will in due time communicate unto all his Members. And ſo the two differing Expoſitions of this place concerning Mankind, and concerning Chriſt, may be reconciled. For he ſpeaks of that happy and honourable Eſtate, by God's Favour conferred, firſt upon Chriſt, of whom therefore this place is rightly Expounded, Heb. 2. 6, 7, 8. and then by his hands upon Mankind, even upon all that believe in him. And ſo this whole place compared with that, may be thus Paraphraſed. What is Man that thou ſhouldeſt mind or viſit him by thy Son, whom thou haſt ſent into the World! Who, that he might reſtore Man to that happy and glorious Eſtate which was but a little below that of the Angels, was pleaſed to take upon him Man's miſerable and mortal Nature, and thereby to make himſelf (who was far above all Angels, even their Lord and God) lower than the Angels, mortal and miſerable for a little time; after which he was advanced to the higheſt Honour, and to an univerſal Dominion over all God's Works, the Angels not excepted.

6. * Thou madeſt him to have Dominion y over the works of thy hands; * thou haſt put all things z under his feet ‖:

* Gen. 1. 26, 28. * 1 Cor. 15. 25.

y Thou didſt give all Power and all things into his hands, Mat. 28. 18. John 13. 3. z Both in Heaven, where are the Angels mentioned v. 5. and in the Earth, Air and Sea, as it follows. For nothing is excepted beſides God, 1 Cor. 15. 25, 27. Heb. 2. 8. ‖ (i. e.) Made them ſubject to him, as this Thraſe oft ſignifies. See Deut. 33. 3. Judg. 5. 27. Pſal. 18. 38. and 110. 1.

† Heb. Flocks of Oxen all of them.

7. † All ſheep and Oxen †, yea, and the beaſts of the field * :

8. The fowl of the Air, and the fiſh of the ſea, and whatſoever paſſeth through the paths of the ſea.

9. O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth.

† Here is no perfect Enumeration, but under theſe are comprehended all other Beaſts, and much more Men and Angels. * (i. e.) The wild Beaſts: which together with divers Fowls and Fiſhes were ſubject to Chriſt, and are governed and employed as it pleaſeth him; although many of them be without the reach, and are not brought under the power of any other Man.

PSAL. IX.

To the chief muſician upon Muth-labben a, a Pſalm of David.

a This alſo ſeems to be another Title of ſome Song or Tune, or Inſtrument: of which we muſt and may be content to be Ignorant, as the Jewiſh Doctors alſo are. Some render it, Upon the Death of his Son, to wit, Abſalom, or of one called Labben, or, of the middle Man, or the Man that ſtood between the two Armies, to wit, Goliah, who is ſo called in the Hebrew Text, 1 Sam. 17. 4. But none of theſe ſuit with the deſign and matter of the Pſalm, which is more general, and relates to his former manifold Dangers, and the Deliverance which God had graciouſly given him out of them. And that of Goliah agrees not with v. 14. where there is mention of praiſing God in Zion, which then and long after was in the Hands of the Jebuſites.

‖ Or, I will praiſe the Lord.

1. ‖ I Will praiſe thee, O LORD, with my heart b, I will ſhew forth all thy marvellous works c.

b (i. e.) With a ſincere, and affectionate, and united Heart. c I will diſcourſe in the general of thy manifold Wonders wrought for me, and for thy Church and People formerly. The Particle all is here, as it is oft elſewhere taken in a reſtrained Sence.

2. I will be glad and rejoyce in thee d: I will ſing praiſe to thy name, O thou moſt high.

d (i. e.) In thy favour and help vouchſafed to me.

3. When mine enemies are turned back e, they ſhall fall and periſh f at thy preſence g.

e (i. e.) Diſcomfited and put to Flight. f They ſhall not ſave themſelves by Flight, and reſerve themſelves to do further Miſchief, but ſhall ſtumble as it were at Gall-traps by thee laid in their way, and ſhall be purſued and overtaken, and cut off. g Upon thy appearance againſt them. One angry Look of thine is able to confound and deſtroy them. Heb. from thy face, becauſe thou didſt march in the head of our Armies, and againſt them. They could not ſtand before thee. So he aſcribes the Honour of his Victories to God only, and to his Preſence and aſſiſtance.

† Heb. Thou haſt made my Judgment. † Heb. In righteouſneſs.

4. For † thou haſt maintained my right and my cauſe h, thou ſateſt in the throne i judging † right k.

h (i. e.) My righteous Cauſe againſt thine and mine Enemies. i Thou didſt judg and give Sentence for me. k Or, O righteous Judg, or, as a juſt Judg.

5. Thou haſt rebuked l the heathen m, thou haſt deſtroyed the wicked, thou haſt put out their name n for ever and ever.

l (i. e.) Puniſhed, as Pſal. 6. 1. or deſtroyed, as it is explained in the next Clauſe. m To wit, the Philiſtines and other heathen Nations, who did from time to time moleſt David, or the people of Iſrael. n Either that Fame and Honour which they had gained by their former Exploits, but now utterly loſt by their ſhameful Defeats: or their very Memorial as it fared with Amaleck.

‖ Or, the deſtructions of the enemy are come to a perpetual end, and their cities haſt thou deſtroyed, &c.

6. ‖ O thou enemy o, deſtructions are come to a perpetual end p: and thou q haſt deſtroyed Cities, their memorial is periſhed with them r.

o This is a ſudden Apoſtrophe to the Enemies of God's people, Philiſtins, Amorites, or other Nations, who had formerly made great Havock and Waſte among them. p Thou haſt deſtroyed the Iſraelitiſh Nation utterly and irrecoverably, and as it follows, their defenced Cities, and their very Name and Memory, according to thy own deſire. So it is a Sarcaſme or Irony, an uſual Figure in Scripture and all Authors, whereby the quite contrary is ſignified. To wit, That they were not only fruſtrated of their Deſires and Hopes of deſtroying the Iſraelites, but were alſo ſubdued, and in a great part deſtroyed by them. Or this Verſe may be underſtood of the great Waſt and Ruine which God's Enemies had brought upon Iſrael before this time: which is here remembred, to make the Iſraelites more thankful for their later or preſent Deliverances. Or it may be taken as a Prophecy of the future Calamities which the Enemies ſhould by God's permiſſion bring upon Iſrael, of which he ſpeaks as of a thing paſt and done, after the manner of the Prophets. But this place is otherwiſe rendered in the Margent of our Bibles, and by divers others, The Deſtructions of the enemy (which may be underſtood either 1. Actively, which they cauſed. Or, 2. Paſſively, which they felt) are come to a perpetual end, or, are fully and finally compleated. q Either 1. Thou, O God, who is oft underſtood and couched in a Pronoun in this manner, Thou haſt deſtroyed their Cities. Or rather 2. Thou, O Enemy: as may be gathered both from the foregoing Clauſe, where it is ſo expreſſed; and from the next Verſe, where it follows by way of oppoſition to this, But the Lord, &c. r The places and people are utterly extinct.

7. But the LORD ſhall endure for ever s: he hath prepared t his throne for judgment.

s Though Cities and People may periſh for ever, yet the Lord abides for ever. Which is ſufficient for the Enemies Terror, and for the Comfort of his Church. t Or, eſtabliſhed, by his immutable purpoſe, and his irrevocable promiſe.

8. And * he ſhall judge the world u in righteouſneſs, he ſhall miniſter judgment to the people in uprightneſs. * Pſal. 96. 13. & 98. 9.

u Not you onely, but all the Enemies of his People, and all the Men of the World.

9. * The LORD alſo will be † a refuge for the oppreſſed x, a refuge in † times † of trouble. * Pſal. 37. 39. & 46. 1. & 91. 2. † Heb. An high place. † Gr. Seaſons.

x God will not only judg the World at the laſt day, and then give Sentence for his people againſt their Enemies, but even at preſent he will give them his Protection.

10. And they that know y thy name z will put their truſt in thee: for thou, LORD, haſt not forſaken a them that ſeek thee b. † Heb. In trouble. So Gr.

y (i. e.) That throughly underſtand and duly conſider. z (i. e.) Thy Nature and Perfections, thy infinite Power and Wiſdom, and Faithfulneſs and Goodneſs: which make a perſon a moſt fit and proper Object for Truſt. The name of God is moſt frequently put for God, as he hath manifeſted himſelf in his Word and Works, as Deut. 28. 58. Pſal. 7. 17. and 20. 1. Prov. 18. 10. &c. a The experience of thy Faithfulneſs to thy people in all Ages, is a juſt ground for their Confidence. b (i. e.) That ſeek Help and Relief from thee by ſervent Prayer, mixed with Faith, or truſt in God, as is expreſſed in the former Clauſe.

11. Sing praiſes to the LORD which dwelleth in Zion c: declare among the people d his doings.

c Whoſe ſpecial and gracious Preſence is there; for there was the Ark at this time. d (i. e.) To the heathen Nations, that they alſo may be brought to the Knowledg and Worſhip of the true God.

12. * When he maketh inquiſition for blood e, he remembreth them f: he forgetteth not the cry of the ‖ humble g. * Gen. 9. 5. ‖ Or, Afflicted.

e Heb. Bloods. The bloodſhed or murder of his innocent and holy ones: which though he may connive at for a ſeaſon, yet he will certainly call the Authors of it to a very ſevere account, and avenge it upon them. f Either 1. The Humble, as it follows, or the Oppreſſed, v. 9. That truſt in him, and ſeek to him, ver. 10. Whom he ſeemed to have forgotten. Or 2. The bloods laſt mentioned, for that Noun, and this Pronoun are both of the maſculine Gender: and then remembring is put for revenging or puniſhing, as it is Deut. 25. 17, 19. Neh. 6. 14. Jer. 14. 10. and 44. 21. and oft elſewhere. g Or, meek, as this word which is uſed alſo Zech. 9. 9. is Tranſlated Mat. 21. 5. Who do not, and cannot, and will not avenge themſelves, but commit their Cauſe to me, as the God to whom Vengeance belongeth. Or afflicted, or oppreſſed ones.

13. Have mercy upon me, O LORD, conſider my trouble h which I ſuffer of them that hate me, thou that lifteſt me up from the gates of death i:

h To wit, compaſſionately and effectually, ſo as to bring me out of it. i From the Brink or Mouth of the Grave into which I was dropping, being as near Death as a Man is to the City, that is come to the very Gates of it. And ſo the Phraſe is uſed Pſal. 107. 18. Iſa. 38. 10. and in other Authors, [of whom ſee my Latin Synopſis.] Gates elſewhere ſignify Power and Policy, becauſe the Gates of Cities were places both of Counſel and Strength; but the Gates of Death are never ſo taken in Scripture.

14. That I may ſhew forth all thy praiſe in the gates k of the daughter of Zion l: I will rejoyce m in thy ſalvation.

k (i. e.)

k (i. e.) In the great Aſſemblies, which were uſually in the Gates. Comp. Prov. 31. 31. Iſa. 3. 26. Theſe Gates he elegantly oppoſeth to the former, and declareth that if he be brought off them he will go into theſe. l Either 1. Of Jeruſalem, ſo called alſo Iſa. 1. 8. Zech. 9. 9. Becauſe at this time it was ſubject to Zion; which at this time was the ſeat of the King's Palace, and of the Ark. For Cities or Towns belonging or ſubject unto any Metropolis, are commonly called its Daughters, as Joſ. 15. 45. 2 Chron. 13. 19. Pſal. 48. 11. As the chief Cities are called Mothers, as 2 Sam. 20. 19. Gal. 4. 26. Or 2. Of the People who live in or belong to, or meet together for civil and religious Matters in Zion. For Cities are as it were Mothers to their People, giving them Birth and Breeding, and therefore the People are commonly called their Daughters. So the Names of the Daughter of Egypt, Jer. 46. 11. and of Edom, Lam. 4. 21, 22. and of Tyre, Pſal. 45. 12. and of Babel, Pſal. 137. 8. and of Jeruſalem, Lam. 2. 13, 15. Mich. 4. 8. Are put for the People of thoſe places. m To wit, with ſpiritual Joy and Thankſgiving, elſe it were no fit Motive to be uſed to God in Prayer.

* Pſal. 7. 15. & 57. 6. Prov. 22. 8.

15. * The heathen are ſunk down in the pit that they made n: in the net which they hid is their own foot taken.

n Fallen into that Deſtruction which they deſigned to bring upon us.

16. The LORD is known o by the judgment which he executeth p: the wicked is ſnared

* Pſal. 92. 3. in the work of his own hands, * Higgaion q, Selah.

o Or, hath made himſelf known, or famous even among his Enemies, by his moſt wiſe Counſels and wonderful Works. p Upon the Wicked, as it followeth. q This is either a muſical Term, or a Note of Attention, a kind of behold, intimating that the Matter deſerves deep and frequent Meditation, or Conſideration, as the word ſignifies.

17. The wicked ſhall be turned into hell r, and all the nations s that forget God t.

r Either 1. Into the Grave, which is oft called Scheol, into which they are ſaid to be turned, or to return, becauſe they were made of, or taken out of the Duſt. Eccleſ. 12. 7. Or 2. Into the place of eternal Perdition; which alſo is ſometimes called Scheol, as Prov. 15. 24. and elſewhere. For he ſeems to ſpeak here of thoſe puniſhments which are peculiar to the Wicked, whereas the Grave is common to good and bad. And as V. 8. he ſeems to ſpeak of the laſt and general Judgment of all the World, ſo this Verſe may be underſtood of the general Puniſhment of all Perſons and Nations conſequent upon it. And into this place wicked Men may be ſaid to be turned back, or to return, either 1. Becauſe it is their own proper place, Act. 1. 25. to which they belong, and from which they have their Original and their wicked Qualities, as being of their Father the Devil, John 8. 44. In which reſpect the Locuſts (who are by all Interpreters underſtood to be living Men) are ſaid to come out of the bottomleſs pit, Revel. 9. 2, 3. Or 2. Becauſe they had ſet themſelves as it were in Battel-Array againſt God, and were beaten back and driven from his Preſence into their Graves, and into Hell it ſelf. s Whom their great Numbers and Power cannot protect from God's Wrath. t That do not conſider nor regard God, nor his Precepts, nor his Threatnings and Judgments, but go on ſecurely and preſumptuouſly in their oppreſſive and wicked Courſes.

* Pſal. 12. 5.

18. For the needy ſhall not alway be forgotten u: * the expectation of the poor ſhall not x periſh for ever.

19. Ariſe, O LORD, let not man prevail, let the heathen be judged in thy ſight.

u Though God for a time may ſeem to neglect or forget them, and ſuffer their Enemies to triumph over them. x Which negative Particle is fitly underſtood out of the former Clauſe, as it is Pſal. 1. 5. and 44. 18. Iſa. 23. 4. and 28. 27, 28.

20. Put them in fear y, O LORD, that the nations may know themſelves to be but men z, Selah.

y Subdue their proud and inſolent Spirits, and ſtrike them with Terror, or with ſome terrible Judgment. z Heb. Weak and miſerable, and mortal Men, and therefore altogether unable to oppoſe the omnipotent and eternal God. This he ſaith, becauſe wicked Men when they are advanced to great Power and Majeſty, are very prone to forget their own Frailty, and to carry themſelves as if they were Gods. See Iſa. 31. 3. Ezek. 30. 7, 8. Dan. 5. 21.

PSAL. X.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm contains David's Complaint unto God againſt his malicious Enemies, eſpecially thoſe of his own People, whoſe wicked and deceitful Practiſes he here deſcribes, and then commits his Cauſe to God, and begs his help againſt them.

1. WHY ſtandeſt thou afar off a, O LORD? why hideſt thou thy ſelf b † in times of trouble c?

† Heb. at ſeaſons in trouble. So Gr.

a Like one that neither ſees nor hears, nor regards me, nor intendeſt any help for me. b Or, thy face, out of v. 11. which did ſometimes ſhine upon me: Or, thine eyes, by comparing this with Prov. 28. 27. Iſa. 1. 15. c When I moſt need thy pity and ſuccour. Do not add Affliction to the Afflicted.

2. † The wicked in his pride d doth perſecute e the poor f: * let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.

† Heb. In the pride of the wicked he doth perſecute.

d Through pride of Heart; which makes him forget God, V. 4. and deſpiſe the poor, and oppreſs others, either becauſe they oppoſe or diſlike his wicked Courſes, or that he may have more Fewel for his Pride or Ambition. Or, in his exaltation. This is the uſe that he makes of that power and authority to which thou haſt advanced him, to perſecute thoſe whom he ſhould protect and cheriſh. He ſeems to point at Saul or his Courtiers. e With great Fervency and burning Fury, as the word ſignifies. f To wit, me who am through their Tyranny poor and deſtitute, and miſerable, and therefore the more proper Object for thy Compaſſion, and others who favour my righteous Cauſe.

* Pſal. 7. 16. & 9. 15. 16. Prov. 5. 22.

3. For the wicked boaſteth g of his † hearts deſire h, and * ‖ bleſſeth the covetous i, whom the LORD abhorreth k.

† Heb. Souls. * Prov. 28. 4 Rom. 1. 32. ‖ Or, the covetous bleſſeth himſelf, he abhorreth the LORD.

g Or, glorieth, or praiſeth, or pleaſeth himſelf. h Or, in, or concerning, or becauſe of the deſire, or concupiſcence, or luſt of his heart, or ſoul; which word is added to note the vehemency and fervency of it. He glorieth in his very Luſts, which are his Shame, Phil. 3. 19. and eſpecially in the ſatisfaction of his deſires how wickedly ſoever he gets it. Deſire is oft put for the thing deſired, as Pſal. 21. 2. and 78. 29, 30. i And as he applaudeth himſelf, ſo he commends others that are greedy after, and get abundance of Gain, though it be done by Fraud and Violence, accounting ſuch the only happy Men. Or, the covetous (the ſame with the wicked enlarging his deſire, as was now ſaid) bleſſeth, or applaudeth, or flatteresh himſelf in what he hath already gotten, and in the confident expectation of the continuance and encreaſe of his worldly Wealth and Glory. k So his judgment as well as practice is contrary to God's. Or, rather without any Supplement, as it is in the Margent, He abhorreth, or deſpiſeth, or provoketh the Lord. He ſets himſelf not only againſt Men, but againſt God himſelf, as he declareth more fully in the next Verſe.

4. The wicked, through the pride l of his countenance m, will not ſeek after God n: ‖ God is not in all his * thoughts o.

‖ Or, all his thoughts are, There is no God. * Pſal. 14. 1. & 53. 1.

l By which he ſcorns to ſtoop to God, or to own any Superior, and makes himſelf and his own Luſts his only Rule, and his laſt end, and is full of ſelf-confidence, and a conceit of his own ſelf-ſufficiency and unchangeable Felicity, as is noted V. 6. m So called, becauſe though Pride be properly ſeated in the Heart; whence it is called Pride, or loftineſs of Heart, or Spirit, as Pſal. 131. 1. Prov. 16. 18. Eccleſ. 7. 8. &c. Yet it is manifeſted in the Countenance, and therefore is oft deſcribed by lofty Looks, as Pſal. 101. 5. and 131. 1. Prov. 6. 17. and 21. 4. and 30. 13. &c. Which poſſibly was done purpoſely to meet with the Excuſes of proud perſons, who when they are charged with Pride for their looks or geſtures, or apparel, or the like, uſe to make this Apology for themſelves; that Pride lies in the Heart, and not in theſe outward things. n (i. e.) Not ſeek, or enquire into the Mind and Will of God, to order his Life by it ſo as to pleaſe God, nor ſeek to him by Prayer for his Favour and Bleſſing. But the words after God, are not in the Hebrew, and it is thought by ſome too great Boldneſs to add them here. And therefore others omit it, and render the Hebrew words, will not ſearch, or conſider, to wit, his Actions, which ſeems to be a more natural and eaſie Supplement: he will not trouble himſelf to enquire whether his Actions be juſt or unjuſt, pleaſing or offenſive to God, but without any care or conſideration ruſheth into Sin, and doth whatſoever ſeemeth right in his own Eyes. But theſe and the former words are and may be, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew, thus rendered without any Supplement, The Wicked through his pride (for ſo this Hebrew word by it ſelf ſignifies, Iſa. 5. 16. and 10. 33.) will not ſeek his (i. e. Gods, which is plain both from the foregoing and following words) face, which is an uſual phraſe in Scripture, as 2 Chron. 7. 14. Pſal. 24. 6. and 27. 8. and 105. 4. &c. o He hath no ſerious thoughts of, nor regard unto God or his word, which ought to command him, or his Threats and Judgments, which ſhould keep him in awe. Or, all his thoughts are there is no God, to wit, no ſuch God as minds the Affairs of the World, and the Actions of Men, and puniſheth Sinners. He was a Deiſt, and owned a God, at leaſt in words, but denyed his Providence.

5. His ways are alwayes grievous p: * thy judgments q are far above out of his ſight r: as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them s.

* Prov. 24. 7.

p His whole courſe and carriage is vexatious to all that are within his reach, but eſpecially to the poor who cannot right themſelves, and to juſt and good Men, whom he hateth and perſecuteth. Or, His ways, (i. e.) his deſigns and enterprizes, at all times are proſperous, or ſucceſsful, or do bring forth: for this Verb ſignifies as the pains and trouble, ſo alſo the ſucceſs and comfort, of Child-bearing, or the bringing forth Children, as Pſal. 29. 9. Iſa. 54. 1. Jer. 4. 31. And the accompliſhment or diſappointment of deſigns is frequently expreſſed by this Metaphor: of which ſee 2 Kings 19. 3. Pſal. 7. 14. Iſa. 59. 4. &c. And this ſence ſeems beſt to ſuit with the Context. q Either 1. Thy Laws, which are oft called Judgments. Or rather, by Threatnings denounced againſt, and Puniſhments inflicted upon Sinners. r Either 1. He doth not feel them, thou removeſt them far from him: which indulgence of thine is the cauſe of his inſolency. Or rather 2. He doth not diſcern nor regard, nor fear them, nor think of them, but goes on ſecurely and reſolvedly in his wicked courſes. He hath not ſo much Faith nor Reaſon as to apprehend or conſider them, but like a brute-Beaſt looks onely downward to the Earth, and minds not things above him. And thus it ſeems beſt to agree with the foregoing and following Clauſes. His Devices ſucceed, and therefore he neither fears Gods Judgments nor the power of his Enemies, but fancies his Happineſs to be unchangeable, as it follows, v. 6. s (i. e.) He deſpiſeth them, being confident that he can blow them away with a Breath. This is a Geſture of contempt or diſdain both in Scripture, as Pſal. 12. 5. Mal. 1. 13. and in other Authors, as in Plautus; where one ſpeaks thus to a proud and bragging Captain, Thou haſt blown away whole Legions with thy Breath, as Leaves are blown away by a Wind.

† Heb. unto generation and generation.

6. He hath ſaid in his heart t, I ſhall not be moved u: for I ſhall † never be in adverſity x.

t He thinketh or perſwadeth himſelf. u Or, removed, to wit, from my place and happy ſtate. x Or, becauſe I am not in adverſity, therefore I never ſhall be in it. His preſent proſperity makes him ſecure for the future. Comp. Revel. 18. 7. Or, yea (for this particle ſometimes hath no other ſignification or uſe, but only to amplify or aggravate, as it is alſo taken 1 Sam. 15. 20. and 24. 11.) I ſhall never be in evil. So the ſence of the place is, I ſhall not only be kept from total ruin or a removal from my place and eſtate, but I ſhall not meet with the leaſt croſs or trouble. For this evil is not the evil of Sin, as ſome here underſtand it, in which he knew what he was, and was reſolved ever to continue, but the evil of Puniſhment, which was the only thing that he feared or regarded.

* Rom. 3. 14. † Heb. deceits. ‖ Or, iniquity.

7. * His mouth is full of curſing y, and † deceit and fraud z: under his tongue a is miſchief and ‖ vanity b.

y Either 1. Of Oaths and Blaſphemies againſt God. Or 2. Of reviling and execration of other men, eſpecially thoſe that are good; or thoſe that ſtand in his way and hinder his wicked deſigns. Or rather 3. Of Oaths and Imprecations againſt himſelf, of which this word is uſed Numb. 5. 21. Deut. 29. 12, 21. Neh. 10. 29. By which he endeavours to gain Credit and to make his Neighbours ſecure, and ſo to make way for the deceit and fraud which here follows. For this wretched Man is repreſented both here, and in the ſucceeding Verſes, as one that doth not act with open Violence and Hoſtility, but with ſubtile and ſecret Artifices, uſing all cunning inſinuations, and Flatteries, and Lies, and among others, Oaths, of which an atheiſtical Politician ſaid, that Men were to be deceived with oaths, and Children with Rattles or Toyes. z Two words ſignifying the ſame thing, to note the greatneſs and frequency of his Deceits. Or one word may ſignifie the deceit lurking in his heart, & the other the manifeſtation of it in external Frauds and Stratagems. a Either 1. In his Heart, which is under the Tongue. Or rather 2. Under his fair and plauſible Speeches, the Miſchief here following is hid and covered. With al he ſeems to allude to Serpents, whoſe Poyſon lies hidden under their Tongue, or within their Teeth. b Or rather iniquity, as this word is oft rendered, or injury, the vexation or oppreſſion of other men, which he covers with theſe fair pretences.

* Hab. 3. 14. † Heb. hide themſelves.

8. He ſitteth in the lurking places of the villages c, * in the ſecret places d doth he murder the innocent: his eyes † are privily ſet e againſt the poor.

c Not within the Villages, which is not a fit place for lurking, but about them, in the ways bordering upon them or leading to them, as Robbers uſe to do. d That he may avoid the ſhame and puniſhment of Men; which is the only thing that he fears. e Heb. Are hid. The ſence is either 1. He winketh as men do when they ſhoot their Arrows at a mark. Or rather 2. He watcheth and looketh out of his lurking-place, to ſpy what Paſſengers come that way. He alludes ſtill to the practices of Robbers.

† Heb. in the ſecret places.

9. He lieth in wait † ſecretly as a lion in his den f: he lieth in wait to catch the poor: he doth catch g the poor when he draweth him h into his net.

f Where he lurks and waits for prey. g Or ſnatch, or ſeize upon, to wit, with violence, and to devour or deſtroy him. h Or, by drawing him: or, after he hath drawn him. He layeth Snares for him, and when he takes him, tears him in pieces.

† Heb. he breaketh himſelf. ‖ Or, into his ſtrong parts.

10. † He croucheth, and humbleth himſelf i, that the poor may fall k ‖ by his ſtrong ones l.

i Like a Lion (for he continues the ſame Metaphor) which gathereth himſelf together & lies cloſe upon the ground, partly that he may not be diſcovered, and partly that he may more ſuddenly, and ſurely, and fiercely lay hold upon his prey. But for this Tranſlation, becauſe this and is not in the Hebrew, and there is another and there prefixed to the firſt Verb; ſome joyn that firſt Verb to the end of the tenth Verſe, and render the place thus, He catcheth the poor by drawing him into his net, and breaks him to pieces, as that Verb properly ſignifies. So there is only a defect of the pronoun, which is moſt frequent. And this makes the Sence compleat, which otherwiſe would be imperfect in that Verſe, and ſheweth us what he doth with his prey when he hath taken it. And this 10*th*. Verſe begins very well with the next Verb, He humbleth himſelf: Or, He ſtoops, or bends himſelf. k Or, that he may fall (for this Verb is ſometimes taken actively, as Joſ. 11. 7. Job 1. 15.) upon the poor. That having firſt couched and lay'n down and then of a ſudden riſing, he may leap and fall upon his prey, like a Lion. l (i. e.) By his ſtrong members, his teeth or paws. So it is an Ellipſis of the noun Subſtantive; whereof we have examples, as 2 Sam. 21. 16. new for a new ſword: and Pſal. 73. 10. full for a full Cup: and Mat. 10. 42. cold for cold Water.

* Job 22. 13. Pſal. 94. 7. & 64. 5.

11. He hath ſaid in his heart, God hath forgotten m: * he hideth his face n, he will never ſee it o.

m To wit, the poor, v. 10. or the humble, which we are taught to ſupply out of v. 12. where he ſaith, forget not the humble. He forgets and neglects all their Oppreſſions and Prayers, & doth not avenge their cauſe, as he hath ſaid he would do, nor execute Judgments upon their Oppreſſors, as he hath ſometimes done or been thought to do. n Leſt he ſhould ſee. He takes no notice of their Sufferings leſt he ſhould be engaged to help them. He will not encumber himſelf with the care of things done upon Earth, but leaves it wholly to men to manage their Affairs as they think fit. o To wit, the oppreſſion of the poor, or the deſign of oppreſſors againſt them, which is the chief ſubject of the whole Pſalm, and is particularly expreſſed v. 10.

‖ Or, afflicted.

12. Ariſe, O LORD, O God, lift up thine hand p: forget not q the ‖ humble.

p To reſcue the poor, and to ſmite their Oppreſſors with an hand ſtretched out and lifted up, that the blow may be the greater. Comp. Exod. 7. 5. Iſa. 5. 25. and 9. 12. &c. q Shew by thy appearance for their Vindication, that thou doſt remember and regard them.

13. Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God r? he hath ſaid in his heart, thou wilt not require it.

r The ſence is either 1. What is the cauſe of his contempt of God? To which queſtion the next words give an anſwer, Thy connivence makes him ſecure. Therefore ſhew thy ſelf. Or 2. Why doſt thou by giving them impunity ſuffer, and occaſion them to deſpiſe thee? Do ſo no longer. Which tacit deſire he enforceth by repreſenting their atheiſtical denial of God's Providence.

14. Thou haſt ſeen it s, for t, thou beholdeſt u miſchief and ſpite x, to requite it with thy hand y: the poor † committeth himſelf z unto thee, thou art the helper of the fatherleſs a.

s Or, but thou haſt ſeen it, and therefore they are horribly miſtaken, as they will find to their coſt. t Or, ſurely, as this particle is oft uſed, as Job 8. 6. Pſal. 73. 18. u Not as an idle Spectator, but with an eye of obſervation and vindication, as it follows. x (i. e.) All the injurious and ſpiteful, or malicious carriages of wicked men towards thoſe who are more righteous than they. y Heb. to give (i. e. to reſtore or repay, the ſimple verb for the compound; which is uſual in the Hebrew tongue) it (to wit, the miſchief which they have done to others) with thy hand, (i. e.) by thy own immediate and extraordinary providence, becauſe the oppreſſed were deſtitute of all other ſuccours. Or, to put (giving being oft uſed for putting, as hath been obſerved before) it in or into thy hand, that thou mayeſt have it always in thine Eye, and under thy care and conſideration, as the like phraſe is evidently uſed Iſa. 49. 16. Therefore thou doſt not and canſt not forget it, but wilt certainly require it. z Or, his matters or cauſe, (i. e.) The care of his perſon and righteous cauſe. Heb. he leaveth. Which word is uſed for committing to the truſt of another, Gen. 39. 6. Job 39. 14. Iſa. 10. 3. a (i. e.) Of ſuch poor oppreſſed ones as have no friend nor helper, one kind of them being put for all the reſt.

* Pſal. 7. 9. & 37. 17.

15. Break thou b the arm c of the wicked, and the evil man: * ſeek out his wickedneſs d till thou find none e.

b Or, Thou wilt break. For it may be either a Prayer or a Prophecy. c (i. e.) His ſtrength, the inſtrument of violence and miſchief. d Search for it ſo ſtrictly and puniſh theſe wicked Atheiſts ſo ſeverely. (i. e.) No ſuch wickedneſs, to wit, undiſcovered and unpuniſhed, or indeed left in the world, or at leaſt, in the Church. Which might happen, becauſe thoſe wicked men here ſpoken of ſhould be generally either convinced or rooted out, and the reſt ſhould be warned or reformed by their Example, and ſo this lewdneſs ſhould ceaſe out of the land, as the phraſe is, Ezek. 23. 48. That is ſaid to be ſought for, and not found, which is utterly loſt, as Job 20. 7, 8. Pſal. 37. 36. Revel. 16. 20. and 18. 21. And this phraſe is uſed both of good men, whoſe ſins are taken away by God's grace and mercy, pardoning and purging them away, and of wicked men in the ſence above mentioned.

*Pſal. 29. 10. & 145. 13. & 146. 10. Jer. 10. 10. Lam. 5. 19. Dan. 4. 34. & 6. 26. 1. Tim. 1. 17.

16. * The LORD is king f for ever and ever g: the heathen h are periſhed out of his land i.

f To whom it belongs to protect his Subjects. Therefore thou wilt ſave the humble and puniſh the oppreſſors. g Therefore his peoples caſe is never deſperate, ſeeing he ever lives and reigns to help them, and therefore he will help them in his time ſooner or later. h Either 1. Thoſe impious Iſraelites who oppreſſed David and other good men, whom, although they were reputed Iſraelites by themſelves and others, yet he might call them heathens for their heatheniſh opinions of God and his providence, and for their ungodly and unrighteous lives. Comp. Iſa. 1. 9. Amos 9. 7. Or 2. The Canaanites, whom God as King of the world did expel or deſtroy, and gave their land to his people. By which great example he confirms his faith and hope for the future. i (i. e.) Out of Canaan, which God calls his land, Levit. 25. 23. becauſe he ſpied it out for them, Ezek. 20. 6. and gave it to them, and fixed his preſence and dwelling in it.

17. LORD, thou haſt heard the deſire of the humble k: thou wilt ‖ prepare l their heart, thou wilt † cauſe thine ear to hear m.

k And therefore wilt ſtill do it, being unchangeable and the ſame for ever. l Or, direct or fit, by thy grace and good ſpirit, either that they may ſo pray as thou wilt hear: or that they may be made fit to receive the mercies which they deſire: which when they are, they ſhall have their prayers heard. Or, thou wilt confirm, or ſtabliſh (as this verb is oft uſed) their heart, to bear their preſent preſſures, and to wait upon, and hope, and truſt in thee for deliverance, until thou ſeeſt fit to hear and help them. m In due time, though for a ſeaſon thou ſeemeſt to turn a deaf ear to them. But this and the foregoing Verb may be taken as a Prayer, future verbs being oft uſed imperatively. Prepare or ſtabliſh their hearts (by giving them ſupport and aſſurance of help in the time of need, and then) cauſe thine ear to hear.

18. To judg n the fatherleſs and the oppreſſed, that the man of the earth o may no more ‖ oppreſs p.

n (i. e.) To defend them, and give ſentence for them, and againſt their Enemies, as this word is uſed, Deut. 32. 36. Pſal. 7. 8. and 135. 14. o (i. e.) Earthly and mortal men, who are made of the duſt and muſt return to it, ſuch as the oppreſſors of thy people are; who yet preſume moſt audaciouſly and madly to contend with thee their Maker and Judge. Therefore it is time for thee to repreſs ſuch inſolency, and to ſhew how unable they are to ſtand before thee. p To wit, the fatherleſs, laſt mentioned.

PSAL. XI.

To the chief muſician a Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm ſeems to have been compoſed by David when he was perſecuted by Saul, and forced to flee from place to place for ſafety.

1. IN the LORD a put I my truſt: how ſay ye b to my ſoul c, Flee as a bird d to your mountain e.

a (i. e.) In his faithfulneſs who hath promiſed and will, I doubt not, give me the Kingdom. b Either 1. Ye my friends: who through diffidence and diſpondency adviſed him to this courſe. Or 2. Ye my Enemies: who ſaid it ſcoffingly and inſultingly: How ſay ye. With what face or reaſon can you ſay thus to him who hath the Lord God Almighty for his refuge? c (i. e.) To me, as Pſal. 6. 4. and 7. 2. d Suddenly and ſwiftly, and to ſome remote place, where thou mayſt be out of Saul's reach. Feed not thy ſelf with vain hopes of the Kingdom, but conſult for thy own ſafety, which thou canſt not do without taking the wings of a Dove, or ſome other Bird, that thou maiſt flee away out of the land, and be at reſt, as thou ſayeſt Pſal. 55. 6. Or, flee away, O thou Bird, thou little ſilly Bird; leſt the Royal Eagle ſeize upon thee. e (i. e.) To ſome of your Mountains in Juda, and there hide thy ſelf. But this was David's common practiſe: and therefore there was no need that any ſhould adviſe him to it, or that he ſhould reprove them for that advice. Or, from (which prefix is oft wanting and to be underſtood, as Joſ. 10. 13. 2 Sam. 23. 24.) your Mountain, (i. e.) from the Mountain, or mountainous Country of Judah, as it is called Joſ. 20. 7. The Mountain being frequently put for a mountainous Country, as Numb. 13. 29. and 23. 7. Joſ. 9. 1. and 10. 6, 40. and oft elſewhere: or, from your Mountains, in which thou and thy Companions uſe to hide your ſelves: flee into ſome forreign Land where you may be ſafe. For this was the deſign of David's Enemies, as he complains 1 Sam. 26. 19. and afterward, when David was under ſore Temptations, it was his practiſe once or twice.

* Pſal. 64. 3, 4. † Heb. in darkneſs.

2. For lo f, the wicked * bend their bow, they make ready their arrow upon the ſtring g: that they may † privily h ſhoot at the upright in heart i.

f Theſe are the words, either 1. Of David's Friends or Enemies; confirming their former advice: which might ſuit with it, if that was the counſel of his Friends; but not, if it was (as it ſeems to have been) the counſel of his Enemies; for theſe would never have called themſelves wicked, nor David and his men upright in heart. Or rather 2. Of David himſelf: who having directed his ſpeech to his Enemies V. 1. Now turns it to God, and poures out before him his Complaints againſt his Enemies, as his uſual courſe is in this Book. They do not only ſpeak ſcornfully of me, as I have ſaid, but, O Lord, they act againſt me with all their might and malice. g They lay deſigns for my deſtruction, and they make all things ready to execute them. h Out of their lurking holes, Comp. Pſal. 10. 8, 9. and 64. 5. For as ſome of his Enemies did openly oppoſe him, ſo others did ſecretly undermine him, and with pretences of Friendſhip ſeek to betray him. i At me and my followers, who have manifeſted our integrity both towards God, and towards Saul, whom I have faithfully ſerved and ſpared when I could have taken away his life.

* Pſal. 60. 2, 8. & 75. 3. & 82. 5. † Heb. hath done.

3. If k * the foundations l be deſtroyed, what † can the righteous do m?

k Or, for, or when, I (i. e.) Piety and Juſtice, and Fidelity and Mercy, which are the Pillars or Foundations of a State or Kingdom, as they are called Pſal. 75. 2. 3. and 82. 5. By which they are eſtabliſhed, Prov. 29. 14. and which Saul and his Courtiers had manifeſtly violated and overthrown in perſecuting David and his Friends. The ſence is, There is nothing in publick adminiſtrations, but diſorder and oppreſſion, and right can take no place. m The condition of all righteous men (whom thou haſt engaged thy ſelf to protect and deliver) will be deſperate; which will not be for thine honour. Heb. What hath the Righteous done. As for me and my Friends upon whom all the blame is laid, what have we poor, but righteous perſons (for ſuch thou knoweſt us to be) done? namely, to cauſe all theſe Calumnies and Perſecutions, or to occaſion all theſe Commotions and Diſturbances of publick Peace and Juſtice. It is eaſy to ſlander us, but let them prove their Accuſations by any one of our Actions.

* Hab. 2. 20. * Pſal. 33. 13. & 34. 15, 16. & 66. 7.

4. * The LORD n is in his holy temple o, the LORD'S throne p is in heaven: his eyes behold, * his eye-lids try the children of men q.

n To whom I appeal from mens unjuſt Tribunals. o Either 1. In his Tabernacle, which is ſometimes called his Temple, as 1 Sam. 1. 9. and 3. 3. Pſal. 18. 6. and 38. 2. and 68. 29. where he reſides to hear the Prayers and Appeals of all his People: Or 2. In Heaven, as it is explained in the next Clauſe; which is alſo called God's Temple, Mich. 1. 2. Revel. 7. 15. And which ſeems to be moſt emphatical here; for God's being in Heaven is oft mentioned as an evidence of his glorious Majeſty, of his ſoveraign Power and Dominion over all men and things, and of his accurate Inſpection into all men and their Actions here below, which from that high Tower he can eaſily behold, as it here follows. p Where he ſits to examine all Cauſes, and to judge all Men, and to give forth righteous Sentences according to every mans works: which is my great Comfort and Joy. q (i. e.) He doth exactly and thoroughly diſcern all men, and all that is in men, their moſt inward and ſecret Actions, Pſal. 7. 9. And therefore he ſees and will reward my innocency, notwithſtanding all the Reproaches and Calumnies of mine Enemies; and withal, he ſees all their ſecret and ſubtil, and malicious Deſigns againſt me through all their cunning Pretences, and will diſcover and defeat them.

5. The LORD trieth r the righteous: but the wicked and him that loveth violence s, his ſoul hateth t.

r Either 1. He examines them, and knows them to be righteous, and conſequently approveth and loveth, and will preſerve and bleſs them: which may be gathered from the contrary condition of the Wicked, whom God is ſuppoſed to try, though that be not expreſſed, and upon Trial finds them to be wicked, and therefore hates and puniſheth them, as it follows. The like Ellipſis of an whole Sentence ſee on Pſal. 1. 6. Or 2. He tryeth and exerciſeth them and their Graces by Afflictions, or he corrects them for their Sins; which is oft called trying, as Pſal. 66. 10. Zech. 13. 9. James 1. 12. 1 Pet. 4. 12.

So

So this is ſpoken by way of conceſſion, and to remove the Offence which ſome men might take at David, whoſe perſon and cauſe they might be apt to condemn becauſe of his Troubles. Therefore he ſaith, God tries, (i. e.) chaſtens, even righteous perſons; yet ſtill he loves them, and therefore will in due time deliver them. But as for the wicked, let not them rejoyce in my Tryals, for far worſe things are appointed for them: God hates them, and will ſeverely puniſh them. s By which Character he deſcribes and brands his Enemies, and aggravates their Malice, becauſe they choſe and practiſed Violence againſt him, not for any need which they had of it (for David was a moſt peaceable and harmleſs man, and neither pretended nor endeavoured to do any more than to defend himſelf, and that, as far as was poſſible, without the Offence or Injury of any other man) but meerly from their Love to Injuſtice and Violence, and their implacable Hatred againſt goodneſs and good men. t He hateth with, or from his Soul (i. e.) inwardly and ardently.

* Ezek. 38. 22. ‖ Or, a burning tempeſt. * Pſal. 16. 5.

6. * Upon the wicked he ſhall rain u ſnares x, fire, and brimſtone, and an ‖ horrible tempeſt ‖: this ſhall be the portion of their * cup y.

u Which notes their Original to be extraordinary, and from God's hand, and withal, that they ſhould come plentifully, ſwiftly, and ſuddenly, violently, and unavoidably, as Rain commonly doth fall from Heaven. x (i. e.) Grievous Plagues or Judgments, which are called Snares here, as alſo Job 18. 9, 10. and 22. 10. Iſa. 8. 14. and 24. 17, 18. Partly becauſe wicked men are oft times ſurprized with them when they leaſt expect them, Luk. 21. 35. And partly becauſe they cannot eſcape them, nor get out of them, but are held faſt and deſtroyed by them. ‖ (i. e.) Dreadful Judgments ſo called metaphorically, and by alluſion to the deſtruction of Sodom and other places by theſe means. But this he ſeems to ſpeak not ſo much of preſent and temporal Calamities, as of their future and eternal Puniſhments: becauſe he manifeſtly ſpeaks of thoſe Miſeries which are peculiar to wicked men, whereas David knew very well both by his own Experience, and by the Hiſtory of Job, and of Iſrael's Bondage in Egypt, that all things here came alike to all men, good or bad, Eccleſ. 9. 2. and that wicked men had many times a greater ſhare of worldly Proſperity than God's own people; as David acknowledgeth and complaineth of it. Pſal. 73. y This is their portion, and as it were the meat and drink appointed to them by God. This ſhall certainly and unavoidably be their ſtate or condition; which is oft called a mans part or portion, as Pſal. 16. 5. and 63. 10. and 75. 8. Mat. 24. 51. He alludes to the ancient cuſtom of Maſters of Families, or of Feaſts, who uſed to diſtribute the ſeveral Portions of Meat to their Domeſticks or Gueſts.

† Heb. the LORD is righteous, he loveth righteouſneſs. So Gr.

7. For * the † righteous LORD loveth righteouſneſs: his countenance doth behold the upright z.

* So this is given as the reaſon why God hateth and puniſheth wicked men ſo dreadfully, becauſe he loves righteouſneſs, and therefore muſt needs hate wickedneſs and puniſh wicked men. Or, But, as this Particle is oft rendred. For this ſeems to be added by way of Oppoſition to what he now ſaid concerning the State of wicked men. z To wit, with an eye of Approbation, and true and tender Affection, and watchful and gracious Providence: which is oft ſignified by God's beholding or looking upon men, as Exod. 2. 25. Ezra 5. 5. Pſal. 25. 18. and 33. 18. and 34. 15. &c. As on the contrary God is oft ſaid to hide or turn away his Face, or Eyes from wicked men.

PSAL. XII.

‖ Or, upon the eighth.

To the chief muſician ‖ upon Sheminith a, a Pſalm of David b.

a The ſame Title is prefixed to Pſal. 6. b This Pſalm was compoſed in the time, and upon the occaſion of Saul's ill Government and his Perſecution of David, and other good men who favoured him.

‖ Or, ſave. * Iſai. 57. 1.

1. ‖ HElp c LORD, for * the godly d man ceaſeth: for the faithful fail e from among the children of men.

c Or, Save me and other good men, from the Subtilty and Rage of wicked men. Saul will not help us, and other men cannot help: therefore it is a fit ſeaſon for thee to help. Or, kind, or merciful, as this word is oft uſed, as Pſal. 30. 5. and 31. 24. and 86. 2. d I and my Friends are ſorely and cauſeleſly perſecuted, baniſhed from our Homes and Friends, and which is worſt of all, from God's Sanctuary, and yet few or none pity us, all Mercy and Humanity is loſt. e Men have loſt not only ſerious Piety, but even common Honeſty in their words and dealings with men.

* Pſal. 28. 3. † Heb. an heart and an heart.

2. They ſpeak vanity f every one with his neighbour: * with flattering lips, and with † a double heart g do they ſpeak.

f Or, falſhood, which is a vain thing, and wants the ſolidity of truth. g Pretending one Heart, and that they ſpeak from a kind and upright Heart, when they really have another, even a cruel and deceitful Heart.

3. The LORD ſhall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that ſpeaketh † proud things g.

g Or great things, or great words, either bragging or threatning what they will do, and what great things they will effect, to wit, by their Tongues, as they themſelves explain it in the next verſe, which they will uſe ſo cunningly and powerfully, that they ſhall not need to uſe their Hands, or ſtrike a Stroke.

4. Who have ſaid, with our tongue will we prevail h, our lips † are our own i: who is Lord over us k?

h By raiſing and ſpreading Slaunders and evil Reports concerning him, whereby both Saul will be highly and implacably inraged againſt David, and the Hearts of the People alienated from him; which was indeed a very likely way to prevail againſt him, and that by their Tongues only. i (i. e.) At our own diſpoſe to ſpeak what we pleaſe. k Who can controul or reſtrain us. This was not the Language of their Mouths, for they were Iſraelites that owned a God above them, and they were Subjects of Saul, but the Language of their Actions. Scripture oft tells us not only what men do actually ſay, but what they would ſay if they durſt, or what their Actions mean, as Pſal. 94. 7. Mal. 1. 12, 13. and 2. 17. They take as great a liberty in their Speech as if they believed there was no God or Man ſuperiour to them; becauſe neither the fear of God, nor the reverence of Men, can keep them from ſpeaking whatſoever they pleaſe, or what they ſuppoſe makes for their Intereſt.

‖ Or, would ſnare him.

5. For the oppreſſion of the poor l, for the ſighing of the needy, now m will I ariſe (ſaith the LORD) I will ſet him in ſafety from him that ‖ puffeth at him n.

l Oppreſſed by Saul through the inſtigation and artifices of his fawning Courtiers. m Speedily, ſooner than they imagine or expect. n (i. e.) From him that deſpiſeth him, and hopeth to deſtroy him with a puff of Breath, or a parcel of Words. See this Phraſe, Pſal. 10. 5. Only there it is conſtrued with beth and here with lamed; which may make ſome difference. And the Supplement in our Tranſlation may ſeem to be large, and not neceſſary. And the place is, and may be otherwiſe rendered according to the Hebrew, without any ſuch large Supplement, I will ſet him (to wit, the needy laſt mentioned. So it is an Elliptis of the Pronoun, which is moſt frequent,) in ſafety: he (to wit, the Lord mentioned before) ſhall ſpeak (as this Verb ſignifies, Prov. 6. 19. and 14. 5. and 19. 5, 9, (i.e.) ſhall ſpeak comfortably, by a Synecdoche. Or, ſhall ſpeak plainly, as this Verb is uſed, Prov. 12. 17. Hab. 2. 3.) to him, (i. e.) to the needy here mentioned. Or, he (i. e.) God, ſhall ſpeak (to wit, in his wrath, as it is expreſſed Pſal. 2. 5.) to him, who is the cauſe of his Oppreſſion, of whom he ſpeaks v. 3, 4. Or, ſhall puff at him, as he uſed to do at his Enemies, Pſal. 10. 5.

* 2 Sam. 22. 31. Pſal. 18. 30 & 119. 140. Prov. 30. 5.

6. The words of the LORD are pure o words: * as ſilver tryed in a furnace of earth p, purified ſeven times.

o Or, ſincere, without the leaſt mixture of Vanity or Falſhood; and therefore ſhall infallibly be fulfilled. This he ſeems to add to anſwer an Objection which might ariſe in ſome mens Minds concerning what was laſt ſaid. You tell us, The Lord ſaith, I will ſet him in ſafety, &c. But ſaying and doing are two things. They are ſo indeed in men, who oft ſpeak raſhly what they cannot perform, and deceitfully what they never intend: But all God's words are pure from all manner of droſs, from all Folly, or Fraud, or uncertain, he is holy and true in all his Doctrines, Threatnings, Predictions, and Promiſes. p (i. e.) Made of ſuch Earth or Clay as was proper for, and then uſual in that work. See 1 Kings 7. 46.

† Heb. him, That is, every one of them.

7. Thou ſhalt keep them q, O LORD, thou ſhalt preſerve † them from this generation for ever.

q Either 1. The poor and needy, V. 5. from the Crafts and Malice of this crooked and perverſe Generation of men, and for ever. Or 2. thy words or promiſes laſt mentioned V. 6. Theſe thou wilſt obſerve and keep (as theſe two Verbs commonly ſignify) both now, and from this Generation for ever. (i.e.) Thou wilſt not only keep thy promiſe to me in preſerving me, and advancing me to the Throne, but alſo to my Poſterity from Generation to Generation.

† Heb. the vileſt of the ſons of men are exalted.

8. The wicked walk on every ſide r, when † the vileſt men s are exalted.

r Which Phraſe may note 1. Their great numbers, they fill all places. 2. Their Freedom and Safety, they are not reſtrained nor puniſhed, but go about boldly and ſecurely whither they pleaſe. 3. Their Proficiency and Succeſs, which is ſometimes ſignified by this Verb, as Gen. 26. 13. 1 Sam. 2. 21. Iſa. 40. 31. They grow worſe and worſe, and proſper in and by their Wickedneſs. 4. Their unceſſant and unwearied Induſtry in doing Miſchief to good men. Comp. 1 Pet. 5. 8. And this is very fitly here added as another Argument to prevail with God to ariſe to help his poor people who are oppreſſed preſſed by wicked men. s Heb. Vileneſſes, (i. e.) all manner of wickedneſs, lying and ſlandering, profaneneſs, oppreſſion, cruelty and the like: Or, vile perſons, the abſtract being put for the concrete, which is frequent, as pride, Pſal. 36. 11. for a proud man, and many ſuch like. Both comes to one, vile Perſons, and vile practiſes were both advanced and encouraged through Saul's Miſgovernment, whereby all the Foundations were deſtroyed, as he complained, Pſal. 11. 3. The Hebrew word zolel (whence this zuloib comes) ſignifies firſt a glutton, or drunkard, as Deut. 21. 20. Prov. 23. 21. and thence any vile perſon, as Jer. 15. 19. Lament. 1. 11.

PSAL. XIII.

To the ‖ chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

‖ Or, overſeer.

The occaſion of this Pſalm was David's deep and long continued Diſtreſſes, from which he prays for Deliverance.

1. HOW long wilt thou forget me, O LORD, for ever a? how long wilt thou * hide thy face b from me?

* Pſal. 69. 17.

a How long wilt thou forget (i. e. neglect or diſregard) me? For ever? b (i. e.) Withdraw thy Favour and Aſſiſtance.

2. How long ſhall I take counſel in my Soul c; having ſorrow in my heart daily? how long ſhall mine enemy be exalted over me?

c How long ſhall I be in ſuch perplexities and anxieties of Mind, not knowing what courſe to take, nor how to get out of my Troubles.

3. Conſider and hear me, O LORD my God: * lighten mine eyes d, leſt I ſleep the ſleep of death e;

* Pſal. 38. 10.

d Either 1. Becauſe I find my Counſel inſufficient, v. 2. do thou enlighten my mind, and guide me by thy Counſel and Spirit into the right way of obtaining thy Mercy and Help. So this Phraſe is uſed Pſal. 19. 8. Eph. 1. 18. Or 2. Do thou revive and comfort, and deliver me from the darkneſs of Death, which is ready to come upon me and to cloſe mine Eyes. Nothing is more common, than to expreſs great Dangers and Calamities by Darkneſs, and great Comforts and Deliverances by Light, as Job 15. 22. and 17. 13. and 30. 26. and by an enlightening of the Eyes, as Ezra 9. 8. Comp. Prov. 15. 30. and 29. 13. e (i. e.) Leſt I ſink under my Burthen and die: for Death is oft called a Sleep in Scripture, as Job 3. 13. and 14. 12. Pſal. 76. 5. John 11. 11.

4. * Leſt mine enemy ſay, I have prevailed againſt him f; and thoſe that trouble me, rejoyce when I am moved g.

* Pſal. 25. 2.

f To wit, by my art or ſtrength: which will reflect diſhonour upon thee, as if thou wert either unfaithful and unmindful of thy Promiſes: or unable to make them good. Therefore repreſs this their Arrogancy and Blaſphemy, and maintain thine own Honour. g Or, ſtumble, or fall, to wit, into Miſchief.

5. But I have truſted in thy mercy h, my heart ſhall rejoyce in thy ſalvation.

h Neither their Threats and Brags, nor my own Dangers ſhall ſhake my Confidence in thy Mercy promiſed to me.

6. I will ſing unto the LORD, becauſe he hath dealt bountifully with me i.

i Either 1. In giving me that ſupport and aſſurance of his Favour which for the preſent I enjoy. Or, 2. In giving me that Mercy which he hath freely promiſed me: it being a common thing for David and other Prophets to ſpeak of future deliverances as if they were already come, that ſo they may ſignify both the infallible certainty of the thing, and their firm aſſurance thereof. But the words may be rendered, When he ſhall have dealt bountifully with me. This Verb properly ſignifies to requite, or reward, (as it may be taken here, for there is a reward of Grace, as well as of Debt, Rom. 4. 4.) but here it ſignifies a free and bountiful giving, as it doth alſo Pſal. 119. 17. and 142. 7.

PSAL. XIV.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

The deſign of this Pſalm is to deſcribe and bewail the horrible Wickedneſs and Corruption of Mankind, and eſpecially of ungodly Men, and of his own Enemies.

1. THE * fool a hath ſaid in his heart b, there is no God c: they * are corrupt d, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good f.

* Pſal. 10. 4. & 53. 1. * Rom. 1. 21. &c.

a (i. e.) The wicked man: For ſuch are commonly and juſtly called Fools every where in Scripture, and that purpoſely to meet with their falſe, yet common Conceit of themſelves, as if they were the only wiſe men, and all others were Fools. b (i. e.) In his ſecret Thoughts, or within himſelf, being afraid and aſhamed to utter it with his mouth. Not that it was his fixed and conſtant Opinion and Judgment, but this he ſaith by Conſtruction, becauſe he heartily wiſheth there were no God, and lives as if there were none. So this Text may be explained, by comparing it with Pſal 36. 1. and Tit. 1. 16. c He denies not God's Being or Exiſtence, but only his Providence. He ſaith not, there is no Jehovah, which name of God notes his being, but no Elohim, which expreſſeth God as the Judge and Governour of the World, who obſerves and recompenſeth all the Actions of all men according to their ſeveral Qualities. d Heb. They have corrupted, to wit, themſelves, or their ways, as this word commonly ſignifies. Their great and wilful Wickedneſs is alledged as a ground of their Atheiſm or Infidelity. e To wit, of the Fools here deſcribed. f None of their Actions are really and thoroughly good or pleaſing to God; for if ſome of them be materially good, as when they do an act of Juſtice or Charity, yet they are poiſoned with bad Principles or Ends, not being performed by them out of a good Conſcience, and ſerious Care to pleaſe God, for then they would do one good Action as well as another, but in Hypocriſie, or with vain Glory, or ſome ſiniſter and unworthy Deſign.

2. The LORD looked down from heaven g upon the children of men h; to ſee if there were any that did underſtand, and ſeek God i.

g To ſearch out the Truth. God knoweth all things without any enquiry: But this is a Figure called Anthropopathia, whereby Scripture oft ſpeaks of God after the manner of Men. h Upon the whole Body of the Iſraelitiſh Nation, and upon the generality of Mankind under Heaven; for he ſpeaks of all except his People, and the Righteous ones, who are here oppoſed to theſe, V. 4, 5. i That did truly know God, to wit, ſo as to love, and fear, and truſt, and obey him, (for all theſe are frequently ſignified in Scripture by this Expreſſion of knowing God) and that did diligently ſeek him. (i. e.) Study his Mind and Will that they might do it, and ſeek his Grace and Favour.

3. They are all gone aſide k, they are all together become † filthy l: * there is none that doth good, no not one.

† Heb. ſtinking. * Rom. 3. 10.

k To wit, from God, whom they ſhould have ſought, V. 2. and from the Rule which he hath given him, and by which they ſometimes profeſſed, and ſeem'd to govern themſelves. Or, are grown ſowre, as this word ſignifies, Hoſ. 4. 18. And ſo this is a Metaphor from corrupted Drinks, as the next is taken from rotten Meat. l Heb. ſtinking (i. e.) loathſome or abominable to God, and to all wiſe and ſober Men.

4. Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledg m? † * who eat up n my people o as they eat bread p, and call not upon the LORD q.

† Heb. the eaters up of my people, eat bread. * Mic. 3. 3.

m Have they loſt their Wits? have they neither Religion nor common Diſcretion, either of which would teach them not to make themſelves ſo hateful to the all-ſeeing and almighty God, and to all Men? The words may be rendered thus, Do not all the workers of Iniquity know it? So it is only an Ellipſis of the Pronoun, which is frequent, as I have ſhewed before. Are they not Conſcious to themſelves of the Truth of what I ſay? I dare appeal to their own Conſciences. But this I propound with Submiſſion. n Or, they eat up, (i. e.) devour and deſtroy, as this word ſignifies, Deut. 7. 16. Prov. 30. 14. Jer. 50. 17. Nah. 3. 15. o (i. e.) The poor and godly Iſraelites, of whom he principally ſpeaks: whom he calleth my people. Either 1. God's people, as they were in many reſpects: Or rather 2. David's people: For David ſpeaks both theſe words and all the reſt of this Pſalm in his own Name and Perſon. And David might well call them his People, either becauſe they were his Friends and Favourers: Or becauſe he being anointed their King, they were conſequently his People: Or becauſe he was now actually their King, and ſo they were actually his People: For ſome conceive that this Pſalm was made in the time, and upon the occaſion of Abſalom's Rebellion. p (i. e.) With as little regret or remorſe, and with as much greedineſs, and delight, and Conſtancy too, as they uſe to eat their Meat. The Particle as is here underſtood, as it is Pſal. 125. 2. Prov. 26. 9. and in many other places. q They are guilty not only of groſs Injuſtice, and Oppreſſion towards men, but alſo of horrid Impiety and Contempt of God, whoſe Providence they deny, and whoſe Worſhip they wholly neglect and deſpiſe.

5. There r † were they in great fear s: for t God is in the generation of the righteous u.

† Heb. they feared a fear.

r (i. e.) In the place, or upon the ſpot, where they practiſed theſe Inſolencies, God ſtruck them with a panick fear. Or, Then (i. e.) In the height of their Tyranny and proſperous Impiety, when they ſeemed to have no cauſe for it. An Adverb of Place for an Adverb of Time, of which there want not Examples in Scripture and other Authors, as hath been noted before. Or, thence, as this Particle is rendered, Gen. 2. 10. and 49. 24. Iſa. 65. 20. (i. e.) From that time; or, for that Cauſe, Cause, as some take it, and it may be taken, Job 35. 12. Psal. 36. 12. (i.e.) For this their contempt of God and manifest injury to Men. s From their own guilty Consciences, and the just Expectation of divine Vengeance. Heb. They feared with fear, (i.e.) Vehemently, where there was no cause of fear, as is here implyed, (for they are now supposed to be in a State of Power and Tyranny) as is expressed in the Parallel place, Psal. 53. 5. Or, they shall be greatly afraid, the past Tense being put for the future Prophetically. t For they remembred what a potent Adversary they had, and therefore had cause enough to fear. Or, But, as this Particle is taken, Gen. 45. 8. Psal. 37. 20. Eccles. 2. 10. and 6. 2. So he describes the contrary and safe Condition of the Righteous. Or, when, as it oft signifies, and so it Answers to the then in the beginning of the Verse, when God shall once appear for his People, a dreadful Horror shall seize upon their wicked Enemies. u (i.e.) Among them, with his gracious and powerful Presence to defend them, and to fight against their Enemies. Or, God is for, &c. as the Hebrew beth oft signifies, that is, God is on their side, and therefore their Enemies have great cause to tremble.

* Psal. 22. 7, 8. 6. * Ye have shamed x the counsel of the poor y; because z the LORD is his refuge.

x (i.e.) Desired and endeavoured to bring it to Shame, or disappoint it. Comp. Psal. 6. 10. Or, ye have reproached or derided it, as a foolish thing. y (i.e.) The cause which he hath taken to defend himself, which is not by lying and flattery, and violence, and all manner of Wickedness, which is your Counsel and usual Practice, but by trusting in God, and keeping his way, and calling upon his Name. z This was the ground of their Contempt and Scorn, that he lived by Faith in God's Promise and Providence. Or, but, as in the foregoing Verse: So there seems to be an Elegant and fit Opposition. You reproach them, but God will own and protect them, and justifie their Counsel which you deride.

† Heb who will give, &c. Psal. 53. 6. 7. † O that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion ‖! when the LORD bringeth back the captivity of his people † Jacob * shall rejoyce and Israel shall be glad.

‖ These words directly and immediately Concern the deliverance of the People of Israel out of that sinful and deplorable Estate, in which they now were; which having described in the Body of the Psalm, he concludes, after his manner, with a Prayer to God to hear and help them out of Zion, where the Ark then was, whence God used to hear and Answer his Peoples Prayers. But ultimately and principally they design a further, even the spiritual Redemption and Salvation of all God's Israel by the Messias, as may appear by divers Considerations; 1. That the ancient Jews did thus understand it, and among others, Jonathan's Targum or Paraphrase on the Bible, expound it thus: I do not expect Gideon's Salvation, which was but Corporeal, nor that of Sampson—but the Salvation of the Messias. With whom agrees the Targum of Jerusalem. 2. That the Doctrine of Israel's Redemption or Salvation by Christ was very well known as to other ancient Patriarchs, Job. 8. 56. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11, 12. so particularly to David, of whom it is expresly said, that he knew and foresaw this Mystery, Acts 2. 30, 31. in whose Book of Psalms there are divers and very distinct and clear Prophecies of it, as we have in part seen upon Psal. 2. and 8. and shall see more fully and Evidently hereafter. 3. That David and other holy Prophets in the midst of their sad Thoughts and Fears, and Troubles, did usually comfort themselves with the Promise and Expectation of the Messias, by whom, and by whom alone they should receive that plenary Salvation for which they groaned; of which it is thought we have one instance, Gen. 49. 18. but we have many unquestionable Instances in the Prophecy of Isaiah, as Ch. 7. 14. and 9. 6. &c. And this Course might be the more seasonable for David, because he speaks here of his Troubles after he was settled in his Kingdom, (as may be gathered from the mention of Zion, where the Ark was not till that time) and possibly of the sad and sinful State of his Kingdom during Absalom's Rebellion; and therefore finding himself so strangely disappointed of that Peace and Happiness, which he confidently expected when once he came to the Kingdom, and wisely and justly presaging that his Children and the following Generations of Israelites for the same Causes were likely to meet with the same or greater Calamities than this, he wearieth himself with the Expression of his Belief, and desire of the coming of the Messias to save his People. 4. To this also suits the mention of Zion, because the Prophets knew and foretold that the Messias or Deliverer should first come to Zion, and should set up his Throne there, and from thence send forth his Laws and Edicts to the gentile World; as is positively affirmed, Psal. 2. 6. and 110. 2. Isa. 2. 3. and 59. 20 Comp. with Rom. 11. 26. and in many other places. 5. The following words agree only to this time, wherein he speaks of bringing back the Captivity of his people with the universal joy of all Jacob and Israel; which cannot agree to David's time, wherein there was no such Captivity of the people, but only a Civil war and mutual slaughter, which is quite another thing; nor to the time of Israel's return from Babylon, when there was no such return of all Israel, but only of Judah and Benjamin, and some few of the other Tribes, and the joy which the returning Israelites then had, was but low and mixed with many Fears and Dangers, and Reproaches; as we see in the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah. And therefore they must belong to the times of the Messias, by whom this Promise was fulfilled to the true Israel of God, who were brought back from that most real and dreadful, though spiritual, Captivity of sin and Satan, as is declared; Luk. 4. 18. Eph. 4. 8. and shall be literally accomplished to the natural seed of Jacob or Israel according to the Expectation and Belief of all the Jews in their several Ages, and of most Christian Writers, † (i.e.) His Captive people, Captivity being oft put for Captives, as Deut. 21. 10. and 30. 3. Psal. 126. 1, 4. Or, his people from Captivity, of which see the former Note. * (i.e.) The seed or Children of Jacob, as Aaron is named for his Sons, 1 Chron. 12. 27. and 27. 17. and David for his Sons, and the like.

PSAL. XV.

The ARGUMENT.

The occasion and time of Composing this Psalm is uncertain: but the Scope of it is plain, which is to give the Character of an holy and happy Man, and to describe the way to true Blessedness. Wherein this is observable, that he is wholly silent as to the Ceremonial or Ritual Observations of the Law, not that he doth disown them, or allow the neglect of them, as is manifest from David's constant Practice, and from many other passages, but that he might undeceive the Hypocritical Israelites, who laid too great a Stress upon those things, as if the diligent performance thereof would excuse their wicked Lives, which Error almost all the Prophets do observe and Condemn in them, and that he might inform the Church of that, and all succeeding Ages; that the Substance of Religion did consist in the Practice of true Holiness and Righteousness.

A Psalm of David.

1. LORD a, who shall † abide b in thy tabernacle? c who shall dwell in thy holy hill d? Psal. 24. 3. &c. † Heb. sojourn.

a O thou who art the soveraign Lord of this holy Hill and Tabernacle, to whom it belongs to give Laws to it, and to admit or reject Persons, as thou seest fit, I beg of thee the resolution of this important question. And he proposeth this question to God, that the Answer coming from him, may have the greater Authority and influence upon mens Consciences. b Heb. sojourn, to wit, so as to dwell, as it is explained in the next clause. Unless this clause be meant of sojourning in the Church here, and the next of dwelling in Heaven hereafter. Who shall enter thither and abide there, with thy good leave and liking. c (i.e.) In thy Church, either 1. Militant. Who is a true, and will be a persevering Member of this Church? Or, 2. Triumphant, or in Heaven; which is called the true Tabernacle not made with mans hands, Heb. 8. 2. and 9. 11. Revel. 21. 3. d To wit, of Zion, so called Psal. 2. 6. which is oft put for the Church and for Heaven. Who shall so dwell in thy Church here, as to dwell with thee for ever hereafter in Heaven.

2. * He that walketh uprightly e, and worketh righteousness f, and speaketh the truth ‖ in his heart g. * Isa. 33. 15. ‖ Or, with.

e Or presently, or sincerely, without guile or Hypocrisie, Loving, Worshiping and Serving God, and loving his Neighbour not in word and shew only, but in truth and reality, and this constantly, and in the whole course of his Life, as walking implies. f Maketh it his work and business to do justly, (i.e.) to give to every one his due, first to God, and then to Men; for the words are general, and not restrained to either. g His words and professions to God and Men, agree with, and proceed from the thoughts and purposes of his Heart.

3. He that back-biteth not with his tongue h, nor doeth evil i to his neighbour k, nor ‖ taketh up l a reproach against his neighbour. ‖ Or, receiveth Or, endureth. Exod. 23. 1.

h He doth not take away or diminish his Neighbours good name, either by denying him his due praises, or by laying any thing to his Charge falsely, or without sufficient cause and Evidence. i (i.e.) Any hurt or injury. k (i.e.) To any Man; as is evident, 1. From the Nature of this Precept, which reacheth to all, it being plain and certain, that both by Laws of Nature and of Moses, it was not lawful to do evil to any man, except where God the Soveraign commanded it, as he did to the Canaanites and Amalekites. 2. From the the Scripture usage of this word Neighbour, which frequently signifies every man, though a stranger or an heathen, as appears from Gen. 29. 4. Exod. 20. 16, 17. Levit. 18. 20. and 19. 15, &c. Prov. 25. 8, 9. Luk. 10. 29, &c. Mat. 5. 43, 44. And he useth this word Neighbour, because he who is strictly so, is most within our reach, and most liable to the injuries which one man doth to another. l To wit, into his Lips or Mouth, which is understood here, as also Exod. 20. 7. Job 4. 2. and fully expressed: Psal. 16. 4. and 50. 16. (i. e.) Doth not raise it, though that may seem to be included in the first Clause, that Back-biteth not: Or, doth not spread and propagate it; which men are too prone and ready to do; and which makes that a publick, which before was but a private injury and mischief. Or, nor taketh, or receiveth, (i. e.) Entertaineth it cheerfully and greedily, as men usually do such things, and easily believeth it without sufficient reason. See Exod. 23. 1. Levit. 19. 16. Or, nor beareth or endureth, as this Phrase signifies, Psal. 69. 7. Ezek. 36. 15. He doth not suffer another to defame him without some rebuke or signification of his dislike, Prov. 25. 23.

4. In whose eyes m a vile person n is contemned o; but he honoureth p them that fear the LORD: he that sweareth q to his own hurt r, and changeth not s?

m (i. e.) In whose Judgment and Estimation. n (i. e.) One who deserves Contempt, an ungodly or wicked Man, as appears from the next clause: where he that feareth God is opposed to him. o Or, despised, notwithstanding all his wealth and glory, and greatness. He doth not admire his Person, nor envy his Condition, nor Court him with flatteries, nor value his Company and Conversation, nor approve of or comply with his Courses, but he thinks meanly of him, he judgeth him a most miserable man, and a great object of Pity, he abhors his wicked practices, and labours to make such ways Contemptible and hateful to all men, as far as it lyes in his power. But this contempt of wicked men must be so managed, as not to cause a contempt of just Authority, which if it be lodged in a wicked hand, doth Challenge not only Obedience, but also Honour and Reverence; as is manifest from the Precepts and Examples of Christ and of his Apostles, who charge this upon the Christians, every where, although the Magistrates of those times were unquestionably vile and wicked men. See Act. 23. 5. Rom. 13. 1 Pet. 2. 13, &c. p (i. e.) He highly esteemeth and heartily loveth them, and sheweth great respect and kindness to them, though they be mean and obscure as to their worldly Condition, and though they may differ from him in some opinions or practices of lesser moment. q To wit, a promissory Oath, engaging himself by solemn Oath, to do something which may be beneficial to his Neighbour. r (i. e.) To his own damage or prejudice. As if a Man solemnly swear by the name of the great God, that he will sell him such an Estate at a price below the full worth; Or that, he will give a poor man such a Sum of Mony, which when afterwards he comes to review and consider, he finds it very inconvenient and burdensome to him, where he is tempted to break his Oath. s To wit, his Purpose or Course, but continues firm and resolved to perform his promise, and Sacrificeth his interest and profit to his Conscience, and the Reverence of God and of an Oath. See Ezek. 17. 18, 19.

*Exod. 23. 8. *Exod. 22. 25. Lev. 25. 36. Deut. 23. 19. Ezek. 18. 8. & 22. 12. Deut. 16. 19.

5. * He that putteth not out his money to usury t * or taketh reward u against the innocent. He that doth these things x, shall never be moved y.

t In such manner as is contrary to God's Law: Of which see in Exod. 22. 25. Levit. 25. 36, 37. u Or, a bribe from him who hath a bad cause; that he may either condemn the innocent or acquit the guilty: Both which God abhorreth. x Here enumerated, and such things as naturally and necessarily flow from them, or are a-kin to them, and joyned with them. y He shall constantly persevere in God's Church here, and though he may be shaken, and stagger and fall, yet he shall never wholly and finally be removed or fall away from it, nor from that happiness, which was proposed and promised to him, but shall abide with God here, and go to him when he dies and be for ever with the Lord.

PSAL. XVI.

‖ Or, a golden Psalm of David.

‖ Michtam a of David.

a Divers render this word, a Golden Psalm, because of the preciousness and excellency of the matter of it; for it Treats of Christ's Death and Resurrection. But because this Title is prefixed to Psal. 56. 57, 58, 59, 60. wherein there is no such peculiar Excellency, it may seem rather to be a Title belonging to the Musick or the Song, which, with the rest is now lost and unknown. It is a great question among Expositors, in whose Name and Person he speaketh this Psalm, whether his own or Christ's. It seems hard to exclude David's Person, to whom almost the whole Psalm properly and literally belongs, and to whom some parts of it do more conveniently belong than to Christ, so far from some parts of it do peculiarly belong to Christ, that I will it is expounded by the two great Apostles, Peter and Paul, in the words Act. 2. 25. and 13. 35. And yet it seems probable by which contexture of the Psalm, and the coherence of the several Verses together, that the whole Psalm speaks of one and the same Person. But because David was a mixt Person, being both a Member and an eminent Type, of Christ, he may without any inconvenience be thought to speak of himself sometimes in the one and sometimes in the other Capacity, to pass from the one to the other. And therefore having spoken of himself as a Believer or Member of Christ, in the former part of the Psalm, he proceeds to consider himself as a Type of Christ, and having Christ in his Eye, and being inspired by the Holy Ghost with the knowledge and Contemplation of Christ's Passion and Resurrection, towards the close of the Psalm he speaks such things, as though they might be accommodated to himself in a very perfect, obscure, and improper Sence, yet could not truly, literally, and properly, fully and compleatly, belong to any but to Christ, to whom therefore they are justly appropriated in the New Testament.

1. PReserve me b O God: for in thee do I put my trust c.

b From all mine Enemies. c Therefore thou art in Honour and by Promise obliged not to deceive my Trust.

2. * O my soul d, thou hast said e unto the LORD, Thou art my Lord f: * my goodness g extendeth not to thee h;

* Psal. 16. 2. * Job 22. 2. & 35. 7. Psal. 50. 9. Rom. 11. 35.

d Which words are fitly understood: For it is manifest he speaks to one person of another. And it is usual with David to turn his Speech to his Soul, as Psal. 42. 6. and 43. 5. e Thou hast oft times avowed and professed it, and dost still persist to do so. f By Creation and Preservation and otherwise; to whom I owe all Service and Obedience upon that account. g Whatsoever Piety or Vertue, or Goodness is in me, or is done by me. h (i. e.) Doth not add any thing to thy Felicity, for thou dost not need me nor my Service, nor art capable of any advantage from it: Or, is not for thee, as this word is used, Gen. 16. 5. 2 Sam. 1. 26. (i. e.) For thy use or Benefit. Or, is not upon thee, (i. e.) It lays no Obligation upon thee, as this very word is taken, Judg. 19. 20. Psal. 56. 12. Ezek. 45. 17. All comes to the same thing. The Sence is, God is all-sufficient, and infinitely happy, and the Author of all the good that is in, or is done by any of his Creatures; and therefore cannot prevent nor oblige God any further than he is graciously pleased to oblige himself. Thus he renounceth all Opinion of merit, and though he urged his trust in God, as a motive to perswade God to preserve him, v. 1. yet he here declares that he did not do it, as thinking that God was indebted to him for it.

3. But i to the Saints that are in the Earth k, and to the excellent l in whom is all my delight m.

i (i. e.) But my goodness extendeth, which is easily understood out of the former Verse: From which also there may be fetched another Supplement. O my Soul, thou hast said to the Saints, &c. k (i. e.) To those holy and righteous Persons that live upon Earth with me: To these only or principally my goodness is extended. Because I cannot reach thee, I endeavour to pay a singular Respect and Love, and Kindness to all Saints, for thy sake whose Friends and Servants they are, and whose Image they bear. This may seem more properly to agree to David, than to Christ, whose goodness was principally designed for, and imparted to Sinners, and did not find men Saints, but make them so; nor was it confined to them, that lived with him upon the Earth, but extended to all the Believers of all Ages before and after him. l Or, the magnificent, or mighty, or honourable, to wit, the Saints, as he now called them, whom, because they were mean and despicable in the Eyes of the World, he honours with their just Titles, and by appropriating them to the Saints, he sufficiently intimates, that all other men, how great soever, are but ignoble and vile persons, as he had called them, Psal. 15. 4. m (i. e.) Whose Company and Conversation is most pleasant and desirable to me. Compare Psal. 119. 63.

4. Their sorrows shall be multiplied that ‖ hasten after another God n: their drink offerings o of blood p will I not offer, * nor take up their names q into my lips.

‖ Or, give gift to another, * Josh. 23. 7.

n Or, that present, or endow (as this Verb signifies, Exod. 22. 16.) another God, to wit, with Oblations, as it follows. God is not expressed in the Hebrew text, but seems fitly and necessarily to be understood, because of the following offerings, which are made to none that is not either really or by Reputation a God. The Sence is, Idolaters, notwithstanding all their Zeal or cost about their Idols, gain nothing to themselves, but abundance of sorrow and misery. This he mentioneth partly as one Reason, why he would have no fellowship with them in their Idolatrous Worship, which he adds in this Verse:

So this is ſpoken by way of conceſſion, and to remove the Offence which ſome men might take at David, whoſe perſon and cauſe they might be apt to condemn becauſe of his Troubles. Therefore he ſaith, God tries, (i. e.) chaſtens, even righteous perſons; yet ſtill he loves them, and therefore will in due time deliver them. But as for the wicked, let not them rejoyce in my Tryals, for far worſe things are appointed for them: God hates them, and will ſeverely puniſh them. s By which Character he deſcribes and brands his Enemies, and aggravates their Malice, becauſe they choſe and practiſed Violence againſt him, not for any need which they had of it (for David was a moſt peaceable and harmleſs man, and neither pretended nor endeavoured to do any more than to defend himſelf, and that, as far as was poſſible, without the Offence or Injury of any other man) but meerly from their Love to Injuſtice and Violence, and their implacable Hatred againſt goodneſs and good men. t He hateth with, or from his Soul (i. e.) inwardly and ardently.

* Ezek. 38. 22. ‖ Or, a burning tempeſt. * Pſal. 16. 5.

6. * Upon the wicked he ſhall rain u ſnares x, fire, and brimſtone, and an ‖ horrible tempeſt ‖: this ſhall be the portion of their * cup y.

u Which notes their Original to be extraordinary, and from God's hand, and withal, that they ſhould come plentifully, ſwiftly, and ſuddenly, violently, and unavoidably, as Rain commonly doth fall from Heaven. x (i. e.) Grievous Plagues or Judgments, which are called Snares here, as alſo Job 18. 9, 10. and 22. 10. Iſa. 8. 14. and 24. 17, 18. Partly becauſe wicked men are oft times ſurprized with them when they leaſt expect them, Luk. 21. 35. And partly becauſe they cannot eſcape them, nor get out of them, but are held faſt and deſtroyed by them. ‖ (i. e.) Dreadful Judgments ſo called metaphorically, and by alluſion to the deſtruction of Sodom and other places by theſe means. But this he ſeems to ſpeak not ſo much of preſent and temporal Calamities, as of their future and eternal Puniſhments: becauſe he manifeſtly ſpeaks of thoſe Miſeries which are peculiar to wicked men, whereas David knew very well both by his own Experience, and by the Hiſtory of Job, and of Iſrael's Bondage in Egypt, that all things here came alike to all men, good or bad, Eccleſ. 9. 2. and that wicked men had many times a greater ſhare of worldly Proſperity than God's own people; as David acknowledgeth and complaineth of it, Pſal. 73. y This is their portion, and as it were the meat and drink appointed to them by God. This ſhall certainly and unavoidably be their ſtate or condition; which is oft called a mans part or portion, as Pſal. 16. 5. and 63. 10. and 75. 8. Mat. 24. 51. He alludes to the ancient cuſtom of Maſters of Families, or of Feaſts, who uſed to diſtribute the ſeveral Portions of Meat to their Domeſticks or Gueſts.

† Heb. the LORD is righteous, he loveth righteouſneſs. So Gr.

7. For * the † righteous LORD loveth righteouſneſs: his countenance doth behold the upright z.

* So this is given as the reaſon why God hateth and puniſheth wicked men ſo dreadfully, becauſe he loves righteouſneſs, and therefore muſt needs hate wickedneſs and puniſh wicked men. Or, But, as this Particle is oft rendred. For this ſeems to be added by way of Oppoſition to what he now ſaid concerning the State of wicked men. z To wit, with an eye of Approbation, and true and tender Affection, and watchful and gracious Providence: which is oft ſignified by God's beholding or looking upon men, as Exod. 2. 25. Ezra 5. 5. Pſal. 25. 18. and 33. 18. and 34. 15. &c. As on the contrary God is oft ſaid to hide or turn away his Face, or Eyes from wicked men.

PSAL. XII.

‖ Or, upon the eighth.

To the chief muſician ‖ upon Sheminith a, a Pſalm of David b.

a The ſame Title is prefixed to Pſal. 6. b This Pſalm was compoſed in the time, and upon the occaſion of Saul's ill Government and his Perſecution of David, and other good men who favoured him.

‖ Or, ſave. * Iſai. 57. 1.

1. ‖ HElp c LORD, for * the godly d man ceaſeth: for the faithful fail e from among the children of men.

c Or, Save me and other good men, from the Subtilty and Rage of wicked men. Saul will not help us, and other men cannot help: therefore it is a fit ſeaſon for thee to help. Or, kind, or merciful, as this word is oft uſed, as Pſal. 30. 5. and 31. 24. and 86. 2. d I and my Friends are ſorely and cauſeleſly perſecuted, baniſhed from our Homes and Friends, and which is worſt of all, from God's Sanctuary, and yet few or none pity us, all Mercy and Humanity is loſt. e Men have loſt not only ſerious Piety, but even common Honeſty in their words and dealings with men.

* Pſal. 28. 3. † Heb. an heart and an heart.

2. They ſpeak vanity f every one with his neighbour: * with flattering lips, and with † a double heart g do they ſpeak.

f Or, falſhood, which is a vain thing, and wants the ſolidity of truth. g Pretending one Heart, and that they ſpeak from a kind and upright Heart, when they really have another, even a cruel and deceitful Heart.

3. The LORD ſhall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that ſpeaketh † proud things g.

g Or great things, or great words, either bragging or threatning what they will do, and what great things they will effect, to wit, by their Tongues, as they themſelves explain it in the next verſe, which they will uſe ſo cunningly and powerfully, that they ſhall not need to uſe their Hands, or ſtrike a Stroke.

4. Who have ſaid, with our tongue will we prevail h, our lips † are our own i: who is Lord over us k?

h By raiſing and ſpreading Slaunders and evil Reports concerning him, whereby both Saul will be highly and implacably inraged againſt David, and the Hearts of the People alienated from him; which was indeed a very likely way to prevail againſt him, and that by their Tongues only. i (i. e.) At our own diſpoſe to ſpeak what we pleaſe. k Who can controul or reſtrain us. This was not the Language of their Mouths, for they were Iſraelites that owned a God above them, and they were Subjects of Saul, but the Language of their Actions. Scripture oft tells us not only what men do actually ſay, but what they would ſay if they durſt, or what their Actions mean, as Pſal. 94. 7. Mal. 1. 12, 13. and 2. 17. They take as great a liberty in their Speech as if they believed there was no God or Man ſuperiour to them; becauſe neither the fear of God, nor the reverence of Men, can keep them from ſpeaking whatſoever they pleaſe, or what they ſuppoſe makes for their Intereſt.

‖ Or, would enſnare him.

5. For the oppreſſion of the poor l, for the ſighing of the needy, now m will I ariſe (ſaith the LORD) I will ſet him in ſafety from him that ‖ puffeth at him n.

l Oppreſſed by Saul through the inſtigation and artifices of his fawning Courtiers. m Speedily, ſooner than they imagine or expect. n (i. e.) From him that deſpiſeth him, and hopeth to deſtroy him with a puff of Breath, or a parcel of Words. See this Phraſe, Pſal. 10. 5. Only there it is conſtrued with beth and here with lamed; which may make ſome difference. And the Supplement in our Tranſlation may ſeem to be large, and not neceſſary. And the place is, and may be otherwiſe rendered according to the Hebrew, without any ſuch large Supplement, I will ſet him (to wit, the needy laſt mentioned. So it is an Elliptis of the Pronoun, which is moſt frequent,) in ſafety: he (to wit, the Lord mentioned before) ſhall ſpeak (as this Verb ſignifies, Prov. 6. 19. and 14. 5. and 19. 5, 9, (i.e.) ſhall ſpeak comfortably, by a Synecdoche. Or, ſhall ſpeak plainly, as this Verb is uſed, Prov. 12. 17. Hab. 2. 3.) to him, (i. e) to the needy here mentioned. Or, he (i. e.) God, ſhall ſpeak (to wit, in his wrath, as it is expreſſed Pſal. 2. 5.) to him, who is the cauſe of his Oppreſſion, of whom he ſpeaks v. 3, 4. Or, ſhall puff at him, as he uſed to do at his Enemies, Pſal. 10. 5.

* 2 Sam. 22. 31. Pſal. 18. 30 & 119. 140. Prov. 30. 5.

6. The words of the LORD are pure o words: * as ſilver tryed in a furnace of earth p, purified ſeven times.

o Or, ſincere, without the leaſt mixture of Vanity or Falſhood; and therefore ſhall infallibly be fulfilled. This he ſeems to add to anſwer an Objection which might ariſe in ſome mens Minds concerning what was laſt ſaid. You tell us, The Lord ſaith, I will ſet him in ſafety, &c. But ſaying and doing are two things. They are ſo indeed in men, who oft ſpeak raſhly what they cannot perform, and deceitfully what they never intend: But all God's words are pure from all manner of droſs, from all Folly, or Fraud, or uncertain, he is holy and true in all his Doctrines, Threatnings, Predictions, and Promiſes. p (i. e.) Made of ſuch Earth or Clay as was proper for, and then uſual in that work. See 1 Kings 7. 46.

† Heb. him, That is, every one of them.

7. Thou ſhalt keep them q, O LORD, thou ſhalt preſerve † them from this generation for ever.

q Either 1. The poor and needy, V. 5. from the Crafts and Malice of this crooked and perverſe Generation of men, and for ever. Or 2. thy words or promiſes laſt mentioned V. 6. Theſe thou wilſt obſerve and keep (as theſe two Verbs commonly ſignify) both now, and from this Generation for ever. (i.e.) Thou wilſt not only keep thy promiſe to me in preſerving me, and advancing me to the Throne, but alſo to my Poſterity from Generation to Generation.

† Heb. the vileſt of the ſons of men are exalted.

8. The wicked walk on every ſide r, when † the vileſt men s are exalted.

r Which Phraſe may note 1. Their great numbers, they fill all places. 2. Their Freedom and Safety, they are not reſtrained nor puniſhed, but go about boldly and ſecurely whither they pleaſe. 3. Their Proficiency and Succeſs, which is ſometimes ſignified by this Verb, as Gen. 26. 13. 1 Sam. 2. 21. Iſa. 40. 31. They grow worſe and worſe, and proſper in and by their Wickedneſs. 4. Their unceſſant and unwearied Induſtry in doing Miſchief to good men. Comp. 1 Pet. 5. 8. And this is very fitly here added as another Argument to prevail with God to ariſe to help his poor people who are oppreſſed preſſed by wicked men. s Heb. Vileneſſes, (i. e.) all manner of wickedneſs, lying and ſlandering, profaneneſs, oppreſſion, cruelty and the like: Or, vile perſons, the abſtract being put for the concrete, which is frequent, as pride, Pſal. 36. 11. for a proud man, and many ſuch like. Both comes to one, vile Perſons, and vile practiſes were both advanced and encouraged through Saul's Miſgovernment, whereby all the Foundations were deſtroyed, as he complained, Pſal. 11. 3. The Hebrew word zolel (whence this zuloth comes) ſignifies firſt a glutton, or drunkard, as Deut. 21. 20. Prov. 23. 21. and thence any vile perſon, as Jer. 15. 19. Lament. 1. 11.

PSAL. XIII.

To the ‖ chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

‖ Or, overſeer.

The occaſion of this Pſalm was David's deep and long continued Diſtreſſes, from which he prays for Deliverance.

1. HOW long wilt thou forget me, O LORD, for ever a? how long wilt thou * hide thy face b from me?

* Pſal. 69. 17.

a How long wilt thou forget (i. e. neglect or diſregard*) me? For ever? b (i. e.)* Withdraw thy Favour and Aſſiſtance.

2. How long ſhall I take counſel in my Soul c, having ſorrow in my heart daily? how long ſhall mine enemy be exalted over me?

c How long ſhall I be in ſuch perplexities and anxieties of Mind, not knowing what courſe to take, nor how to get out of my Troubles.

3. Conſider and hear me, O LORD my God: * lighten mine eyes d, leſt I ſleep the ſleep of death e;

* Pſal. 38. 10.

d Either 1. Becauſe I find my Counſel inſufficient, v. 2. do thou enlighten my mind, and guide me by thy Counſel and Spirit into the right way of obtaining thy Mercy and Help. So this Phraſe is uſed Pſal. 19. 8. Eph. 1. 18. Or 2. Do thou revive and comfort, and deliver me from the darkneſs of Death, which is ready to come upon me and to cloſe mine Eyes. Nothing is more common, than to expreſs great Dangers and Calamities by Darkneſs, and great Comforts and Deliverances by Light, as Job 15. 22. and 17. 13. and 30. 26. and by an enlightening of the Eyes, as Ezra 9. 8. Comp. Prov. 15. 30. and 29. 13. e (i. e.) Leſt I ſink under my Burthen and die: for Death is oft called a Sleep in Scripture, as Job 3. 13. and 14. 12. Pſal. 76. 5. John 11. 11.

4. * Leſt mine enemy ſay, I have prevailed againſt him f; and thoſe that trouble me, rejoyce when I am moved g.

* Pſal. 25. 2.

f To wit, by my art or ſtrength: which will reflect diſhonour upon thee, as if thou wert either unfaithful and unmindful of thy Promiſes: or unable to make them good. Therefore repreſs this their Arrogancy and Blaſphemy, and maintain thine own Honour. g Or, ſtumble, or fall, to wit, into Miſchief.

5. But I have truſted in thy mercy h, my heart ſhall rejoyce in thy ſalvation.

h Neither their Threats and Brags, nor my own Dangers ſhall ſhake my Confidence in thy Mercy promiſed to me.

6. I will ſing unto the LORD, becauſe he hath dealt bountifully with me i.

i Either 1. In giving me that ſupport and aſſurance of his Favour which for the preſent I enjoy. Or, 2. In giving me that Mercy which he hath freely promiſed me: it being a common thing for David and other Prophets to ſpeak of future deliverances as if they were already come, that ſo they may ſignify both the infallible certainty of the thing, and their firm aſſurance thereof. But the words may be rendered, When he ſhall have dealt bountifully with me. This Verb properly ſignifies to requite, or reward, (as it may be taken here, for there is a reward of Grace, as well as of Debt, Rom. 4. 4.) but here it ſignifies a free and bountiful giving, as it doth alſo Pſal. 119. 17. and 142. 7.

PSAL. XIV.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

The deſign of this Pſalm is to deſcribe and bewail the horrible Wickedneſs and Corruption of Mankind, and eſpecially of ungodly Men, and of his own Enemies.

1. THE * fool a hath ſaid in his heart b, there is no God c: they * are corrupt d, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good f.

* Pſal. 10. 4. & 53. 1. * Rom. 1. 21. &c.

a (i. e.) The wicked man: For ſuch are commonly and juſtly called Fools every where in Scripture, and that purpoſely to meet with their falſe, yet common Conceit of themſelves, as if they were the only wiſe men, and all others were Fools. b (i. e.) In his ſecret Thoughts, or within himſelf, being afraid and aſhamed to utter it with his mouth. Not that it was his fixed and conſtant Opinion and Judgment, but this he ſaith by Conſtruction, becauſe he heartily wiſheth there were no God, and lives as if there were none. So this Text may be explained, by comparing it with Pſal 36. 1. and Tit. 1. 16. c He denies not God's Being or Exiſtence, but only his Providence. He ſaith not, there is no Jehovah, which name of God notes his being, but no Elohim, which expreſſeth God as the Judge and Governour of the World, who obſerves and recompenſeth all the Actions of all men according to their ſeveral Qualities. d Heb. They have corrupted, to wit, themſelves, or their ways, as this word commonly ſignifies. Their great and wilful Wickedneſs is alledged as a ground of their Atheiſm or Infidelity. e To wit, of the Fools here deſcribed. f None of their Actions are really and thoroughly good or pleaſing to God; for if ſome of them be materially good, as when they do an act of Juſtice or Charity, yet they are poiſoned with bad Principles or Ends, not being performed by them out of a good Conſcience, and ſerious Care to pleaſe God, for then they would do one good Action as well as another, but in Hypocriſie, or with vain Glory, or ſome ſiniſter and unworthy Deſign.

2. The LORD looked down from heaven g upon the children of men h; to ſee if there were any that did underſtand, and ſeek God i.

g To ſearch out the Truth. God knoweth all things without any enquiry: But this is a Figure called Anthropopathia, whereby Scripture oft ſpeaks of God after the manner of Men. h Upon the whole Body of the *Iſraeliti*ſh Nation, and upon the generality of Mankind under Heaven; for he ſpeaks of all except his People, and the Righteous ones, who are here oppoſed to theſe, V. 4, 5. i That did truly know God, to wit, ſo as to love, and fear, and truſt, and obey him, (for all theſe are frequently ſignified in Scripture by this Expreſſion of knowing God) and that did diligently ſeek him. (i. e.) Study his Mind and Will that they might do it, and ſeek his Grace and Favour.

3. They are all gone aſide k, they are all together become † filthy l: * there is none that doth good, no not one.

† Heb. ſtinking. * Rom. 3. 10.

k To wit, from God, whom they ſhould have ſought, V. 2. and from the Rule which he hath given him, and by which they ſometimes profeſſed, and ſeem'd to govern themſelves. Or, are grown ſowre, as this word ſignifies, Hoſ. 4. 18. And ſo this is a Metaphor from corrupted Drinks, as the next is taken from rotten Meat. l Heb. ſtinking (i. e.) loathſome or abominable to God, and to all wiſe and ſober Men.

4. Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledg m? † * who eat up n my people o as they eat bread p, and call not upon the LORD q.

† Heb. the eaters up of my people, eat bread. * Mic. 3. 3.

m Have they loſt their Wits? have they neither Religion nor common Diſcretion, either of which would teach them not to make themſelves ſo hateful to the all-ſeeing and almighty God, and to all Men? The words may be rendered thus, Do not all the workers of Iniquity know it? So it is only an Ellipſis of the Pronoun, which is frequent, as I have ſhewed before. Are they not Conſcious to themſelves of the Truth of what I ſay? I dare appeal to their own Conſciences. But this I propound with Submiſſion. n Or, they eat up, (i. e.) devour and deſtroy, as this word ſignifies, Deut. 7. 16. Prov. 30. 14. Jer. 50. 17. Nah. 3. 15. o (i. e.) The poor and godly Iſraelites, of whom he principally ſpeaks: whom he calleth my people. Either 1. God's people, as they were in many reſpects: Or rather 2. David's people: For David ſpeaks both theſe words and all the reſt of this Pſalm in his own Name and Perſon. And David might well call them his People, either becauſe they were his Friends and Favourers: Or becauſe he being anointed their King, they were conſequently his People: Or becauſe he was now actually their King, and ſo they were actually his People: For ſome conceive that this Pſalm was made in the time, and upon the occaſion of Abſalom's Rebellion. p (i. e.) With as little regret or remorſe, and with as much greedineſs, and delight, and Conſtancy too, as they uſe to eat their Meat. The Particle as is here underſtood, as it is Pſal. 125. 2. Prov. 26. 9. and in many other places. q They are guilty not only of groſs Injuſtice, and Oppreſſion towards men, but alſo of horrid Impiety and Contempt of God, whoſe Providence they deny, and whoſe Worſhip they wholly neglect and deſpiſe.

5. There r † were they in great fear s: for t God is in the generation of the righteous u.

† Heb. they feared a fear.

r (i. e.) In the place, or upon the ſpot, where they practiſed theſe Inſolencies, God ſtruck them with a panick fear. Or, Then (i. e.) In the height of their Tyranny and proſperous Impiety, when they ſeemed to have no cauſe for it. An Adverb of Place for an Adverb of Time, of which there want not Examples in Scripture and other Authors, as hath been noted before. Or, thence, as this Particle is rendered, Gen. 2. 10. and 49. 24. Iſa. 65. 20. (i. e.) From that time; or, for that Cauſe, Cauſe, as ſome take it, and it may be taken, Job 35. 12. Pſal. 36. 12. (i.e.) For this their contempt of God and manifeſt injury to Men. s From their own guilty Conſciences, and the juſt Expectation of divine Vengeance. Heb. They feared with fear, (i.e.) Vehemently, where there was no cauſe of fear, as is here implyed, (for they are now ſuppoſed to be in a State of Power and Tyranny) as is expreſſed in the Parallel place, Pſal. 53. 5. Or, they ſhall be greatly afraid, the paſt Tenſe being put for the future Prophetically. t For they remembred what a potent Adverſary they had, and therefore had cauſe enough to fear. Or, But, as this Particle is taken, Gen. 45. 8. Pſal. 37. 20. Eccleſ. 2. 10. and 6. 2. So he deſcribes the contrary and ſafe Condition of the Righteous. Or, when, as it oft ſignifies, and ſo it Anſwers to the then in the beginning of the Verſe, when God ſhall once appear for his People, a dreadful Horror ſhall ſeize upon their wicked Enemies. u (i.e.) Among them, with his gracious and powerful Preſence to defend them, and to fight againſt their Enemies. Or, God is for, &c. as the Hebrew beth oft ſignifies, that is, God is on their ſide, and therefore their Enemies have great cauſe to tremble.

* Pſal. 22. 7, 8. 6. * Ye have ſhamed x the counſel of the poor y; becauſe z the LORD is his refuge.

x (i.e.) Deſired and endeavoured to bring it to Shame, or diſappoint it. Comp. Pſal. 6. 10. Or, ye have reproached or derided it, as a fooliſh thing. y (i.e.) The cauſe which he hath taken to defend himſelf, which is not by lying and flattery, and violence, and all manner of Wickedneſs, which is your Counſel and uſual Practice, but by truſting in God, and keeping his way, and calling upon his Name. z This was the ground of their Contempt and Scorn, that he lived by Faith in God's Promiſe and Providence. Or, but, as in the foregoing Verſe: So there ſeems to be an Elegant and fit Oppoſition. You reproach them, but God will own and protect them, and juſtifie their Counſel which you deride.

† Heb who will give, &c. Pſal. 53. 6. 7. † O that the ſalvation of Iſrael were come out of Zion ‖! when the LORD bringeth back the captivity of his people † Jacob * ſhall rejoyce and Iſrael ſhall be glad.

‖ Theſe words directly and immediately Concern the deliverance of the People of Iſrael out of that ſinful and deplorable Eſtate, in which they now were; which having deſcribed in the Body of the Pſalm, he concludes, after his manner, with a Prayer to God to hear and help them out of Zion, where the Ark then was, whence God uſed to hear and Anſwer his Peoples Prayers. But ultimately and principally they deſign a further, even the ſpiritual Redemption and Salvation of all God's Iſrael by the Meſſias, as may appear by divers Conſiderations; 1. That the ancient Jews did thus underſtand it, and among others, Jonathan's Targum or Paraphraſe on the Bible, expound it thus: I do not expect Gideon's Salvation, which was but Corporeal, nor that of Sampſon—but the Salvation of the Meſſias. With whom agrees the Targum of Jeruſalem. 2. That the Doctrine of Iſrael's Redemption or Salvation by Chriſt was very well known as to other ancient Patriarchs, Job. 8. 56. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11, 12. ſo particularly to David, of whom it is expreſly ſaid, that he knew and foreſaw this Myſtery, Acts 2. 30, 31. in whoſe Book of Pſalms there are divers and very diſtinct and clear Prophecies of it, as we have in part ſeen upon Pſal. 2. and 8. and ſhall ſee more fully and Evidently hereafter. 3. That David and other holy Prophets in the midſt of their ſad Thoughts and Fears, and Troubles, did uſually comfort themſelves with the Promiſe and Expectation of the Meſſias, by whom, and by whom alone they ſhould receive that plenary Salvation for which they groaned; of which it is thought we have one inſtance, Gen. 49. 18. but we have many unqueſtionable Inſtances in the Prophecy of Iſaiah, as Ch. 7. 14. and 9. 6. &c. And this Courſe might be the more ſeaſonable for David, becauſe he ſpeaks here of his Troubles after he was ſettled in his Kingdom, (as may be gathered from the mention of Zion, where the Ark was not till that time) and poſſibly of the ſad and ſinful State of his Kingdom during Abſalom's Rebellion; and therefore finding himſelf ſo ſtrangely diſappointed of that Peace and Happineſs, which he confidently expected when once he came to the Kingdom, and wiſely and juſtly preſaging that his Children and the following Generations of Iſraelites for the ſame Cauſes were likely to meet with the ſame or greater Calamities than this, he wearieth himſelf with the Expreſſion of his Belief, and deſire of the coming of the Meſſias to ſave his People. 4. To this alſo ſuits the mention of Zion, becauſe the Prophets knew and foretold that the Meſſias or Deliverer ſhould firſt come to Zion, and ſhould ſet up his Throne there, and from thence ſend forth his Laws and Edicts to the gentile World; as is poſitively affirmed, Pſal. 2. 6. and 110. 2. Iſa. 2. 3. and 59. 20 Comp. with Rom. 11. 26. and in many other places. 5. The following words agree only to this time, wherein he ſpeaks of bringing back the Captivity of his people with the univerſal joy of all Jacob and Iſrael; which cannot agree to David's time, wherein there was no ſuch Captivity of the people, but only a Civil war and mutual ſlaughter, which is quite another thing; nor to the time of Iſrael's return from Babylon, when there was no ſuch return of all Iſrael, but only of Judah and Benjamin, and ſome few of the other Tribes, and the joy which the returning Iſraelites then had, was but low and mixed with many Fears and Dangers, and Reproaches; as we ſee in the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah. And therefore they muſt belong to the times of the Meſſias, by whom this Promiſe was fulfilled to the true Iſrael of God, who were brought back from that moſt real and dreadful, though ſpiritual, Captivity of ſin and Satan, as is declared; Luk. 4. 18. Eph. 4. 8. and ſhall be literally accompliſhed to the natural ſeed of Jacob or Iſrael according to the Expectation and Belief of all the Jews in their ſeveral Ages, and of moſt Chriſtian Writers, † (i.e.) His Captive people, Captivity being oft put for Captives, as Deut. 21. 10. and 30. 3. Pſal. 126. 1, 4. Or, his people from Captivity, of which ſee the former Note. * (i.e.) The ſeed or Children of Jacob, as Aaron is named for his Sons, 1 Chron. 12. 27. and 27. 17. and David for his Sons, and the like.

PSAL. XV.

The ARGUMENT.

The occaſion and time of Compoſing this Pſalm is uncertain: but the Scope of it is plain, which is to give the Character of an holy and happy Man, and to deſcribe the way to true Bleſſedneſs. Wherein this is obſervable, that he is wholly ſilent as to the Ceremonial or Ritual Obſervations of the Law, not that he doth diſown them, or allow the neglect of them, as is manifeſt from David's conſtant Practice, and from many other paſſages, but that he might undeceive the Hypocritical Iſraelites, who laid too great a ſtreſs upon thoſe things, as if the diligent performance thereof would excuſe their wicked Lives, which Error almoſt all the Prophets do obſerve and Condemn in them, and that he might inform the Church of that, and all ſucceeding Ages; that the ſubſtance of Religion did conſiſt in the Practice of true Holineſs and Righteouſneſs.

A Pſalm of David.

Pſal. 24. 3. &c. † Heb. ſojourn. 1. LORD a, who ſhall † abide b in thy tabernacle? c who ſhall dwell in thy holy hill d?

a O thou who art the ſoveraign Lord of this holy Hill and Tabernacle, to whom it belongs to give Laws to it, and to admit or reject Perſons, as thou ſeeſt fit, I beg of thee the reſolution of this important queſtion. And he propoſeth this queſtion to God, that the Anſwer coming from him, may have the greater Authority and influence upon mens Conſciences. b Heb. ſojourn, to wit, ſo as to dwell, as it is explained in the next clauſe. Unleſs this clauſe be meant of ſojourning in the Church here, and the next of dwelling in Heaven hereafter. Who ſhall enter thither and abide there, with thy good leave and liking. c (i.e.) In thy Church, either 1. Militant. Who is a true, and will be a perſevering Member of this Church? Or, 2. Triumphant, or in Heaven; which is called the true Tabernacle not made with mans hands, Heb. 8. 2. and 9. 11. Revel. 21. 3. d To wit, of Zion, ſo called Pſal. 2. 6. which is oft put for the Church and for Heaven. Who ſhall ſo dwell in thy Church here, as to dwell with thee for ever hereafter in Heaven.

* Iſa. 33. 15. ‖ Or, with. 2. * He that walketh uprightly e, and worketh righteouſneſs f, and ſpeaketh the truth ‖ in his heart g.

e Or preſently, or ſincerely, without guile or Hypocriſie, Loving, Worſhiping and Serving God, and loving his Neighbour not in word and ſhew only, but in truth and reality, and this conſtantly, and in the whole courſe of his Life, as walking implies. f Maketh it his work and buſineſs to do juſtly, (i.e.) to give to every one his due, firſt to God, and then to Men; for the words are general, and not reſtrained to either. g His words and profeſſions to God and Men, agree with, and proceed from the thoughts and purpoſes of his Heart.

‖ Or, receiveth Or, endureth. Exod. 23. 1. 3. He that back-biteth not with his tongue h, nor doeth evil i to his neighbour k, nor ‖ taketh up l a reproach againſt his neighbour.

h He doth not take away or diminiſh his Neighbours good name, either by denying him his due praiſes, or by laying any thing to his Charge falſely, or without ſufficient cauſe and Evidence. i (i.e.) Any hurt or injury. k (i.e.) To any Man; as is evident, 1. From the Nature of this Precept, which reacheth to all, it being plain and certain, that both by Laws of Nature and of Moſes, it was not lawful to do evil to any man, except where God the Soveraign commanded it, as he did to the Canaanites and Amalekites. 2. From the the Scripture uſage of this word Neighbour, which frequently ſignifies every man, though a ſtranger or an heathen, as appears from Gen. 29. 4. Exod. 20. 16, 17. Levit. 18. 20. and 19. 15, &c. Prov. 25. 8, 9. Luk. 10. 29, &c. Mat. 5. 43, 44. And he uſeth this word Neighbour, becauſe he who is ſtrictly ſo, is moſt within our reach, and moſt liable to the injuries which one man doth to another. l To wit, into his Lips or Mouth, which is underſtood here, as alſo Exod. 20. 7. Job 4. 2. and fully expreſſed: Pſal. 16. 4. and 50. 16. (i. e.) Doth not raiſe it, though that may ſeem to be included in the firſt Clauſe, that Back-biteth not: Or, doth not ſpread and propagate it; which men are too prone and ready to do; and which makes that a publick, which before was but a private injury and miſchief. Or, nor taketh, or receiveth, (i. e.) Entertaineth it cheerfully and greedily, as men uſually do ſuch things, and eaſily believeth it without ſufficient reaſon. See Exod. 23. 1. Levit. 19. 16. Or, nor beareth or endureth, as this Phraſe ſignifies, Pſal. 69. 7. Ezek. 36. 15. He doth not ſuffer another to defame him without ſome rebuke or ſignification of his diſlike, Prov. 25. 23.

4. In whoſe eyes m a vile perſon n is contemned o; but he honoureth p them that fear the LORD: he that ſweareth q to his own hurt r, and changeth not s?

m (i. e.) In whoſe Judgment and Eſtimation. n (i. e.) One who deſerves Contempt, an ungodly or wicked Man, as appears from the next clauſe: where he that feareth God is oppoſed to him. o Or, deſpiſed, notwithſtanding all his wealth and glory, and greatneſs. He doth not admire his Perſon, nor envy his Condition, nor Court him with flatteries, nor value his Company and Converſation, nor approve of or comply with his Courſes, but he thinks meanly of him, he judgeth him a moſt miſerable man, and a great object of Pity, he abhors his wicked practices, and labours to make ſuch ways Contemptible and hateful to all men, as far as it lyes in his power. But this contempt of wicked men muſt be ſo managed, as not to cauſe a contempt of juſt Authority, which if it be lodged in a wicked hand, doth Challenge not only Obedience, but alſo Honour and Reverence; as is manifeſt from the Precepts and Examples of Chriſt and of his Apoſtles, who charge this upon the Chriſtians, every where, although the Magiſtrates of thoſe times were unqueſtionably vile and wicked men. See Act. 23. 5. Rom. 13. 1 Pet. 2. 13, &c. p (i. e.) He highly eſteemeth and heartily loveth them, and ſheweth great reſpect and kindneſs to them, though they be mean and obſcure as to their worldly Condition, and though they may differ from him in ſome opinions or practices of leſſer moment. q To wit, a promiſſory Oath, engaging himſelf by ſolemn Oath, to do ſomething which may be beneficial to his Neighbour. r (i. e.) To his own damage or prejudice. As if a Man ſolemnly ſwear by the name of the great God, that he will ſell him ſuch an Eſtate at a price below the full worth; Or that, he will give a poor man ſuch a Sum of Mony, which when afterwards he comes to review and conſider, he finds it very inconvenient and burdenſome to him, where he is tempted to break his Oath. s To wit, his Purpoſe or Courſe, but continues firm and reſolved to perform his promiſe, and Sacrificeth his intereſt and profit to his Conſcience, and the Reverence of God and of an Oath. See Ezek. 17. 18, 19.

* Exod. 23. 8. * Exod. 22. 25. Lev. 25. 36. Deut. 23. 19. Ezek. 18. 8. & 22. 12. Deut. 16. 19.

5. * He that putteth not out his money to uſury t * or taketh reward u againſt the innocent. He that doth theſe things x, ſhall never be moved y.

t In ſuch manner as is contrary to God's Law: Of which ſee in Exod. 22. 25. Levit. 25. 36, 37. u Or, a bribe from him who hath a bad cauſe; that he may either condemn the innocent or acquit the guilty: Both which God abhorreth. x Here enumerated, and ſuch things as naturally and neceſſarily flow from them, or are a-kin to them, and joyned with them. y He ſhall conſtantly perſevere in God's Church here, and though he may be ſhaken, and ſtagger and fall, yet he ſhall never wholly and finally be removed or fall away from it, nor from that happineſs, which was propoſed and promiſed to him, but ſhall abide with God here, and go to him when he dies and be for ever with the Lord.

PSAL. XVI.

|| Or, a golden Pſalm of David.

|| Michtam a of David.

a Divers render this word, a Golden Pſalm, becauſe of the preciouſneſs and excellency of the matter of it; for it Treats of Chriſt's Death and Reſurrection. But becauſe this Title is prefixed to Pſal. 56. 57, 58, 59, 60. wherein there is no ſuch peculiar Excellency, it may ſeem rather to be a Title belonging to the Muſick or the Song, which, with the reſt is now loſt and unknown. It is a great queſtion among Expoſitors, in whoſe Name and Perſon he ſpeaketh this Pſalm, whether his own or Chriſt's. It ſeems hard to exclude David's Perſon, to whom almoſt the whole Pſalm properly and literally belongs, and to whom ſome parts of it do more conveniently belong than to Chriſt: And ſome parts of it do peculiarly belong to Chriſt, of whom it is expounded by the two great Apoſtles, Peter and Paul, Act. 2. 25. and 13. 35. And yet it ſeems probable by the contexture of the Pſalm, and the coherence of the ſeveral Verſes together, that the whole Pſalm ſpeaks of one and the ſame Perſon. But becauſe David was a mixt Perſon, being both a Member and an eminent Type, of Chriſt, he may without any inconvenience be thought to ſpeak of himſelf ſometimes in the one and ſometimes in the other Capacity, to paſs from the one to the other. And therefore having ſpoken of himſelf as a Believer or Member of Chriſt, in the former part of the Pſalm, he proceeds to conſider himſelf as a Type of Chriſt, and having Chriſt in his Eye, and being inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt with the knowledge and Contemplation of Chriſt's Paſſion and Reſurrection, towards the cloſe of the Pſalm he ſpeaks ſuch things, as though they might be accommodated to himſelf in a very perfect, obſcure, and improper Sence, yet could not truly, literally, and properly, fully and compleatly, belong to any but to Chriſt, to whom therefore they are juſtly appropriated in the New Teſtament.

1. PReſerve me b O God: for in thee do I put my truſt c.

b From all mine Enemies. c Therefore thou art in Honour and by Promiſe obliged not to deceive my Truſt.

* Pſal. 16. 2. * Job 22. 2. & 35. 7. Pſal. 50. 9. Rom. 11. 35.

2. * O my ſoul d, thou haſt ſaid e unto the LORD, Thou art my Lord f: * my goodneſs g extendeth not to thee h; d Which words are fitly underſtood: For it is manifeſt he ſpeaks to one perſon of another. And it is uſual with David to turn his Speech to his Soul, as Pſal. 42. 6. and 43. 5. e Thou haſt oft times avowed and profeſſed it, and doſt ſtill perſiſt to do ſo. f By Creation and Preſervation and otherwiſe; to whom I owe all Service and Obedience upon that account. g Whatſoever Piety or Vertue, or Goodneſs is in me, or is done by me. h (i. e.) Doth not add any thing to thy Felicity, for thou doſt not need me nor my Service, nor art capable of any advantage from it: Or, is not for thee, as this word is uſed, Gen. 16. 5. 2 Sam. 1. 26. (i. e.) For thy uſe or Benefit. Or, is not upon thee, (i. e.) It lays no Obligation upon thee, as this very word is taken, Judg. 19. 20. Pſal. 56. 12. Ezek. 45. 17. All comes to the ſame thing. The Sence is, God is all-ſufficient, and infinitely happy, and the Author of all the good that is in, or is done by any of his Creatures; and therefore cannot prevent nor oblige God any further than he is graciouſly pleaſed to oblige himſelf. Thus he renounceth all Opinion of merit, and though he urged his truſt in God, as a motive to perſwade God to preſerve him, v. 1. yet he here declares that he did not do it, as thinking that God was indebted to him for it.

3. But i to the Saints that are in the Earth k, and to the excellent l in whom is all my delight m.

i (i. e.) But my goodneſs extendeth, which is eaſily underſtood out of the former Verſe: From which alſo there may be fetched another Supplement. O my Soul, thou haſt ſaid to the Saints, &c. k (i. e.) To thoſe holy and righteous Perſons that live upon Earth with me: To theſe only or principally my goodneſs is extended. Becauſe I cannot reach thee, I endeavour to pay a ſingular Reſpect and Love, and Kindneſs to all Saints, for thy ſake whoſe Friends and Servants they are, and whoſe Image they bear. This may ſeem more properly to agree to David, than to Chriſt, whoſe goodneſs was principally deſigned for, and imparted to Sinners, and did not find men Saints, but make them ſo; nor was it confined to them, that lived with him upon the Earth, but extended to all the Believers of all Ages before and after him. l Or, the magnificent, or mighty, or honourable, to wit, the Saints, as he now called them, whom, becauſe they were mean and deſpicable in the Eyes of the World, he honours with their juſt Titles, and by appropriating them to the Saints, he ſufficiently intimates, that all other men, how great ſoever, are but ignoble and vile perſons, as he had called them, Pſal. 15. 4. m (i. e.) Whoſe Company and Converſation is moſt pleaſant and deſirable to me. Compare Pſal. 119. 63.

4. Their ſorrows ſhall be multiplied that || haſten after another God n: their drink offerings of blood p will I not offer, * nor take up their names q into my lips.

|| Or, give gift to another, * Joſh. 23. 7.

n Or, that preſent, or endow (as this Verb ſignifies, Exod. 22. 16.) another God, to wit, with Oblations, as it follows. God is not expreſſed in the Hebrew text, but ſeems fitly and neceſſarily to be underſtood, becauſe of the following offerings, which are made to none that is not either really or by Reputation a God. The Sence is, Idolaters, notwithſtanding all their Zeal or coſt about their Idols, gain nothing to themſelves, but abundance of ſorrow and miſery. This he mentioneth partly as one Reaſon, why he would have no fellowſhip with them in their Idolatrous Worſhip, which he adds in this Verſe:

and partly that by this Comparison he might illustrate and commend his own Happiness, in having the Lord for his Portion, of which he speaks, v. 5, 6. Or thus, let their sorrows be multiplied, &c. Having shewed his great Respect and Affection to the Saints and excellent Servants of the true God, he now declares what an abhorrency he had for those that forsake the true God, and worship Idols. To whom he wisheth encrease of their sorrows, whereby they may either be awakened and converted to the Lord again, or may be cut off, if they be impenitent and incorrigible. o Under which he comprehends all their Offerings, the reason being for Substance the same in all: but he mentions these particularly, because of a special Corruption in them above their other Sacrifices, to wit, that the very matter of them was unlawful, as we shall see: Which also might serve both to convince and deter those Israelites which harkened after Idolatry, and made no Conscience of maintaining Communion with Idolaters, which was the case of many of them in Saul's time; and to justifie himself for his Detestation of them, and of all fellowship with them. p In which the Gentiles used (as divers learned men have observed) to Offer and sometimes to drink part of the Blood of their Sacrifices, whether of Beasts or of Men, as either of them were Sacrificed. Which must needs be very hateful to God, because he had so severely forbidden the drinking of Blood to his People, either at their Sacrifices, or in their common Food. q (i.e.) Of those other Gods mentioned before. I abhor the very name and memory of them. Not that he thought it unlawful to name these Idols, which is frequently done by the holy Prophets, but to express the odiousness of the thing by his loathing of the very name and shadow of them. Compare Exod. 23. 13 Deut. 12. 3. Hos. 2. 16, 17. Eph. 5. 3. Or the Sence is, I will not swear by them: For taking up ones names is used for swearing, Exod. 20. 7.

5. * The LORD is the portion † of mine inheritance r, and of my cup s: thou maintainest my lot t.

r Or, of my division, (i. e.) Of that inheritance which God hath mercifully divided, or distributed to me, and which I by his grace have chosen for my self. I envy not the vast Riches and Glory of Idolaters, but do heartily rejoyce in God as my portion, and desire no better nor no other Felicity. God, who hath suffered other Nations to walk in their own Idolatrous ways, hath granted this favour to me, to know and worship him the only true God. And as other Nations have chosen, and do adhere to their false Gods, so have I chosen God, and will cleave to him. s The same thing repeated in other words. The portion of my Cup, is the portion which is put into my Cup, as the ancient manner was in Feasts, where each had his portion of Meat, and of Wine allotted to him. See Psal. 11. 6. The Cup oft denotes a Mans portion or Condition, as Mat. 20. 22. and 26. 39. t (i. e.) My inheritance divided to me by lot, as the Custome then was, Jos. 18. 11. Judg. 1. 3. q. d. As thou hast given me an excellent lot, having planted me among thine own People, and in that place which thou hast chosen for thy dwelling and worship, so, I doubt not, thou wilst uphold and preserve me there, in spight of all the malicious designs of mine Enemies that seek to drive me thence.

* Act. 2. 25. * Psal. 73. 23. & 121. 5.

8. * I have set the LORD always before me c: because * he is at my right hand d, I shall not be moved e.

c (i.e.) I have always presented him to my mind, as my Rule and Scope, as my Witness and Judge, as my Patron and Protector in the discharge of my Office, and in all my Actions. Hitherto David seems to have spoken in his own Person, and with special respect to himself, but now he seems to have been transported by an higher Inspiration of the Spirit of Prophecy, and to be carried above himself, and to have an Eye to the man Christ Jesus, who is and was the end of the Law, and the great Scope of all the Prophets, and to speak of himself only as a Type of Christ, and with more special respect unto Christ, in whom this and the following Verses were much more truly and fully accomplished than in himself. Christ as man, did always set his Fathers will and Glory before him, as he himself oft declareth, especially in St. John's Gospel. d To wit, to strengthen me, for the right hand is the chief seat of a Man's strength, and Instrument of Action, to protect, assist and comfort me, as this Phrase signifies, Psal. 109. 31. and 110. 5. And this assistance of God was necessary to Christ as Man. e Or, removed, either from the discharge of my Duty, or from the attainment of that Glory and Happiness which is prepared for me. Though the Archers shoot grievously at me, and both men and Devils seek my Destruction, and God sets himself against me as an Enemy, withdrawing his favour from me, and filling me with deadly sorrows, through the sence of his anger; yet I do not despair but am assured that God will deliver me out of all my Distresses.

9. Therefore f my heart g is glad, and my glory h rejoyceth i: my flesh also shall † rest k in hope l.

f Upon this ground and Confidence. g The proper seat of joy and of all the Affections. h Either 1. my soul, which is indeed the Glory of a man. Or rather 2. my Tongue, which also is a man's Glory and Priviledge, above all other living Creatures, and the Instrument of glorifying both God and man; and which is oft called a mans Glory, as Gen. 49. 6. Psal. 30. 12. and 57. 8. and 108. 1. and 149. 5. And so this very Word is translated, Act. 2. 26. And thus the distinction between heart and Glory, and Flesh, is most certain and evident. i Or, exsulteth, (i. e.) Declares or expresseth my inward joy. For this Verb signifies not so much internal Joy, as the outward and visible Demonstrations of it, in Words or Gestures and Carriages. k (i. e.) My body shall quietly and sweetly rest in the Grave, to which I am hastening. l (i. e.) In confident assurance of its Incorruption there, and of it's Resurrection to a blessed and immortal Life, as it is explained v. 10, 11. The flesh or body is in it self, but a dead and senceless lump of Clay, yet Hope is here ascribed to it figuratively, as it is to the brute Creatures, Rom. 8. 19. because there is Matter and Foundation for such hope, if it were capable of it, the good promised and expected being certainly future.

10. * For thou wilt not leave my soul m in hell n; neither wilt thou suffer thine holy One o to see corruption p.

* Act. 2. 31. & 13. 35.

m (i. e.) My Person, as this word is every where used, by a Synecdoche of the part, and then the Person by another Synecdoche of the whole is put for the Body. The Soul is oft put for the Body, either for the living Body, as Psal. 35. 13. and 105. 18. or for the Carkass or dead Body, as it is taken, Levit. 19. 28. and 21. 1. Numb. 5. 2. and 6. 6, 9, 11. and 9. 10. and 19. 11, 13. And so it is interpreted in this very place, as it is produced, Act. 2. 29, &c. and 13. 36, 37. n (i. e.) In the Grave or state of the Dead, as appears, 1. From the Hebrew word Scheol, which is very frequently so understood, as is undeniably evident from Gen 42. 38. Numb. 16. 30. Job 14. 13. Comp. with 17. 13. Psal. 18. 5. and 30. 3. and 141. 7. Eccles. 9. 10. Ezek. 32. 21, 27. Jonah 2. 2. and many other places. 2. From the following Clause of this Verse. 3. From Act. 2. and 13. where it is so expounded and applied. o (i. e.) Me thy holy Son, whom thou hast sanctified and sent into the World. It is peculiar to Christ, to be called the holy one of God, Mark 1. 24. Luk. 4. 34. p Or Rottenness, (i. e.) To be corrupted or putrified in the Grave, as the Bodies of others are. Seeing is oft put for perceiving by experience. In which Sence men are said to see good, Psal. 34. 13. and to see Death, or the Grave, Psal. 89. 48. Luk. 2. 26. Job. 8. 51. and to see sleep, Eccles. 8. 16. And the Hebrew word Shochath, though sometimes by a Metonymy it signifies the Pit or Place of Corruption, yet properly and generally it signifies Corruption or Perdition, as Job 17. 14. and 33. 18, 30. Psal. 35. 7. and 55. 23. Jonah 2. 6. and is so rendered by the seventy Jewish Interpreters, Psa. 107. 20. Prov. 28. 10. Jer. 13. 14. and 15. 3. Lament. 4. 20. Ezek. 19. 4. and 21. 31. And so it must be understood here, although some of the Jews to avoid the force of this Argument render it the pit. But in that sence it is not true, for, whether it be meant of David, as they say, or of Christ, it is confessed that both of them did see the Pit, (i. e.) Were laid in the Grave. And therefore it must necessarily be taken in the other Sence now mentioned; and so it is properly and literally true in Christ alone, although it may in a lower and Metaphorical Sence be applied to David, who had a just and well-grounded Confidence, that although God might bring him into great Dangers and Distresses, which are called the sorrows of Death, and the pains of Hell, Psal. 116. 3. yet God would not leave him to perish in or by them.

11. Thou wilt shew me q the path of life r: * in thy thy presence s is fulness of joy t, at thy right hand u there are pleasures for evermore x.

q (i. e.) Give me an exact and experimental knowledge of it for my own Comfort, and the benefit of my People. r (i. e.) The way that leadeth to Life, not to a temporal and mortal Life here, for he is supposed to be dead and buried, v. 10. But to an endless and immortal, and blessed Life after death in the presence of God, as it followeth; the way to which is by the Resurrection of the Body. So the Sence is, Thou wilst Raise me from the Grave, and Conduct me to the place and state of everlasting Felicity. s Heb. With or before thy Face. (i. e.) In that heavenly Paradise, where thou art graciously and gloriously present; where thou dost clearly and fully discover thy Face, and the light of thy Countenance; whereas in this Life thou hidest thy Face and shewest us only thy Back-parts, and we are in a state of absence from thee, and see thee only through a Glass darkly, and enjoy thee but in part. t (i. e.) Full and perfect joy and satisfaction, which it is in vain to expect in this Life, and is only to be found in the sight of thee. See Exod. 33. 14. Psal. 17. 15. Mat. 5. 8. 1 Joh. 3. 2. u Which he mentions as a place of greatest Honour, as this was Gen. 48. 13, &c. 1 Kings 2. 19. Psal. 45. 9. and the place where the Elect and Saints are placed at the last day, Mat 25. 33, &c. and lastly, at the place where Christ himself is said to sit, Psal. 110. 1. Mat. 26. 64. Col. 3. 1. Heb. 1. 3. x Everlasting delights in the Contemplation and Fruition of God.

PSAL. XVII.

A Prayer of David a

a David being now grievously persecuted and distressed by Saul and other Enemies, and being also bespattered with many Calumnies, he appeals to the heart-searching God, makes a solemn Protestation of his Integrity, earnestly begs of God Protection and Deliverances, and being made weary of this Life, by his pressing and manifold Calamities, he Comforts himself with the Contemplation and Hope of an happier Life.

1. HEar † the right b, O LORD, attend unto my cry c, give ear unto my prayer that goeth † not out of feigned lips d.

b Heb. righteousness, (i. e.) Me who, notwithstanding all their accusations and slaunders, am righteous; Or, my righteous cause; do thou take notice of it and give Sentence for me: or my righteous Prayer. I desire nothing that is unreasonable or unjust, but that thou wouldest judge righteously between me and mine Enemies, and vindicate thine own Honour and faithfulness, in making good thy Promise to me, which thy righteousness obligeth thee to do. c (i. e.) My fervent Prayer attended with strong Cries. d Heb. not with deceitful lips, which speak one thing when my Heart knoweth and designeth another. And this profession of his sincerity in his words, doth fitly make way for his solemn appeal to God in the following Verses.

2. Let my sentence e come forth from † thy presence f: let thine * eyes behold the things that are equal g.

† Heb. without lips of deceit.
* Psal. 11. 5.

e Heb. my right or judgment, (i. e.) Judgment in my cause, or on my behalf f (i e.) From thee, and from thy Tribunal to which I bring my cause. Do not suspend or delay it, but speedily examin my cause and give sentence in it. g Or, Right. For though I desire and need thy grace and favour in many other Respects, yet I beg only thy justice in this cause between me and them.

3. Thou hast proved h mine heart, thou hast visited me i in the night k, * thou hast tryed me l, and shalt find nothing m: I * am purposed n that my mouth shall not transgress o.

* Job 23. 10. Psal. 26. 2. Mal. 3. 2, 3. 1 pet. 1. 7.
* Psal. 39. 1.

h Or searched, or tried it, by many and sore Temptations and Afflictions, whereby the sincerity or hypocrisie of mens Hearts are easily and commonly discovered, and especially by thy all-seeing Eye. And that is my great Comfort, that thou art Witness of my innocency. i Thou hast made an inspection and enquiry into my Heart. k Either 1. Metaphorically, (i. e.) in the time of Trouble. Or, 2. Properly; when mens minds being freed from the incumbrance and distraction of Business, and from the Presence and Society of Men: Which either lays a restraint upon them, or tempts them to use Dissimulation, do act most vigorously and freely, either upon Good or Evil, according to their several inclinations. l Accurately and severely, as Goldsmiths do Metals. m (i. e.) Nothing of unrighteousness, in Heb. shalt not find, To wit, that whereof mine Enemies accuse me, namely, Hypocrisie towards thee, and evil design against Saul, covered under fair pretences as they alledge. So this general Phrase is to be limited from the Context, as other generals most frequently are. For he was far from thinking himself sinless, that he often acknowledgeth his many and great sins, and particularly, that, if God should enter into Judgment with him, and be severe to mark iniquities, no man living could be justified, Or, stand before him, Psal. 130. 3. and 143. 2. n Or, I have resolved upon Deliberation, as the word implies. o I am so far from Practising against Saul's Life, as they charge me, that I will not wrong him so much as in a Word. Some joyn these words with the next foregoing, and render the place thus, That which I have thought, my mouth shall not transgress, or rather, hath not transgressed; (i. e.) My Thoughts and Words always agree together. I abhor falshood and Dissimulation.

4. Concerning the works of men p, by the word of thy lips q, I have kept me from r the paths s of the destroyer t.

p Concerning my Care and Caution about my Words, I have now spoken, v. 3. now I may say the like concerning my works. As for the works which men generally practise. Or, Because of (as the prefix Lamed is oft used, as Gen. 2. 23. Numb. 16. 34. Jer. 4. 31. and 22. 10. and 23. 9.) the Works of Men. So the Sence may be this, observing and considering the quality of the Works of the Men of this Age, with whom I converse, or of all mankind, some few excepted; considering, I say, how wicked and unreasonable and pernicious they are, not only to others, but also to themselves; I was resolved to take more care in the ordering of my own Actions. q (i. e.) By the help of thy blessed Word and the excellent Rules, Promises and Threatnings thereof, which by deep and frequent Meditation I have hid and fixed in mine Heart, as the best Antidote against sin and temptation, Psal. 119. 9, 11. r So the same Verb is used with the like Supplement, Jos. 6. 18. which also is in a manner included in the Verb. Or, I have observed, To wit, so as to avoid them. s Or, ways, (i. e.) The Customs and Practices, or the imitation of them; as may be gathered from the next Verse, where he prays to be kept in God's paths, which are opposed to these Paths. t Or, of the violent Man: Such as Saul and his Courtiers and Souldiers have shewed themselves towards me. Although their rage and violence against me, might have tempted me to have repayed them in their own Coyn, yet I forbore it, and spared both others and Saul himself, when his Life was at my Mercy, 1 Sam. 24. and 26. and this I did in Obedience to thy Word, which required me to Honour and preserve the Lord's Anointed.

5. Hold up my goings in thy paths n, that my footsteps † slip not x.

† Heb. be not moved.

u As by thy Word and Grace thou hast hitherto kept me from the Paths of evil men, and led me into thy Paths, so, I pray thee, enable me by the same means to persevere in thy ways, and in mine abhorrency of wicked Courses. x That I may not fall into that sin of revenging my self upon Saul, to which I may be more and more tempted, nor into any other sin, whereby thou mayst be provoked, or men may be offended, and Religion disgraced.

6. I have called upon thee y, for thou wilt hear me, O God z: incline thine ear unto me, and hear my speech.

y It hath been and still is, and shall be my constant course, to apply my self to thee for assistance and for deliverance. z For though thou mayst delay for a season, I am well assured that thou wilst hear and answer me.

7. * Shew thy marvellous loving kindness a, O thou ‖ that savest by thy right hand b them which put their trust in thee c, from those that rise up against them d.

* Psal. 31. 21.
‖ Or, that savest them which trust in thee, from those that rise up against thy right hand.

a To wit, in preserving and delivering me; which, if thou dost, I must ever acknowledg it to be an Act of kindness, or free Grace, or undeserved Bounty, yea, and of marvellous kindness, because of my extream and pressing dangers, out of which nothing but a wonder of God's mercy and Power can save me. b (i. e.) By thy great Power. c Or, in it, (i. e.) in thy right Hand, as was now expressed. Or, because of (as the Hebrew prefix Mem oft signifies, as Psal. 12. 6. and elsewhere) those that exalt themselves, (as this word signifies. Job 20. 27. and 27. 7. Psal. 59. 1.) not only against me, but against thee who hast engaged and declared thy self for me. So this Prayer is like that Psal. 66. 7. Let not the Rebellious exalt themselves. But this place is otherwise translated in the Margent of our Bibles, with which divers others, both Antient and later interpreters agree, and that more agreeably to the Order of the words in the Hebrew text, O thou that savest (or usest to save) them which trust in thee (or, as the Hebrew word may be properly rendered without any Supplement, Believers) from those that rise up against thy right Hand, (i. e.) Either against thy mighty Power, which thou hast already shewed in my wonderful Preservation: Or, against thy counsel (which is called God's hand, Act. 4. 28.) and revealed Will concerning my advancement to the Kingdom, which divers of these men did knowingly oppose, as may be gathered from 2 Sam. 3. 9, 10. &c. against the man (which word is oft understood, where Examples have been given, and more we shall have in this Book) of thy right Hand, as David is called, Psal. 80. 17. According to this Translation his Prayer is enforced with a double motive, to wit, his truſt is in God, and his Enemies oppoſition againſt God.

*Deu. 32. 10. Zech. 2. 8.

8. * Keep me as the apple of the eye e: hide me under the ſhadow of thy wings f.

d Which God hath marvellouſly fenced on every ſide, and Men uſe their utmoſt Care and Diligence to keep e. f As an Hen doth her Chickens.

† Heb. that waſt me. † Heb. my enemies againſt the ſoul.

9. From the wicked g † that oppreſs me, from † my deadly enemies h, who compaſs me about i.

g Or, Becauſe of the Wicked. h Heb. from thoſe who are mine Enemies, in or for, or againſt my (which Pronoun is eaſily ſupplied out of the foregoing word, where it is expreſſed) Soul or Life, (i. e.) Whom nothing but my Blood and Life will ſatisfie. i Which ſhews both their extream Malice and his great Danger.

The like Phraſe we have Job 15. 27. Pſal. 73. 7. l Not only againſt us whom they ſcorn, but even againſt God himſelf whom they deſpiſe, boaſting of their own Power, and what great things they will certainly effect againſt me.

11. They have now compaſſed us in our ſteps m; they have ſet their eyes n bowing down to the earth o:

m (i. e.) In all our ways. We go from place to place, to Rocks and Caves, and Woods; but whereſoever we go they are at hand, and ready to ſurround us. Of which ſee an example, 1 Sam. 23. 26. n To wit, upon or againſt us, (i. e.) They have diſcovered us, and keep their eyes fixed upon us, that we may not eſcape, or as deſigning to ſhoot at us. o (i. e.) Couching and caſting themſelves down upon the Earth, that they may not be diſcovered, and ſo may watch the fitteſt opportunity to ſurprize us. Which Sence is favoured by the next Verſe, and by comparing, Pſal. 10. 10. Oth. To caſt us down to the earth.

† Heb. the likeneſs of him (that is, of every one of them) is as a lyon that deſireth to raven.

r Heb. Prevent his face, (i. e.) Go forth againſt him, and meet and face him in Battle, as Enemies uſe to do. Or, prevent the execution of his miſchievous Deſigns againſt me; ſtop him in his attempt, and give him the firſt blow. s Or, thy hand, as it follows, v. 14. (i. e.) Thy inſtrument to execute Vengeance upon thine Enemies, or to chaſtiſe and exerciſe thy People: For which reaſon the Aſſyrian is called God's Rod, Iſa. 10. 5. as being ordained for Correction, Hab. 1. 12. The Sence is, do not puniſh me by this Rod: let me fall into thy hands, and not into the hands of wicked men, 2 Sam. 24. 14. Or, by (which Prepoſition is underſtood, Pſal. 2. 12. and oft elſewhere) thy Sword, (i. e.) by thy Power.

t Wherewith thou doſt Correct me. u. (i. e.) Who proſper in and ſet their Hearts upon this Vain and Tranſitory World, and neither have, nor chuſe, or deſire any other Portion or Felicity, as it follows. x (i. e.) Mind or Appetite, as that word is uſed, Job 20. 20. Prov. 20. 30. y (i. e.) Not only with common mercies, as Food and Raiment, but with thy choiceſt and moſt precious good things, ſuch as men uſe to hide or keep in their treaſures, with extraordinary Wealth and Glory, and all the Delights and Comforts of the preſent Life. z When many of the faithful Servants are barren, theſe are bleſſed with a numerous Poſterity. Or, their Children are filled or ſatisfied as well as their Parents. There is abundantly enough both for them and for their Children, and to ſpare for their Childrens Children, as it follows.

15. As for me a, I will or ſhall behold thy face b, in righteouſneſs c: I ſhall be ſatisfied d, when I awake e, with thy likeneſs f.

a I do not envy this their Felicity, but my Hopes and Happineſs are of another Nature. b I do not place my Portion in earthly and temporal Treaſures, as they do, but in beholding God's face, (i. e.) In the enjoyment of God's preſence and favour; which is indeed enjoyed in part in this Life, but not fully and to Satisfaction, of which David here ſpeaks, as appears from the laſt Clauſe of this Verſe; The ſight of God, and of his face, being frequently ſpoken of, both in the Old and New Teſtament, as a priviledge denyed even to the Saints, in this Life, and peculiar to the next Life, as is manifeſt from Exod. 33. 20. Judg. 13. 22. Mat. 5. 8. 1 Cor. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 3. 18. 1 John 3. 2. c With the Comfort of a good Conſcience, bearing me Witneſs that, notwithſtanding all the Calumnies and Cenſures of mine Enemies, I have been & am upright and righteous in the Courſe of my Life, both towards thee and towards all men. Which Teſtimony will enable me to look God in the Face with boldneſs, when mine Enemies, being Conſcious to themſelves of groſs and manifold unrighteouſneſs towards thee and me, and others, will be afraid to appear in thy Preſence. d I am now greatly diſtreſſed and diſſatisfied, and mine Enemies are fitted and ſatisfied with good things; but my turn will come, the time is coming wherein I ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied, to wit, with beholding thy Face, which is to me more Comfortable and Satisfactory, than all the Poſſeſſions of this World. e Either, 1. When I ſhall be delivered from my preſent Diſtreſſes and Calamities. But theſe never are in Scripture, or indeed can fitly be called by the name of Sleep, which is every where ſpoken of as a ſtate of reſt, and quietneſs; as Pſal. 127. 2. Job. 11. 12, 13. and conſequently deliverance from them, cannot be compared to awaking. Or, rather, 2. When I ſhall ariſe from the Dead: For Death is very frequently called Sleep both in Scripture, as 1 Kings 1. 21. Iſa. 26. 19. Jer. 51. 39, 57. Dan. 12. 2. Job. 11. 11, 13. and in other Authors; and conſequently Reſurrection from the Dead, is juſtly and fitly called an awaking, as it is Job 14. 12. Dan. 12. 2. Joh. 11. 11. And ſince the Doctrine of the Reſurrection of the juſt, to a bleſſed and endleſs Life was not unknown to the Holy men of God in the Old Teſtament, as it were very eaſy to prove, nor to David in particular, as appears from Pſal. 16. 10, 11. and from divers other paſſages, it cannot be imagined but David would Support and Comfort himſelf in his greateſt Agonies, with the conſideration thereof, this being incomparably the moſt weighty and effectual Argument and ground of Comfort, which he could poſſibly uſe. And this alſo beſt ſuits with the Context; for David is here oppoſing his Hopes and Portion to that of his Enemies, and having noted, not without a ſecret reflection and reproach upon them for it, that their Portion was in this Life, v. 14. it was moſt Conſonant to the place and to the thing it ſelf, that he ſhould ſeek and have his Happineſs in the future Life. f Or Image. Ey which may be underſtood either, 1. Chriſt, the Son of God, who was known to David and other Prophets, as is evident, and that under the name of the Son of God, Pſal. 2, 7, 12. Prov. 30. 4. Hoſ. 11. 1. Comp. with Mat. 2. 15. who being exactly like to his Father, might moſt fitly be called his likeneſs or image, as he is, Heb. 1. 3. Or 2. the image of God ſtamped upon his glorified Soul; which muſt needs afford him infinite Delight and Satisfaction. Or 3. God himſelf, or the face of God mentioned in the former Clauſe, and explained here by another Phraſe, as is very uſual in theſe writings. And this Interpretation may receive ſtrength from Numb 12. 8. Where beholding the ſimilitude of the Lord is evidently the ſame thing, which is elſewhere called ſeeing his face, & from Heb. 10. 1. Where the image doth not note the likeneſs or repreſentation, but the truth & exiſtence of the thing.

PSAL. XVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm, with ſome few and ſmall Variations, is written, 2 Sam. 22. It was compoſed by David, towards the end of his Reign and Life, upon the occaſion here mentioned.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David, the ſervant of the LORD a, who ſpake unto the LORD the words of *this ſong, in the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul b: And he ſaid. 2 Sam. 22.

a Who eſteemeth it a greater honour to be thy Servant, than to be King of Iſrael, and who doth entirely devote himſelf to thy Service and Glory. b (i. e.) After the Death of Saul, and the Conqueſt of all his ſucceeding Enemies, and his own firm eſtabliſhment in his Kingdom.

1. * I will love thee c, O LORD, my ſtrength d. *Pſal. 144. 1.

c Moſt affectionately and with my whole Soul; as the Hebrew word ſignifies. I can return thee no better thing for all thy Favours, than my Love and Heart, which I pray thee to accept. By loving him he underſtands not only his inward affection, but alſo all the outward Expreſſions and Teſtimonies of it, praiſing and glorifing, and ſerving of him. d From whom alone I have received all my ſtrength and ſucceſs and ſettlement, and in whom alone I truſt, as it follows v. 2.

2. The LORD is my rock e and fortreſs, and my † Heb. my Rock Or, Cliff. * Heb. 2. 13. my deliverer: my God, † my ſtrength *in whom I will truſt, my buckler, and the horn f of my ſalvation, and my high tower.

e To which I flee for refuge, as the Iſraelites did to their Rocks. See Judg. 6. 2. 1 Sam. 13. 6. f By which I have both defended my ſelf and ſubdued mine Enemies. It is a Metaphor from thoſe Beaſts whoſe ſtrength lyes in their Horns. The Horn is oft put for Power, as Pſal. 92. 10. Amos 6. 13. and elſewhere.

3. I will call upon the LORD who is worthy to be praiſed, ſo ſhall I be ſaved g from mine enemies.

g Or, I did call — and was ſaved. For the Future Tenſe is commonly uſed for that which is Paſt. And this ſeems beſt to agree with the whole Context, which is to praiſe God for mercies already received.

* Pſal. 116. 3. † Heb. Belial. 4. * The ſorrows of death h compaſſed me, and the flouds of † ungodly men i made me afraid.

h (i.e.) Dangerous and deadly Troubles. Or, the Bands, or Cords of Death, which had almoſt ſeized me, and was putting it's Bands upon me. Compare Pſal. 73. 4. i Their great multitudes and ſtrength, and violent aſſaults, breaking in upon me like a Flood.

‖ Or, Cords. 5. The ‖ ſorrows of hell k compaſſed me about: the ſnares of death prevented me l.

k Or, of the grave, which brought me to the brink of the Grave. l Had almoſt taken hold of me, ere I was aware of my danger.

6. In my diſtreſs I called upon the LORD, and cryed unto my God, he heard my voice out of his *temple m, and my cry came before him, even unto his ears.

* Pſal. 11. 4.

m Either, 1. Out of his Sanctuary; whence he promiſed to hear and anſwer the Prayers of his People, which are either made there or directed thither. Or, 2. Out of his heavenly Habitation, which is oft called his Temple; See Pſal. 11. 4.

7. Then the earth ſhook and trembled the n, foundation alſo of the hills were moved and ſhaken o becauſe he was wrath.

n Then God appeared on my behalf in a miraculous and glorious manner, and with the great Terror and Confuſion of all mine Enemies, which is here compared to an Earthquake. o The Earthquake was ſo deep and violent, that it overthrew whole Mountains by the Roots. Whereby he deſigns his lofty and potent Enemies; ſuch being oft compared to Mountains, as Pſal. 46. 3, 4. and 144. 5. Iſa. 41. 15, &c.

† Heb. by his. † Heb. him. 8. There went up a ſmoke † out of his noſtrils p, and fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by † it q.

p As is uſual in Perſons, Tranſported with great anger and rage. He manifeſted his great diſpleaſure againſt my Adverſaries. q Which notes the Fervency, Conſtancy, and Efficacy of his anger,

* Pſal. 144. 5. 9. He bowed the heavens r alſo and came down s: and darkneſs was under his feet.

r By producing thick and dark Clouds, by which the Heavens ſeem to come down to the Earth. s Not by change of place, but by the Manifeſtation of his Preſence, and Power on my behalf.

* Pſal. 104. 3. 10. And he rode upon a cherub t, and did fly: yea, * he did fly upon the wings of the wind u.

t Or, upon the Cherubims, by an Enallage of number, that is, upon the Angels, who are ſo called, Gen. 3. 24. Heb. 9. 5. who are alſo called God's Chariots, Pſal. 68. 17. upon which he is ſaid to ſit and ride. All which is not to be underſtood groſsly, but only to note God's uſing of the Miniſtry of Angels, in raiſing ſuch Storms and Tempeſts as are here deſcribed. u As ſwiftly as the Wind. He came to my reſcue with all ſpeed.

11. He made darkneſs his ſecret place x: his pavilion round about him, were dark waters y, and thick clouds of the skies.

x Or, his hiding Place, (i.e.) He covered himſelf with dark Clouds, from whence he ſecretly ſhot at his Enemies, as it follows. y (i.e.) Watery Vapours and thick Clouds, as the next Words expound theſe.

12. At the brightneſs that was before him z, his thick clouds paſſed a, hail-ſtones and coals of fire.

z At his glorious and powerful appearance. a Or, paſſed away, (i.e.) Vaniſhed, as this Word is oft taken, as Pſal. 90. 5, 6. Iſa. 29. 5. Hab. 3. 10.) being diſſolved into ſhowers of Hail-ſtones, &c.

13. The LORD alſo thundered b in the heavens, and the Higheſt gave his voice c: hail-ſtones and coals of fire.

q To wit, againſt my Adverſaries. Thunder is a ſign of God's Anger, 1 Sam. 2. 10. and 7. 10. c (i.e.) Thunder, oft ſo called, The ſame thing expreſſed in other words.

14. Yea, he ſent out his arrows d, and ſcattered them e; and he ſhot out lightnings, and diſcomfited them.

d To wit, Lightnings, as it is explained in the next Clauſe. e To wit, mine Enemies: Which is ſufficiently underſtood from v. 3. and 17. and from the whole Context.

15. Then the channels of waters were ſeen, and the foundations of the world were diſcovered f: at thy rebuke, O LORD, at the blaſt of the breath of thy noſtrils.

f By mighty and terrible Earthquakes which overturned the Earth, and made it's lower parts uppermoſt and viſible.

* Pſal. 144. 7. & 57. 3. ‖ Or, great waters. 16. * He ſent g from above, he took me, he drew me out of ‖ many waters.

g Angels, or aſſiſtance otherwiſe.

17. He delivered me from my ſtrong enemy, and from them which hated me h: for they were too ſtrong for me.

h From them that wanted neither Malice nor Power.

18. They prevented me i in the day of my calamity: but the LORD was my ſtay.

i They were too cunning for me, and had almoſt ſurprized me, but they could not prevent thee.

* Pſal. 118. 5. 19. * He brought me forth k alſo into a large place l: he delivered me, becauſe he delighted in me m.

k Out of my Straits and Difficulties, out of the little Caves in which I was ſhut up and impriſoned. l Into a ſtate of Freedom and Plenty, and Comfort. m Or, loved me, or had a good Will to me, as this Phraſe commonly ſignifies. Whereby he aſcribes all his Mercies and Bleſſings to God's good Pleaſure and free Grace, as the firſt ſpring of them. Which he thought fit to Premiſe, leſt the following Expreſſions ſhould ſeem to ſavour of boaſting of his own Merits, which he oft diſclaims.

20. The LORD rewarded me according to my righteouſneſs n; according to the cleaneſs of my hands o hath he recompenſed me.

n As I had a juſt Cauſe, and made it my Care and Buſineſs to deal righteouſly with God and with Saul, and all others, ſo God (who hath engaged himſelf by his Promiſe to ſuccour and reward them that are ſuch) was graciouſly pleaſed to own me, and to plead my Cauſe againſt my unrighteous Enemies. And becauſe I would not deliver my ſelf from my Straits and Miſeries, by unrighteous means, namely, by killing Saul, as I was adviſed to do: God was pleaſed to deliver me in a more honourable and effectual manner. o (i.e.) The innocency of my Actions, and Carriage towards Saul, from whoſe Blood I kept my hands pure.

21. For I have kept the ways of the LORD p, and have not wickedly departed from my God q.

p I have obſerved and obeyed his Precepts, and made mine own will, and paſſions, and intereſt ſtoop to them. q (i.e.) I have not knowingly and wilfully forſaken God, and broken his Laws as wicked men do Which he adds by way of Correction and Explication, leſt the former or following Clauſes, ſhould be interpreted as a Profeſſion of ſuch a perfect and Sinleſs righteouſneſs, whereby he might in ſtrict Juſtice be juſtified by, and before God; which he elſewhere utterly diſowns, Pſal. 130. 3. and 143. 2. and which David, eſpecially towards the end of his days, (when this Pſalm was compoſed, as the Title ſhews) could not pretend to without great Arrogancy and Falſhood, as having been guilty of thoſe great Sins of Murder and Adultery, and many other Errors, as he confeſſeth, Pſal. 19. 12. and oft elſewhere.

* Pſal. 10. 5. 22. For all his * judgments were before me r, and I did not * put away his ſtatutes from me s.

r (i.e.) Before the Eyes of my Mind. I diligently ſtudied and Conſidered them, that I might govern my whole Life by them. s (i.e.) Out of my view, as ungodly men do; who like not to retain God nor his Word in their Hearts or Thoughts.

‖ Or, perfect. Job. 11. 4. † Heb. with. 23. I was alſo ‖ upright before him t: and I kept my ſelf from mine iniquity u.

† Heb. before his eyes. 24. Therefore hath the LORD recompenſed me according to my righteouſneſs, according to the cleanneſs of my hands † in his Eye-ſight.

t I did not pretend Religion before men for my own Ends, but did approve my Heart and ways to the all-ſeeing God.

God. u (i. e.) From that ſin which I was moſt inclined, or tempted: Either 1. From my Hereditary and natural Corruption, ſo far, that it ſhould not have Dominion over me, nor break forth into any preſumptuous or ſcandalous Sins, Or rather 2. From the Sin of killing Saul, which might be called his ſin, becauſe this might ſeem moſt agreeable and deſireable to him, both as a Man and as a Souldier, and as anointed to be King, as being a likely way both to revenge and to preſerve and to advance himſelf: to which alſo he might ſeem to be both invited by the fair Opportunity which Providence had put into his Hand, 1 Sam. 24. 4. and 26. 8. and neceſſitated by Saul's implacable Malice, and his own perpetual and extream Dangers and Diſtreſſes; and to which he was ſo ſtrongly tempted by his own followers, in the place now quoted.

25. With the merciful man thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf merciful, with an ‖ upright man thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf upright x.

x Or, ſincere, to wit, in performing what thou haſt promiſed to ſuch Perſons, this being a great part or act of Sincerity, when ones Deeds and Words, or Profeſſions agree together; as on the contrary, for thoſe that deal Hypocritically and wickedly with thee, thou wilſt make them to know thy breach of Promiſe, as it is expreſſed, Numb. 14. 34. The Sence of the Verſe, Thou meteſt to every one the ſame meaſure, which he meteth out to others, and giveſt to him the Fruit of his own doings, and therefore thou wilſt perform Mercy and Truth to thoſe who are merciful and true to others, as through thy Mercy I have been.

26. With the pure thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf pure y, and with * the froward thou wilſt ‖ ſhew thy ſelf froward z.

* Lev. 26. 23. 24. 27, 28.

y Free from the leaſt mixture or appearance of unrighteouſneſs, or unfaithfulneſs, or unkindneſs, or ſimply and ſincerely ſuch as thou uſeſt, aad haſt promiſed to be to them that are ſuch: for Purity is oft put for Sincerity. z Or, perverſe, (i. e.) Thou wilſt Croſs him and walk contrary to him, as thou haſt threatned, Levit. 26. 23, 24. See alſo, Prov. 3. 34. Man's perverſeneſs here is moral and ſinful, but God's perverſeneſs is judicial and penal.

27. For thou wilt ſave the afflicted people a: but wilt bring down high looks b.

a Such as I and my poor followers were. b (i. e.) Proud Perſons who diſcover the pride of their Hearts, by their haughty Looks and Carriages, Pſal. 101. 5. Prov. 6. 17. ſuch as mine Enemies were.

‖ Or, Lamp.

28. For thou wilt light my ‖ candle c: the LORD my God will enlighten my darkneſs.

c Or, thou doſt light, or haſt lighted my Candle, (i. e.) given me Safety and Comfort, and Proſperity and Glory, and Poſterity alſo; all which are oft ſignified by a Candle or a Light, as Eſth. 8. 16. Job 21. 17. and 29. 3. Pſal. 97. 11. and 132. 17. &c.

‖ Or, broken.

29. For by thee I have ‖ run through a troop d: and by my God have I leaped over a wall e.

d (i. e.) Broken through the armed Troops of mine Enemies. e I have ſcaled the Walls of their ſtrongeſt Cities and Caſtles, and ſo taken them.

* Deu. 32. 4. Dan. 4. 37. Rev. 15. 3. * Pſal. 12. 6. & 119. 140. Pro. 30. 5.

‖ Or, refined.

30. As for God his * way is perfect f: the word of the LORD is * ‖ tryed g: he is a buckler to all thoſe that truſt in him.

f His Counſel and Providence, though it may ſometimes be dark and hard to be underſtood, yet is alwaies wiſe and juſt, and every way perfect or unblameable. g The truth of God's promiſes is certain, and approved by innumerable Experiences, and mine among the reſt.

* Deut. 32. 39 1 Sam. 2. 2. Pſal. 86. 8. Iſa. 45. 5.

31. * For who is God ſave the LORD h? or who is a Rock ſave our God!

h It muſt needs be as I have ſaid, becauſe our Lord is the only God, and therefore there is none, neither God nor Creature, that can hinder him from accompliſhing his own word and work, or from defending thoſe that truſt him: He is unchangeable and invincible. Or, this is an Amplification, as God is, what I have now deſcribed him to be, ſo he only is ſuch, and there is no other God, or Rock, in which they may ſafely truſt.

32. It is God that girdeth me with ſtrength i, and maketh my way perfect k.

i That gives me ſtrength both of Mind and Body for Battel. It is a Metaphor taken either from a Military Girdle, or from a Common Girdle, wherewith their looſe Garments were girt about them, whereby they were rendered fitter for any Action. k (i. e.) Perfectly plain and ſmooth, and clear from impediments, as Pioneers uſe to prepare the way for the March of an Army. He guideth me in all my Counſels and Enterprizes, ſo that I neither miſs my way, nor ſtumble in it, nor come ſhort of my end.

33. He maketh my feet like hinds feet l, and * ſetteth me m upon my high places.

* Deut. 32. 13. & 33. 29.

l (i. e.) Moſt ſwift and nimble. As he made me wiſe in Counſel and Contrivance, (which he elſewhere ſaith) ſo he made me ſpeedy and Expeditious in the Execution: Which are the two great Excellencies of a Captain. He gave me great Agility either to flee and Eſcape from mine Enemies, when prudence required it, or to purſue them, when I ſaw occaſion. m Heb. maketh me to ſtand, (i. e.) Either he placeth me in ſafe and ſtrong places, out of the reach of mine Enemies: Or he confirms and eſtabliſheth me in that high and honourable eſtate into which he hath advanced me, and gives me Wiſdom to improve my Victories.

34. * He teacheth my hands to war n, ſo that a bow of ſteel is broken by mine arms o.

* Pſal. 144. 1.

n To him I owe all that Military skill, or Strength or Courage which I have. o My ſtrength is ſufficient not only to bend it, but to break it.

35. Thou haſt alſo given me the ſhield of thy ſalvation p: and thy right hand hath holden me up q, and ‖ thy gentleneſs r hath made me great.

‖ Or, with thy meekneſs thou haſt multiplied me.

p Thy Safeguard and Protection, which hath been to me like a ſhield to defend me. q Kept me from falling into thoſe Snares and Miſchiefs, which mine Enemies deſigned and I feared. r Or meekneſs, as this word ſignifies, Numb. 12. 3. Pſal. 10. 17. and 45. 4. Zeph. 2. 3. (i. e.) Thy Clemency, whereby thou haſt pardoned my ſins, which might otherwiſe have undone me, and mitigated thy Corrections which I have deſerved, thy Grace and Benignity, which thou haſt freely ſhewed to me and for me.

36. Thou haſt enlarged my ſteps s under me: † that my feet did not ſlip t.

s Which before were ſtraitned and confined to a little compaſs, and entangled with the narrowneſs and difficulty of the way. Thou haſt ſet my feet in a large Room, Pſal. 31. 8. and 118. 5. (i. e.) Thou haſt brought me out of all my ſtraits and Difficulties, into a ſtate of Freedom and Safety. t Or, ſtumble, as they are apt to do in narrow and uneven ways.

37. I have purſued mine enemies, and overtaken them: neither did I turn again till they were conſumed.

38. I have wounded them that they were not able to riſe; they are fallen under my feet u.

u (i. e.) Caſt down to the ground, ſo as I may tread upon their Necks after the manner of Conquerors, Deut. 33. 29. Joſ. 10. 24.

39. For thou haſt girded me with ſtrength x unto the battel: thou haſt † ſubdu'd under me thoſe that roſe up againſt me.

† Heb. cauſed to bow.

x He repeats what he had ſaid, v. 32. leſt he ſhould ſeem to arrogate to himſelf his great Atchievements and Victories mentioned, v. 37. 38. and that he might give God the whole Praiſe and Glory of them.

40. Thou haſt alſo given me the necks y of mine enemies: that I might deſtroy them z that hate me.

y Either, 1. That I might ſmite or behead them. Or 2. That I might put my yoke upon their Necks, or bring them into Subjection. Or rather thus, Thou haſt made them turn their Backs to me, (i. e.) Flee away from me: for ſo this very Phraſe is uſed and rendered, Exod. 23. 27. Joſ. 7. 8, 12. and elſewhere. So far are they miſtaken, that ſay this Hebrew word Oreph is only uſed for the Neck and not for the Back. z That I might have opportunity to deſtroy them.

41. They cryed, but there was none to ſave them: * even unto the LORD a, but he anſwered them not.

* Job 27. 9. 35. 12. Prov. 1. 28. Iſa. 1. 15. Jer. 11. 11. & 14. 12. Ezek. 8. 18. Mich. 3. 4. Zech. 7. 13.

a He ſpeaks of his Iſraelitiſh Enemies, who in their Diſtreſſes prayed to God for help againſt him.

42. Then did I beat them ſmall as the duſt before the wind: I did * caſt them out b as dirt in the ſtreets.

* Zech. 10. 5.

b Or, Rid them away, as Dirt is uſually ſwept or carried out of Houſes or Streets. Or, tread them down; Or, bruiſe them, as Men do Dirt when they walk in the Streets.

43. Thou haſt delivered me from the ſtrivings of the people c: and thou haſt made me the head of the heathen d: a people whom I have not known e ſhall ſerve me.

f Either, 1. At the fame of my Name and Victorious Arms. Or 2. At the firſt tydings of my coming towards them. Or rather, 3. As ſoon as they underſtand my Will and Pleaſure, they ſhall inſtantly comply with it. g Heb Shall lye unto me, (i.e.) Shall ſubmit themſelves to me not willingly and cheerfully, as they will pretend, but only out of fear, and by conſtraint. 45. The ſtrangers ſhall fade away h, and be afraid i, out of their cloſe places k.

46. The LORD liveth l, and bleſſed be my rock m: and let the God of my ſalvation be exalted.

l He and he only is the true living God, as he hath manifeſted himſelf to be for my Comfort, and for the confuſion of mine Enemies, when other Gods are dead and impotent Idols. PSAL. XIX.

The ARGUMENT.

The deſign of this Pſalm is to adore and magnifie the Name of God for the diſcovery of his Wiſdom and Power, and Goodneſs, both by his great and glorious Works of Creation and Providence; and eſpecially by his Word and the holy Scripture; which he prefers before the former.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

1. THE * heavens a declare b the glory of God c: and the firmament d ſheweth his handy work e.

* Gen. 1. 6.

a Theſe viſible Heavens ſo vaſt and ſpacious, richly adorned with Stars, ſo various and admirable in their Courſe, or Station; ſo uſeful and powerful in their influences. b Not properly, but Objectively, as the Earth and Trees and Stars are ſaid to ſpeak, Job 12. 8. and 38. 7. Iſa. 55. 12. they demonſtrate or make it evident and undeniable to all men of Sence or Reaſon: They are as a moſt legible Book, wherein even he that runs may Read it. c (i.e.) His glorious being or Exiſtence, his eternal Power and God-head, as it is particularly expreſſed, Rom. 1. 20. his infinite Wiſdom and Goodneſs. All which are ſo viſible in them, that it is Ridiculous to deny or doubt of them, as it is eſteemed Ridiculous to think of far meaner works of Art, as an Houſe or a Book, &c. That they were made without an Artiſt, or without an Hand. d Or, the Expanſion, (i.e.) All this vaſt ſpace extended from the Earth to the higheſt Heavens, with all it's goodly Furniture, the ſame thing which he called Heavens. e The Excellency of the work diſcovers who was the Author of it, that it did not come by chance, nor ſpring of it ſelf, but was made by the Lord God Almighty.

2. Day unto day f uttereth g ſpeech h, and night unto night ſheweth knowledge i.

f Or rather, after (as the Hebrew Lamed oft ſignifies, as Exod. 16. 1. and 29. 38. 2 Chron. 30. 21. Pſal. 96. 2.) Day: For the day doth not utter this to the Day, but to us upon the Day. The Sence is, Either, 1. That orderly and conſtant, and uſeful Succeſſion of Days and Nights one after another, declare this. But of the Courſe of the Sun, the effect whereof this Succeſſion is, he ſpeaks, v. 5. Or rather, 2. Every Day and Night renews or repeats theſe Documents and Demonſtrations of God's Glory. He that neglects them one day, may learn them the next day. g Or, poureth forth, to wit, conſtantly and abundantly and forcibly, as a Fountain doth Waters, as this Hebrew Verb ſignifies. h Or the Word, or Diſcourſe, to wit, concerning God. It hath as it were a Tongue to ſpeak the Praiſes of it's Maker; (i.e.) It gives men occaſion to magnifie and adore him. i (i.e.) Gives us a clear and certain Knowledge or Diſcovery of God their Author.

3. There is no ſpeech nor language, ‖ † where their voice is not heard k.

k Or, underſtood, as this Verb oft ſignifies, as Gen. 11. 7. and 42. 23. 2 Kings 18. 26. 1 Cor. 14. 2. for the hearing of it, would have been inſignificant without the underſtanding of it, in which the forte of the Argument lyes. The Sence is, there are divers Nations in the world, which have ſeveral Languages, ſo that one cannot diſcourſe with, or be underſtood by another. But the Heavens are ſuch an univerſal and admirable Teacher, that they can ſpeak to all People under them, and be clearly underſtood by all. No Nation, or People, ſaith that wiſe and learned Heathen Tully, Is ſo barbarous and ſottiſh, as, when they look up to the Heavens, not to perceive that there is a God, or to imagine that thoſe things are the effect of blind Chance, which are made with ſuch wonderful Art and Wiſdom, that it requires extraordinary Art to underſtand their excellent Orders and Courſe? But this Verſe is by divers Learned men otherwiſe tranſlated, not without an elegant Gradation, as ſome obſerve. They have no Speech nor Word, nor is any Voice or ſound heard, in or from them. Then follows the next Verſe by way of Oppoſition, yet their line, &c. Or thus, They have no Speech, nor Words, (which is ſuppoſed to be here ſaid by way of Prolepſis, to ſoften and explain his former Expreſſions of the Heavens, declaring and ſpeaking) yet (or, but without them) their Voice is heard or underſtood.

4. * ‖ Their line l is gone out m through all the earth n, and their words o to the end of the world: in them hath he ſet a tabernacle p for the ſun q.

* Rom. 10. 18. ‖ Or their rule, Or, direction.

l Either, 1. their admirable ſtructure made exactly, and as it were by line: ſee Job 38. 5. Zech. 1. 16. Or, 2. Their lines, the ſingular number being put for the plural, for the line anſwereth to the Words in the next Clauſe. And by line or lines he may underſtand their writing, as this very Word is taken, Iſa. 28. 10. which is made up of ſeveral lines. And this Expreſſion may ſeem to be very fit and Proper, becauſe the Heavens do not teach men audibly, or by ſpeaking to their Ears, but viſibly by propounding things to their Eyes, which is done in lines or writings. m (i. e.) Is ſpread abroad or drawn forth. n So as to be ſeen and Read, by all the Inhabitants of the Earth. o (i. e.) Their magnificent Structure, and their exquiſite Order, and moſt regular Courſe, by which they declare their Author, no leſs than if they uſed many Words, or long Diſcourſes to that purpoſe, or no leſs than men diſcover their Minds by their Words. See more concerning this Verſe, upon Rom. 10. 18. where it is applyed to the Preaching of the Goſpel by the Apoſtles, in the ſeveral parts of the World. p Which is a moveable Habitation, and therefore fitly applyed to the Sun, which is here deſcribed, to be in conſtant and perpetual Motion, v. 5, 6. q Which being the moſt Illuſtrious and uſeful-of all the Heavenly Bodies, is here particularly mentioned.

5. Which is as a Bridegroom r coming out of his chamber s, and *rejoyceth as a ſtrong man t to run a race.

*Eccleſs. 1. 5.

r Glorioufly adorned with Lights as with a beautiful Garment, and ſmiling upon the lower World with a pleaſant Countenance. s In which he is Poetically ſuppoſed to have reſted all Night, and thence to break forth as it were on a ſudden, as both Sacred and profane Poets repreſent the Matter. t Who being Conſcious and Confident of his own ſtrength, and promiſing to himſelf Victory and Glory which attends it, ſets upon his work with great Pleaſure.

6. His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it u: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof x.

u His Courſe is conſtant from Eaſt to Weſt, and thence to the Eaſt again. x There is no part of the Earth which doth not one time or other feel the Comfort and Benefit of it's Light and Heat.

7. The ‖ law of the LORD y is perfect z, ‖ converting a the ſoul: the teſtimony of the LORD f is *ſure g, making wiſe h the ſimple i.

‖ Or Doctrine. ‖ Or, reſtoring. Ruth. 4. 15. Heb. *Pſal. 119. 140.

y (i. e.) The Doctrine delivered by God to his Church, whether by Moſes or by other Prophets, and holy men of God after him: for the Title of Law is given not only to the Ten Commandements, or the moral Law, as it is, Rom. 2. 23, 25, 27, 31. but alſo to the whole Word of God, as Pſal. 1. 2. and 119. 70, &c. Jer. 8. 8. Mal. 2. 6. to the Pſalms, as Joh. 10. 34. and 15. 25. Comp. with Pſal. 82. 6. and 35. 19. and to the Writings of the Prophets, 1 Cor. 14. 21. Comp. with Iſa. 28. 11. yea, even to the Goſpel it ſelf. as Iſa. 2. 3. and 42. 4 and 51. 4, 7. Rom. 3. 27. Gal. 2. 21. And in this general Sence it muſt be here underſtood, becauſe the Effects here following, do not flow from one, but from all the parts of it, Precepts and Counſels, and Threatnings, and Promiſes, & Gods gracious Covenant made with Man therein revealed. Having diſcourſed hitherto of the Glory of God's ſhining forth in, and Demonſtrated by the viſible Heavens, and the Heavenly Bodies, he now proceeds to another Demonſtration of God's Glory, which he Compares with, and prefers before the former. Which he doth partly to prevent that exceſſive admiration of the ſplendour and beauty of the Sun and Stars, by the Contemplation whereof the Heathens were brought to adore them, an error which the Iſraelites were not free from the Danger of, Deut. 4. 19. partly to make the Iſraelites ſenſible of their ſingular Obligations to God, who beſides that common Light and Influence of the Heavenly Bodies, had given them a peculiar and a more neceſſary and beneficial Light; and partly, to awaken and provoke the Gentiles (into whoſe hands theſe Palms might come) to the ſtudy and love of God's Law, by repreſenting thoſe excellent Advantages, which they no leſs than the Jews might obtain by it. z Without fault or defect, fully and compleatly diſcovering both the Nature and Will of God, and the whole Duty and Buſineſs of man, whom and how he is to Worſhip and Serve, what he is to Believe and Practiſe, and whatſoever is neceſſary to his preſent and eternal Happineſs. Wherein there ſeems to be a ſecret Reflection upon the former and natural diſcovery of God, by his works of Creation, as that which is defective and inſufficient for the great and glorious Ends here following, which although it did declare ſo much of God's being and Nature, as left all men without excuſe, Rom. 1. 20. yet did not fully nor clearly manifeſt the Mind and Will of God, nor direct and bring men to eternal Salvation. a To wit, from the Errors of Mind and Converſation, in which men without this Light do generally wander and Periſh, unto God, from whom all men are naturally revolted. Or, Comforting or Reviving, as this Word is uſed, Ruth 4. 15. Pſal. 23. 3. Lam. 1. 11. 16. Heb. Reſtoring or bringing back the Soul, which was drooping and even going out of the Body, through grievous Troubles of the outward man, and Terrors of the Mind and Conſcience. f (i. e.) His law, ſo called becauſe it is a Witneſs between God and Man, what God requires of Man, and what upon the performance of that Condition, he will do for Man, g Heb. faithful or true, which is moſt Excellent and Proper, and neceſſary in a Witneſs: It will not miſ-lead or deceive any man, that truſteth to it or followeth it; But will certainly and infallibly bring him to Happineſs. h Unto Salvation, as is expreſſed, 2 Tim. 3. 15. Which is the only true Wiſdom. i This is added Either, 1. By way of Commendation, or as a qualification of the Perſon whom God's word will make wiſe, he muſt be humble and fooliſh, and little in his own Eyes, and willing to be taught: See Mat. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 1. 25, &c. For God reſiſteth the proud and ſcornful, and will not give this Wiſdom to them; or rather, 2. By way of Contempt, which ſeems moſt agreeable both to the uſe of the Words. Prov. 1. 4. and 9. 6. and 14. 15. and 22. 3. and to the Scope of the place, which is to ſet forth the Excellency and Efficacy of God's Law in the general, without any reſtriction to this or that ſort of Men. So it may note the weak and fooliſh, even Perſons of the loweſt Capacites, and ſuch are apt to miſtake and are eaſily ſeduced, as the Word implies. And yet theſe, if they will hearken to the Inſtructions of God's word, ſhall become Wiſe, when thoſe who profeſs themſelves Wiſe, ſhall by leaning to their own underſtanding, and deſpiſing or neglecting the directions of God's word, become and prove themſelves to be fools, Rom. 1. 22. But this is not ſpoken excluſively, as if no men of better Abilities were thus made Wiſe, but by way of Amplification, to ſhew the uſefulneſs of Gods Word to men of all ſorts and ſizes.

8. The ſtatutes k of the LORD are right l rejoycing the heart m: the commandement of the LORD n is *pure o, enlightning the eyes p.

*Pſal. 119. 140.

k Another word ſignifying the ſame thing with Law and Teſtimonies. l Both in themſelves, as being free from Crookedneſs or Error, and in their Effect, as guiding and directing men in the right and ready way to eternal Happineſs. Which alſo reflects upon that knowledge of divine things, which men have by the light of Nature and works of God, or by the Doctrines of the Philoſophers or others, that wanted or neglected the light of God's word, wherein there is a great deal of darkneſs and uncertainty, and Error and Danger. m Partly by that clear and certain knowledge of Divine things which it gives, for knowledge is pleaſant to the Soul, Prov. 2. 10. and partly by the diſcoveries of God's Love and Grace, to ſinful men, in Offers and Promiſes of Mercy therein contained. n (i. e.) All his Commands. o without the leaſt mixture of Error, or injuſtice or Deceit: Which cannot be ſaid of humane Laws. p To wit, of the Mind, with an evident and compleat manifeſtation of God's Will and Man's Duty: both which the works of Nature, and all the Writings of men diſcover but darkly and imperfectly.

9. The fear of the LORD q is clean r, enduring for ever s: the judgments of the LORD t are † true and righteous altogether u.

q By which he underſtands not the Grace of God's fear, as this Phraſe is commonly taken; nor the whole Worſhip of God, as it is taken, Pſal. 34. 9, 11. Mat. 15. 9. but the Law and Word of God, which is the only thing that is here commended, and which is meant by all the other parallel Titles of his Teſtimony, and Statutes, and Commandments, and Judgments, and conſequently by this of his Fear, which is as it were hemmed in within them. And this may well be ſo called by an uſual Metonymy, becauſe it is both the Object and the Rule, and the cauſe of this Grace of holy Fear; as God himſelf is called Fear, for the like reaſon, Gen. 31. 53. and in the Hebrew, Pſal. 76. 11. r (i. e.) Sincere, not adulterated with any mixture of Vanity, or Falſhhod, or Vice, not requiring nor allowing any uncleanneſs or wickedneſs, as the Religion of the Gentiles did. s Conſtant and unchangeable, the ſame for Subſtance in all the Ages of the Church and the World. Which is moſt true, both of the moral Law, and of the Doctrine of God's Grace and Mercy to ſinful and miſerable man; which two are the principal parts of that Law, of which he here ſpeaks, as is evident from the whole Context. For as the difference between the Old and the New Teſtament, that lyes only in Circumſtantial & Ceremonial, or Ritual things, which are not here intended; and that Alteration was alſo foretold in the Old Teſtament, and conſequently, the accompliſhment of it did not deſtroy, but confirm the certainty and conſtancy of God's word. This alſo is oppoſed to humane Laws, wherein there are, and ought to be manifold Changes, according to the differenee of Times and People and Circumſtances. t (i. e.) God's Laws frequently called his Judgments, becauſe they are the Declarations of his righteous Will and as it were his legal or judicial Sentence by which he expects that that men ſhould govern themſelves, and by which he will judge them at the laſt day.

*Pſal. 119. 12. 127. Prov. 8. 11, 19.
*Pſa. 119. 103.
†Heb. the dropping of Honycombs.

10. More to be deſired are they than gold; *yea, than much fine gold x: *ſweeter alſo than honey y, and † the honey comb z.

x Than Gold of the beſt quality, and in the greateſt quantity. y Which was moſt ſweet in thoſe Eaſtern Countries. z Than that Honey which the Bees have moſt diligently wrought in their Combs, and which freely flows from them; which is ſweeter than the reſt.

11. Moreover, by them is thy ſervant a warned: and in keeping of them b there is great reward c.

a I thy ſervant, though a King and a Prophet, and of ſome Repute for Wiſdom and Knowledge, yet I am daily taught by them. Or, enlightned, as Dan. 12. 3. or clearly admoniſhed, as this word ſignifies, Exod. 18. 20. 2 Kings 6. 10. Eccleſ. 4. 13. Ezek. 3. 17, &c. and 33. 3, 9. It is a faithful and excellent Monitor to ſhew me my Duty in all Conditions, and to preſerve me from falling into ſin and danger, and Miſchief. b To thoſe that make it their great Deſign, and care to conform their whole Lives to them. For he ſpeaks not of a Legal and perfect keeping of them, which no man attaineth to in this Life, Eccleſ. 7. 20. Gal. 3. 10, 11, 12. 1 Joh. 1. 8. but of doing it in an Evangelical Sence, with the allowances which God through Chriſt makes for Humane infirmities. c In this Life, and eſpecially in the next.

*Pſal. 40. 12.

12. *Who can underſtand d his Errors e? cleanſe thou me f from ſecret faults g.

d This may be here added, Either, 1. As a further Proof of the Excellency and neceſſity of God's Law, becauſe mens Errors are ſo many and hard to be diſcovered and prevented, that they indiſpenſably need ſuch a Friend and Counſellor as the Law is to give them the true knowledge of themſelves and of their ſins. Or 2. As a juſt and ſorrowful Cenſure of himſelf, upon the Conſideration of the exact Purity of God's Law, and the Comparing of his Life with it. Thy Law, O Lord, is Holy and juſt and Good. But I am a poor ſinful Wretch falling infinitely ſhort of it, and Condemned by it. Or 3. As a ſignification of the inſufficiency of God's Law, ſtrictly ſo called for the healing and ſaving of mens Souls, and of the neceſſity of further ſupplies of the Goſpel, and grace of God; whereby the eyes of their Minds may be enlightned to ſee that light which ſhines in God's Law, and their Hearts may be renewed to yield univerſal Obedience to it, for which therefore he prays in the following words. And withal he implies, that he did not expect that reward which he laſt mentioned as a juſt Recompence to his Obedience, which he confeſſeth to need a Pardon more than to deſerve a reward, but only as an effect of God's grace and goodneſs. e Either, 1. His ſins of ignorance, of which this word is uſed, Levit. 4. 2, 22, 27. Eccleſ. 5. 6. Or rather, 2. His ſins in general (which afterwards he divides into ſecret and preſumptuous ſins) Or all deviations from God's Law, which are thus called, 1 Sam. 26. 21. Pſal. 119. 67, 118. Heb. 9. 7. Jam. 5. 20. The Sence is, I cannot comprehend the numbers or the ſeveral kinds, or all the Hainous Aggravations of my ſins. f Both by juſtification or the Pardon of my ſins, through the Blood of thy Son which is to be ſhed for me; and by Sanctification through thy holy Spirit, co-working in and with thy Word, to the further Renovation of my Heart and Life: For theſe are the two ways of cleanſing Sinners, moſt frequently mentioned both in the Old and New Teſtament. Though the firſt may ſeem to be Principally, if not only, Intended, becauſe he ſpeaks of his paſt ſins, which could be cleanſed no other way but by Remiſſion. g (i. e.) From the guilt of ſuch ſins as were ſecret, Either, 1. From others; ſuch as none knows but God and my own Conſcience: Or 2. From my ſelf; ſuch as I never obſerved, or did not diſcern the evil of. Pardon my unknown ſins, of which I never repented particularly, as I ſhould have done.

*Pſa. 119. 133. Rom. 6. 12, 14. ‖ Or, much.

13. Keep back h thy ſervant alſo from preſumptuous ſins h, *let them not have dominion over me i: then ſhall I be upright k, and I ſhall be innocent l from ‖ the great tranſgreſſion m.

b Or, reſtrain, or withdrawn. Which word is emphatical, and ſignifies Mans natural and great proneneſs even to the worſt of ſins, and the neceſſity of God's grace, as a Bridle, to keep men from ruſhing upon them. Having begged Pardon for his former Errors, he now begs grace to keep him from Relapſes for the time to come. b From known and evident ſins, ſuch as are committed againſt knowledge and Deliberation, with deſign and reſolution, and Eagerneſs, with reſiſtance againſt the Checks of Conſcience, and the Motions of Gods Spirit, and with Contempt both of God's commands and Judgments, and ſo with Pride and inſolency, which this word ſignifies. See Exod. 21. 14. And ſuch a ſin was that of David's in the Matter of Uriah, to which he ſeems to have an Eye; and prayeth to be kept from ſuch Miſcarriages. i If I be at any time tempted to any ſuch ſins, Lord let them not prevail over me, and if I do fall into them, let me ſpeedily riſe again, and not willingly give up my ſelf to the Cuſtomary practice of them. k That will be an Evidence of my Sincerity, and I ſhall have this Comfort, that although I am not abſolutely Perfect, but incompaſſed with many Infirmities, yet I am an upright Perſon, and ſuch as thou wilſt accept. l Thou wilſt hold me for Innocent. Or, I ſhall be cleanſed, or kept pure, as this Word primarily ſignifies. m (i. e.) From the guilt of ſuch Preſumptuous ſins, which are indeed very great Tranſgreſſions, and ſuch, as if accompanied with Obſtinacy and Impenitency, thou wilſt not Pardon. But as for other ſins of ignorance or infirmity, thou wilſt graciouſly remit them for thy Covenants ſake, made with me in and through thy Chriſt. Oth. From much Tranſgreſſion, or from innumerable ſins, which uſually follow the Commiſſion of one Preſumptuous ſin, as David found by his own ſad Experience.

14. Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart n be acceptable in thy ſight o, O LORD † my ſtrength p and my redeemer q. †Heb. my Rock.

n Having prayed that God would keep him from ſinful Actions, he now prays that God would govern, and ſanctify his Words and Thoughts, wherein he had many ways offended, as he here implies, and oft in this Book confeſſeth and bewaileth. And this he the rather doth, becauſe this Caution was very neceſſary to preſerve him from Preſumptuous ſins, which have their firſt riſe in the Thoughts, and thence proceed to Words and Expreſſions, before they break forth into Actions. o (i. e.) Be really good and Holy, and ſo well-pleaſing to thee. p O thou who haſt hitherto ſtrengthened me both againſt my temporal and ſpiritual Enemies, and whoſe gracious and powerful Aſſiſtance, is abſolutely neceſſary to keep me from my own corrupt Inclinations, and from all Temptations, to ſinful Thoughts and Words, and Actions. q This Expreſſion ſeems to be added emphatically, and with ſpecial reſpect to Chriſt, who was certainly much in David's Eyes, to whom alone this word Goel can here Properly belong, as may appear by my Notes, on Job 19. 25. to which I refer the Reader, and by whoſe Blood and Spirit alone, David could and did expect the Bleſſings and Graces, for which he here prayeth.

PSAL. XX.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm contains a Prayer to be uſed by the People, both now on the behalf of King David, when he was undertaking ſome great Expedition, going forth, as is ſuppoſed, againſt the Ammonites, and Syrians, 2 Sam. 10. or ſome other potent Enemies, and hereafter in like Caſes.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

1. THE LORD hear thee in the day of trouble a: the Name of the God of Jacob b † defend thee. †Heb. ſet thee on high place.

a In this time of War and Danger. b (i. e.) God himſelf; For Names are oft put for Perſons, as Numb. 26. 53. Act. 1. 15. and 4. 12. and the Name of God, for God, as Deut. 28. 58. Neh. 9. 5. Pſal. 44. 98. 20. Prov. 18. 10. and oft elſewhere. He calls him the God of Jacob, or Iſrael, partly to diſtinguiſh him from falſe God's; and partly as an Argument to enforce the Prayer, becauſe God had made a League, or Covenant with Jacob and his Poſterity, who are called by the Name of Jacob, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. Iſa. 44. 2. and whoſe cauſe David was now pleading againſt their Enemies.

2. Send † thee help from the ſanctuary c: and * ſtrengthen thee out of Zion. †Heb. thy help. *Heb. ſupport thee.

c Either, 1. From Heaven, as it is expreſſed, v. 6. Or rather, 2. From the Tabernacle in Sion, as it is explained in the next Words, where the Ark then was; towards which the Iſraelites directed their Prayers, and from which God heard and anſwered them.

3. Remember d all thy offerings e, and † accept f thy burnt-ſacrifice, Selah. †Heb. turn to Aſhes. Or, make fat.

d To wit, with acceptance, as it follows. e Offered either by thee, at thy entrance upon this Expedition: Or by us thy People on thy behalf, or by thine appointment. f Heb. turn to Ashes, by fire sent from Heaven, in token of his acceptance, as was usual; of which see Levit. 9. 24. 1 Kings 18. 38.

4. Grant thee according to thine own heart g, and fulfill all thy counsels h.

g (i.e.) That good success which thy Heart desires. h Thy present design for God, and for his and thy People.

5. We will rejoyce i in thy salvation, and * in the Name of our God k we will set up our banners l: the LORD fulfill all thy Petitions.

* Exod. 17. 15. Psal. 60. 4.

i Hereby they shew their Confidence in God, and their assurance of the Victory. k (i.e.) To the Honour of God, as the Conqueror. l In way of Triumph; which among other ways was celebrated by the setting up of Banners or Trophies.

6. Now know I m, that the LORD saveth n his anointed o, he will hear him † from his holy Heaven, † with the saving strength of his right hand p.

m We are already sure of Victory by the consideration of God's Power and Faithfulness and Love to David, and to his People. They speak as one Person, because they were united, and Unanimous in this Prayer. n (i.e.) Will certainly save. o Our Lord and King. p This shews how God will hear him, even by saving him with a strong hand.

7. * Some trust q in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember r the Name of the LORD our God.

* Psal. 33. 16. Prov. 21. 31. Isa. 31. 1.

q Or, Remember; which may better be supplied out of the next Clause. r Or, make mention of, to wit, so as to boast of it, or trust in it; for such things men oft remember or mention.

8. They are brought down s and fallen, but we are risen and stand upright t.

s From their Horses and Chariots, to which they trusted. Heb. They bowed down, as being unable to stand longer because of their mortal Wounds. Comp. Judg. 5. 27. t Stand firmly upon our Legs, and keep the field, as Conquerors use to do.

9. Save, LORD, let the king u hear us when we call.

u Either, 1. David. So the Sence is, O Lord preserve and assist the King, that when we are distressed and Cry to him for Help, he may be able and ready to Help us. Or 2. God, the Supream Monarch, the King of Kings, and in a peculiar manner the King of Israel, hear and answer us, when we pray for our King and People. And for the change of Persons in this Verse, nothing is more common. Or 3. Christ, called the King both in the Old and New Testament. But this Verse is by divers learned Men rendred thus, Lord save the King. He (i.e. the Lord) will hear us (or, Let him hear us; For the future Tense is oft put imperatively) when we cry, or call upon him. And this version is very agreeable to the Hebrew Text. For whereas the only ground of the other Translation is, that the Hebrew Accent called Athnoch is put under the word save, which is supposed to stop the sence there, it is sufficiently evident, that Athnoch doth not always make such a Distinction in these Poetical Books, as appears from Psal. 11. 5. and 17. 10. and 19. 4. and 22. 31. and therefore this may seem to be the better Version.

PSAL. XXI.

To the chief musician, a Psalm of David.

a The subject of this Psalm is the same with the former, both being made for the Peoples use, concerning the King. Only the Prayers there used, are here turned into Praises, for the Blessings received in answer to their Prayers. And as David was an illustrious Type of Christ, so in many of these Expressions he may seem to look beyond himself unto Christ, in whom they are more properly, and fully accomplished, and of whom divers of the Antient Hebrew Doctors understand it.

1. THE king shall joy in thy strength a, O LORD, and in thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoyce?

2. Thou hast given him his hearts desire, and hast not withheld the request of his lips. Selah.

a Conferred upon him, and put forth by thee, on his behalf against his Enemies.

3. For thou preventest him c with the blessings of goodness d; thou settest a crown of pure gold e on his head.

c Or, didst prevent him, crowning him with manifold blessings both more and sooner, than he either desired or expected, surprizing him with the Gift of the Kingdom, and with many happy Successes. d (i.e.) With excellent Blessings. Or with abundance (as this Word both in Hebrew and Greek is sometimes used, as Psal. 84. 6. Rom. 15. 29. 2 Cor. 9. 5, 6.) of Good. e Either 1. in token of Victory. Or rather 2. As an Enfign of Royal Majesty conferred upon him.

4. He asked life of thee f, and thou gavest it him, even * length of days for ever and ever g.

* Psal. 61. 6.

f He asked only the Preservation of that short and mortal Life, which was oft exposed to utmost Perils. g Either, 1. In his Posterity, in whom Parents are commonly said to Live. Thou gavest the Kingdom not only to himself for a season, as thou didst to Saul, but to him, and to his Seed for ever. Or rather, 2. In his Person; For this giving answers to David's asking. And the thing which David asked of God, was not the Kingdom (wherein God had prevented his Prayers, and granted what David durst not have presumed to ask) but only Life, or the saving and prolonging of his Life, which his Enemies designed to take away. Thou gavest him a long Life and Reign here, and after that thou didst translate him to thy Heavenly Kingdom, to live with thee for ever. But this was more eminently fulfilled in Christ, who asked of his Father Life, or to be saved from Death, Heb. 5. 7. though with Submission to his Will: But his Father, though he saw it fit and necessary to take away his temporal Life, yet he instantly gave him another, and that far more Noble instead of it, even the perfect Possession of an everlasting and most glorious Life, both in his Soul and Body, at his right hand.

5. His glory h is great in thy salvation i: honour and majesty hast thou laid upon him k.

h His Fame or Renown in the World. i By reason of those great and glorious Deliverances, which thou hast wrought both for him, and by him. k Or, fitted to him, or upon him, as the Hebrew Verb signifies, or made it adequate to him. Thou hast given him a large and noble Soul, very capable of and fit for that high and Honourable estate, to which thou hast advanced him, and thou hast given him Honour and Power, suitable to so excellent a Person, and to such rich Endowments.

6. For thou hast † made him most blessed l for ever m: thou hast † made him exceeding glad with thy countenance n.

† Heb. set him to be Blessing. † Heb. gladded him with joys.

l Heb. thou hast set (or, made, as this Verb is used, Psal. 40. 5. and 89. 42. and 91. 9. Lam. 3. 45.) him Blessings. (i.e.) Either, 1. The Author or Instrument of manifold Blessings to the World, and especially to thy People: which David was in a good measure, but Christ much more truly and eminently. Although this may not seem very suitable to the Context, which only speaks of the Blessing conferred by God upon this King, and not at all of the Blessings flowing from him to others. Or 2. The great example of all Blessings, whom the Israelites in all Ages shall propound to themselves, in all their Forms and Pronunciations of Blessings, They shall say God make thee as blessed as this King, Either David or the Messias. Compare Gen. 12. 2. and 48. 20. or rather most blessed, as we translate it, the Abstract Form, and the plural Number being here used emphatically, as they commonly are, as Ezek. 34. 26. Psal. 5. 10. and 19. 10. and 35. 6. to Note a Man in whom all sorts of Blessings are united and met together, filled with Blessings, and as it were a man of Blessings, made up altogether of Blessings, as Christ upon a like Reason was called a man of Sorrows, Isa. 53. 3. And possibly the Word Man may be understood here as it is in many other places, as I have shewed before, and the place rendered thus, Thou hast made him a Man of Blessings. m Of which see on v. 4. n To wit, smiling upon him, as it must necessarily be understood from the foregoing Words, (i.e.) By thy Grace and Favour manifested, and imparted to his Soul, and by the Effects of it, in saving him from all his Enemies and Calamities.

7. For the king trusteth in the LORD: and through the mercy of the most High, he shall not be moved o.

o Or, removed from his Kingdom, as Saul was.

8. Thine hand shall find out all thine Enemies p, thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee.

p When

p When they seek to hide themselves, or flee away from thee, should discover and overtake and destroy them. Or, shall be sufficient, (as this Verb sometimes signifies, as Numb. 11. 22. Judg. 21. 14.) for all thine Enemies, to wit, to conquer them; thou shall need no forreign Succours to help thee.

9. Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven q in † Heb. face. the time of thine † anger: the LORD shall Psal. 34. 16. swallow them up r in his wrath, and the fire shall devour them.

q Or. Thou shalt put them, (as the Hebrew word properly signifies) as it were into (So there is only an Ellipsis of the Prepositon Beth, which is most frequent) a fiery Oven, (i. e.) Like Wood, which when it is cast in there, is quickly consumed. r (i. e.) Destroy them, as this Phrase is oft used, as 2 Sam. 20. 19, 20. Psal. 56. 1, 2. Prov. 1. 12.

* Job 18. 16. 19. 10. * Their fruit s shalt thou destroy from the earth, and their seed from among the children of men.

s Either, 1. The fruit of their Labours. Or rather, 2. Their seed or Children, as it is explained in the next Branch, oft called a Man's Fruit, as Deut. 28. 4. Psal. 127. 3. and 132. 11. Lament. 2. 20. God will take away both Root and Branch, the Parents and all that wicked Race.

11. For they intended evil against thee t: they imagined a mischievous device, which they are not able to perform u.

t (i. e.) Against God, not directly, but by Consequence, because it was against David, whom God had anointed, and against the Lord's People, whose injuries God takes as done to himself, Zech. 2. 8. u Such Supplements are usual after this Verb, as Exod. 8. 18. Psal. 101. 5. and 139. 6. Isa. 1. 13. Or, for which they were unable or insufficient. Or, but they did not prevail, as this Verb signifies, Psal. 13. 4. and 129. 2. This Clause seems to be added to teach us this great and necessary Lesson, that men are justly punished by God for their wicked Intentions, although they be hindered from the Execution of them, contrary to what some Jewish Doctors, and others have taught.

‖ Or, thou shalt set them as a Butt. † Heb. Shoulder. 12. Therefore ‖ shalt thou make them turn their † back x, when thou shalt * make ready thine arrows upon thy strings, against the face of them y?

* Psal. 7. 13. 13. Be thou exalted, LORD, in thine own strength z: so will we sing and praise thy Power.

x (i. e.) Flee away at the first sight of thee, whereby also they will be a fit mark for thine Arrows. Or, Thou shalt set them, as a Butt to shoot at, as the like Phrase is used, Deut. 7. 10. Job 7. 20. and 16. 12. y Or, against them, the word Face being oft redundant. z By thy own Power, or by the manifestation thereof, whereby thou wiltst have the whole Glory of the work.

PSAL. XXII.

The ARGUMENT.

That question mentioned, Act. 8. 34. is very Proper here, Of whom speaketh the Prophet this (Psalm?) of himself, or of some other Man? It is confessed that David was a Type of Christ, and that many Psalms or passages of the Psalms, though properly and literally understood of David, yet had a further and Mystical reference to Christ, in whom they were accomplished. But there are some other Psalms or passages in the Psalms, as also some Chapters or passages in other Prophets, especially in Isaiah, who lived not very long after David, which either by those sacred Pen-men, or at least by the Holy Ghost inspiring them, which is one and the same thing, were directly, primarily and immediately intended for, and are properly and litterally to be understood of the Messias; though withal there may be some respect and allusion to the state of the Pen-man himself, who being a Type of Christ, it is not strange if there be many Resemblances between them. And this seems to be the state of this Psalm, which is understood of the Messias, by the Hebrew Doctors themselves, and by Christ himself, and by his Apostles, as we shall see. And there are many passages in it, which were most litterally accomplished in him, and cannot in a tolerable Sence be understood of any other; as we shall see in the particular Verses. And therefore, I doubt not, that David, though he had an Eye to his own condition, in divers passages here used, yet was carried forth by the Spirit of Prophecy beyond himself and unto Christ, to whom alone it truly and fully agrees.

To the chief musician upon ‖ Aijeleth Shahar a, a Psalm of David. ‖ Or, the Hind of the Morning.

a Or the hind of the Morning. To note that the Person here designed was like an Hind, comely and meek and every way Lovely, but withal persecuted by wicked men, as that oftentimes is in the Morning, when she comes out of her lurking and Lodging place, and when the Hunters use to go abroad to their Work. Or this was the Title of some Musical Instrument, or Tune, or Song, which was usually sung in the Morning.

1. MY * God b, my * God c, why hast thou forsaken me d? Why art thou so far † from helping me, and from the words of my roaring e? * Mat. 27. 46. Mark 15. 34. * Psal. 31. 14. † Heb. from my Salvation.

b Whom, notwithstanding thy forsaking me, I heartily Love, and in whom I trust, who art my Friend and Father, though now thou frowneſt upon me. c The Repetition Notes the depth of his Distress, which made him Cry so earnestly, and the struglings of his Faith, with his Fears and Sorrows. d (i. e.) Left me in the hands of Malicious men, withdrawn the Light of thy Countenance, and the Supports and Comforts of thy Spirit from me, and filled me with the Terrors of thy wrath, so that I am ready to sink under my Burden. This was in part verified in David, but much more fully in Christ, who applies these words to himself, Mat. 27. 46. e (i. e.) From regarding, or pitying, or answering my strong Prayers, and lamentable Out-cries forced from me, by my intolerable Distresses and Miseries.

2. O my God, I cry in the day-time, but thou hearest me not; and in the night-season, and † am not silent f. † Heb. there is no silence to me.

f (i. e.) I continue praying Day and Night without Intermission. Or thus, I have no silence, (i. e.) No quietness or Rest, as this word signifies, Judg. 18. 9. In which respect also the Sea and waves thereof are said to be silent, still (i. e.) and quiet, Psal. 107. 29. Mark 4. 39. And so this last Clause answers to and expounds the former, Thou hearest me not, which is most usual in this Book.

3. But thou art holy g, O thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel *.

g (i. e.) Just and true in all thy ways, and therefore hearing Prayers, and keeping thy Covenant, a true Lover of Holiness, and of all holy Men. This he adds, Either, 1. To aggravate his Misery, that such a God should neglect and forsake him. Or rather, 2. To strengthen his Faith, and to enforce his Prayers, and prevail with God for the Honour of his holy Name, to hear and help him. * Either, 1. That dwellest in thy Tabernacle and Ark, which is called Israel's Glory, 1 Sam. 4. 21. and the place where God was praised, Isa. 64. 11. Or 2. That receivest and rightly possessest the praises of Israel, whom thy People are perpetually praising for one Mercy or another; and therefore I trust, I also shall have occasion to praise thee. But because this Hebrew Verb when it is used Transitively, and is taken for inhabiting, is generally, as far as I have observed, Construed with a Preposition, which here it is not, this Verse may seem to be better rendered thus, as it is by divers Learned men. But thou abidest, or persevereſt, or continuest to be (as this Verb is used, Psal. 9. 7. and 55. 19. and 102. 12.) Holy, (notwithstanding thy present neglect of my Prayers and Miseries) O the praises, Or, O thou who art the praises (Or, and the praises, (i. e.) the great Cause and Object of the praises) of Israel, (i. e.) whom Israel solemnly and usually praiseth, Deut. 10. 21. Jer. 17. 14.

4. Our fathers trusted in thee: they trusted, and thou didst deliver them h.

h This he adds for the Reasons mentioned in the first Note, v. 3.

5. They cryed unto thee, and were delivered: * they trusted in thee and were not confounded i. * Psal. 25. 2, 3. & 31. 1. Isa. 49. 23. Rom. 9. 33.

i (i. e.) Not disappointed of that for which they prayed and hoped.

6. But I am a Worm k and no man; a reproach of men, and despised of the people l.

k Our Fathers were Honoured by thee and by others, because of thy appearance for their defence and deliverance, but I am treated like a Worm, (i. e.) Neglected and despised, both by thee who dost not afford me Help, and by the men of my Age and Nation, as it follows. For the Phrase see Job 25. 6. Isa. 41. 14. l Not only of the great Men, but also of the common People. Which doth not so truly agree to David (who, though he was hated and persecuted by Saul and his Courtiers, was Honoured and Beloved by the Body of the people), as to Christ, Comp. Isa. 53. 2, 3.

* Mat. 27. 39. † Heb. open.

7. *All they that see me, laugh me to scorn m: they † shoot out the lip n, they shake the head o, saying p, m Instead of Pitying or Helping, deride me and insult over me; such is their inhumanity. n They gape with their Mouths, and put forth their Tongues, in Mockery. See Job 16. 10. Isa. 57. 4. o Another posture of Scoffers. See Job 16 4. Psal. 44. 14. Isa. 37. 22. This and the next Verse are applied to Christ, Mat. 27. 39, 43. p This Supplement is very usual, and here it is necessary, because the next Words are the Expressions of his insulting Enemies.

* Mat. 27. 43. † Heb. He rolled himself on the LORD.

8. * † He trusted on the LORD q, that he would deliver him r, let him deliver him, ‖ seeing he delighted in him s.

q He Rolled himself upon the Lord. Where they seem to Scoff not only at the thing, but at the Expression. Their Sence is, He pretended that he did wholly lean and rest himself, and cast his Cares upon God, and quietly and confidently commit all his Affairs to his Providence, assuring himself of an happy Issue from him. Or, without any Supplement, let him deliver him, as it follows, though the Hebrew words be differing. And so the same thing is twice repeated to shew both the Vehemency of their Hatred, and their Confidence of Success against him. They thought his Case desperate, and past all hope and Remedy. s As he useth to alledge and boast, but how vainly the Event now sheweth.

‖ Or, if he delight in him. ‖ Or, keepest me in safety.

9. But thou art he that took me out of the Womb t; thou ‖ didst make me hope u when I was upon my mothers breasts x.

t This is noted as an Effect of God's wonderful and gracious Providence. And although this be a Mercy which God grants to all mankind, yet it may well be alledged here, partly in way of gratitude for this great, though common Mercy; nothing being more reasonable and usual than for David and other holy men to praise God for such Blessings; and partly as an Argument to encourage himself, to expect and to prevail with God, to grant him the Deliverance which now he desires, because he hath formerly delivered him: This being a very common Argument, See 1 Sam. 17. 37. 2 Cor. 1. 10. But this is applicable to Christ in a singular manner, not, as a late learned Writer takes it, that God separated him from the Womb, but that God did bring him out (as the word properly signifies) of the Womb, to wit, immediately and by himself, and without the help of any Man, by the miraculous Operation of the Holy Ghost, which made him there, or else he could never have been brought thence.

u Or, Trust: (i. e.) Thou didst give me sufficient ground for Hope and Trust, if I had then been capable of acting that Grace, because of thy wonderful and watchful Care over me, in that weak and helpless State. Which was eminently true of Christ, whom God so miraculously preserved and provided for in his Infancy; the History whereof we read, Mat. 2. It is not strange that Hope is figuratively ascribed to Infants, seeing even the Brute-Creatures are said to Hope, Rom. 8. 20. and to wait and Cry to God, Psal. 145. 15. and 147. 9. x (i. e.) When I was a sucking Child. Which may be properly understood.

* Psal. 71. 6.

10. * I was cast upon thee y from the Womb: thou art my God from my Mothers belly.

y I was like one forsaken by his Parents, and cast wholly upon thy Providence. I had no Father upon Earth; and my Mother was poor and helpless.

† Heb. not a helper.

11. Be not far from me z, for trouble is near a; for there is † none to help b.

z To wit, as to affection and succour. a At hand and ready to swallow me up. And therefore if thou dost not speedily deliver me, it will be too late. Which is an Argument that David oft useth, as Psal. 6. 5. and 88. 11. &c. b Thy help therefore will be the more seasonable, because it is most necessary, and thou wilt have the more of Glory by it, because it will appear that it is thy work alone.

12. Many bulls c have compassed me: strong bulls of Bashan d have beset me round.

c Wicked and violent, and potent Enemies; for such are so called, Ezek. 39. 18. Amos 4. 1. d (i. e.) Fat and Lusty, as the Cattel there bred were, Deut. 3. 13. and 32. 14. and therefore fierce and furious.

† Heb. opened their mouths against me.

13. They † gaped upon me with their mouths e, as a ravening and a roaring lyon.

e Partly to affright me, and principally to tear and devour me, as the following Metaphor explains it. Otherwise it might be understood of their Crying out with loud and earnest Voices, that he might be Condemned and put to Death.

‖ Or, sundred.

14. I am poured out like waters f, and all my bones are ‖ out of joynt g: my heart h is like wax i; it is melted in the midst of my bowels.

f My Heart faileth, my spirits are spent and gone like water, which once spilt, can never be recovered; my very flesh is melted within me, and I am become as weak as water. See the like Phrase, Jos. 7. 5. and Compare 2 Sam. 14. 14. Job 14. 11. g I am as weak and unable to move or help my self, and withal as full of Torment, as if I were upon a Rack, and all my bones were disjoynted. Or, all my bones are separated, one from another; as they were in some sort in Christ, by the stretching of his Body upon the Cross. h The seat of Life and fountain which supplies Spirits, and Vigour to the whole Body. i Melted, as it follows, through fear and overwhelming grief, Comp. Psal. 68. 2. and 97. 5.

15. My strength is dryed like a pot-sherd k, and my tongue cleaveth to my jaws l; and thou hast brought me into the dust of death m.

k I have in a manner no more Radical moisture left in me, than is in a dry potsherd. l Through that excessive thirst and drought. See Job. 19. 20. m Partly by thy Providence, delivering me into the power of mine Enemies, and partly by thy Terrors in my Mind and Soul.

16. For dogs n have compassed me, the assembly of the wicked o have inclosed me, they pierced my hands and my feet p.

n So he calls his Enemies for their vileness and filthiness, for their insatiable Greediness, and implacable fury and fierceness against him. o He explains who he means by Dogs, even wicked men, who are oft so called, not some few of them singly, but the whole Company or Congregation of them; whereby may be noted, either their great Numbers, or their consulting and conspiring together, as it were in a lawful Assembly. Which was most literally and eminently fulfilled in Christ. p These words cannot with any probability be applied to David, nor to the attempts of his Enemies upon him; for their design was not to Torment his Hands or Feet, but to take away his Life. And if it be pretended that it is to be understood of him in a Metaphorical Sence, it must be considered, that it is so uncouth and unusual a Metaphor, that those who are of this Mind, cannot produce any one example of this Metaphor, either in Scripture or in other Authors, nor are they able to make any tolerable Sence of it, but are forced to wrest and strain the Words. But what need is there of such forced Metaphors, when this was most properly and literally verified in Christ, whose Hands and Feet were really pierced and nailed to the Cross, according to the manner of the Roman Crucifixions, to whom therefore this is applied in the New Testament. See Mat. 27. 35. Mark 15. 24. Luk. 23. 33. Joh. 19. 18, 23, 27.

* Mar. 15. 29. Joh. 19. 37.

17. I may tell all my bones q: * they look and stare upon me r.

q Partly through my Leanness, caused by excessive grief, which is much more credible of Christ than of David; and partly by my being stretched out upon the Cross. r To wit, with Delight and Complacency in my Calamities, as this Phrase is used, Psal. 35. 21. and 37. 34. and 54. 7. and 59. 10. Obad. v. 12. Comp. Luk. 23. 35.

18. They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture s.

s This also cannot be applied to David, without an uncouth and strained Metaphor, but was literally fulfilled in Christ, Mat. 27. 35. Joh. 19. 24.

19. But

19. But be not thou far from me, O LORD; O my ſtrength haſt thee to help me.

† Heb. my only one. * Pſal. 35. 17. † Heb. from the hand.

20. Deliver my ſoul from the ſword t: † * my darling u from the power † x of the dog.

t (i. e.) From the rage and violence of mine Enemies, as the next Clauſe explains it, and as the Sword is oft taken in Scripture. See Jer. 25. 16, 27, 29. Ezek. 38. 21. u Heb. My one, or only One; to wit, his Soul, as he now ſaid: which he ſo calls, either becauſe it was very dear to him: Or rather becauſe it was left alone and deſtitute of Friends and Helpers; for ſo this word is uſed, Pſal. 25. 16. and 35. 17. x Heb. the Hand: Which is oft put for Power, and in that Sence is aſcribed to a Flame, Iſa. 47. 14. and to Evil, Hab. 2. 9.

21. Save me from the lyons y mouth, for thou haſt heard me z, from the horns of the unicorns a.

y Either the Devil, that raging and roaring Lyon; who did many ways aſſault and annoy him: Or on his Lyon-like Enemies. z (i. e.) Anſwered and delivered me. a A ſtrong and fierce and untameable Wild beaſt: though the learned are not agreed about the kind of it. See of it, Deut. 33. 17. Job 39. 9, 10. Pſal. 92. 10. Iſa. 34. 7. and my Latin Synopſis on Numb. 23. 22. For it is not worth while to trouble the unlearned Reader with ſuch Diſputes.

* Heb. 2. 12. 22. * I will declare b thy name c unto my brethren d: in the midſt of the congregation e will I praiſe thee.

b (i. e.) Publiſh or celebrate it, when thou haſt delivered me, thou ſhalt have the Glory of it, as now thy Honour is eclipſed by my Calamities. c (i. e.) That power and faithfulneſs and goodneſs, and thoſe Perfections which thou haſt manifeſted on my behalf. d The ſame whom he calls the Congregation in the next Clauſe, and the ſeed of Jacob and Iſrael in the next Verſe. Which alſo doth not ſo fitly agree to David, who never to my remembrance gives this Title to any, but ſuch as were near a-kin to him, as it doth to Chriſt, who extendeth this name to all his Diſciples and Believers, Mat. 12. 48, 49. and 25. 40. and 28. 10. and to whom this very Text is applied. Heb. 2. 11, 12. e Not only privately, but even in the publick Congregation.

23. Ye that fear the LORD, praiſe him f; all ye the ſeed of Jacob glorifie him; and fear him, all ye ſeed of Iſrael g.

f Partly for my ſake, and chiefly for your own benefit, received by my Deliverance. g The two univerſal Particles ſeem to intimate that he ſpeaks not only of the Carnal, but alſo of the ſpirital Seed: which alſo is more than probable, by Comparing this with v. 27, 28.

24. For he hath not deſpiſed h, nor abhorred i the affliction of the afflicted: neither hath he hid his face from him k, but * when he cryed unto him, he heard. † Heb. 5. 7.

h I was deſpiſed by the People, v. 6. but not by God. i (i. e.) He did not turn away his Face from it, as Men do from things which they abhor, but looked upon it with Compaſſion. k To wit, for ever: for he did ſo for a time: But now, ſaith he, he hath lift up upon me the Light of his Countenance.

* Pſal. 35. 18. * Pſal. 50. 14. 25. * My praiſe ſhall be of thee in the great congregation l: * I will pay my vows m before them that fear him.

l Either in the general aſſemblies of the Iſraelites, at their ſolemn Feaſts: Or in the univerſal Church, made up of Jews and Gentiles, as the following Verſes explain it. m (i. e.) Thoſe Praiſes and Services, which in my diſtreſs, I vowed to return unto thee, when thou didſt deliver me.

26. The meek n ſhall eat and be ſatisfied o: they ſhall praiſe the LORD that ſeek him p; * your q heart ſhall live r for ever s. * Pſal. 69. 32.

n (i. e.) Faithful or Godly Perſons, who are frequently called meek ones, as Pſal. 25. 9. and 76. 9. and 149. 4. Iſa. 11. 4. and 61. 1. Zeph. 2. 3. becauſe the grace of God doth ſoften and ſweeten the Hearts of Sinners, and ſubdues their Pride and Paſſion, and Rebellion againſt God, and their fierceneſs towards men. Or, the Poor, as this word is oft rendred; which ſeems well to ſuit this place, Partly, becauſe theſe are oppoſed to the fat ones upon Earth, v. 29. Partly, becauſe the following Eating and Satisfaction may ſeem moſt proper and acceptable to ſuch as were in want: Partly, becauſe here is an alluſion to the legal Feaſts, made of the remainders of the Sacrifices, in which the poor had a ſhare: and partly, becauſe this well agrees to the time of Chriſt's coming, when the Body of the Jewiſh Nation were a poor and afflicted people, and the Poor eſpecially did receive the Goſpel, Mat. 11. 5. o Which is mentioned as a great Bleſſing, Joel 2. 26. as it is threatned as a grievous Curſe that Men ſhoult Eat and not be ſatisfied, Levit. 26. 26. Mich. 6. 14. But becauſe it was Comparatively a poor and mean thing to have ones Belly filled and ſatisfied with that food which periſheth and paſſeth away preſently after it is received, this magnificent Promiſe is doubtleſs to be underſtood, ſpiritually of thoſe ſpiritual Bleſſings, that Grace and Peace, and Comfort and full Satisfaction, which all believing and pious Souls have in the Sence of God's Love, and the pardon of their Sins, and in the influences of God's Spirit into their Souls. p That ſeek his Favour: Or that enquire after him, and Labour to know and diſcern him. Wherein poſſibly the Spirit of God may intimate to us, the neceſſity of ſeeking, and the Difficulty of finding or diſcovering God, when he ſhall appear in the Fleſh and in the form of a Servant; which was likely to hide him from the Eyes of the Carnal, and Careleſs Jews, and not to be diſcerned, but by thoſe that were ſtudious and inquiſitive concerning the mind of God revealed in the Scriptures, concerning that matter. q (i. e.) Their: For he ſpeaks of the ſame perſons ſtill, though there be a change from the third to the ſecond perſon, as is uſual in thoſe poetical and prophetical Books of Scripture. r (i. e.) Shall be greatly refreſhed and Comforted, Life being oft put for an Happy and comfortable Life, as 1 Kings 1. 25. Pſal. 34. 12. in which reſpect Jacob's Heart or Spirit is ſaid to have revived, Gen. 45. 27. as on the contrary Nabal's Heart was ſaid to have died within him, 1 Sam. 25. 37. when it was oppreſſed with great ſadneſs. s Your Comfort ſhall not be ſhort and Tranſitory, as worldly Comforts are, but everlaſting.

27. * All the ends of the world t ſhall remember u and turn unto the LORD x: and all the kindreds y of the nations ſhall worſhip before thee. * Pſal. 2. 8. & 72. 11. & 86. 9.

t (i. e.) All Nations from one end of the World to the other. So this is an evident Prophecy of the calling of the Gentiles to the knowledge of God and Chriſt by the Goſpel, and conſequently a clear Proof, that this Pſalm doth directly and immediately ſpeak of Chriſt; to whom alone, and not to David, this and divers other paſſages of it, do manifeſtly belong. u It is not particularly expreſſed, what they ſhould remember, becauſe there were ſeveral things, that ſhould and would be remembred by them; which were likely to occaſion their turning to the Lord. They ſhall remember their former and manifold Wickedneſs, with Grief and Shame, and Fear, and particularly their ſin and folly, in worſhiping dead and impotent Idols, that never did nor could do them, either good or hurt. They ſhall remember that God who did make lively impreſſions upon their Minds, which yet they had in great meaſure blotted out and forgotten, but now by the preaching of the Goſpel they ſhall be revived. They ſhall remember their great and manifold Obligations to God, which they had quite forgotten, his Patience and Goodneſs in ſparing them ſo long, in the midſt of all their impieties, and in revealing his Goſpel to them, and giving his Son for them. They ſhall remember the gracious Words and glorious Works of Chriſt, and what he did, and ſuffered for them; which poſſibly divers of them had been Eye and Ear-witneſſes of in Judea (although with the unbelieving Jews, they deſpiſed and miſconſtrued them,) and others had heard the fame and tydings of them. x Unto the only true God, and unto Jeſus Chriſt, to whom this Name of Jehovah is oft times aſcribed in Scripture. y Heb. all the Families. Which is not to be underſtood ſtrictly, of every particular perſon and Family, but of all ſorts, and of great numbers of them; as ſuch univerſal Phraſes are very frequently taken in Scripture.

28. For the kingdom is the LORDS, and he is the governor among the nations z.

z This is added as a Reaſon, why the Gentiles ſhould be converted, becauſe God is not only the God and Lord of the Jews, but alſo of the Gentiles, and of all Nations, Rom. 3. 29, 30. And therefore, though for a time he thought fit to confine his Kingdom to Iſrael, yet he had reſolved in due time to enlarge his Kingdom, and to ſet up his Throne and Government in the Gentile World, which were no leſs Created and Redeemed by him, than the Jews. Compare Zech. 13. 2. and 14. 9.

29. All a they that be fat upon the earth b, ſhall eat c and worſhip d, all they that go down to the duſt e, ſhall bow before him, and none can keep alive his own ſoul f.

a 1. Many of them, as the word all is oft uſed, as Pſal. 72.

11. Mat. 3. 5. and 17. 11. Luk. 6. 26. Joh. 3. 26. 2 Tim. 3. 9. b (i. e.) Kings and Princes, and the great Men of the World, who are oft described by this Metaphor, as Psal. 78. 31. Isa. 10. 16. Compare Job 15. 27. Psal. 17. 10. and 73. 7. Whose Conversion to Christ is also foretold in other places, as Psal 45. 12. and 72. 10, 11. Isa. 60. 3, 5, 10. 1 Tim. 2. 1, 2. Revel. 21. 24. These are opposed to the poor and miserable part of the World, of whom he speaks in the next words, as also v. 26. where see the first Note. So the Sence of the place is, That both poor and rich should embrace the Gospel. But the Syriack Interpreter renders these words otherwise, the hungry of the Earth. And another, to the same purpose, those that are turned to Ashes, (for which I should rather say, they that lye down in Ashes, which is an usual Description of poor, afflicted, and humbled Persons) on the ground. For the first Hebrew word, rendred fat, with the change, but of one point, signifies Ashes. c And be satisfied, as it was more fully expressed, v. 26. shall feed upon the bread of Life, Christ and all his benefits. d This is added to explain the former word, and to shew what kind of Eating he spoke of, not of a Carnal, but of a Spiritual Feast. e They that languish and draw nigh to Death, through Poverty or Misery, or anguish of Mind and Conscience: For such are oft said to go down into, or to sit in the Dust, as Job 30. 19. Psal. 44. 25. and 113. 7. Isa. 29. 4. and 47. 1. These may be opposed to the fat ones mentioned in the first Clause of the Verse. f This may seem to be a further Description of the same Persons, and an aggravation of their miserable Condition, from this Circumstance, that it was not in their Power to help themselves, their Soul was going down to the Dust, as he said in the last foregoing Clause; and now he adds, that none of them could stop it, or keep himself alive; so that their Case was wholly desperate as to themselves; and this drove them out of themselves, to seek relief from God, and to receive Jesus Christ and the Gospel of Salvation gladly. Heb. and he who (the Pronoun Relative being here understood, as it is in very many places) doth not, or cannot quicken, or enliven his own Soul, (i. e.) himself, as the Soul is oft taken. And quickening may be put either for Nourishing, as Isa. 7. 21. or for Comforting, as here v. 26. or preserving Life, whether Temporal or Spiritual, and Eternal, as Gen. 19. 19. Ezek. 13. 19. and 18. 27. But these words are and may be rendred otherwise, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew Text, and the Scope of the place. Having said that all Nations should bow before him, (i. e.) before Christ and unto Christ, whom they should own as their Lord and Saviour, he now adds these Words, Either, 1. As a Reason why they did receive him, or believe in him, because (for so the Particle Vau is frequently rendered, as 1 Kings 1. 21. and 18. 3, 4. Psal. 60. 12. Isa. 16. 2. and 64. 5. and oft elsewhere) he did not keep alive his own Soul, as he could easily have done, by his divine Power, in spight of all that his Enemies could do, but freely gave himself to Death for them. Because he laid down his Life for sinners, which the Father had Commanded him, and he had promised to do, therefore God loved him, Joh. 10. 17, 18. and glorified him, and performed his Promise made to him upon that Condition, that if he did make his Soul an Offering for sin, he should see his seed, &c. Isa. 53. 10. Or, 2. As an Amplification or Commendation of the Faith of the Gentiles, in coming and bowing to Christ, although (for so also the Hebrew Vau is oft used, as Psal. 99. 8. Prov. 26. 24. Eccles. 9. 16.) he did not keep alive his own Soul, but laid down his own Life, and suffered himself to be killed by wicked men: Which was one principal Reason, why the Jews would not believe on him, as is noted, Mat. 27. 40, 42, 43. and therefore was a just Commendation to the Gentiles, that notwithstanding this great stumbling Block believed on him. But this I propose with Submission. Only it may be observed that this last Clause of the Verse in the Hebrew, is in the singular number, and therefore more likely to belong to him, immediately going before it, which is of the same number, than to the other preceding Clauses, which are all expressed in the plural number. And though I know Enallage of numbers be very usual, yet they are not to be supposed without necessity.

30. A seed g shall serve him, it shall be accounted to the LORD for a generation h.

g Christ shall not want a seed or posterity, Heb. 2. 13. For though the Jewish Nation should generally reject and forsake him, which may seem to be here implied. Christ shall have many Disciples or followers, and the Gentiles shall come in their stead. Compare this promise with that, he shall see his Seed, Isa. 53. 10. Or, their Seed, (i. e.) The seed of the Gentile Worshippers last mentioned. Christian Religion shall not be the business of one Age, but, as the Gentiles shall believe in Christ, so shall their Posterity in succeeding Generations: this being God's usual Method, to take Children into Covenant with their Parents, of which see, Deut. 10. 15. and 30. 19. Psal. 69. 36. Isa. 43. 5. and 44. 3. And as when the Jews refused Christ, their Children were cast out of Covenant with them; so when the Gentiles embraced the Gospel-Covenant, their Children were admitted with them. h That believing seed shall be Reputed, both by God and Men; The Generation, or Children, or People of the Lord, as the Jews formerly were. But upon the Jews Contempt of Christ and the Gospel, the Gentiles shall come in their stead, and enjoy their Titles and Priviledges. Compare this place with Psal. 87. 5.

31. They i shall come k, and shall declare his righteousness l unto a people that shall be born m, that he hath done this n.

i Either, the Converts and Worshippers, v. 27. 29. Or their seed last mentioned, v. 30. Or this may be indefinitely spoken, as such Verbs are oft used, they shall come, (i. e.) Some or other shall come and do the Work here mentioned, to wit, the Apostles and Ministers of the Gospel. k To wit, from Judea and Jerusalem (from whence the Gospel was first to go forth) to the Gentile World; to the several parts where of the Apostles went upon this Errand. l God's Righteousness, Either, 1. His wonderful grace and mercy to mankind, in giving them Christ and the Gospel: for Righteousness is oft put for Mercy or Kindness, as hath been noted again and again. Or, 2. That Righteousness which God hath appointed for the justification of Sinners, called the Righteousness of Faith, Rom. 3. 21, 22. Philip 3. 9. which the Jews were ignorant of and would not submit to, Rom. 10. 3. but the Gentiles joyfully embraced. Or, 3. His truth or faithfulness, (which is very frequently and fitly called Righteousness,) in the performance of those exceeding great and precious Promises made, and recorded in the Old Testament, and especially those two, concerning the sending of the Messias, and concerning the calling of the Gentiles. m Either, 1. Spiritually, (i. e.) Born again: for Regeneration is oft called a Birth, as Psal. 87. 4, 5. Joh. 1. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 23. and a Creation, Psal. 102. 18. Or rather, 2. Naturally, (i. e.) Unto succeeding Generations. Whereby David gives us a Key to understand this Psalm, and teacheth us, that he speaks not here of himself, or of the Occurrences of his times, but of things which were to be done in after-Ages, even of the spreading of the Gospel among the Gentiles, in the time of the New Testament, n (i. e.) They shall declare that this is the work of God, and not of Man, and carried on by his only Power in the World, against all the wit and force of Men. Or, rather, because (this being added as a Proof or Demonstration of that Righteousness of God now mentioned) He (i. e. the Lord, plainly understood here, and expressed in the foregoing Verse) hath done or wrought it, to wit, his Righteousness. (i. e.) He hath executed with his Hand, what he spake with his Mouth; he hath demonstrated the truth of his Promises by his Actions, and by the Accomplishment of them.

PSAL. XXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

The matter of this Psalm gives us some general Discovery of the time of it's writing; which was when David was delivered out of his Distresses, and quietly settled in his Kingdom.

A Psalm of David.

1. THE LORD is * my shepherd a, I shall not want b. * Isa. 40. 11. Jer. 23. 4. Ezek. 34. 23. Joh. 10. 11. 1 Pet. 2. 25. Rev. 7. 17.

a He hath shewed himself to be so by his gracious Providences towards me, and for me: and he hath taken upon him, that Office and Relation to me, by his entring into Covenant with me. Whereby he hath engaged himself to rule, and feed, and preserve and heal me, and do all which Shepherds do, or are oblig'd to do to their Flocks: which David very well understood, and had doubtless carefully performed his Duty to his Sheep: and therefore he strengthens this Faith by his Consideration, that God was his Shepherd; and God was a much-better Shepherd than he, or any man could be, so he might confidently expect more than ordinary Benefits from his Conduct. b To wit, any thing which is really necessary for me, either for this Life or for the next. But foolish man may think many things to be necessary for him, which the all-wise God knoweth to be not only unnecessary but hurtful, and therefore mercifully denies what men ignorantly desire to their hurt.

2. He maketh me to lye down c in † green pastures d: he leadeth me e beside f the † still waters g. † Heb. pasture of tender grass. † Heb. waters of quietness.

c To rest and repose my self at Noon, as the manner was in those hot countries. See Cant. 1. 7. Isa. 13. 20. Ezek. 34. 15. d Where there is both delight and plenty of Provisions. e Left I should wander and perish. Heb. He leadeth me sweetly and gently, accomcomodating himself to mine infirmities, as Shepherds do to their Sheep, Gen. 33. 13. Isa. 40. 11. and 49. 10. f Or, to, the Particle al being oft put for el, as Gen. 1. 30. and 16. 7. g Quiet and and gentle waters, either put into Watering-Troughs or Running in small and shallow Channels. Which are opposed to great Rivers, which both affright the Sheep with their noise, and expose them to the Danger of being carried away by their swift and violent streams, whilst they are drinking at them.

*Psal. 5. 8. & 19. 8. & 31. 3. 3. * He restoreth h my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness i, for his names sake k.

h Heb. He bringeth it back; Either, 1. From its Errors or Wandring. Or, 2. Into the Body, out of which it was even departing and fainting away. He reviveth or comforteth me. Comp. Ruth 4. 15. 1 Sam. 30. 12. Lament. 1. 11. i In streight and plain, and safe paths, where the Sheep is neither hurt, nor wearied, nor in Danger of wandering. By his Word he directs me to the right ways of Truth and Holiness, and Righteousness, and by his Spirit he inclines and inables me to chuse them, and to continue to walk in them. k Not for any worth in me, but meerly for the Demonstration and Glory of his Justice, and Faithfulness, and Goodness.

*Psal. 3. 6. 118. 6. 4. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death l, * I will fear no evil m: for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff n, they comfort me o.

l Through a dark and dismal Valley, full of Terrors and Dangers, as this Phrase signifies, Job 24. 17. Psal. 44. 19. and 107. 10, 14. Jer. 2. 6. m I will not give way to my fears, but Confidently rely upon God. n Two words noting the same thing, and both designing God's pastoral Care over him, expressed by the sign and instrument of it. o The Consideration thereof supports me, under all my Fears and Distresses.

†Heb. maketh fat. 5. Thou prepares a table p before me, in the presence of mine enemies *: thou † anointest mine head with oyl q, my cup runneth over r.

p (i. e.) Thou furnishest me with plenty, and Variety of Provisions and Comforts. * They seeing and envying, and fretting at it, but not being able to hinder it. q Or Oyntment, as the Syriack and Arabick Interpreters render it, with Aromatical Oyntments, which were then used at great Feasts, Psal. 92. 10. Amos 6. 6. Mat. 6. 17. Luk. 7. 38. The Sence is, thy Comforts delight my Soul, Comp. 45. 7. r Thou hast given me a very plentiful Portion, signified by the Cup, given to the Guests by the Master of the Feast.

†Heb. to length of days. 6. Surely goodness and mercy s shall follow me t all the days of my Life u, and I will dwell in the house of the LORD † for ever x.

s (i. e.) God's Favour, and the blessed and Comfortable effects, and Benefits of it. t By which Emphatical Expression he signifies God's admirable freeness and readiness to do Good to his People, and his preventing them with Blessings. u Which he justly concludes, from the former instances of God's Favour to him, because of the unchangeableness of God's Nature, and the stability of his Covenant and Promises. x Whereas I have formerly been driven from God's House, I rest assured that I shall now constantly enjoy that blessed Priviledge of serving and enjoying God in his Sanctuary, which I prize more than all my Dominions.

PSAL. XXIV.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm is generally and probably thought to have been Composed by David upon that solemn Occasion, of bringing the Ark of God from the House of Obed-Edom, into the Tabernacle which David had built for it, 2 Sam. 6. Wherein he hath a further Prospect even to the Temple which he earnestly desired, and intended to build, and which he knew would be built by his Son: And when this was done, and the Ark brought into it, this Psalm was to be sung, and indeed to this time it seems chiefly directed. For David's Psalms were not only used by himself upon the first Occasions for which he made them, but they were committed to the Prefects of sacred Musick, for the use of the Church in all succeeding times. And being a Prophet, he speaks, as the Prophets used of things to come, as if they were already present, and turns his Speech to the Temple, and it's Gates, as if they were now built. Moreover, because the Tabernacle and Temple and Ark were manifest Types of Christ, and of his Church, and of the Place, and state of Heavenly Glory, David extended his thoughts to them also, or at least the Holy Ghost designed to comprehend them under these Typical Expressions.

A Psalm of David.

* Exod. 9. 29. & 19. 5. Deut. 10. 14. Job 41. 11. Psal. 50. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 26, 28. 1. THE * earth is the LORD's and the fulness thereof a: the world, and they that dwell therein.

a All the Creatures, and especially the Inhabitants wherewith it is repleni shed. God's general Dominion over, and Interest in all Persons and Places, seems to be here premised and asserted, Either, 1. To shew his right to chuse any Nation whom he pleased to be his peculiar People: which priviledge being conferred upon the Israelites, was a great stumbling Block to the Heathen Nations. Or 2. To set forth the singular kindness and mercy of God to Israel, who chose them out of all the Nations of the World to be near to him, and to have special acquaintance with him, although otherwise he had no other Relation to them, than what he had to all Mankind, to wit, that of a Creator and Governour. Or, 3. To demonstrate the Excellency of the Jewish Worship, and Religion above all others, because the God whom they served, was the God and Maker of the whole World, when the Gods of the Gentiles were sorry Idols, and esteemed by themselves to be but Local and confined Deities.

* Job 38. 6. Psal. 104. 5. & 136. 6. 2. * For he hath founded it b upon the seas c, and established it upon the floods.

b Justly have I said, that the Earth is the Lord's, for he made it, and laid the Foundation of it, and that in a wonderful manner. c By the Seas and Floods, he means the whole Collection of Waters, as well the Sea and Rivers running into it, as that great Abyss of Waters which is contained in the Bowels of the Earth, of which see Gen. 7. 11. and 49. 25. 2 Pet. 3. 5. This is here mentioned as an Evidence of God's Wise and Powerful, and Gracious Providence, that he hath built so vast a Building upon so weak a Foundation, as the Waters are. Mic. 6. 2. and that although the Waters are lighter than the Earth, and therefore are naturally inclined to be above it, as they were at first, yet God hath so far over-ruled the inclinations of Nature, that the waters shall as it were deny themselves and run down into Channels and Caverns of the Earth, that so the Earth may be a Convenient Habitation for Men and Beasts. See Gen. 1. 9. Exod. 20. 4. Psal. 104. 6.

*Psal. 15. 1. 3. * Who shall ascend into the hill of the LORD d? and who shall stand e in his holy place f.

d To wit, Sion or Moriah, the place of God's Sanctuary, and special Presence. This is here subjoyned, Either, 1. By way of Opposition, though God is the God of the whole world, yet he is in a peculiar manner the God of Israel, and to be worshipped no where but in their Holy place. Or 2. as an Inference. Having asserted and proved God's Authority and Dominion over all Mankind, and Consequently their Obligations, to serve and worship him, he now proposeth a most necessary and important Question, especially in those times, when all Nations, except Israel, were under deep Ignorance and Errors herein, Namely, where and how, and by whom God will be served, and his Favour and Blessing may be enjoyed. The place is here described, and the qualification of the Persons in the following Verses. e To wit, to Minister before him, as this word is commonly used with respect either to Men, as 1 Kings 1. 2. Compared with 10. 8. Dan. 1. 5, 19. or to God, as Deut. 10. 8. and 18. 7. Dan. 7. 10. Zech. 3. 4. Standing is the posture of Ministers or Servants. So the Sence is, Who shall serve God, to wit, with God's acceptation, and to his own Advantage. f In the place which he hath sanctified for his Service.

* Isa. 33. 15, 16. †Heb. the clean of Hands. 4. * † He that hath clean hands g, and a pure heart h; who hath not lift up his soul unto vanity i, nor sworn deceitfully k.

g Whose Actions and Conversations are holy and unblameable. It is here very observable, that the Character of a right and acceptable Worshipper of God is not taken from his Nation, and Relation to Abraham; nor from all those costly and laborious Rites and Ceremonies of the Law, in which the generality of the Israelites pleased themselves, but in Moral and Spiritual Duties, which most of them grosly neglected. h Purged from Hypocrisie and inward Filthiness, and careful to approve it self to God, as well as to Men, ordering a Man's very Thoughts and Affections according to God's Word. This is fitly added, because a man may keep his Hands clean in good Measure, upon meer worldly Motives, or with an evil Design, or without any respect to God. i Either, 1. Who doth not worship Idols, which are oft called Vanities in Scripture. Or 2. Who

Or. 2. Who doth not ſwear vainly or falſly, the Phraſe here being much the ſame with that in the third Commandement, of taking God's Name in Vain. But that ſeems to be a quite differing Phraſe, and the Name of God there mentioned, determins the Sence of that general Phraſe to Oaths, which, without that Addition, or ſomething Equivalent is never, to my knowledge, uſed in Scripture in that Sence. Nor do all thoſe learned Men, who ſo expound this place give one inſtance of that ſignification of this Phraſe. And for their other Argument for that Sence, that this Clauſe is conjoyned with the next, by the Conjunction Vau, and therefore is to be explained by it, it ſeems to have no weight, becauſe the ſame Conjunction joyns the two firſt Characters together, and yet it is confeſſed that clean Hands and a pure Heart, are two diſtinct and very differing things. Or rather, 3. Who doth not immoderately value and affect, or ardently deſire (as this very Phraſe of lifting up the Soul doth oft ſignifie, as Deut. 24. 15. Pſal. 25. 1. Jer. 22. 27. and 44. 14. Ezek. 24. 25. Hoſea 4. 8.) the vain things of this preſent Life and World, ſuch as Honours, Riches, Pleaſures, and the like, which are oft called Vain things, or Vanities in Scripture, as Pſal. 4. 2. and 119. 37. Eccleſ. 1. 2. and 12. 8. And this is very fitly mentioned as a Character of a truly good Man, becauſe hereby he is diſtinguiſhed from all ungodly men whatſoever, whoſe inſeparable Property, this is both in the Old and New Teſtament noted to be, to love Vanity, and to ſet their Hearts chiefly upon the Good things of this Life, ſuch as Corn and Wine, Pſal. 4. 2, 6, 7. and to have their Portion in this Life, Pſal. 17. 14. and to mind Earthly things, Phil. 3. 19. and to be Friends of the World, Jam. 4. 4. and to Love the World, and the things of the World, 1 Joh. 2. 15. Whereas good men are every where deſcribed to be ſuch as make God their Portion, Pſal. 16. 5. and prize and deſire his Favour and Service infinitely, more than all the enjoyments of this Life, yea, even than Life it ſelf, Job 23. 12. Pſal. 4. 6, 7. and 63. 3. and 119. 72. and ſuch as are weaned from Earthly things, Pſal. 131. 1, 2. and have their affections ſet on things above, not on things of the Earth, Col. 3. 2. and lay not up their Treaſure in Earth, but in Heaven, Mat. 6. 19, 20. all which is directly oppoſite to this lifting up the Soul to Vanity. k Heb. unto, or with deceit, (i. e.) Falſly, or with a purpoſe of deceiving or injuring others thereby. Under this Negative the contrary Affirmative is included, that he is one who when he is called to ſwear, doth ſwear in Truth, in Judgment, and in Righteouſneſs, Jer, 4. 2.

5. He ſhall receive the bleſſing l from the LORD m, and *righteouſneſs n from the God of his ſalvation.

* Iſa. 45. 8.

l (i. e.)) The Bleſſings which God hath promiſed to his Church and People, to wit, Grace and Glory, and all other Good things, as they are ſummed up, Pſal. 84. 11. He and he only ſhall be truly Bleſſed. m Which is added ſignificantly, by way of Oppoſition to the Bleſſings, which men received either from the Prieſts or from other men, which were oftentimes given unto unworthy Perſons, and in that Caſe were without any effect or benefit, whereas God's bleſſings are given only to good Men, and are always effectual for their Good. n (i. e.) The bleſſed Fruit or reward of his Righteouſneſs, as the Work is oft put for the reward of it, as Levit. 19. 13. Job 7. 2. Pſal. 109. 20. Or, kindneſs or mercy, and thoſe Benefits which flow from it, which are oft called by the Name of Righteouſneſs, as Judg. 5. 11. 1 Sam. 12. 7. Pſal. 48. 11. and 112. 9.

6. This is the generation o of them that ſeek him p, that ſeek thy face q || O Jacob r Selah.

|| Or, O God of Jacob.

o The true Progeny which God regards. Whereby he reflects upon them, who boaſted of and truſted to their carnal Generation, or Deſcent from Jacob. p To wit, God, mentioned in the end of v. 5. or his Face, as it is more fully expreſſed in the next Clauſe. (i. e.) That make it their Care and Study to know him and his Mind, and Will, and to pleaſe and ſerve him, as this Phraſe is uſually underſtood, q (i. e.) His Face by a familiar Change of the Perſon; of which many Inſtances have been already Noted, and his Face, (i. e.) His Grace and Favour, which is oft called God's Face, as Gen. 4. 14. Exod. 33. 14, 15. Pſal. 16. 11. and 17. 2. and 44. 3. And ſo this Phraſe is uſed, 2 Chron. 7. 14. Pſal. 27. 8. Hoſ. 5. 15. r So the Sence is, that ſeek the true Church, here called Jacob, that deſire the knowledge of it, and Converſation with it, in which Sence many are ſaid to ſeek Solomons Face, as the Phraſe is in the Hebrew, 1 Kings 10. 24. 2 Chron. 9. 23. and the Harlot to ſeek her Lovers Face, Prov. 7. 15. And ſo this is by ſome expounded of the Gentiles, who enquired after the true Church, and finding it in Jacob, were deſirous to become Proſelytes, and to joyn themſelves to the Church of Jacob or Iſrael. But it muſt be remembred, that the Pſalmiſt is not here ſpeaking, of the calling of the Gentiles, but only of the Character or Qualification of the true Jacobites or Iſraelites, who cannot conveniently be ſaid to ſeek the Face of Jacob, (i. e.) Their own. And the Phraſe of ſeeking the Face of Jacob or of the Church, is no where uſed in Scripture. Or, as it is in the Margent, O God of Jacob. But that ſeems to be too large a Supplement. Or, this is Jacob, the Pronoun this being eaſily underſtood out of the beginning of the Verſe. Or, the Generation (which may in the ſame manner be ſupplied) of Jacob, Jacob being here put not for the Perſon, but for the poſterity, of Jacob, as it is Gen. 49. 7. Numb. 23. 7. 10. 23. Deut. 32. 9. Pſal. 14. 7. or for the Church or people of God, which is oft called Jacob or Iſrael, as Iſa. 14. 1. and 41. 8. and 44. 1, 5, 21. &c. So the Sence is, this and this only is the true Jacob or Iſrael, or Church of God, and all others are ſo only in Name and Title, although they be deſcended lineally from him. Or, in Jacob, the Particle in being here underſtood, as it is in Pſal. 2. 12. and 17. 12. and in many other places. So the Sence of the place is, this is the true Generation of them, that ſeek God's Face in Jacob. (i. e.) Either in Jacobs Land, or Sanctuary, the only place where God was to be ſought: Or, among the Jacobites, or Iſraelites. By which he inſinuates, what is expreſſed, Rom. 9. 6. that, all are not Iſrael, that are of Iſrael, and that all were not Iſraelites indeed, that were ſprung from Jacob, but only thoſe of them who were ſuch as he deſcribed, v. 4. Comp. Joh. 1. 47. Rom 2. 28, 29.

7. * Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlaſting doors s, and the King of glory t ſhall come in u.

* Pſal. 98. 8.

s The queſtion was put; who ſhall aſcend into God's Hill and Holy Place, v. 3. To which anſwer hath been given, and the Perſons deſcribed, v. 4, 5, 6. But becauſe there ſtill were impediments in the way, and there were Gates and Doors to this Holy Place, to ſhut out thoſe who would aſcend thither, therefore he poetically ſpeaks to thoſe Gates, to open and let in the King of Glory, who would make way for his Subjects and Followers. Here is a Repreſentation of a Triumphant entrance of a King into his Royal City and Palace; for which the Gates uſe to be enlarged, or at leaſt wide opened. He ſpeaks here of the Gates and Doors, Either, 1. Of his Royal City of Sion, through which the Ark was at this time to be brought to the Tabernacle, which David had built for it, called Everlaſting. Either from the ſolidity and durableneſs of the Matter, or from David's Deſires and Hopes, that God would make them ſuch in ſome ſort, becauſe he loved the Gates of Sion, Pſal. 87. 2. Or, rather, 2. Of the Temple, which by Faith and the Spirit of Prophecy, he beheld as already built, and accordingly addreſſeth his Speech to it, whoſe Doors he calls Everlaſting, not ſo much becauſe they were made of ſtrong and durable Materials, as in Oppoſition of thoſe of the Tabernacle, which were removed from place to place, whereas the Temple and its Doors were conſtantly fixed in one place, and, if the ſins of Iſrael did not hinder, were to abide there for ever, (i. e.) As long as the Moſaical diſpenſation was to laſt, or until the coming of the Meſſias, as that Phraſe is very commonly taken in the Old Teſtament. Theſe Gates he bids lift up their Heads, or Tops, either by alluſion, to thoſe Gates which have a Portcullis at the top of them, which may be let down or taken up, and accordingly makes the Entrance either higher and lower: Or, that by this figurative Addreſs to the Gates, he might ſignifie the Duty of the People, to make their Gates higher and wider, to give their King a more Magnificent Entrance. But though this be the literal Sence of the place, yet there is alſo a Myſtical Sence of it, and that too deſigned by the Holy Ghoſt. And as the Temple was undoubtedly a Type of Chriſt, and of his Church, and of Heaven it ſelf, ſo this place may alſo contain a Repreſentation, either of Chriſt's entrance into his Church, or into the Hearts of his faithful people, who are here Commanded to ſet open their Hearts and Souls which are not unfitly called everlaſting Doors, for his Reception: Or of his Aſcenſion into Heaven, where the Saints or Angels are poetically introduced as preparing the way, and opening the Heavenly Gates to receive their Lord and King, returning to his Royal Habitation, with Triumph and Glory. Comp. Pſal. 47. 5. and 68. 25. Act. 2. 33. Eph. 4. 8. t The glorious King Jehovah, who dwelt in the Temple, and between the Cherubims, or the Meſſias, the King of Iſrael, and of his Church, called the King, Or Lord of Glory, 1 Cor. 2. 8. Jam. 2. 1. both for that Glory which is Inherent in him, and that which is purchaſed by him for his Members. u This ſeems to be a Prolepſis, or removal of an Objection: You will ſay, What is the cauſe of this imperious Call? And why, or for whom muſt thoſe Gates be opened, in ſo ſolemn and extraordinary a manner?

8. Who is the King of glory x? the LORD ſtrong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battel.

x This contains an Anſwer to the queſtion, He is no ordinary Perſon, no meaner and no other than Jehovah, who hath given ſo many Proofs of his Almightineſs, who hath ſubdued all his Enemies, and is now returned in Triumph. Here is in this, and the foregoing Verſe, a ſacred Dialogue between ſeveral Perſons. And ſome ſuppoſe that the Sacred Muſitians, which attended upon the Service of the Ark and Tabernacle, and were doubtleſs employed in the Solemnity, 2 Sam. 6. 5.

were divided into two Quires, whereof one spake the former, and the other the latter Verse.

9. Lift up your heads, O ye gates, even lift them up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in y.

y The same Verse is repeated again, Partly to shame and awaken the Dulness of mankind, who are so hardly brought to a serious Preparation for such Solemnities: and partly, to signifie the great worth and importance of the Matter, contained under these Expressions.

10. Who is this King of glory? the LORD of hosts z, he is the King of glory, Selah.

z Under whose Command are all the Hosts of Heaven and Earth, Angels and Men, and all other Creatures.

PSAL. XXV.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm seems to have been Composed, when David was under some straights and pressures, when his outward afflictions were accompanied with inward horrors of Conscience for his sins, by which he had forfeited God's favour, and procured these Calamities to himself.

A Psalm of David.

Psal. 143. 8. 1. UNto thee, O LORD, do I * lift up my soul a.

a (i. e.) I direct my Desires and Prayers, (which are expressed by this Phrase, Psal. 24. 4. Jer. 22. 27. Lam. 3. 41.) with Hope or Expectation of a gracious Answer, which also it implies, Deut. 24. 15.

* Psal. 22. 5. & 31. 1. & 34. 8. Psal. 28. 7. Rom. 10. 11. 2. O my God, I * trust in thee, let me not be ashamed b: let not mine enemies triumph over me.

b (i. e.) Disappointed of my Hope, which will be reproachful to me, not without Reflection upon thee, of whose power and Faithfulness I have made my boast.

3. Yea, let none that wait on thee be ashamed c, let them be ashamed d which transgress e * Psal. 119. 78. * without a cause f.

c With me and for me: For, if I be frustrated, all that trust in thee will be discouraged, and upbraided with my Example. d Blast their wicked Designs and Hopes. e Or, Prevaricate, or deal Perfidiously with me, violating their Faith given to me. f Without any provocation of mine, or without any sufficient Reason.

* Psal. 5. 8. & 27. 11. & 86. 11. & 119. 27. & 143. 8. 10. 4. * Shew me thy ways g, O LORD teach me thy paths.

g (i. e.) The way of thy Precepts, what I ought to do in my Circumstances and Difficulties, by what Methods I may obtain thy Favour and Help. Whatsoever thou dost with me as to other things, grant me this Favour, teach me my Duty, and cause me to keep close to it, notwithstanding all Temptations to the contrary.

* Psal. 26. 3. 5. * Lead me in thy truth h, and teach me: for thou art the God of my salvation i, on thee do I wait all the day.

h (i. e.) In the true and right way prescribed in thy Word, which is oft called Truth, as Psal. 119. 30. Job. 8. 45, 46. and 16. 13, &c. Or, by or because of thy Truth, (i. e.) Because thou art Faithful, do thou lead or guid me as thou hast promised to do. i (i. e.) Who hast saved me formerly, and hast engaged to save me, and from whom alone I expect Salvation.

* Psal. 103. 17. & 106. 1. & 107. 1. Jer. 33. 11. † Heb. thy bowels. 6. Remember, O LORD, * † thy tender mercies, and thy loving kindnesses k, for they have been ever of old l.

k O Consider thy own merciful Nature, and thy former manifold Favours vouchsafed to me, and to other miserable Sinners, and do like thy self. l Thou hast been gracious to such as I am, from the beginning of the World to this day, and to me in particular from my very Infancy, as he oft acknowledgeth in this Book, yea, from all Eternity thou hast had a good Will to me, and therefore, do not now desist and desert me

7. Remember not m * the sins of my Youth n, nor my transgressions o, according to thy mercy remember thou me, for thy goodness sake p, O LORD. * Job 20. 11.

m So as to lay them to my Charge. n The sins committed in my young and tender years, Eccles. 11. 9, 10. which God frequently punisheth in riper Age, Job 13. 26. Jer. 3. 25. and therefore he now prays that God would not deal so with him. o Nor any of my succeeding or other sins, which either have been Acted by me, or may be imputed to me. p Being a sinner I have nothing to plead for my self, but thy free Mercy and Goodness, which I now implore.

8. Good q and upright r is the LORD: therefore will he teach sinners in the way s.

q (i. e.) Bountiful and gracious to sinners, ready to good, and delighting in it. r Or, Right, (i. e.) Holy and True, sincere in making Promises, and in all his Declarations and Offers of Mercy to sinners, and faithful in fulfilling them. s Being such an one, he will not be wanting to such poor sinners as I am, but will guide them by his Word and Spirit, and gracious Providence, into the way of Life and Peace. By Sinners, he doth not understand all that are so, not such as are obstinate and proud, and scornful, whom God hath declared, that he will not teach nor direct, but will leave them to the Errors and Lusts of their own Hearts, and will blind and harden them to their Ruine, as is often expressed in Scripture, but only such as being truly sensible of their sins, do humbly and earnestly seek God for his Grace and Mercy, or such as are Meek, as the next Verse explains it; for these he will not fail to assist and relieve.

9. The meek t will he † guide in judgment u: and the meek will he teach his way x. † Heb. cause to go.

t (i. e.) The humble and lowly, such as meekly submit themselves to God's hand and word, and are willing and desirous to be directed and governed by him. u (i. e.) In the Paths of judgment, or in the right way wherein they should walk, as the next Clause explains this, or by the Rule of his word, which is oft called his Judgment, or Judgments. Or, with Judgment, (i. e.) With a wise and provident Care, and a due regard to all their Circumstances. See Jer. 10. 24. 1 Cor. 10. 13. x Either Gods way, which God prescribes: Or, his own way, in which he ought to walk.

10. All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth y, unto such as keep his Covenant z and his testimonies.

y All the dealings of God with them, yea even those that are afflictive, and grievous to the flesh, are done in kindness and faithfulness to them, as being very necessary for them, and tending to their great advantage. z (i. e.) The Laws or Conditions required of them by his Covenant, Or, as it follows, his Testimonies, (i. e.) His Precepts, which are the Testimonies or Witnesses of God's Will, and of mans Duty.

11. For thy names sake a O LORD, pardon mine iniquity: for it is great b.

a (i. e.) For the Honour of thy Goodness, and Truth, which is concerned herein. b And therefore none but such a God can pardon it, and nothing but thy own Name can move thee to do it; and the pardoning of it, will well become so great and good a God, and will tend much to the Illustration of thy Glory, as the greatness and desperateness of the Disease, advanceth the Honour and Praise of the Physician. Or this may be urged, not as an Argument to move God, but as the Reason that moved him to pray so earnestly, and that for God's Names sake: Or, though (as this Particle is oft rendred, as Exod. 34. 9. Psal. 41. 4. and elsewhere) it be great. Possibly he speaks of his sin against Uriah and Bathsheba. Or, for or though it be much or manifold: For the Hebrew word signifies both great and much.

12. What man is he c, that feareth the LORD? him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose d.

c (i. e.) Whosoever he be, whether Jew or Gentile, whether more innocent, or a greater Sinner, which is my Case. d (i. e.) Which God appointeth, or approveth. Or, which he, (i. e.) such Person, should chuse; for the future Tense is oft put Potentially, and so as to express a Man's Duty, as Gen. 20. 9. Mal. 1. 6. and 2. 7.

† Heb. shall lodge in Goodness. * Psal. 37. 11, 22, 29.

13. His soul † shall dwell e at ease f; and * his seed shall inherit the earth g.

e Heb. shall Lodge, (i.e.) Continue, as this word signifies, Job 17. 2. Prov. 19. 23. It notes the Constancy and Stability of his Happiness, both whilst he Lives and when he is Dead; which the next Clause seems to suppose. f Heb. in Good, (i.e.) In the Possession and Enjoyment of the true Good. g Or, the Land, to wit, Canaan; Which was promised and given, as an earnest of the whole Covenant of Grace, and all its Promises, and therefore is Synecdochically put for all of them. The Sence is, his seed shall be Blessed.

* Prov. 3. 32. See Joh. 7. 17. ‖ Or, and his Covenant to make them know it.

14. * The secret of the LORD h is with them that fear him; ‖ and he will shew them his covenant i.

h Either, 1, His Word and Counsel to direct and guide them in the right way, which he oft mentions here as a singular Blessing, v. 8, 9, 12. to shew them their Duty in all Conditions, and the way to their eternal Salvation. And so this may seem to be explained by the following Words, He will shew them his Covenant. And this, though it was revealed, yet might be called a secret, because of the many and deep Mysteries in it, and because it is said to be hid from many of them, to whom it was revealed, Mat. 11. 25. 2 Cor. 3. 13, 14, 15. and 4. 3. and it is not to be understood to any purpose, without the illumination of their Minds, by God's Spirit, as is manifest from Psal. 119. 18, 19. and many other places of Scripture. Or rather, 2. His Love and Favour, which is called his secret, Job 29. 4. Prov. 3. 32. and that very fitly, because it is known to none but him, that enjoyeth it, Prov. 14. 10. Revel. 2. 17. Or his gracious and fatherly Providence: Which is here said to be with them. Or, as it is in the Hebrew, towards them, taking Care of them, and working for them; even then when God seems to frown upon them. i Or, and he will make them to know (for the Infinitive is here thought to be put for the future Tense of the Indicative, as it is Eccles. 3. 14, 15, 18. Hosea 9. 13. and 12. 3.) his Covenant, (i.e.) He will make them clearly to understand it, both its Duties or Conditions, and its Blessings or Priviledges; neither of which ungodly Men rightly understand: Or, he will make them to know it by Experience, Or, by God's making it good to them; as on the contrary, God threatens to make ungodly Men to know his Breach of Promise, Numb. 14. 34. Or, as it is in the Margent of our Bibles, and his Covenant, (is, (i.e.) He hath engaged himself by his Promise or Covenant) to make them know it, to wit, his secret, (i.e.) That he will manifest either his Word or his Favour to them.

† Heb. bring forth.

15. Mine eyes are ever towards the LORD k, for he shall † pluck my feet out of the net l.

k (i.e.) My trust is in him, and my Expectation of Relief is from him only. l He will deliver me out of all my Temptations and Tribulations.

16. Turn thee unto me m, and have mercy upon me: for I am desolate n and afflicted.

m Turn thy Face and Favour to me, O thou who now hast turned thy Back upon me, and forsaken me. n Destitute of all other Hopes and Succours, persecuted by mine Enemies, and forsaken by the most of my Friends, as he was in Absalom's Rebellion.

17. The troubles of my heart o are enlarged: * Psal. 68. 6. * O bring thou me out of my distresses.

o My outward Troubles are accompanied with grievous Torments, of my Mind and Heart for my sins, which have procured them, and thy great Displeasure manifested in them.

18. Look upon p mine affliction, and my pain, and forgive all my sins q.

p With Compassion, as Exod. 3. 7, 8. Psal. 31. 7. and 106. 44. q The procuring and continuing Causes of my Trouble.

† Heb. hatred of violence.

19. Consider r mine enemies, for they are many, and they hate me with † cruel s hatred.

r Heb. Look upon, as v. 18. to wit, with a Revengeful Eye, as Exod. 14. 24. 1 Chron. 12. 17. Psal. 104. 32. For this general Expression of looking upon, is taken several ways in Scripture, and is to be determined by the Context, s Heb. Violent or Injurious, Either without any Cause given by me: Or without any bounds, or in an implacable manner.

20. O keep my soul t and deliver me: Let me not be ashamed, for I put my trust in thee.

t (i.e.) My self or my Life, as is that word commonly taken: For his Soul was out of his Enemies reach, who could only kill his Body, Luke 12. 4.

21. Let integrity and uprightness preserve me u: for I wait on thee.

u Though I have greatly offended thee, yet remember that I have dealt honestly and sincerely with mine Enemies, whilst they have dealt falsly and injuriously with me, and therefore judge between them and me, and deal with me according to the Righteousness of my Cause, and Carriage towards them.

22. Redeem Israel x, O God, out of all his troubles.

x If thou wilst not pity and help me, yet spare thy people who suffer for my sake, and in my sufferings.

PSAL. XXVI.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was certainly made by David, when he was in Distress, and particularly when he was falsly accused, and defamed by his Adversaries, as he frequently was by Saul, and his Courtiers: and therefore for his Vindication he makes a solemn appeal to God, and a Protestation of his own Innocency, to which he was forced by their Clamours and Reproaches.

A Psalm of David.

1. JUdge * a me, O LORD, for I have walked in mine integrity b: I have trusted also in the LORD c: therefore I shall not slide d. * Psal. 7. 8.

a (i.e.) Plead my Cause, or give Sentence for me; as this Phrase is commonly used, as Psal. 10. 18. and 43. 1. and 72. 4. Isa. 1. 17. I can obtain no right from Men. The Supream and subordinate Magistrates, are mine implacable and resolved Enemies. Do thou therefore do me Justice against them. b For though they accuse me of many Crimes, they can prove none of them, and thou and mine own Conscience, and theirs too are Witnesses for me, that my Carriage towards them hath been innocent and unblameable. c I have committed my Cause and Affairs to thee, as to a just Judge and merciful Father, and my Hope and Trust is fixed upon thee alone. d Therefore thou wilst not deceive my Trust, but wilst uphold me against all mine Enemies. For thou hast promised to save those that trust in thee. Or, that I shall not slide or fall. So this declares the matter of his Trust.

2. * Examine me, O LORD, and prove me e; try my reins and my heart. * Psal. 7. 8. & 17. 3. & 66. 10. & 139. 23. Zech. 13. 9.

e Because it is possible, that I may deceive my self, and be partial in my Cause, or at least, mine Enemies will so judge of me, I appeal to thee, O thou Judge of Hearts, and beg that thou would search and try me, by such ways and means as thou seest fit, and make me known to my self, and to the World, and convince mine Enemies of mine integrity.

3. For thy loving kindness is before mine eyes f: and I have walked in thy truth g.

f I dare appeal to thee with this Confidence, because thou knowest that I have a true and deep Sence of thy Loving kindness to me upon mine Heart, by which I have been obliged, and in a manner constrained to Love and Obey thee, and in all things to approve my Heart and ways to thee, and to abstain from all such evil Practices, as mine Enemies Charge me with, whereby I should have forfeited thy Loving Kindness, which I prize more than Life, Psal. 63. 3. and exposed my self to thy just Displeasure. My Experience of and Trust in thy Goodness, doth fully satisfie and support me, that I neither do nor need to use any indirect or irregular Courses for my Relief. g (i.e.) According to thy Word, which is oft called Truth, as Psal. 119. 142, 151. Joh. 17. 17. 19. believing its Promises, and observing its Precepts and Directions; and not according to the Course of the World, as it follows.

4. * I have not sate h with vain persons i, neither will I go in k with † dissemblers l. * Psal. 1. 1. Jer. 15. 17. † Heb. close persons.

h (i.e.) Chosen or used to Converse with them: for sitting is a posture of Ease and of Continuance. I have been so far from an Approbation, or Imitation of the wicked Courses (wherewith mine Enemies reproach me) that I have avoided ed even their Company, and if accidentally I came into it, yet I would not abide in it. (i.e.) With Lyars, or false and deceitful Persons, as the next Clause explains it. And Vanity is very frequently put for Falshood or Lying. k Into their Company, or with design to joyn in their Counsels or Courses, as the same Word is used, Jos. 23. 7. And Conversation is oft expressed by going out and coming in. l Heb. with such as hide themselves, covering their Crafty and wicked Designs with fair Pretences. I abhor such Persons and Practises; though I am accused to be such an one.

5. I have hated the congregation of evil doers m: and will not sit with the wicked.

m Either, 1. Their whole Ranck or Society. I have an Antipathy against all such Persons, without any Exception. Or, 2. To meet and joyn with them, in their Assemblies and Consultations, or sit with them, as it follows.

*Exod. 30. 20. Psal. 73. 13.

6. I will * wash mine hands in innocency n: so will I compass thine altar o, O LORD.

n Or, with Integrity, Or with a pure Heart and Conscience. I will not do, as my Hypocritical Enemies do, who Content themselves with those outward washings of their Hands, Or Bodies prescribed in the Law, Exod. 29. 4, &c. Deut. 21. 6. Heb. 9. 10. whilst their Hearts and Lives are filthy and abominable. But I will wash or I have washed my Hands, and withal purged my Heart and Conscience from dead Works. Compare Isa 1. 15, 16. 1 Tim. 2. 8. o (i.e.) Approach to thine Altar with my Sacrifices: Which I could not do with any Comfort or Confidence, if I were Conscious to my self of those Crimes, whereof mine Enemies accuse me. For the Phrase of Compassing the Altar, Either, 1. He alludes to some Levitical Custom of going about the Altar, as the Priests did in the Oblation of their Sacrifices, and the People, especially those of them who were most devout and Zealous, who possibly moved from place to place, but still within their own Court, that they might better discern what was done on the several sides of the Altar, and so be the more affected with it. Or rather, 2. He implies that he would offer many Sacrifices together, which would employ the Priests round about the Altar, and so he is said to Compass it, because the Priests did it in his Name, and upon his Account, as Persons are very oft said in Scripture to Offer those Sacrifices, which the Priests offer for them.

7. That I may publish p with the voyce of thanksgiving q, and tell of all thy wondrous works.

p Or, Proclaim, to wit, thy wondrous Works, as it here follows. q Accompanying my Sacrifices, with my own solemn Thanksgivings and Songs of Praise.

8. LORD, I have loved the habitation of thy house r and the place † where thine honour s dwelleth.

† Heb. of the Tabernacle of thy honour.

r (i.e.) This Sanctuary and Worship: which is an Evidence of my Piety to thee, as I have given many proofs of my Justice and Integrity towards men. Nothing is more grievous to me than to be hindred, from seeing and serving thee there. s Or, thy Glory, Either, 1. the Ark so called, 1 Sam. 4. 22. Psal. 78. 61. Or, 2. Thy glorious and gracious presence, Or the manifestation of thy Glory, or of thy glorious Power, and Faithfulness, and Goodness.

‖ Or, Take not away, Psal. 28. 3. † Heb. men of Blood.

9. ‖ Gather not my soul t with sinners u, nor my life with † bloody men.

t (i.e.) My Life, as it is explained in the next Clause. Do not bind me up in the same Bundle, nor put me into the same accursed, and miserable Condition with them. Seeing I have had so great an Antipathy against them, in the whole Course of my Life, v. 4, 5. let me not dye their Death, as Balaam on the contrary desired to dy the Death of the Righteous, Numb. 23. 10. And seeing I have loved thy House and Worship, and indeavoured to serve thee acceptably, not only with Ceremonial cleanness, but with moral purity of Heart and Life, v. 6, 7, 8. do not deal with me as thou wilst with those that are filled with ungodliness and unrighteousness, do not destroy me with them, the Righteous with the Wicked, Gen. 18. 23. but save me in the common Calamity, as thou hast promised and used to do in like Cases. The Hebrew word, Asaph, rendred gathering, is oft put for taking away, as Gen. 30. 23. Isa. 4. 1. Jer. 8. 13. and 16. 5. and that by Destruction or Death, as 1 Sam. 15. 6. Isa. 57. 1. Jer. 8. 13. Ezek. 34. 29. Hosea. 4. 3. The ground of which Phrase may be either, because by death mens Souls or Spirits are gathered and returned to God, Eccles. 12. 7. who had dispersed them all the World over; or because the several sorts of Men, good and bad, which live here together Promiscuously, are there severed, and all of one sort of them gathered together, unto their Fathers or People, as it is expressed, Gen. 15. 15. Numb. 20. 24. 2 Kings 22. 20. Comp. Heb. 12. 23. u Profligate and Obstinate sinners, as the following Words describe them, such being oft called sinners by way of Eminency, as 1 Sam. 15. 18. Psal. 1. 1. and 104. 35. Isa. 1. 28. and 33. 14.

10. In whose hands is mischief x: and their right hand y is † full of bribes.

11. But as for me, I will walk in mine Integrity: redeem me, and be merciful unto me.

x Who not only imagin Mischief in their Hearts, but persist in it, and execute it with their Hands. y Which should be stretched out to execute Justice, and punish Offenders.

12. My foot standeth in * an even place z: in the Congregations will I bless the LORD ‖.

* Psal. 27. 11.

z Heb. in Rectitude, or in a Right or Streight, or Plain, or even Place. Which may be understood, Either, 1. Civilly, or in regard of his outward Condition. So this is opposed to the slippery places, in which wicked men are said to be, Psal. 35. 6. and 73. 18. Jer. 23. 12. and the Sence is, I stand upon a sure and solid Foundation, where I fear no fall, nor to be overthrown by the assaults of mine Enemies, being under the Protection of God's promise, and his Almighty and watchful Providence. Or, 2. Morally, or in regard of his Conversation. So the Sence is, I do and will persist or continue (which is oft signifyed by Standing, as Psal. 1. 1.) in my plain, and righteous, and streight Course of Life, not using those Frauds and wicked Arts, and perverse and crooked Paths, which mine Enemies chuse and walk in, or whereof they do falsly accuse me. And so this is the same thing for Substance, with his walking in his Integrity, expressed in the foregoing Verse, as also v. 1. I will not only privately acknowledge, but publickly, and in the Assemblies of thy people celebrate thy Praises, both for thy Grace, inabling and inclining to chuse and Love, and persevere in the ways of Holiness and Righteousness, and for thy Protection hitherto afforded to me in the midst of all my Dangers and Troubles, and for that well-grounded assurance which thou hast given me, of thy Favour, and of my future Deliverance.

PSAL. XXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

It is apparent from the Body of this Psalm, that David was not yet fully delivered from the Trouble which his Enemies gave him, both by their Slaunders and other ways. But whether it belong to that History which is recorded, 2 Sam. 21. 15, 16, 17. as the Jews conceive, whom some others follow, is wholly uncertain, and not necessary for us to know.

A Psalm of David.

1. THE LORD is * my light a, and my salvation, whom shall I fear? * the LORD is the strength of my life b, of whom shall I be afraid?

* Mich. 7. 8. * Psal. 118. 6.

2. When the wicked, even mine enemies, and my foes † came upon me to eat up my flesh c, they stumbled and fell.

† Heb. approached against me.

a (i.e.) My Counceltor in all my Difficulties, and my Comforter and Deliverer in all my Distresses. b (i.e.) The supporter and preserver of my Life. c Greedy to devour me at one Morsel. Comp. Job 19. 22. and 31. 31.

3. * Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear: though war should rise against me, in this d will I be confident.

* Psal. 3. 6.

d In that which I have now said, that God is my Light, &c. v. 1. and in the Experience of his Favour and Protection. v. 2.

4. One thing have I desired of the LORD e, that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my Life f, to behold ‖ the beauty of the LORD g, and to enquire h in his temple i.

‖ Or, the delight. Psal. 63. 2. & 90. 17.

e Though I am exercised with many Troubles, there is but one thing that I am very solicitous for, or desirous of, and that is not Victory, and Triumphs over all mine Enemies, assured Peace and Settlement in my Throne, the Wealth and Pleaſure, and Glory of enlarging, or Ruling my Empire: Or, if I have any deſire to any of thoſe things, it is chiefly for the ſake of that which here follows. f That I may not be diſturbed in, or driven from the Sanctuary and worſhip of God, as I have been, but may have opportunity of conſtant Attendance upon God. g That there I may Exerciſe and Delight my ſelf in the Contemplation of thy amiable and glorious Majeſty, and of thy infinite Wiſdom, Holineſs, Juſtice, Truth, Grace and Mercy, and other Perfections, which, though hid in a great meaſure from the World, are clearly manifeſted in thy Church and Ordinances. b Or, diligently to ſeek, either God's Face and Favour: Or his Mind and Will, and my own Duty: Or, the Lord's beauty, laſt mentioned, which is diſcovered more or leſs, as men are diligent, or negligent in ſeeking or enquiring into it. i (i. e.) In his Tabernacle; which he here and elſewhere calls his Temple, becauſe it was the ſame thing for Subſtance; and becauſe his Thoughts and Affections did conſtantly and eagerly run out upon the Temple, and ſince he was not permitted to build the thing, he would at leaſt take occaſion to ſolace himſelf with the Name, and thereby to enter his Proteſt, of his earneſt deſire to build it, if God had ſeen it fit.

5. For † * in the time of trouble he ſhall hide me k in his pavilion: in the ſecret of his tabernacle l ſhall he hide me, he ſhall ſet me up upon a rock m.

k Or, hath hid me: Or, uſeth to hide me. Juſtly do I prize the Houſe and Service of God ſo highly, both becauſe I have ſuch vaſt Obligations to him, for his former Protection and Favours, and becauſe all my Hope and Confidence, and ſecurity depends upon him. l In his Tabernacle, into which mine Enemies cannot come, and a ſecret place in it, where, if they come, they cannot find me. Or, as it were (for the Note of ſimilitude is oft underſtood) in the ſecret of his Tabernacle, (i. e.) In as ſafe a place as the Holy of Holies, which is called God's ſecret, Ezek. 7. 22. where none might come but the High-Prieſt, and he but one day in a year. He alludes to the antient Cuſtom of Offenders, who uſed to flee to the Tabernacle or Altar, where they eſteemed themſelves ſafe, 1 Kings 2. 28. m A place high and inacceſſable, ſtrong and impregnable.

6. And now ſhall mine head be lifted up above mine enemies n round about me: therefore will I offer in his tabernacle ſacrifices * of joy o, I will ſing, yea, I will ſing praiſes unto the LORD.

* Heb. of ſhouting.

7. Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voyce: have mercy alſo upon me, and anſwer me.

n He will advance me above them, and give me a compleat Victory over them. o Or, of ſhouting or reſounding; (i. e.) Of Thankſgiving: Which were accompanied with the ſound of Trumpets and other Inſtruments, Numb. 10. 10. 1 Chron. 16. 41, 42. Pſal. 33. 3.

‖ Or, my Heart ſaid unto thee, ſeek ye my Face, &c.

8. ‖ When thou ſaidſt p, ſeek ye my face q; my heart ſaid unto thee r, thy face, LORD, will I ſeek.

p Either by thy Word, Commanding and inviting me ſo to do: Or by thy Spirit, directing and inclining me to it. q (i.e.) Seek my Preſence and Favour, and Help, by Fervent and faithful Prayer. r My heart readily and thankfully Complyed with the Motion; and upon the encouragement of this Command, or Invitation and Promiſe couched in it, I reſolved I would do ſo, and do ſo at this time. But this Verſe is a little otherwiſe rendered by divers learned Men. And the words lye in another Order in the Hebrew Text, which runs thus: To thee my Heart ſaid, Thou haſt ſaid, (which Verb may well be underſtood here, as it is alſo, 1 Kings 20. 34. and as divers other Verbs are underſtood in the ſacred Text, as Levit. 24. 8. 2 Sam. 18. 12. and 23. 17. Compare with 1 Chron. 11. 19. and in many other places: which is not ſtrange in ſo Conciſe and ſhort a Language, as the Hebrew is) Seek ye my Face, (This is thy great Command ſo oft and ſo vehemently urged, as containing the very Subſtance and Foundation of all true Piety) Thy Face Lord I will ſeek. I cheerfully do, & will Obey thy Command therein: Or the Verſe may be thus tranſlated without any Supplement, which, where it can be done, is confeſſedly the beſt way of Tranſlation, Concerning thee) as the Particle Lamed is oft uſed: Or, For; or, Inſtead of thee, as it is unqueſtionably uſed, Gen. 11. 3. Exod. 13. 16. Prov. 21. 18. (i. e.) In thy Name and Words, and according to thy Mind) My Heart ſaid, (To wit, to, or within my ſelf, as the Word ſaid, is frequently taken, (i. e.) I ſeriouſly conſider within my ſelf this following Command of thine oft inculcated in thy Word, and preſs it upon my own Conſcience) Seek ye my Face; Thy Face Lord will I ſeek. Thou commandeſt it, and I will obey thee therein.

9. Hide not thy face s far from me, put not thy ſervant away t in anger: thou haſt been my help, leave me not, neither forſake me, O God of my ſalvation.

s Which I in obedience to thy Command am now ſeeking. t To wit, from thy Face or Preſence, or from the place of thy Worſhip, from which he either now was, or formerly had been driven two ways, God and he might be parted, either by God's departure, or withdrawing from him, which he might do even in the place of his Worſhip; or by God's putting him away from his Preſence. Againſt the firſt he ſeems to direct his Prayer in the firſt Clauſe, and againſt the Latter in this.

Or, his Father and Mother were now Dead. Or by his Father and Mother he may ſignifie his near Relations and Friends, which forſook him in the time of Trouble, as Men uſually do. z (i. e.) What Courſe I ſhall take to pleaſe thee, and to diſcharge my Duty, and to ſave my ſelf from Ruine. a Of which ſee the Note, on Pſal. 26. 2. where the Hebrew words are the ſame. b That I may neither open their Mouths againſt me or Religion, by my Miſcarriages, nor fall into their Hands by my folly, nor give them any occaſion of Triumphing over me.

* Pſal. 35. 11.

12. Deliver me not over unto the will c of mine enemies: for * falſe witneſſes are riſen up againſt me, and ſuch as breath out cruelty d.

c Or, Luſt or Deſire: Heb. Soul: which is ſo taken, Pſal. 41. 2. and 78. 18. Ezek. 16. 27. d He preſſeth his requeſt from the quality of his Enemies, who were both falſe and Cruel, and in both Reſpects hateful to God and Men.

13. I had fainted e, unleſs I had believed to ſee the goodneſs of the LORD f in the land of the living g.

e Theſe words are added to compleat the Sence. For the Speech is abrupt and imperfect, as is very uſual, not only in the Holy Scripture, but in many other Authors, in all vehement Paſſions or Commotions of Mind, ſuch as David was in at this time. Having declared what perfidious and cruel Enemies did now aſſault and encompaſs him, he now ſubjoyns what impreſſion the thoughts thereof made upon him, and ſpeaks like one that wanted Words to expreſs how ſad and deſperate his Condition would have been, if he had not been ſupported by Faith in God's promiſes. f To enjoy (which is oft expreſſed by ſeeing) the Mercy which God hath promiſed me. g (i. e.) In this World, which is oft ſo called, as Job 28. 13. Pſal. 52. 5. and 116. 9. and 142. 5. Iſa. 38. 11. and 53. 8. Jer. 11. 19. Ezek. 32. 32. and is oppoſed to the Grave, which is the place of the Dead. And David was thus earneſtly deſirous of this Mercy in this Life, not becauſe he placed his Portion in theſe things, which he ſo ſolemnly Diſclaims, Pſal. 17. 14. but becauſe the Truth and Glory of God, were highly concerned in making good the Promiſe of the Kingdom made to him.

* Pſal. 31. 24. & 130. 5. Iſa. 25. 9. Hab. 2. 3. ‖ Or, let thine Heart be ſtrong. So Gr.

14. * Wait on the LORD h: be of good courage, and ‖ he ſhall ſtrengthen thine heart i: wait, I ſay, on the LORD.

h O my Soul: to which he now turneth his Speech; as he frequently doth in this Book. i He will uphold thee, and keep thee from fainting and ſinking under thy Burdens.

PSAL. XXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm seems to be made upon the same Occasion with the former, and is mixed, as many others of his Psalms are, of Hopes and Fears, of Prayers and Praises.

A Psalm of David.

1. UNto thee will I cry, O LORD my rock, be not silent a † to me: * lest if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit b.

†Heb from me. *Psal. 143. 7.

a Be not deaf to my Prayers, nor dumb as to thy Answers to them. b (i. e.) Left I be in the like or same Condition with them, (i. e.) A lost Creature: as I shall certainly be, if thou dost not succour me.

2. Hear the voyce of my supplications, when I cry unto thee: when I lift up my hands ‖ towards thy holy oracle c.

‖ Or, towards the Oracle of thy Sanctuary.

c (i. e.) Towards the Holy of Holies, which is so called, 1 Kings 6. 23. Comp. with 2 Chron. 3. 10. Compare also 1 Kings 6. 5. and 8. 6 because there the Ark was; from whence God gave Oracular Answers to his People; and to which they accordingly directed their Prayers, not only when they drew near to it, but when they were at a distance from it, as Dan. 6. 10.

3. Draw me not away with the wicked d, and with the workers of iniquity: * which speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief is in their heart e.

*Psal. 12. 2. & 55. 21. & 62. 4. Jer. 9. 8.

d The Sence is, Either, 1. Do not suffer me to be drawn away by their Counsel, or Example to imitate their evil Courses. For God is oft said to do that which he doth not Effect, but only permit and Order, as 2 Sam. 12. 12. Or, 2. Do not draw me into the same snares and mischief with them; do not drag me, as thou dost or wilt do all these Malefactors, to Execution, and Destruction. Let me not dye the Death of the wicked; Comp. Psal. 26. 9. Thus drawing is used for drawing to Death. Job 21. 33. Ezek. 32. 20. This seems best to suit with the following Context, wherein he imprecateth and foretelleth that Destruction upon his Enemies, which he depricated for himself. e Which are Hypocritical and perfidious Persons, whilst I through thy Grace am upright and sincere. Seeing then I am so unlike them in disposition and practice, let me not be made like them in their Ruine.

4. Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours f: give them after the work of their hands, render to them their desert.

f David useth these imprecations partly to Vindicate himself from the slanders of his Enemies, who reported him to be as wicked as they were, only more close and cunning therein; which if he had been, he had bitterly cursed himself; which it could not reasonably be presumed that he would do: Partly, from his great and long Experience of their implacable and incorrigible Malignity, not only against him, but against God, and his declared Will, and against all truly good Men, and that covered with Pretences of Piety to God, and of Peaceableness towards their Neighbours, v. 3. which made their wickedness more inexcusable and detestable: Partly by the instinct and direction of God's Spirit, by whose inspiration he uttered this, as well as the rest of the Psalm, and partly, that hereby he might provoke them to repentance; for this Curse belongs only to those who shall obstinately persist in their wicked Courses. Add to all this, that as Verbs of the Imperative Mood are oft used by the Hebrews for Futures, so these may not be proper imprecations, but predictions of their Destruction.

5. Because they regard not the works of the LORD, nor the operation of his hands g, he shall destroy them, and not build them up h.

g (i.e.) The providential works of God, both for and towards his Church and People in general; the serious Observation whereof would have made them afraid of opposing them, and desirous to joyn themselves with them, and for and towards me in particular, concerning whose Succession to the Kingdom, God hath so expressly declared his Mind and Will, and to whom he hath given so many, and such wonderful Preservations, that they who will not acknowledge it, but continue to oppose it, may well be presumed to be Guilty of Rebellion against God's Will, and of the Contempt of his Providence. h (i. e.) Destroy them utterly and irrecoverably; because they wilfully shut their Eyes against the Light of Gods Word, and Works.

6. Blessed be the LORD, because he hath heard i the voyce of my supplications.

7. The LORD is my strength and my shield, my heart trusted in him, and I am helped; therefore my heart greatly rejoyceth, and with my song will I praise him.

i He speaks of it as past, either because God had in part heard, and answered him already. Or, because God assured him by his Spirit, that he had heard and accepted his prayers, and would assuredly answer him in due time.

8. The LORD is ‖ their strength k, and he is the † saving strength l of his anointed m.

‖ Or, his strength, † Heb. strength of Salvations.

k (i. e.) The strength of his people, mentioned in the next Verse: the Relative being put before the Antecedent, which is left to be gathered out of the following matter, as it is, Numb. 24. 17. Psal. 87. 1. Or, his strength: for the Hebrew Affix Mo, which commonly is plural, is sometimes taken singularly: of which see my Latin Synopsis here, and on Isa. 53. 8. And his. (i. e.) Of his anointed, as the next Clause explains it. Or, the words may be thus rendered, strength is, Or, belongs to the Lord, Heb. The Lord, strength is his, Or, to him. It is an Hebrew Heteroclite. m Heb. The strength of the Preservations, or Deliverances, or Victories, or Salvations, (i. e.) He, by whose strength alone he hath got these Victories, &c. m (i. e.) Of me whom he hath anointed to be King, whom therefore he will defend, he speaks of himself in the third Person, which is usual in the Hebrew Tongue.

9. Save thy people, and bless thine inheritance n: ‖ feed them also, and lift them up o for ever.

n Israel, for whom I pray, partly, because thou hast in some sort committed them to my Charge: and partly, because Saul did not take due care of them. o Raise them out of their low and afflicted Condition, in which they are, by reason of Saul's weakness and neglect, and by the prevailing power of the Philistins, and advance them to a state of safety and Honour, and that not for a season, but with Constancy and Perpetuity, as it follows.

PSAL. XXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

It is supposed that this Psalm was made upon the occasion of some terrible tempest of Thunder and Rain: which God might possibly send in the time of Battel to assist David, and discomfit his Enemies; as he had done formerly upon like Occasions. It contains an Admonition to the Potentates of the Earth, and especially to those who bordered upon the Land of Israel, that they would own and Worship the true God: which ~~which~~ he presseth from the great Majesty, and Power of Israel's God above all other Gods, and particularly, from that great and glorious instance thereof in Thunder: which hath struck the prondest Monarchs with the dread of that God, whom at other times they despised.

A Psalm of David.

1. GIve * unto the LORD, O † ‖ ye mighty a, give unto the LORD b glory and strength c.

*1 Chr. 16. 28, 29. Psal. 96. 7, 8, 9. † Heb. ye Sons of the mighty. ‖ Or, of God.

a Ye Potentates and Rulers of the Earth. To these he addresseth his Speech; Partly, because they are most apt to forget and contemn God, and insolently to assume a kind of Deity to themselves: and Partly, because their Conviction and Conversion was likely to have a great and powerful influence upon their people. b By an humble and thankful acknowledgment of it: for other ways we can give nothing to God. c (i. e.) The glory of his strength or power, which is the Attribute set forth in this Psalm: Or, his glorious strength.

2. Give unto the LORD † the glory due unto unto his name d: Worship the LORD ‖ in the beauty of holiness e.

‖ Or, in his glorious Sanctuary.

d (i. e.) The Honour which he deserves: which is to prefer him before all other Gods, and to forsake all others, and to own him as the Almighty, and the only true God. e Or, of the Sanctuary, which is commonly called by this Name; in his Holy and Beautiful House, as it is called, Isa. 64. 11. the only place where he will receive Worship. So he exhorts them, to turn Proselytes to the Jewish Religion; which was their Duty and Interest.

3. The voyce of the LORD f is upon the waters g: the God of glory thundereth, the LORD is upon ‖ many waters h.

f (i. e.) Thunder, as is manifest from the next Clauses and the following Effects: which is oft called the Lords voyce, as Exod. 9. 23, 28, 29. Job 37. 4, 5. Psal. 18. 14. and 46. g Either, 1. Upon the Seas where its noise spreads far and wide, and is very Terrible. But the following Verses speak of the Effects of it, upon the Earth only. Or rather, 2. Above in the Clouds, which are called Waters, Gen. 1. 7. Psal. 18. 11. because they are of a watry Substance. And this Circumstance is Considerable here, to magnifie the Divine power, which displayeth it self in those high places, which are far above the reach of all Earthly Potentates, and from whence he can easily & unavoidably smite all that dwell upon the Earth, and will not submit to him. h (i. e.) Upon the Clouds, in which there are vast Treasures of water, and upon which God is said to sit, or ride, Psal. 18. 10, 11. and 104. 3.

4. The voyce of the LORD is † powerful: the voyce of the LORD is † full of majesty i, † Heb. in Power.

† Heb. in Majesty.

i Is an evident Proof of God's glorious Majesty.

5. The voyce of the LORD breaketh the cedars k: yea, the LORD breaketh the cedars of Lebanon l.

k By Thunder-bolts; which have oft thrown down Trees and Towers. l A place Famous for strong and lofty Cedars. See 2 Chron. 2. 8. Cant. 3. 9. and 5. 15.

6. He maketh them m also to skip like a calf, Lebanon and * Syrion n like a young unicorn o.

* Deut. 3. 9.

m The Cedars last mentioned: which being broken by the Thunder, the parts of them are suddenly and violently hurled about hither and thither. n An high Mountain beyond Jordan, joyning to Lebanon: of which see Deut. 3. 9. and 4. 48. Lebanon and Syrion are here understood: Either, 1. Properly: and so they are said to skip, Or, leap, both here, and Psal. 114. 4. by a poetical Hyperbole very usual, both in Scripture and other Authors: Which is so known that it is needless to give any instances of it. Or, 2. Metonymically for the Trees or people of them, as the Wilderness, v. 8. may seem to be taken; and as the Earth, by the same Figure is frequently put for the people, which dwell in it. o Heb. Reem: Of which see in Numb. 23. 22. Psal. 22. 21.

7. The voyce of the LORD † divideth p the flames of fire.

† Heb. cutteth out.

p Heb. Heweth out (i. e.) It breaketh out of the Clouds, and thereby makes way for the Lightnings, which are suddenly dispersed over the face of the Earth.

8. the voyce of the LORD, shaketh the wilderness q: the LORD shaketh the wilderness of Kadesh r.

q (i. e.) Either the Trees, or rather the Beasts of the Wilderness, by a Metonymy as before, v. 6. Compare this with the next Verse. r Which he mentions as an eminent Wilderness, vast and Terrible, and well known to the Israelites, Numb. 20. 1, 16. and wherein possibly they had seen, and observed some such Effects of Thunder, as are here mentioned.

9. The voyce of the LORD maketh the hinds ‖ to calve s, and discovereth t the forests: and u in his temple † doth every one speak of his glory.

‖ Or, to be in pain.
† Or, every whit of it uttereth, &c.

s Through the Terror which it causeth, which hastens the Birth in these and other places: See 1 Sam. 4. 19. He nameth the Hinds, because they bring forth their young with Difficulty, Job 39. 1, 2. t Heb. maketh bare, Either of its Trees, which it either breaks or strips off their Leaves: Or, of the Beasts, which it forceth to run into their Dens. u Or, but Having shewed the Terrible effects of God's power in other places, he now shews the blessed priviledge of God's people, that are praising and glorifying God, and receiving the Comfortable influences of his Grace in his Temple, when the rest of the World are Trembling under the Tokens of his Displeasure. By which he secretly invites and perswades the Gentiles, for their own safety and comfort, to own the true God, and to Worship him in his Sanctuary, as he did exhort them, v. 2. Or, therefore, (i. e.) Because of these and such like Discoveries, of Gods excellent Majesty and Power, his people fear and praise, and adore him in his Temple.

10. The LORD sitteth upon the flood x: yea, * the LORD sitteth King for ever.

* Psal. 10. 16.

x He moderateth and ruleth (which is oft signified by sitting, this being the posture of a Judge, or Ruler: of which see Psal. 9. 7, 8, 9. and 47. 9. Joel 3. 12.) the most abundant and violent inundations of Waters, which sometimes fall from the Clouds upon the Earth; where they would do much Mischief, if God did not prevent it. And these are here fitly mentioned, as being many times the Companions of great Thunders. And this may be alledged as another Reason, why God's people did praise and Worship him in his Temple, because as he sendeth terrible Tempests and Thunders, and Floods; so he also restrains and over-rules them. But most Interpreters refer this to Noah's Flood, to whom the Word here used, is elsewere Appropriated. And so the Words may be rendred, The Lord did sit upon, Or, at the Flood, in Noah's time. When it is probable those vehement Rains were accompanied with terrible Thunders. And so having spoken of the Manifestation of God's power, in Storms and Tempests in general, he takes an occasion to run back to that Ancient and most dreadful Example of that kind, in which the Divine Power was most Eminently seen. And having mentioned that instance, he Adds, that as God shewed himself to be the King, and the Judge of the World at that time, so he doth still sit, and will sit as King for ever, sending such Tempests when it pleaseth him. And therefore his people have great Reason to Worship and Serve him.

11. The LORD will give strength y unto his people; the LORD will bless his people with peace z.

y To support and preserve them in the most dreadful Tempests, and Consequently in all other Dangers, and against all their Enemies. z Though now he sees fit to exercise them with some Troubles.

PSAL. XXX.

A Psalm and song a, at the dedication of the house of David b.

a Or, a Psalm of Song; (i. e.) Either, 1. A Psalm to be sung with the voyce to an Instrument. Or, 2. A Psalm of joy and praise: for so this is. And this Hebrew word, Schir, may be here taken not simply for a Song, but for a joyfull Song, as it is, Gen. 31. 27. Exod. 15. 1. Psal. 33. 3. and 42. 8. Prov. 25. 20. Isa. 30. 29. Amos 8. 3, 10. b Either, 1. At the Dedication of the Temple, called the House, Or, that House, Eminently and Emphatically. So the Chaldee Paraphrast and the Hebrew Doctors understand it. And then the last Words, of David, are to be joyned with the first, a Psalm and Song. But this seems not probable; because the Temple was not built by David, nor in his days. Although he might prescribe a Psalm to be used afterwards upon that occasion. Or, 2. At the Dedication of David's House, which was built, 2 Sam. 5. 11. and doubtless was Dedicated, as God had commanded; See Deut. 20. 5. Nehem. 12. 27. Or, 3. At the second Dedication of David's House, after it had been polluted by Absolom and his Concubines. But there is no Law of God, for any Re-Dedication of Houses in such Cases; nor any Evidence that David did so. And indeed it seems strange, if this Psalm was made upon this occasion. Or, upon any of these Dedications here mentioned, that there should not be one Line in it sutable to that occasion. Others therefore make these Words, the Dedication of the House, not to note the Matter of this Psalm or Song; but Either, 1. The name of the Tune to which this Song was sung, which was the same that David used at the Dedication of his House: and so this gives us a Reason, why the word Song is added to that of Psalm, and why this Psalm was called, the Song of the Dedication. Or, 2. The time when it was sung; which was at the Dedication of David's House. For such Dedications were performed in a very Solemn manner, with divers Rites and Prayers, and Praises to God, as the Nature of that Business required. And it seems probable from the Matter of this Psalm, Compared with the Title, that David had about this time been delivered from some Eminent distresses, and particularly from some dangerous sickness. For which he here gives thanks to God, taking Advantage of this publick and Solemn occasion.

1. I will

1. I Will extol thee, O LORD, for thou hast lifted me up c, and hast not made my foes to rejoyce over me d.

c Or, drawn up, to wit, out of the deep Pit, or Waters, to which great Dangers and Afflictions are frequently Compared. d Which they both desired, and Confidently expected an occasion to do.

2. O LORD my God, I cryed unto thee, and thou hast healed me e.

e (i. e.) Delivered me from the Fears and Troubles of my Mind, which are oft compared to Diseases, and from very dangerous Distempers of my Body.

*Psal. 71. 20. & 86. 13. †Heb. Hell, so Gr.

3. O LORD, *thou hast brought up my soul from †the grave f: thou hast kept me alive g that I should not go down to the pit h.

f My deliverance is a kind of Resurrection from the Grave, upon the very brink whereof I was. g This he adds to explain the former Phrase, which was ambiguous. h (i. e.) into the Grave which is oft called, the Pit, as Psal. 28. 1. and 69. 15. and 88. 4. Isa. 38. 17.

*Psal. 97. 12. ‖Or, to the Memorial.

4. Sing unto the LORD, O ye saints of his, and *give thanks ‖ at the remembrance of his holiness i.

i Or, at the mention, &c. When you call to mind, or when others Celebrate, as I do this day, the Holiness of God's Nature; which he Demonstrates by his Works, by his Faithfulness, Care, and Kindness towards his holy Ones.

†Heb. there is but a moment in his Anger. *Isa. 26. 20. & 54. 7, 8. 2 Cor. 4. 17. † Heb. in the Evening. †Heb. singing.

5. For † * his anger endureth but a moment k, in his favour is life l: weeping may endure † for a night, but † joy cometh in the morning m.

k Commonly the Afflictions which he sends upon his People are short; and last but for a few moments of their Lives. l Or, Life (i. e.) Our whole Life, is in his Favour, (i. e.) He heapeth his Favours upon them, for the greatest part of their present Lives, and in the next Life which endures for ever; of which the Chaldee paraphrast, expounds this place. And indeed without the Consideration of eternal Life, the difference between the duration of the Afflictions, and of the happiness of God's people, were neither so Evident nor Considerable, as David here makes it. Life is oft put for a long and Happy time, as Psal. 34. 12. and 133. 3. Prov. 3. 2. and for an eternal and immortal Duration, 2 Tim. 1. 10. Jam. 1. 12. And in Civil Affairs, Estates for Life are opposed to those that are but for a short time. m (i. e.) It comes speedily and in due season.

*Job 29. 18.

6. And * in my prosperity I said, I shall never be moved n.

n I thought my self past all Danger of further Changes, forgetting my own frailty, and the uncertainty of all Worldly things.

‖Heb. settled strength for my Mountain. *Psal. 46. 4, 5. & 48. 1, 2, 3. & 87. 5. *Psal. 104. 29.

7. LORD, by thy favour thou hast † made my * mountain to stand strong o, thou * didst hide thy face p, and I was troubled q.

8. I cryed to thee, O LORD; and unto the LORD I made supplication.

o Thou hast so firmly setled me in my Kingdom: which he calls his Mountain; Partly, because Kingdoms are usually called Mountains in Prophetical writings, as Psal. 46. 3, 4. Isa. 2. 2. Jer. 51. 25. Dan. 2. 34, 35, 44. 45. and Partly, with respect to Mount Sion, where he built his Royal Palace, the Dedication whereof is mentioned in the Title of the Psalm. p (i. e.) Withdraw thy Favour and Help. q I was quickly brought into such Distresses of Body, and Anxiety of Mind, that I saw the Vanity of all my Carnal Confidences.

*Psal. 6. 5. & 88. 11. & 115. 17.

9. What profit is there r in my blood s, when I go down to the pit t? * shall the dust praise thee? shall it declare thy truth?

10. Hear O LORD, and have mercy upon me: LORD, be thou my helper.

r To wit, unto thee, as the latter part of the Verse explains it. What wilt thou gain by it? s (i. e.) In my violent Death, as Blood is frequently used, as Gen. 37. 26. Numb. 35. 33. Jos. 20. 3. 1 Sam. 25. 26. 33. Mat. 27. 6. t When I dy. See above, on v. 3. Shall they that are Dead, or gone down into the Dust, celebrate thy Faithfulness and Goodness in the Land of the Living? Or, shall my Dust or Dead Corps praise thee? No Lord, shouldest thou cut me off in the beginning of my Reign, thy Name would lose the Praises, which many will return to thee for my Life, and be exposed to Reproaches, as if thou hadst not kept thy Word with me: and I should lose those Opportunities of praising thy Name, and serving my Generation, which I prize above my Life.

11. *Thou hast turned u for me my mourning into dancing: thou hast put off my sackcloth x, and girded me with gladness y.

*Isa. 61. 3.

u Having related his Prayer, he now declares the gracious Answer which God gave him. x (i. e.) Given me occasion to put off that Sackcloth; which they used to wear in times of Mourning. See Esth. 4. 1. Psal. 35. 13. Isa. 32. 11. Joel 1. 13. y Either with Garments of Gladness or Rejoycing. Or, with joy, as with a Garment surrounding me, on every side; as he is for the like Reason, said to be girded with strength, Psal. 18. 32.

12. To the end that ‖ my glory z may sing praise to thee, and not be silent; O LORD my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

‖ That is, my Tongue, Or, my Soul.

z My Soul: Or, rather my Tongue, to which both singing and silence most properly belong. See on Psal. 7. 5. and 16. 9.

PSAL. XXXI.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was Composed either, when David was in great Distress; Or afterwards in remembrance thereof, and of God's singular Goodness in delivering him out of it, whence it is mixed of Prayers and Praises, of Hopes and Fears. But what those particular Troubles were, which David here speaks, is only matter of Conjecture, and therefore I shall rather omit, than Confidently determine.

To the chief musician, a Psalm of David.

1. IN * thee, O LORD, do I put my trust, let me never be ashamed a: * deliver me in thy righteousness b.

* Psal. 22. 5. Isa. 49. 23. * Psal. 143. 1.

a To wit, of my Confidence in thy Promises. b (i. e.) By or For. Or, according to thy Faithfulness and Goodness; both which come oft under the Name of Righteousness.

2. Bow down thine ear to me, deliver me speedily c: be thou † my strong rock, for an house † of defence to save me.

†Heb. to me for a Rock of strength. †Heb. of Fortresses.

c Because of the greatness and urgency of my Danger, which is even ready to swallow me up.

3. For thou art my rock, and my fortress: therefore * for thy names sake d, lead me, and guide me e.

*psal. 23. 3.

4. Pull me out of the net, that they have laid privily for me: for thou art my strength.

d For the Glory of thy Name, (i. e.) Of thy Power and Truth, and Mercy to thy miserable Servant. e Two words expressing the same thing with more Emphasis, direct me clearly, and continually in a right and safe Path; for without thy Conduct, I can neither discern the right way, or continue in it.

5. * Into thine hand f I commit my spirit g: thou hast redeemed me h, O LORD God of truth. i.

* Luk. 23. 46

f (i. e.) To thy Care and Custody. g (i. e.) My Soul or Life called a Man's Spirit, as Eccles. 3. 21. and 12. 7, &c. Either, 1. To receive it: for my Case is almost Desperate, and I am ready to give up the Ghost. Or, 2. To preserve it from the Plots and Malice of mine Enemies. h Thou hast delivered me formerly in great Dangers, and therefore I willingly and Cheerfully commit my self to thee, for the Future. i Who hast shewed thy self to be so to me, in making good thy promises.

6. I have hated them k * that regard l lying vanities m: but I trust in the LORD.

* Jon. 2. 8.

k Their very Persons not simply, but for their Wickedness.

ness. Compare Psal. 139. 21, 22. l Heb. that observe, to wit, with Respect to them, Dependence upon them, or Expectation of any good from them. m Or, most vain Vanities: Such as are foolish and deceitful, and fruitless. By which he understands, Either, 1. All Humane or Carnal Helps, any Arm of flesh; for he that trusteth therein is pronounced Cursed, Jer. 17. 5. and therefore is hateful. Or, 2. Idols, which are oft called Vanities, as Deut. 32. 21. Jer. 2. 5. and 8. 19. &c. Or 3. Curious Arts, and all sorts of Divinations by Stars, Or, the Motions, or Inwards of living Creatures, or by the Dead: which Practises were common and prevalent among those Eastern people, and by their Example, were too rife among the Israelites also, Isa. 2. 6. of whom he here speaks: for the Gentiles that observed these Vanities, he rather pitied than hated; but the Israelites that did so, were Apostates from God, and professed Enemies to him and his Laws, and therefore were the proper Objects of just hatred.

7. I will be glad and rejoyce in thy Mercy: for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known n my soul in adversities.

n (i. e.) Loved me, and cared for me, for Words of knowledge commonly imply affection.

8. And hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy o: * thou hast set my foot in a large room p.

* Psal. 4. 1. & 18. 19.

o Whereof I was in great and imminent Danger, if thou hadst not delivered me. See 1 Sam. 23. 7. p Made way for me to escape, when I was encompassed by them, and set me at Liberty.

9. Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble: mine eye is consumed with grief q, yea, my soul r, and my belly s.

q With continual weeping. See on Psal. 6. 8. r My sorrows are not Counterfeit or sleight, but inward and hearty; my Mind is oppressed, my Heart is ready to sink under my Burden. s (i. e.) My Bowels contained in my Belly; which are the seat of the Affections, and Fountains of support and Nourishment to the whole Body. Thus the whole Man, both Soul and Body, inside and outside, are consumed.

10. For my life t is spent with grief, and my years with sighing: my strength faileth, because of mine iniquity u, and my bones x are consumed y.

t (i. e.) The time of my Life, as the next Clause explains it. u Either through my deep and just Sence of my sins; which have provoked God to afflict me in this manner: Or, for the punishment of mine iniquity, as this word is frequently used. x In which my chief strength lyes. y The juice and Marrow of them, being almost dryed up with excessive grief.

11. I was a reproach z among all mine enemies, but * especially among my neighbours a, and a fear b to mine acquaintance: they that did see me without, fled from me c.

* Job 19. 13. Psal. 38. 11. & 88. 8, 18.

z (i. e.) The Matter of their Reproaches and Scorns. This, said they, is David, anointed to be King of Israel, a goodly Monarch indeed, forsaken by God and Men, and in a perishing and desperate Condition. He pretends great Piety to God, and Loyalty to Saul, but in Truth, he is a great Impostour, and a Traitor, and Rebel to his King. a Which aggravates their sin, and his Misery; Partly, because they were obliged by the Laws of Neighbourhood, to perform all friendly Offices to him; and Partly, because they were daily Witnesses of his Integrity, and therefore sinned against their own Knowledge. b Or, a Terror. They were afraid to give me any Countenance or Assistance, or to be seen in my Company; being warned by Abimelech's punishment for it, 1 Sam. 22. c Either, loathing me as a Monster of Men, and an unlucky Spectacle, and such a Villain as mine Enemies represented me, and they believed me to be: Or, to prevent their own Danger and Ruine, which might be occasioned by it.

12. I am forgotten d as a dead man e out of mind: I am like a † broken vessel f.

† Heb. a Vessel that perisheth.

d Whatsoever good Service I have done to the King, or Kingdom, or to any particular Persons, Neighbours, Friends, or others, which sometimes they have acknowledged and highly Commended, is now quite forgotten by all of them; Or, at least, they carry themselves to me, as if it were so. e Whose Name and Memory is quite lost, within a few days. See Psal. 88. 12. Eccles. 9. 5. f Made of Earth; which is irreparable, and useless, and therefore despised by all.

13. For I have heard g the slander of many h: * fear i was on every side, while they took counsel together against me, they devised to take away k my life.

* Jer. 6. 25. & 20. 3. Lam. 2. 22.

g Partly with my own Ears; and partly by the information of others. h Who reproach and defame me as a Turbulent and Seditious Person, an Enemy to the publick Peace, a Conspirator against the King's Life or Dignity. i (i. e.) Just cause of Fear, even of the loss of my Life, as appears from the next Clause. k To wit, unjustly and violently; as this word is used, Gen. 34. 2. and 24. 11.

14. But I trusted in thee, O LORD: I said, thou art my God l.

g Mine by paternal Relation and Care, and Affection, and by thy Promise or Covenant made with me.

15. My times m are in thy hand n: deliver me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me.

m Either, 1. The time of my Life, how long I shall live. Or, 2. My Opportunities, or fit Seasons, for working out my deliverance. Or rather, 3. All the Affairs and Events of my Life; for time is oft put for things done, or Accidents happening in time, as 1 Chron. 29. 30. Job 11. 17. Psal. 37. 18. Eccles. 9. 11. Dan. 2. 21. Act. 17. 26. n (i. e.) Are wholly in thy Power, to dispose and Order as thou seest fit, and not at all in mine Enemies Power, who can do nothing against me, unless it be given them from above.

16. * Make thy face to shine upon thy servant o: save me for thy mercies sake.

* Psal. 4. 6.

o Manifest thy Love and Favour to me, by answering my Prayers, and saving me from all mine Enemies.

17. * Let me not be ashamed, O LORD, for I have called upon thee p: let the wicked be ashamed q, and ‖ let * them be silent in the † grave r.

* Psal. 25. 2. * 1 Sam. 2. 9. ‖ Or, let them be cut off in the Grave. † Heb. Hell.

p And therefore thy Honour will be eclipsed in my Disappointment, as if thou didst not hear Prayers, nor keep Promise, nor make any difference between good and bad Men. q Frustrated in their wicked Designs, and Carnal Confidences. r Seeing they are implacable in their Malice and Rage, against innocent and good men, do thou cut them off by thy just Judgment; and since either the Righteous or the wicked must be cut off, let destruction fall upon them who most deserve it.

18. * Let the lying lips s be put to silence t, which speak † grievous things u, proudly and contemptuously x against the righteous y.

* Psal. 12. 3. † Heb. a hard thing.

s Slanderous Tongues. t Either, by thy vindication and discovery of my Integrity; Or, by some Eminent Judgment, which may either convince them, or cut them off. u Heb. hard Words or Things, the singular Number being put for the plural. Of this Expression, See 1 Sam. 2. 3. Psal. 60. 3. and 94. 4. Jude v. 15. He means such as were grievous, and hard to be Born, as bitter Calumnies, cruel Mockings, Terrible Threatnings, and the like. x With great Arrogancy, and Confidence of success, and Contempt of me and mine, whom they look upon as few in number, and impotent and Fugitives, and such whom they can blow away with a Breath. y Against us, whom thou knowest to be Righteous, notwithstanding all their false Accusations: and therefore for thy love to Righteousness save us, and silence our unjust enemies.

19. * O how great is thy goodness z, which thou hast laid up a for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought b for them that trust in thee, before the sons of men c.

* Isa. 64. 4. 1 Cor. 2. 9.

z No words can express the greatness of thy Love and Blessings. a Or, hidden, to wit, with thy self, or in thy own Breast. The word is very emphatical, and removes an Objection of ungodly Men, taken from the present Calamities of good Men. His Favour, it is true, is not always manifested, to or for them, but it is laid up for them in his Treasure, whence it shall be drawn forth when they need it, and he sees it fit. b Or, hast prepared, as Exod. 15. 17. Or, wilt work, the past time being put for the Future, to note the certainty of it, as is Common in the Prophetical writings. c (i. e.) Publickly, and in the view of the World, their very Enemies seeing and admiring, and envying it, but not being able to hinder it.

20. Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy pre-

* Pſal. 27. 5.

d Or, as in the ſecret of thy preſence: Either, 1. As if they were in thy Preſence-Chamber, where thine own Eye and Hand guardeth them, from all the aſſaults of their Enemies, called his ſecret, Partly, becauſe the greateſt part of the World are ſtrangers to God and his Preſence: and Partly, becauſe it is a ſafe and ſecure place, ſuch as ſecret and unknown places are. Or, 2. As if they were in the ſecret of God's Tabernacle, as it is called, Pſal. 27. 5. the place of God's ſpecial Preſence, where none might enter ſave the High-Prieſt. Or, 3. With thy ſecret Favour and Providence, which works mightily, yet ſecretly for them, and ſaves them by hidden and unknown Methods. This is oppoſed to thoſe Caves, or other obſcure and unſafe places, where David was forced to hide himſelf. e From their Vain-glorious Boaſts and Threats, and from their bold and inſolent attempts. e Or, as in thy Pavilion, or Tabernacle; and ſo this Clauſe explains the former, and the Pronoun thy, is here eaſily, and aptly underſtood out of the foregoing Branch. f (i. e.) From the Miſchief of Contentious and ſlanderous Tongues.

PSAL. XXXII.

‖ Or, A Pſalm of David, giving inſtruction.

‖ A Pſalm of David, Maſchil a.

a Or, an Inſtructer. This Pſalm is moſt fitly ſo called, becauſe it was Compoſed for the information of the Church, in that moſt important Doctrine, concerning the way to true Bleſſedneſs.

* Rom. 4. 6, 7, 8.

1. BLeſſed is he whoſe * tranſgreſſion is forgiven, whoſe ſin is covered a.

a I did indeed ſay, that they, and they only were Bleſſed, that did not walk in the counſel of the ungodly, &c. But did delight in, and Meditate on God's Law, Pſal. 1. 1, 2. And it is true, this is the only way to Bleſſedneſs. But if enquiry be made into the Cauſe of Man's Bleſſedneſs, we muſt ſeek that elſewhere. All men having ſinned and made themſelves Guilty before God, and fallen ſhort of the Glory of God, and of that Happineſs which was Conferred upon their firſt Parents; now there is no way to recover this loſt Felicity, but by ſeeking and obtaining the Favour of God, and the pardon of our ſins. Which is the very Doctrine of the Goſpel: to the Confirmation whereof this Text is juſtly alledged, Rom. 4. 6, 7. Our ſins are Debts, and they need forgiving: they are filthy and abominable in God's ſight, and need covering.

* Joh. 1. 47.

2. Bleſſed is the man unto whom the LORD imputeth not iniquity b, and * in whoſe ſpirit there is no guile c.

b Whom God doth not Charge with the guilt of his Sins, as he might juſtly do, but graciouſly accepts and pardons him in Chriſt, and deals with him as if he had not ſinned. c Who freely Confeſſeth all his ſins without Diſſembling or Concealing of them; which may ſeem to be the main thing here intended, by Comparing this with the following Verſes; and who is ſincere in his Confeſſions of Repentance, turning from ſin to God with all his Heart, and not feignedly.

3. When I kept ſilence d, my bones waxed old e; through my roaring f all the day long.

d To wit, from a full and open Confeſſion of my Sins, as appears from v. 5. and from pouring out my Soul to God in ſerious and fervent Prayers, for pardon and peace. Whilſt I concealed my ſins: Or, ſmothered my Fears, and ſtifled the workings of my own Conſcience. e My Spirits failed, and the ſtrength of my Body decayed. f Becauſe of the continual Horrors of my Conſcience, and Sence of Gods wrath, wherewith I was as yet rather oppreſſed and overwhelmed, than brought to thorough Repentance.

4. For day and night thy hand g was heavy upon me: my moiſture was turned into the drought of ſummer h, Selah.

g Thy afflicting Hand bringing my ſins to Remembrance, and filling me with thy Terrors for them. h My very Radical moiſture was in a manner dryed up, and waſted through exceſſive Fears and Sorrows.

* Prov. 28. 13. Iſa. 65. 24. 1 Joh. 1. 9.

5. I acknowledged my ſin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid: * I ſaid, I will confeſs my tranſgreſſions unto the LORD i; and thou forgaveſt the iniquity of my ſin k, Selah.

i At laſt I took up a full Reſolution, that I would no longer dally nor deal deceitfully with God, nor vainly ſeek to hide my ſins from the all-ſeeing God, but that I would openly and Candidly Confeſs, and bewail all my ſins with all their Aggravations, and humbly implore the pardon of them. k (i. e.) The guilt of my ſin. Or, Thou didſt take away the Puniſhment (as this Hebrew word oft ſignifies) of my Sin; Or, my exceeding ſinful ſin, two words ſignifying the ſame thing, being here put together by way of Aggravation, according to the manner of the Hebrews.

† Heb. in a time of finding. Pſal. 69. 13. Iſa. 55. 6.
* Pſal. 69. 1, 2.

6. For this l ſhall every one that is godly, pray unto thee, † in a time when thou mayeſt be found m: ſurely in the * flood of great waters n, they ſhall not come nigh unto him o.

l (i. e.) Upon the Encouragement of my Example, and thy great mercy vouchſafed to me, in Anſwer to my humble Confeſſion and Supplication. m Heb. in the time of finding thee; the Pronoun, thee, being eaſily and fitly repeated out of the next foregoing Clauſe, (i. e.) While he may be found, as it is expreſſed, Iſa. 55. 6. or while he is near, Pſal. 69. 13. in an acceptable and ſeaſonable time, while God continues to offer Grace and Mercy to ſinners, before the decree bring forth, Zeph. 2. 2. and Sentence be paſſed or executed upon them. By which Clauſe he ſeems to intimate the Difference between the godly, who pray and Cry earneſtly to God for Mercy in its ſeaſon; and the wicked, who will do ſo when it is too late, and the ſeaſon is loſt. n (i. e.) In the time of great Calamities, which are frequently compared to great Waters. o To wit, ſo as to overwhelm or hurt him. Or, God will ſet him in an high and ſafe place, out of the reach of them, as he provided an Ark for Noah, when the Deluge came: to which peradventure he alludes in this place.

* Pſal. 9. 9. & 27. 5.

7. * Thou art my hiding place, thou ſhalt preſerve me from trouble: thou ſhalt compaſs me about with ſongs of deliverance p, Selah.

p (i. e.) With ſuch great Deliverances on all ſides, as will give juſt occaſion to ſing forth thy praiſes.

† Heb. I will Counſel thee; mine eye ſhall be upon thee.

8. I will inſtruct q thee r, and teach thee in the way which thou ſhalt go s: † I will guide thee with mine eye t.

q This and the next Verſe are the Words, Either, 1. Of God;

God; whom David brings in as returning this Answer to his Prayers, and the profession of his trust in God. Or rather, 2. Of David himself: who having received singular Favours from God, and having declared what the Godly would do upon that occasion, v. 6. he now undertakes to instruct the wicked, what they should do. Which he doth, Partly, to express his Thankfulness to God, for delivering himself and his Zeal, to advance the Honour and Service of God in the World; Partly, as an Act of Justice, that he might make some amends to those whom he had injured, and provoke them to Repentance, whom by his sins he had Scandalized; and either drawn to sin, or encouraged and hardened in sin, which he was Obliged and did promise to do, upon this, or the like Occasion, Psal. 51. 13. and partly, for the discharge of his Office and Duty, as he was both a King and a Prophet, and a good Man; in all which Capacities he was obliged to indeavour the Conversion and Salvation of Sinners. r Thee, Oh sinner, whosoever thou art, who hast no understanding, but art a wicked Man, as the two following Verses explain it. He speaks this to the Generality of impenitent sinners, as the next Verse shews, which begins in the plural Number, Be not ye, &c. Only he expresseth it here singularly, as appealing and applying himself particularly, to the Conscience of every individual Person, which he thought the most effectual way of proceeding, as he had found in himself, when Nathan applyed his indefinite Discourse to him, saying, Thou art the Man. s (i. e.) In which thou oughtest to walk; the Future Tense oft noting a Man's Duty, as Gen. 20. 9. Mal. 1. 6. t I will lend thee the eyes of my Mind: Or, I will be to thee instead of Eyes, as the Phrase is, Numb. 10. 31. to advise and direct, and Caution thee: which I am able to do, not only by those Gifts and Graces, which God hath given me, but also from my own Experience. I will guide thee, as the Rider doth his Horse, to which the person to be guided is compared, v. 9. Or, as a Master doth his Scholar; Or, as a Guide doth him who knoweth not the right way. Or, the Words may be thus rendered, I will give thee Counsel, mine Eye shall be upon thee, as it is more fully expressed, Gen. 44. 21. Jer. 24. 6. and 40. 4. (i. e.) I will watch over thee, and instruct or admonish thee, as I have occasion.

*Prov. 26. 3. 9. *Be ye not as the horse, Or, as the mule which have no understanding u: whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, lest they come near unto thee x.

u Be not such brutish and sottish Creatures, as I have been, not having Reason or Grace to govern your selves, nor hearkening to the Counsels and Admonitions of others. x Lest they should come too near to thee, so as to Bite or Kick thee. But neither is this the common practise of Horses or Mules, of which he seems to speak; nor is this the proper use of a Bit or Bridle, to keep them from so doing, but rather to bring them nearer to the Rider for his use, and to keep them under his Conduct and Power, from whom they are otherwise apt to run away. The words therefore are, and may be otherwise rendred, because they do not, or will not come near unto thee: To wit, for thy Service, unless they be forced to it by a Bit or Bridle. And so all the ancient Translators understand it.

10. Many sorrows shall be to the wicked y: but he that trusteth in the LORD z, mercy shall compass him about.

11. Be glad in the LORD, and rejoyce ye righteous: and shout for joy all ye that are upright in heart.

y This is an Argument to enforce the foregoing Admonition, if any men will be Refractory and unruly, God hath many ways to Curb and Chastise them, and bring them to his will. z Who relys upon his Providence and Promise for his Preservation and Deliverance, and commits himself to God's Care and Conduct, waiting upon him in his way, and not turning aside to crooked or sinful Paths, for Safety or Satisfaction.

PSAL. XXXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm contains a Celebration of God, for his great and glorious Works both of Creation and Providence.

*Psal. 147. 1. 1. REjoyce in the LORD a, O ye righteous, for * praise is comely for the upright b.

a Let his Excellency discovered in his works, be the Matter of your joy and praise. b It well becomes them, to Exercise themselves in this work, of praising and blessing of God, Partly, because they have such singular and abundant Obligations, and Occasions to do so; and partly, because they will praise God worthily and heartily, and with due Reverence and Thankfulness, as God requires and deserves to be praised; whereas ungodly Men do indeed disparage, and pollute the Holy Name of God, while they pretend to praise it, and therefore God rejects their Praises and Prayers. See Psal. 50. 16. and 109. 7. Prov. 28. 9.

2. Praise the LORD with harp: sing unto him with the psaltery, and * an instrument of ten strings c. *Psal. 92. 3.

c He mentions these Instruments, because they were used in the publick worship, and Praises of God, in the Tabernacle.

3. * Sing unto him a new song d, play skilfully with a loud noise. *Psal. 96. 1. & 98. 1. 149. 1. Isa. 42. 10.

d Either, 1. Newly Composed. As God gives you fresh occasions, so do not you content your selves with the old Songs or Psalms, made by the holy Men of God, but make new ones suited to the occasions. But neither had all the Righteous, to whom he speaks, v. 1. the Gift of Composing Songs, nor was it of any Necessity or Importance, that they should make new Songs to praise God, at least for the Works here mentioned, when there were so many made by David, and other Holy Prophets, for the use of God's Church and people, when they had any such occasion. Or, 2. Renewed, or repeated, or sung again; in which Sence Job saith, his Glory was new, or fresh in him, Job 29. 20. (i. e.) Renewed, or continued from Day to Day, and the Command of Love is called New, Joh. 13. 34. because it was renewed and re-inforced by Christ. So this Song is here called New, not so much from the Matter, as from the singing of it; because it was sung afresh, or again.

4. For the word of the LORD is right e: and all his works are done in truth f.

e All God's Counsels and Commands, either contained in the Scriptures, or given forth in his Providence, for the Government of the World are wise and just, and good, without deceit or defect. f (i. e.) All his works of providence agree with his Word, and are no other than the accomplishment of his promises or Threatnings, or other Declarations of his Mind and Will in his Word, although sometimes for a season, they may seem contrary to it.

5. *He loveth righteousness and judgment g: * the earth is full of the ‖ goodness of the LORD h. *Psal. 45. 7. *Psal. 119. 64. ‖ Or, Mercy.

g (i. e.) Just Judgment, by a Figure called Hendyadis, as Jer. 22. 3. Or, Justice relates to the Sentence, and Judgment to the Execution of it. He not only doth Justice to all men, as was implied, v. 6. but, which is more, he Loves it, and Delights in it. h He not only doth no man wrong, but he is very kind and merciful to all Men in the world, to whom he gives many Favours and Invitations, to his Love and Service. See Mat. 5. 45. Act. 14. 17. Rom. 1. 20, 21.

6. *By the word of the LORD i, were the heavens made: and all the host of them k, * by the breath of his mouth l. *Gen. 1. 6, 7. Heb. 11. 3. 2 Pet. 3. 5. *Job 26. 13.

i Either, 1. By the Hypostatical word, Christ, who is oft called God's Word, even by the Chaldee Paraphrast, as also John, 1. v. 1, 2, 3. where he is said to be that Word, by whom all things were made. So that which is here spoken more darkly and doubtedly, according to that state of the Church, is more clearly declared in the New Testament. Or, 2. By his Will or Command, as this very Phrase is here used, v. 4. and as it seems to be explained, v. 9. And so it hath a great Emphasis in it, that God made this admirable structure of the Heavens, and all its glorious Stars; not with great pains and time, and help of many Artists and Instruments, as Men do far meaner works, but with one single Word; which is much to the Glory of the Creator. k The Angels: Or the Stars. See on Gen. 2. 1. l Either, 1. By the Holy Ghost, so called, Job 33. 4. And so here are all the Persons of the Trinity Jehovah, the Father, and the Word, and the Spirit; to each of which this work of Creation is elsewhere ascribed, as was noted on Gen. 1. 26. Or, 2. By his Word, as it was expressed in the last Clause, which is so called, Isa. 11. 4. 2 Thes. 2. 8.

7. *He gathereth m the waters of the sea together, * as an heap o: he layeth up the depths in store-houses o. *Gen. 1. 9. Job 26. 10. & 38. 8. *Psal. 78. 13.

m Or, gathered: For he speaks of the first Creation, when this was done, Gen. 1. n By which Expression he brings to our Minds this great work of God, that the Sea which is lighter and higher than Earth, is yet Confined within its Bounds, that it might not overflow the Earth. o Either in the Clouds, or in the Bowels of the Earth: Whence he can draw them forth when he sees fit.

8. Let

8. Let all the earth p fear the LORD: let all the inhabitants of the world, ſtand in awe of him.

p All the people of the Earth, as the next Clauſe expounds this; not only Jews, but Gentiles, who equally enjoy the Benefit of this great and glorious work of God.

*Pſal. 148. 5. 9. For * he ſpake, and it q was done; he commanded, and it ſtood faſt r.

q The work here mentioned, v. 6, 7. Or, ſtood forth, as a Servant at his Maſters Command, Or, was, or did exiſt.

*Iſa. 19. 3. †Heb. maketh fruſtrate. 10. * The LORD † bringeth the counſel of the heathen s to nought: he maketh the devices of the people of none effect.

s Or, of the Nations; though Nations combine themſelves and their Counſels together, yet he defeats them when he pleaſeth. Thus he paſſeth from the work of Creation, to the works of Providence, and from the Inſtances of his Power, in Senſleſs and unreaſonable Creatures, to manifeſt his power in over-ruling the Thoughts and Wills, and Actions of all Men, whether ſingle or united.

*Prov. 19. 21. Iſa. 46. 10. †Heb. to Generation and Generation. 11. * The counſel of the LORD ſtandeth for ever t, the thoughts of his heart † to all generations.

t All his Purpoſes and Deſigns, and eſpecially thoſe which concern his choſen people, of whom he ſpeaks in the next Verſe, are always ſucceſsful and irreſiſtible.

*Pſal. 65. 4. & 94. 14. & 144. 15. 12. * Bleſſed is the nation whoſe God is the LORD: and the people whom he hath choſen for his own inheritance u.

u Seeing the Lord is ſo great and glorious in Wiſdom, and Power, and Goodneſs, as hath been hitherto ſaid, as they muſt needs be very miſerable, who are Strangers or Enemies to him, ſo thrice happy is that people of Iſrael, who, though they be deſpiſed by the Gentiles, are choſen by this Almighty God, to be his peculiar Portion, and Friends, and Servants.

*2 Chr. 16. 9. Job 28. 24. Pſal. 11. 4. 13. * The LORD looketh from heaven: he beholdeth all the ſons of men x.

14. From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth.

x Although he hath a ſpecial Relation to Iſrael, yet he hath a general Care and Inſpection over all Mankind, all whoſe Hearts and Ways he diſcerns and obſerves.

15. He faſhioneth y their hearts alike z: he conſidereth all their works a.

y Or, faſhioned, or made: Or, formeth. For this may relate, Either, 1. To the work of Creation. So he proves what he ſaid, v. 13, 14. that God beheld all Men, becauſe he made them; yea, even their Hearts, the moſt ſecret piece of them. Or, 2. To the works of his Providence. Having ſaid that God ſees and obſerves all Men, he now adds, that he Rules and Governs them; yea, even their Hearts, which are moſt Maſterleſs and unmanageable, and yet he frameth and diſpoſeth and inclineth them, this way or that, according to the counſel of his Will. See Exod. 34. 24. Pſal. 105. 25. z Or, equally, one as well as another: Whether they be Jews or Gentiles, Bond or Free, Princes or Peaſants: all are alike ſubject to his Juriſdiction. a Both outward and inward, all the workings of their Minds and Affections, and all their Endeavours and Actions.

16. There is no king b ſaved by the multitude of an hoſt c: a mighty man is not delivered by much ſtrength.

b He inſtanceth in theſe, as the moſt potent and uncontrollable perſons in the World, and moſt Confident of themſelves, and leaſt ſenſible of their Dependence upon God. By which he ſtrongly proves his general Propoſition, of God's powerful Providence over all Men. c But only by God's Providence, who diſpoſeth of Victory and Succeſs, as he pleaſeth, and that frequently to the weakeſt, and moſt fooliſh ſide, Eccleſ. 9. 11.

*Pſal. 147. 10. Prov. 21. 31. †Heb. a Lye. 17. * An horſe d is † a vain thing e for ſafety: neither ſhall he deliver any by his great ſtrength.

d Though he be ſtrong, Job 39. 19. &c. and fit for Battel, Prov. 21. 31. Or, for flight, if need requires. And ſo this is put for all Warlike proviſions; of which Horſes were, and are a very conſiderable part. e Heb. a Lye; becauſe it promiſeth, that help and ſafety, which it cannot give.

18. * Behold, the eye of the LORD f is upon them that fear him g: upon them that hope in his mercy h. *Job 36. 7. Pſal. 34. 15. 1 Pet. 3. 12.

f Whoſoever therefore would have Safety and Deliverance, muſt ſeek and expect it only from the watchful Eye, and Almighty hand and mercy of God. g Theſe are the chief Objects of his Care and Favour. h That place their Hope and Truſt, and Happineſs not in any Creature, but only in God and in his Mercy and Bleſſings. The Conjunction and Order of theſe two qualifications of the Perſon, whom God careth for, is obſervable here, they muſt be ſuch as fear God, and ſo make Conſcience of keeping his Commands, Eccleſ. 12. 13. and then they may and muſt hope in, Or, relye upon his Mercy, for their ſafety and happineſs.

19. To deliver their ſoul i from death, and to keep them alive * in famine. *Job 5. 20. Pſal. 37. 19.

i (i. e.) Their Life, when he ſees it to be expedient for them: ſometimes it is better for them to dye than to Live, as both good and bad Men have declared; and when it is ſo, it is known to God, but not to us. And therefore the conſtant Accompliſhment of this and the like promiſes in a literal Sence is not to be expected, nor ſimply deſired, but with Submiſſion to God's wiſe and gracious Will.

20. Our ſoul waiteth for the LORD: he is our help k and our ſhield.

k The help of us Iſraelites, to whom he hath made many Promiſes, and glorious Diſcoveries of his Goodneſs.

21. For l our heart ſhall rejoyce in him: becauſe we have truſted in his holy name.

22. Let thy mercy, O LORD, be upon us according as we hope in thee.

l Or, Therefore: for this ſeems to be an Inference, Either from the foregoing, or from the following Sentence.

PSAL. XXXIV.

A Pſalm of David, when he changed a his behaviour b before || Abimelech c: who drove him away, and he departed. ||Or, Achiſh. 1 Sam. 21. 11, 13.

a A Pſalm made upon that occaſion, though not at that time. b Or, his Habit, or Poſture, or his Reaſon, as this word is taken, 1 Sam. 25. 33. Pſal. 119. 66. Prov. 11. 22. When he Counterfeited Madneſs. Wherein whether he ſinned or not, is matter of Diſpute, but this is undoubted, that God's Favour, and his Deliverance at that time was very remarkable, and deſerved this ſolemn acknowledgment. c Called Achiſh, 1 Sam. 21. 10. But Abimelech ſeems to have been the common Name of the Kings of the Philiſtins, Gen. 20. 2 and 26. 1. as Pharaoh was of the Egyptians, and Cæſar of the Romans.

1. I Will bleſs the LORD at all times d: his praiſe ſhall continually be in my mouth.

d I will never forget to bleſs God for this miraculous Deliverance.

2. My ſoul ſhall make her boaſt in the LORD e: the humble f ſhall hear thereof and be glad g.

e Shall glory in this, that I have ſo powerful and ſo gracious a Lord and Maſter. f Or, the Meek, (i. e.) The Godly, oft called in Scripture by that Title; and particularly my Friends and Favourers in Iſrael, whom he thus calls in Oppoſition to his proud and furious Adverſaries, in Saul's Court and Camp. g Both for their Love to me, and to the publick good of Iſrael, which they know that I deſign and ſeek above all things; and for the Comfort and Benefit of my example to them, in like Straits and Difficulties.

3. O magnifie the LORD with me h, and let us exalt his name together i.

4. I ſought the LORD, and he heard me, and delivered me from all my fears.

h Joyn your Praiſes with mine, O all ye humble ones. i Not in place, for David was now baniſhed from the place of God's publick Worſhip, but in Affection and Work: Let our Souls meet, and let our Praiſes meet in the Ears of the all-hearing God. Or, alike, (i. e.) With equal Zeal and Fervency; let none be willing to be out-ſtripped by another.

‖ Or, they flowed unto him. Pſal 31. 16.

5. They k looked unto him l and ‖ were lightned m, and their faces were not aſhamed n.

k The humble, v. 2. Or they fear him, v. 7. when they were in Diſtreſs. Or, it is an indefinite Expreſſion. l Either, 1. Unto the Lord, expreſſed v. 4. (i. e.) They ſought and expected Help from him. Or rather, 2. Unto this poor Man, as it follows, v. 6. or unto David. So he ſpeaks of himſelf in the third Perſon, which is uſual. So the Sence is, when I was delivered, v. 4. men looked upon me, with wonder and Aſtoniſhment, as one ſaved in a prodigious manner. m (i. e.) comforted and encouraged by my Example. But theſe and the foregoing Words are by the antient Interpreters, read Imperatively, as an Exhortation to others, to whom he oft addreſſeth his Speech, as v. 3, 8, 9. 11. Look unto him, (with an Eye of Faith and Prayer) and be ye inlightned, (i. e.) Take Comfort in the Expectation of Mercy from him. And then the laſt Words they render thus, and your (Heb. their. But the Change of Perſons, is very frequent in this Book) Fear ſhall not be aſhamed. n They were not diſappointed of their Hope, but found Relief, as I did.

6. This poor man o cryed, and the LORD heard him; and ſaved him out of all his troubles.

o (i. e.) David, of whom they that looked, &c. v. 5. ſpake theſe Words.

* Zech. 9. 8. See Gen. 32. 1, 2. 2 Kin. 6. 17.

7. The Angel p of the LORD * encampeth round about them q that fear him, and delivereth them.

p (i. e.) The Angels, the ſingular number being put for the plural, as it is, Pſal. 78. 45. and 105. 33. 40. for it is both improper and unuſual, to aſcribe encamping, and that round about all good Men, to one created Angel. And we find many Angels employed in this Work, Gen. 32. 1, 2. 2 Kings 6. 17. q Guardeth them from Dangers on every ſide; to which work they are appointed by God. Heb. 1. 14.

* 1 Pet. 2. 3. * Pſal. 2. 12.

8. O * taſt r and ſee that the LORD is good s: * bleſſed is the man that truſteth in him.

r (i. e.) Conſider it ſeriouſly, and thoroughly, and affectionately; make tryal of it, by your own and others Experiences. This is oppoſed to thoſe ſleight and vaniſhing Thoughts, which men have of it. s. (i. e.) Merciful and Gracious, to wit, to all his people.

9. O fear the LORD t, ye his Saints: for there is no want to them that fear him.

t (i. e.) Reverence, and ſerve him, and truſt in him: for Fear is Commonly put for all the parts of God's Worſhip.

* Job 4. 10, 11. Gr. the Rich.

10. * The young lyons u do lack, and ſuffer hunger: but they that ſeek the LORD ſhall not want any good thing x.

u Either, 1. Properly, See Job 4. 11. Or, 2. Metaphorically ſo called, the great Potentates of the Earth, who are oft ſo called, as Jer. 2. 15. Ezek. 38. 13. Nah. 2. 13. x Which is neceſſary and truly good for them, all Circumſtances Conſidered: of which God alone is a competent Judge: And therefore although God doth uſually take a ſpecial Care, to ſupply the wants of good Men, and hath oft done it, by extraordinary ways, when ordinary have failed, yet ſometimes he knows, and 'tis certainly true, that Wants and Croſſes are more needful, and uſeful to them than Bread; and in ſuch Caſes it is a greater mercy of God, to deny them ſupplies, than to grant them.

11. Come ye children y, hearken unto me: I will teach you the fear of the LORD z.

y Whom I love as mine own Children, and who own me as your Civil Father, your Prince; ſee 2 Kings 5. 13. and as your ſpiritual Father, a Prophet: for the Diſciples of the Prophets were called their Sons, 2 Kings 2. 3. z (i. e.) The true and principal way of Worſhipping and ſerving God with his Acceptation, and to your own Salvation.

* 1 Pet. 3. 10.

12. * What man is he that deſireth a life b, and loveth many days, that he may ſee good c?

a To wit, ſeriouſly and in good earneſt, ſo as to be willing to uſe any indeavours which ſhall be preſcribed to him: For otherwiſe the queſtion were needleſs; for there is no man but deſires it, at leaſt Coldly and Faintly. b A long and happy Life, begun in this World and continued for ever in the next. And thus Life is oft uſed, as Pſal. 16. 11. and 30. 5. c Heb. Loveth days to ſee (i. e. In which he may ſee, i. e. Enjoy) Good, to wit, Proſperity or Happineſs.

13. Keep thy tongue from evil d, and thy lips from ſpeaking guile e.

d From all manner of evil ſpeaking, from all opprobrious, injurious, falſe and deceitful Speeches: Which, though men Commonly uſe to eaſe and gratifie their own Minds, or to Compaſs their Deſigns, do frequently fall upon their own Heads, by provoking both God and Men againſt them. e Or, guileful Words, contrary to thy Intentions, and with a purpoſe of deceiving men by them.

* Pſal. 37. 27. * Heb. 12. 14.

14. * Depart from evil f, and do good g: * ſeek peace h, and purſue it i.

f (i. e.) From all ſin, and eſpecially from all wicked and injurious Acts, and practiſes againſt thy Neighbour. g Be ready to perform all good and friendly Offices to all Men, as thou haſt Opportunity. h Study by all means poſſible, to live peaceably and quietly with all Men, avoiding Grudges, Debates, Diſſenſions, Strifes and Enmities. i Do not only embrace it gladly when it is offered, but follow hard after it, when it ſeems to flee away from thee, and uſe all poſſible indeavours by fair Words, by Condeſcenſions, and by the Mediation or Aſſiſtance of others to recover it, and to Compoſe all differences which may ariſe, between thee and others It is here obſervable, that whereas he ſaid he would Teach them the Fear of the Lord, v. 11. the Leſſons he teacheth them, v. 13, 14. are only ſuch as concern Men. Not that he meant to exclude Duties of piety towards God, which he every where enjoyneth and preſſeth as moſt neceſſary, but only to Teach us, what is oft inculcated, both in the Old and New Teſtament, that ſincere Religion towards God, is always accompanied with a Conſcientious diſcharge of our Duties to men; and to Convince the Hypocritical Iſraelites, and particularly his Adverſaries, that ſo long as it was their daily Courſe and Practiſe, to ſpeak and act all manner of Evil againſt him, and other good Men, all their pretences to Religion were but vain.

† Job 36. 7. Pſal. 33. 18. 1 Pet. 3. 12. * Neh. 8. 3.

15. † The eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous k, and his ears * are open unto their cry.

k This is added to prove his laſt Aſſertion, to wit, that the practice of theſe Duties, v. 13, 14. is the true and beſt, and indeed the only way to ſee that good propoſed and promiſed, v. 21. both becauſe ſuch righteous Perſons, howſoever they may meet with Affronts and Injuries, from Men, are under the ſpecial Care and Favour of God, in this Verſe; and thoſe who do the Evils there forbidden, ſhall find to their coſt, that God is their Enemy, v. 16.

* Jer. 44. 11. Am. 9. 4.

16. * The face l of the LORD is againſt them that do evil m, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth n.

l (i. e.) His Anger, oft called his Face, as Levit 17. 10. and 20. 5. Jer. 44. 11. Lam. 4. 16. becauſe Anger diſcovers it ſelf in the Face. m (i. e.) Whoſe common Courſe and ſtudy, and buſineſs it is to do Evil: For elſe there is not a juſt man upon Earth, that doth good and ſinneth not, Eccl. 7. 20. n Utterly to deprive both them and their Children of that Wordly Happineſs; which is the only thing that they deſire, and ſeek, by their wicked Courſes.

17. The righteous cry o, and the LORD heareth; and delivereth them out of all their troubles.

o Heb. They cry, to wit, the righteous, as is manifeſt both from the Nature of the thing, and from v. 15. where they are ſo called, and with which this Verſe is to be continued, the 16th. Verſe coming in by way of parentheſis, as is very uſual in many places of Scripture.

† Heb. to the broken of Heart † Heb. Contrite of Spirit. * 2 Tim. 3. 11, 12.

18. The LORD is nigh p † unto them that are of a broken heart: and ſaveth ſuch as be † of a contrite ſpirit q.

19. * Many are the afflictions of the righteous: but the LORD delivereth him out of them all.

p Ready to hear and ſuccour them; though by the ſevere Courſe of his Providence towards them, he ſeems to themſelves and others to ſtand afar off, as David complains, Pſal. 10. 1. q By which he underſtands, Either, 1. Thoſe whoſe Spirits are oppreſſed, and even broken with the greatneſs of their Calamities. But this may be, and frequently is the Lot of wicked Men. And therefore in this Sence, and to ſuch Perſons, this Propoſition and Promiſe is not true: Or rather, 2. Thoſe whoſe Hearts or Spirits are truly and deeply humbled, under the hand of God, and the Sence of their ſins, and God's diſpleaſure for them, which was David's Caſe, Pſal. 6. 1. &c. and 32. 3, 4. whoſe proud and ſelf-willed Hearts are ſubdued, and made made obedient to God's Will, and submissive to his Providence. For to all such, and to such only, this Promise is verified.

20. He keepeth all his bones r; not one of them is broken s.

r (i. e.) All the Parts and Members of their Bodies, which are Synecdochically expressed by the Bones, which are the stay and strength of the rest. s God will not suffer any Mischief to befal him: though he may be oft afflicted, yet, he shall not be destroyed. But these Words, though they are here spoken of the righteous Men in general, of whom they are true in a Metaphorical Sence; yet, they had a further meaning in them, being designed by the Spirit of God, which Dictated to David, not onely the Matter, but the very Words and Expressions, to signifie a great Mystery, that none of Christ's Bones should be broken; to which purpose they are alledged, Joh. 19. 36.

*Psal. 94. 23. ‖ Or, shall be guilty.

21. * Evil t shall slay the wicked: and they that hate the righteous u, ‖ shall be desolate.

t Either, 1. The Evil of sin: his own wickedness though designed against others, shall destroy himself. Or, 2. The Evil of Misery. When the afflictions of good Men, shall have an happy Issue, theirs shall end in their total and final Destruction. u That persecute them, and Plot their Ruine; which is an Evidence that they hate them, whatsoever they may pretend to the contrary.

*Psal. 97. 10.

22. * The LORD redeemeth the soul of his servants x: and none of them that trust in him shall be desolate.

x (i. e.) Their Lives or their Persons, from the malicious Designs of all their Enemies, and from Desolation or utter Ruine, as it follows.

PSAL. XXXV.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was Penned by David, when he was slandred and persecuted by Saul and his Servants, as is manifest from the whole Body of it.

A Psalm of David.

*Psal. 43. 1. & 119. 154. Lam. 3. 58. †Heb. implead me.

1. PLead * my cause, O LORD a, with them that † strive with me: fight against them that fight against me.

a Seeing I am unable to right my self, and the Magistrates refuse to do me Justice, be thou my Patron and Protector.

2. Take hold of shield and buckler b, and stand up for mine help.

b Therewith to cover and defend me. Comp. Psal. 91. 4. Prov. 2. 7.

3. Draw out also the spear c, and stop the way d against them that persecute me: say unto my soul e, I am thy salvation.

c Thy offensive Weapons. He alludes to the practise of Soldiers in Battel. d In which they are marching directly, and furiously against me. But divers Interpreters, both Hebrews and others, take this Hebrew word for a Noun, and render it a Sword, Or, as the Word may signifie, a close Weapon. For the Psalmist here representing God as a man of War, and accordingly furnishing him with other Weapons, it seems not probable that he would omit this Weapon, which was most constantly and universally used. e (i. e.) Unto me; Either, 1. By thy Spirit assuring me of it: Or, 2. By thy Providence effecting it: for God's saying or speaking, is oft meant of his doing, because his Word is sufficient for the doing of whatsoever he pleaseth.

*Psal. 40. 15. & 70. 3. * Jer. 46. 5.

4. * Let them be confounded f and put to shame, that seek after my soul; let them * be turned back g, and brought to confusion, that devise my hurt.

f (i. e.) Frustrated in their wicked Designs, and hopes against me. Concerning this and the like, and following Imprecations, which may seem strange and severe, it must be Considered, 1. That they did not proceed from any passionate or revengeful Spirit in David towards his Enemies, from which how free he was, appears not onely from his own words here, v. 12, 13, 14. but from the whole Course of his Life, and the frequent Instances mentioned in his History, of his meek and merciful Carriage to his Enemies, when they were in his Power, from his Zeal for God, and for Piety and Justice, to which they shewed themselves to be constant and implacable Adversaries, and by the Direction of the Prophetical Spirit of God, wherewith he was endued; which Spirit did exactly know the Condition of his Enemies, and that those, against whom they are Levelled, were hardened and Incurable. 2. That they contain nothing but a Prayer to God, that he would accomplish his own Threatnings, and execute his own Law of Retaliation, of Eye for Eye, and Tooth for Tooth, and so bring upon them the Evils which they designed against him. Which also was of great and good use, both to glorifie Gods Justice, and to warn and reform other sinners, by the Terror of their Example. 3. That they may be taken only for predictions, as hath been observed before, upon the like Occasion. g Either, 1. Stopped or hindred in the Execution of their wicked Design. Or rather. 2. (which is more sutable to the Context) discomfited and put to flight, as this Phrase is frequently used, as Psal. 9. 3. and 70. 2. and 78. 9. Isa. 42. 17. Jer. 46. 5, 21.

5. * Let them be as chaff before the wind h: and let the angel of the LORD i chase them.

* Job 21. 18. Psal. 1. 4. Isa. 29. 5. Hos. 13. 3.

h (i. e.) Dispersed and Chased from place to place, finding Rest and Safety no where. i Whom God useth to defend his people, and to destroy their Enemies.

6. Let their way k be † * dark and slippery l, and let the Angel of the LORD persecute them.

† Heb. darkness & slipperiness. * Psal. 73. 18. Jer. 23. 12.

k By which they flee, being Chased, as was now said. l So as they can neither discern the right path, nor be able to stand in it, and much less to run away, especially from so swift a Persecutor as an Angel. Whereby they must unavoidably fall into their Enemies hands, and be destroyed.

7. For without cause m have they hid for me their net, in a pit, which without cause they digged for my soul n.

m Out of meer Malice, without any injury or provocation on my part, and without any necessity on their parts. They are no Common, but the worst of Enemies; and therefore I may justly pray against them, as I do. n These Expressions aggravate their sins, and signifie that their Persecution of him was not the effect of a sudden Passion, but of a deep and habitual Hatred and Malice, and of an Evil design, carried on in a constant and continued Course with Deliberation, and Cunning, and Deceit, and that against his Soul or Life; for nothing less would satisfie them.

8. Let destruction come upon him o † at unawares, and * let his net that he hath hid, catch himself: into that very destruction let him fall.

† Heb which he knoweth not of. * Psal. 7. 15, 16. & 57. 6. Prov. 5. 22.

o (i. e.) Upon each of thine and mine implacable Enemies, of whom he hath hitherto spoken.

9. And my soul shall be joyful in the LORD p: it shall rejoyce in his salvation.

p In and for his Glory and Service, which shall be advanced by this means, and for his Favour to me, otherwise I am far from rejoycing in their Calamities.

10. All my bones q shall say r, LORD who is like unto thee, which deliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him!

q (i. e.) My whole Body, by a Synecdoche, as Psal. 34. 20. as well as my Soul, mentioned v. 9. I will glorifie thee, both with my Soul, and with my Body. r Speech is ascribed to the Bones figuratively, as elsewhere they are said to Fear and to Rejoyce, Psal. 6. 2. and 51. 8. and as the Loins are said to Bless, Job 31. 20. If they could speak they would express thy Praises, because having been dryed up with Sorrow, they are now refreshed by thy Mercy.

† Heb. Witnesses of Wrong. † Heb. they asked me.

11. False † witnesses did rise up; † they laid to my charge things that I knew not s.

s They accused me to Saul of Treachery and Designs, against his Crown and Life, and other Crimes whereof I was wholly innocent, and ignorant.

* Psal. 38. 20. & 109. 5. † Heb. depriving.

12. * They rewarded me evil for good t, to the † spoiling of my soul u.

t For the good Offices which I did to divers of them, when

I had Favour and Power in Saul's Court and Camp. u (i. e.) To the ſtripping of my Perſon of all my Comforts and Hopes, and of my Life it ſelf.

* Job 30. 25. ‖ Or, afflicted.

13. But as for me, * when they were ſick x, my clothing was ſaccloth y: I ‖ humbled my ſoul z with faſting, and my prayer returned into mine own boſom a.

x Or, in any other great Miſery. y Which was the Habit of Mourners, Gen. 37. 34. Mat. 11. 21. Revel. 11. 3. z Heb. I afflicted my Soul (of which Phraſe ſee Levit. 16. 29, 31. and 23. 27, 32. &c.) Partly with Faſting, and partly, with Compaſſion and fervent Prayers for them. a According to this Tranſlation the Sence may be this, And, or But, Or, Although my Faſtings and Prayers did them no good, neither abated their Malice, nor prevailed with God for them, ſo far as I deſired, but returned to me without ſucceſs, like a Gift ſent to an uncivil perſon, who diſdainfully rejects it, and returns it to the Giver. But, 1. This is not true, this his Prayers returned empty to him, and did them no good, for they prevailed with God for their Recovery, as appears by the following Verſes. 2. This doth not ſeem to ſuit well with the Context; for both in the foregoing and following words, he is only deſcribing what he did for them, and not what the Effects of it were, which he deſcribes in the ſucceeding Verſes. Others therefore render the words otherwiſe, Either, 1. Thus, And my Prayer in my Boſom returned, (i. e.) I did daily and frequently repeat my prayers for them, and that not only in publick when I joyned with others, in a Faſt-day appointed for them, which might be done in Policy, or for Oſtentation, but alſo in ſecret, between God and my own Soul, and that with a ſincere and hearty Affection: For what is done ſecretly and affectionately, is ſaid to be done in the Boſom, Numb. 11. 12. Pſal. 89. 50. Prov. 21. 14. although indeed there is in thoſe places another Propoſition, which may poſſibly alter the Caſe. Or, 2. (Which ſeems the trueſt Sence) and as for my Prayer (to wit, which I joyned with my Faſting on their behalf) let it return (nothing being more frequent than for Future Verbs to be put Imperatively) into my own Boſom, (i. e.) If any ſhall think or ſay, that my Faſting for them was but Counterfeit or Politick, and that I did not pray for them, but rather againſt them, as I do in this Pſalm, and that under all this ſhew I ſecretly wiſhed their Death or Deſtruction; my earneſt deſire is, that the All-ſeeing and Heart-ſearching God would grant unto me, when I come into their Circumſtances, the ſame things, which I begged for them, whether Good or Evil. And this Sence agrees with the Common uſe of this Phraſe in Scripture, where whatſoever is repay'd to any Man, is ſaid to be render'd into his Boſom, as Pſal. 79. 12. Iſa. 65. 6, 7. Jer. 32. 18. Luk. 6. 38. as elſewhere it is ſaid, to return upon his head.

† Heb. walked. † Heb. as a Friend, as a Brother to me.

14. I † behaved my ſelf b † as though he had been my friend, Or brother: I bowed down c heavily, as one that mourneth for his mother d.

b Heb. I walked, Either to him, to viſit and Comfort him. Or, about the ſtreets, whither my Occaſions led me. Though Walking is oft put for a Man's Carriage or Converſation. c Went hanging down my Head, as Mourners uſed to do, Iſa. 58. 5. d He mentions the Mother, rather than the Father, Either, becauſe her tender Affection and Care, and Kindneſs to him, had more won upon his Heart, and made him more ſenſible of the Loſs; Or, becauſe through the Deprivation of Man's Nature, Children are many times leſs ſenſible of their Fathers loſs; Or, Death, becauſe it is Compenſated with ſome Advantage to themſelves, which doth not uſually happen upon the Mothers Death. Some render it, as a Mourning Mother, for the loſs of her Son. But this doth not ſeem to ſuit ſo well with the Order of the Hebrew Words.

† Heb. Halting. Pſal. 38. 17. * Job 30. 1, 8, 12.

15. But in mine † adverſity e they rejoyced, and gathered themſelves together f: * yea, the abjects g gathered themſelves together againſt me, and I knew it not h; they did tear me i, and ceaſed not k.

e Heb. in my Halting, (i. e.) When I was in great Danger of falling into Miſchief. When I had any Sickneſs, or ill ſucceſs in my Affairs, and was almoſt loſt: for ſuch are ſaid to Halt, Mich. 4. 6, 7. Zephan. 3. 19. See alſo, Pſal. 38. 17. Jer. 20. 10. f To wit, againſt me, as it is expreſſed in the next Clauſe; Either, becauſe they were ſo full of joy at the Tydings, that they could not contain it in their own Breaſts, but ſought to Communicate it to others: Or, that they might inſult over me, and pleaſe and recreate themſelves, and one another with Diſcourſes about it; Or, that they might conſult how to improve the advantage, which they now had againſt me, to my utter Deſtruction. g Or, vile perſons, Either for the meanneſs of their Condition, Or, for their wickedneſs, for which they were worthy to be beaten, as the Phraſe is, Deut. 25. 2. Where the Hebrew word is of the ſame Root with this. Or, the Lame, as this very word is rendred, 2 Sam. 4. 4. and 9. 3. to wit, of their Feet, as it is here expreſſed. The Cripples that could not walk without Trouble and Pain, were as forward as any, to go to theſe Meetings upon this occaſion. h This may be added to expreſs either, their Hypocriſie and Pretences of Reſpect and Affection to him, by Reaſon whereof he had no Suſpition of them, nor of any ſuch practices of theirs; Or, his own Danger, that he did not know, and therefore could not prevent their Plots and Conſpiracies againſt him. Heb. and I knew not. Which is by others, and well may be rendered thus, Even they whom I knew not, they whom I was ſo far from provoking by any Injury, that I never ſaw their Faces, nor heard of their Names. i (i. e.) My good Name with Scoffs and Calumnies, and Reproaches and Curſes. k Heb. were not ſilent, (i. e.) Did thus unwearied-ly and continually.

l Or, Profane, as this word ſignifies, Job 8. 13. and 13. 16. and 15. 34. and 17. 8. and, as ſome add in all other places. m Whoſe common practice it is to ſcoff at and deride others, and me in particular. n Or, of or for a Cake: Or, a Morſel of Bread, as this word ſignifies, 1 Kings 17. 12, 13. and 19. 6. By which he further ſhews what vile and worthleſs perſons theſe were, that would tranſgreſs for a Morſel of Bread, as it is ſaid, Prov. 28. 21. They made themſelves Buffoons and Jeſters, and accuſtomed themſelves to mock and deride David, that thereby they might gain admittance to the Acquaintance and Tables of great Men, where they might fill their Bellies; which was all that they ſought for, or got by it. o They uſed all Expreſſions of Rage and Hatred againſt me, among which this was one, Job 16. 9. Lament. 2. 16. This they did to curry Favour with my great and potent Adverſaries.

† Heb. my onely One. * Pſal. 57. 4.

28. And my tongue shall speak of thy righteousness, and of thy praise, all the day long.

i That wish well to it, although they want either strength or Courage to plead it. k (i.e.) Exalted and praised for his Righteousness, and Truth and Goodness, manifested in my Deliverance. Mine Enemies great Design, is to magnifie themselves, v. 26. but my chief desire is, that God may be magnified.

PSAL. XXXVI.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm seems to have been Composed by David, when he was persecuted by Saul and his Courtiers. Upon which occasion he enlargeth his Thoughts further, and Contemplates the sad state and condition of the World, and of the Church at that time, in which Wickedness of all sorts greatly abounded and seemed to prosper; and withal, he declares the great Felicity and Safety of God's People, and gives an Account of their Supports and Comforts, under the Sence of these publick Dis-orders and Mischiefs.

To the chief musician, a Psalm of David, the servant of the LORD a.

a (i. e.) One wholly and resolvedly devoted to the Service of God, both in my private and publick Capacity. This Title is, as I remember, but twice used in this Book, Psal. 18. (of which see there.) and in this Psalm. Where it seems to be prefixed as a publick Protestation of his Resolution, to cleave unto the Lord in this time of general Corruption, of which he is now going to speak.

1. THE transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, that there is no fear of God before his eyes b.

b When I consider the great and manifold Transgressions of ungodly Men, I conclude within my self, that they have cast off all Fear and Sence, and serious belief of the divine Majesty.

2. For c *he flattereth himself in his own eyes d, † until his iniquity be found to be hateful e.

* Deu. 29. 19. Psal. 10 3. & 49. 18.

c So this is the Proof of that Assertion, v. 1. Or, Although; and so it is an Anticipation of an Objection against it. d He deceiveth himself with vain and false persuasions, Either, 1. Concerning God, that he doth not see or mind his sins, or that he will not punish them: Or, 2. Concerning himself and his sins, Either, that they are not sins; which a Mind bribed by Passion and Interest, can easily believe: Or, that they are but small and venial sins: Or, that they will be excused, if not justifyed by honest intentions, or by outward Professions and Exercises of Religion, or by some good Actions, wherewith he thinks to make some Compensation for them, or some other way. Oth. thus, He flattereth him (i. e. God) in his Eyes, (i. e.) Openly and publickly makes a shew of Religion as if he designed to deceive or mock God, whilst inwardly and secretly, he is projecting Wickedness. But it seems better to understand the last Word Reciprocally of his own Eyes, as the same word is used in the end of the foregoing Verse. e (i. e.) Until God by some dreadful Judgment undeceive him, and find (i. e.) Discover or make him and others to find and feel by Experience, that it is a sin and a very hateful one too. Or, Until his abominable iniquity be found out, (i. e.) Punished, as the same Word and Phrase is used, Numb 32. 23. your sin shall find you out. (i. e.) Bring you to Condign punishment. In the Hebrew it is, to find out his iniquity to hate. But active Verbs are oft taken Passively, of which there are plain Instances, Jos. 2. 5. Esth. 6. 6. Psal. 32. 9. and 51. 6. Comp. with Rom. 3. 4. and Psal. 119. 4. and so here, to find, is put for to be found, and to hate, for to be hated, or to be hateful.

3. The words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit f: he hath left off to be wise, and to do good g.

f (i. e.) Are wicked and deceitful. g Once he had some shadows, or degrees of wisdom, and sometimes did some things that were good in their kind, but now he hath not so much as the appearance of it, and is become an open Apostate from that which once he professed.

4. * He deviseth ‖ mischief upon his bed h, he setteth himself i in a way that is not good k; he abhorreth not evil l.

* Mic. 2. 1.

h Which notes that he doth it, 1. Constantly and unweariedly, preferring it before his own Rest. 2. Earnestly and seriously, when his Mind is freed from all outward Distractions, and wholly at leisure to attend that Business, about which it is employed; Comp. Psal. 4. 4, 3. Freely from his own inclination, when none are present to provoke him to it. i He doth not repent of his wicked Devices, but resolutely proceeds to Execute them, and persists therein. k (i. e.) Which is very bad, as this Phrase is used, 1 Sam. 2. 24. Prov. 20. 23. and 24. 23. and elsewhere. l Though he sometimes pretends Remorse and desists from his Violent Practises against me, as Saul did, yet he doth not truly repent of, nor abhor his sin, and therefore is ready to return to it, when any occasion offers it self.

5. * Thy mercy m, O LORD, is in the heavens n, and thy faithfulness o reacheth unto the clouds p.

* Psal. 57. 10. & 108. 4.

m Though this be the Disposition and Carriage of mine Enemies towards me, and therefore I can expect no good from them, yet thou, O Lord, blessed be thy Name, art of another Temper; they are cruel and perfidious and unrighteous, but thou art infinite in Mercy, and Faithfulness, and Righteousness, and loving Kindness, as it here follows; and therefore though I despair of them, yet I trust in thee, as other men do, for these Reasons, v. 7. n Or, is unto (as the Prefix Beth oft signifies, as Gen. 11. 4. and elsewhere, and as it is here explained in the following Clause) the Heavens. As it is on the Earth, of which there was no question, so it reacheth thence to the Heavens, (i. e.) It is infinite and incomprehensible. o The truth both of thy Threatnings, against thine and mine Enemies, and of thy Promises made to me, and other good Men. p (i. e.) Is far above our reach, greater and higher than we can apprehend it.

6. Thy righteousness q is like † the great mountains r; thy * judgments s are a great deep t: O LORD, * thou preservest man and beast u.

† Heb. the mountains of God. Psal. 71. 19.

* Job 11. 8.

q In all thy Counsels and Ways, in the Government of the World. r Either, 1. Stedfast and unmoveable. Or, 2. Eminent and Conspicuous to all men: Or rather, 3. Very high and out of our reach: For so it agrees best with the foregoing, and following Expressions. s (i. e.) Thy Executions of thy Counsels, or thy Administrations of the Affairs of the World, and of thy Church. t (i. e.) Unsearchable, as the Ocean is in some Parts. u The worst of Men; yea, and the brute Beasts have Experience of thy Care and Kindness

Rom. 11. 33. * Job 7. 20. 1 Tim. 4. 10.

neſs, and therefore I have no Reaſon to doubt of it.

† Heb. precious. * Pſal. 103. 4.

7. How † excellent is thy * loving kindneſs x, O God! therefore the children of men put their truſt under the ſhadow of thy wings y.

x Or, thy Mercy: For it is the ſame Word, which is uſed and ſo rendred, v. 5. The Sence is, though all thine Attributes now reckoned, and the reſt of them be excellent and Glorious, yet above all thy Mercy is moſt Excellent or Precioſts and amiable, as being moſt neceſſary and beneficial unto us, poor ſinful miſerable men. y (i. e.) Cheerfully commit themſelves to thy Care and Kindneſs, notwithſtanding their own Sinfulneſs, and the Rage and Power of their Adverſaries, againſt all which thy Mercy is a ſufficient ſecurity.

* Pſal. 65. 4. † Heb. watered. prov. 5. 19. Iſa. 43. 24. Jer. 31. 14.

8. They z * ſhall be † abundantly ſatisfied a, with the fatneſs of thy houſe b: and thou ſhalt make them drink c, of the river d of thy pleaſures e.

z (i. e.) Thoſe Children of Men who truſt in thee, as he now ſaid. a Though now they are ſtraitned, oppreſſed and perſecuted, yet they ſhall not only be Protected and Supported for the preſent, but in due time, ſhall have all their Wants and Deſires fully ſatisfied. Heb. ſhall be made Drunk, (i. e.) Shall be as it were over-whelmed with the plenty of it, which they ſhall no more be able to comprehend, than a drunken Man is able, perfectly to Underſtand and Judge of things; and ſhall be free as drunken Men, alſo are from all Cares and Fears, Either, of not obtaining it, or of loſing it. b With thoſe Rich and delightful Proviſions, which thou haſt prepared for them in thy Habitation. (i. e.) Either in the Tabernacle, where they uſed to Feaſt upon the Remainders of the Sacrifices; to which alſo he ſeems here to allude. Or rather, 2. In Heaven; which is called God's Houſe, both in Scripture, as Job. 14. 2. and in divers Antient heathen Authors. For the Expreſſions here uſed, as are too Magnificent to be beſtowed upon thoſe Feaſts, or indeed upon any of the Enjoyments of this Life, and do ill become him, who profeſſedly diſowns the having of his Portion in this Life, and declares his Expectation of happineſs in the next Life. Pſal. 17. 14, 15. And ſeeing it is apparent, from Heb. 11. and from many other Scriptures, both of the Old and New Teſtament, that both David and Job, and Abraham, and the reſt of the Holy Patriarchs and Prophets, had a firm Belief and Hope of the future Life, and their Felicity therein; it ſeems moſt reaſonable to underſtand all thoſe Paſſages of David, and the other Prophets of it, which naturally, and without any force may be ſo underſtood: Of which number certainly this Verſe, and the following is one. c Before they had Fatneſs, (i. e.) Fat Meats, and New Drink, to note the Compleatneſs of their Feaſt. d Which notes both their plenty, and their Conſtancy and Perpetuity. e Which thou prepareſt, and which thou enjoyeſt; whence it is called the joy of the Lord, Mat. 25. 21. Or this notes their great Eminency; for things moſt excellent in their kinds are intituled to God, as the Goodlieſt Cedars, Mountains, &c. are called, Cedars of God, Mountains of God, &c.

9. For with thee f is the fountain g of Life h: in thy light i, ſhall we k ſee light l.

f (i. e.) In thy Power to give it, and in thy preſence to be enjoyed. g Which notes, 1. Cauſality. It is in God as in a Fountain, and from him is derived to us, 2. Abundance, 3. Excellency. Water is ſweeteſt in the Fountain: and Fountains were rare and highly prized in thoſe hot Countries. h Of that Glorious and Bleſſed, and endleſs Life, which alone is worthy of the Name of Life, this Life being only a paſſage to Death, and a Theatre of great and manifold Calamities. Although it be true, that God is the Fountain, both of Natural and Spiritual Life. i In the light of thy Countenance or glorious Preſence, which then ſhall be fully manifeſted unto us, when we ſhall ſee thee clearly, and Face to Face, and not through a Glaſs, and darkly, as we now ſee, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Comp. Pſal. 17. 15. k (i. e.) Enjoy, as ſeeing frequently ſignifies; of which ſee on Pſal. 34. 12. l The light of Life, as it is called, Job. 8. 12. Light in this Branch being the ſame thing with Life in the former, (i. e.) Joy and Comfort, and Happineſs, which is oft ſignified by Light, as the contrary is by Darkneſs. See Job 29. 3. Pſal. 27. 1. Iſa. 9. 2. There we ſhall have pure Light, without any mixture of Darkneſs. The word Light, is Elegantly repeated, in another ſignification; in the former Clauſe, it is Light diſcovering, in this Light diſcovered or enjoyed.

† Heb. drawn out at length. * Pſal. 64. 10. & 125. 4.

10. O † continue m thy loving kindneſs unto them, that know thee n: and thy righteouſneſs o to * the upright in heart.

m As this Word ſignifies, Pſal. 85. 5. Eccleſ. 2. 3. Jer. 31. 3. As thou haſt begun, ſo continue the Manifeſtation and Exhibition of it, both in this Life, and to the next. Or, extend: Or, draw forth. Let it not be like a Fountain ſealed, but let it be drawn forth for their Comfort. n (i. e.) Sincerely love thee, as it is explained in the next Clauſe: for knowing implies affection, as Pſal. 9. 10. and oft elſewhere. o Which will appear in giving them that Protection and Aſſiſtance, which thou art by thy Nature inclined, and by thy Promiſe engaged to give them.

11. Let not the foot of pride p come againſt me q, and let not the hand of the wicked remove me r.

p (i. e.) Of my proud and inſolent Enemies: the Abſtract being put for the Concrete, as Jer. 50. 31, 32. So alſo Prov. 12. 27. and 13. 6. q Or, upon me, to wit, ſo as to overthrow, or remove me, as it is in the next Clauſe. r Either, 1. From my truſt in thee, or Obedience to thee. Or, 2. From my place and ſtation, from the Land of my Nativity, and the place of thy VVorſhip. Or, ſhake me, or caſt me down, (i. e.) Subdue and deſtroy me.

12. There s are the workers of iniquity fallen t: they are caſt down, and ſhall not be able to riſe.

s Where they come againſt me, and hope to ruin me. He ſeems as it were to point at the place with his Finger, as if it were already done, and he could tell all the Circumſtances of it. Or, Then, (i. e.) VVhen they thought all ſure, and me irrecoverably loſt. t (i. e.) They ſhall certainly and ſuddenly fall; which the Prophets uſe to expreſs, in the time paſt.

PSAL. XXXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

The deſign of this Pſalm, is to defend the Providence of God, and to ſatisfie the minds of Men, in that great queſtion, concerning the ſeeming inequality of God's diſpenſations, in afflicting good men, and giving Proſperity to the worſt of Men, and to inſtruct God's People, how to demean themſelves in their preſent Condition, and what ſupports and Comforts they have in it.

A Pſalm of David.

1. FRet * not thy ſelf, becauſe of evil doers b, neither be thou envious c, againſt the workers of iniquity. * Pſal. 73. 3. Prov. 23. 17. & 24. 1. 9. 19 a Give not way to immoderate Grief or Anger, or impatience. b Becauſe they proſper in their wicked Enterprizes, whilſt thou art ſorely afflicted. c Eſteeming them Happy, and ſecretly wiſhing that thou wert in their Condition.

2. For they ſhall ſoon be cut down like the graſs, and whither as the green herb d.

d For their Happineſs, the matter of thy Envy, is but ſhort-lived.

3. Truſt in the LORD e, and do good f, ſo ſhalt thou dwell in the land g, and † verily thou ſhalt be fed h. † Heb. in Truth. Or, ſtableneſs.

e Depend upon God's Providence, and Promiſe, for thy Protection and Suſtentation: or their Infidelity is the Root of their wickedneſs. f Continue in the practiſe of that which is good and well-pleaſing to God. g (i. e.) Upon this Condition, ſhalt dwell ſafely and quietly in Canaan; as God had oft Promiſed. In the Hebrew it is, dwell in the Land, as if it were a Command, to abide in Canaan when Troubles come, and not to flee to the Philiſtines, or other Heathens for ſhelter, as he had fooliſhly done. But it is rather a Promiſe, by Comp. this with v. 27, 29. ſuch Promiſes being oft expreſſed by Imperative Verbs put for Futures, as Gen. 12. 2. and 42. 18. Pſal. 128. 6. Amos. 5. 4. h Heb. Thou ſhalt be fed (i. e. every way provided for) in Truth, (i. e.) Truly or aſſuredly; Or, with or by Faith, as this Word ſignifies. (i. e.) By thy truſting in the Lord, thou ſhalt Live by thy Faith, as it is ſaid, Habak. 2. 4.

4. Delight thy ſelf alſo in the LORD i; and he ſhall give thee the deſires of thine heart k.

i In his Favour and Service, and in the ſtudy of his Word and Promiſes. k (i. e.) Thy juſt Deſires, or whatſoever is truly truly deſirable and good for thee. Which Limitation is neceſſarily to be underſtood, both from divers places of Scripture, and from the Nature of the things; for it is unreaſonable to imagine that God would engage himſelf to grant their ſinful and inordinate Deſires, and it would alſo be a Curſe to them, to have them granted.

† Heb Roll thy way upon the LORD. * Pſal. 55. 22. Prov. 16. 3. Mat. 6. 25. Luk. 12. 22. 1 Pet. 5. 7.

5. † * Commit thy way l unto the LORD: truſt alſo in him, and he ſhall bring it to paſs m.

l (i. e.) All thy Cares and Buſineſs, thy Deſires and Neceſſities. Commend them to God by fervent Prayer, referring them to his good Will, and expecting an Happy iſſue of all from him. m Heb. He ſhall do, or Work, to wit, for thee, or what is fit to be done, or what thou deſireſt, in the Sence given on v. 4.

6. And he ſhall bring forth n thy righteouſneſs as the light o, and thy judgment p as the noon-day.

n To the view of the World; from which it hath hitherto ſeemed to be hid, or Eclipſed by Reproaches, and by grievous Calamities, which moſt men are apt to miſtake for Tokens, and Puniſhments of great Wickedneſs. o It ſhall be as viſible to Men, as the light of the Sun, and that at Noon-day, as it is in the next Branch. So effectually will I plead thy Cauſe. p The ſame thing with Righteouſneſs, as this Word is uſed here below, v. 28. and 99. 4. and oft elſewhere.

† Heb. be ſilent to the LORD.

7. † Reſt in the LORD q, and wait patiently for him: fret not thy ſelf q becauſe of him who proſpereth in his way r, becauſe of the man who bringeth wicked devices to paſs.

q Heb. Be ſilent unto, Or, for, Or, becauſe of the Lord; (i. e.) Do not murmur nor repine at his dealings, but ſilently and quietly ſubmit to his Will, and adore his Judgments, and as it follows, Wait for his Help. This Advice and Command is preſſed again and again, to teach us how hard it is, to learn and practiſe this Leſſon. r (i. e.) In his evil way, as it is limited in the following Words.

8. Ceaſe from anger s, and forſake wrath: fret not thy ſelf in any wiſe, to do evil t.

s Either againſt the ſinner for his Succeſs; or againſt God, for ſo diſpoſing of things, as Jonah was, Ch. 4. 1. t Or, at leaſt ſo far as to do Evil. If any ſuch Anger, or Grief, do ſecretly ariſe in thee, take Care that it do not tranſport thee; Either, To reproach, or diſtruſt God's Providence, or to the diſlike of his ways, or to an Approbation, or Imitation of the wicked Practices of thoſe Men, in hopes of the ſame ſucceſs.

9. For evil doers ſhall be cut off u: but thoſe that wait upon the LORD, they ſhall inherit the Earth x.

u To wit, from the Earth, by Comparing this with the next Clauſe, and with Pſal. 34. 16. Their end ſhall certainly be moſt miſerable. x According to God's Promiſe, oft made to ſuch; which alſo for the moſt part was literally fulfilled in that ſtate of the Church; and if it was not, it was fulfilled with far greater Advantage, in Spiritual and Eternal Bleſſings.

* Job 7. 10. & 20. 9.

10. For yet a little while y and the wicked ſhall not be z: yea, * thou ſhalt diligently conſider his place a, and it ſhall not be b.

y Their Time and Proſperity is very ſhort, and therefore no matter of Envy. z To wit, in the Land of the Living. He ſhall be dead and gone, as this Phraſe is commonly taken. a Induſtriouſly ſeeking to find him. b (i. e.) His place and Eſtate, and Glory ſhall be gone. Or, he ſhall not be, as before.

* Pſal. 25. 9. Mat. 5. 5.

11. * But the meek c ſhall inherit the earth, and ſhall delight themſelves in the abundance of peace d.

c (i. e.) The Godly, who are frequently thus called, as Pſal. 22. 26. and 149. 4. thoſe who Patiently bear God's afflicting hand, and meekly paſs by injuries from ungodly men. d Partly, of outward Peace and Proſperity, which God in his due time will give them: and principally of inward peace and ſatisfaction of Mind, in the Sence of God's Favour, and the aſſurance of his own endleſs Happineſs.

‖ Or, Practiſeth.

12. The wicked ‖ plotteth againſt the juſt, and gnaſheth upon him with his teeth e.

e Out of Malice and Rage. See on Pſal. 35. 16.

* Pſal. 2. 4.

13. * The LORD ſhall laugh at him f, for he ſeeth that his day g is coming.

f (i.e.) Shall deſpiſe and deride all their Hopes, and indeavours againſt the good, as moſt vain and fooliſh. g Either, 1. God's day, which is an uſual Phraſe, as Iſa. 2. 12, and 13. 9. or 2. His own day, as 1 Sam. 26. 10. Ezek. 21. 25. 29. Both ſignifie the ſame thing, the day appointed by God for his Puniſhment or Deſtruction, as Iſa. 9. 4. Jer. 50. 27.

14. The wicked have drawn out the ſword, and have bent their bow h to caſt down the poor and needy, and to ſlay † ſuch as be of upright converſation i.

† Heb The upright of way.

h They are furniſhed with all ſorts of Arms, and are ready to give the deadly blow. i Such againſt whom they have no Quarrel, for any injury they have done them, but only for their Integrity and Righteouſneſs, or becauſe they are better than themſelves, and will not comply with their wicked Counſels and Courſes.

15. Their ſword ſhall enter into their own heart k, and their bows ſhall be broken.

k God will not only defend the upright from their miſchievous Deſigns, but will make them to fall upon their own Heads.

16. A little that a righteous man hath, is better than the riches of many wicked l.

l Becauſe he hath it with many great and glorious Advantages, with God's Favour and Bleſſings, with great Serenity and Satisfaction of his own Mind, with the Conſolation of God's Spirit, and the aſſurance of everlaſting Felicity, which is infinitely more Deſirable and Comfortable than all Earthly Poſſeſſions: whilſt wicked mens Riches are loaded with many Incumbrances, with the Wrath and Curſe of God, the Torment of their own Conſciences and Paſſions, and the dreadful expectation of an after-reckoning, and of endleſs Miſeries.

17. For * the arms of the wicked ſhall be broken: but the LORD upholdeth the righteous m.

* Pſal. 10. 15.

m This is a Proof of what he ſaid, v. 16. For what the wicked have, ſhall ſuddenly be loſt and gone, but God will maintain the righteous in their happy Eſtate.

18. The LORD * knoweth n the days of the upright o: and their inheritance ſhall be for ever p.

n Obſerveth with ſingular Care and Affection. o (i. e.) Their Condition and all things, which do or may befal them, their Dangers and Fears, and ſuffering from ungodly men; and therefore will watch over them, and preſerve them from all the Deſigns and Attempts of their Enemies, Days or Years, or Times, are oft put for things done, or Events happening in them, as Deut. 32. 7. Pſal. 31. 15. and 77. 5. and 143. 5. Iſa. 63. 11. p To them and to their ſeed for ever: Comp. v. 29. And when they dye, their inheritance is not loſt, but exchanged for one infinitely better.

19. They ſhall not be aſhamed q in the evil time: and * in the days of famine, they ſhall be ſatisfied.

* Pſal 33. 19.

q For the diſappointment of their Hopes, but their Hopes and Deſires ſhall be ſatisfied, as it follows.

20. But the wicked ſhall periſh, and the Enemies of the LORD ſhall be † as the fat of lambs r, they ſhall conſume: into ſmoke s ſhall they conſume away.

† Heb The preciouſneſs of Lambs.

r Which in an inſtant melteth before the Fire. s (i.e.) Utterly and irrecoverably.

21. The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again t: * but the righteous ſheweth mercy, and giveth.

* Pſal. 112. 9.

t Either through Covetouſneſs and injuſtice; Or rather, becauſe of that great penury into which God ſhall bring him, whilſt the righteous is not only provided ſufficiently for himſelf, but hath abundance and to ſpare for others. For he is here comparing the wicked and the righteous, not ſo much in their Vertues or moral Qualities, as in their outward Conditions, which alſo appears from the following Verſe, which gives the reaſon of this.

22. For ſuch as be bleſſed of him u, ſhall inherit the earth; and they that be curſed of him, ſhall be cut off.

u (i. e.) Of the Lord, as appears both from v. 20. where he is named, and from the Nature of the thing, this being God's Prerogative to bleſs or to curſe men. And this he mentions, both as the Foundation, and as the Proof of the certainty, of their future Happineſs.

23 The ſteps of a good man x, are ‖ ordered y by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way z.

x Or, of that Man, to wit, the Righteous or Bleſſed Man, expreſſed, v. 21, 22. y Or, directed or diſpoſed, (i.e.) So governed, as to attain the end and happy iſſue at which he aims. Or, ſtrengthned, or eſtabliſhed, ſo as he ſhall not ſtumble nor fall into miſchief. For ſtill he ſeems to be deſcribing not their Vertue, but their Felicity. z Or, and he favoureth his way, (i.e.) Succeeds and proſpers his Counſels and Enterprizes.

24. * Though he fall a, he ſhall not be utterly caſt down b; for the LORD upholdeth him with his hand.

* Prov. 24. 16. 2 Cor. 4. 9.

a Either, 1. Into ſin, as this Word is uſed, Jer. 8. 4. 1. 1 Cor. 10. 12. Or rather, 2 Into Diſtreſs or Trouble, as Mic. 7. 8. b (i.e.) Not totally, nor irrecoverably Ruined.

25. I have been young, and now am old: yet have I not ſeen the righteous forſaken, nor his ſeed begging bread c.

c This aſſertion ſeems to be contradicted by many experiences: nor can it be denied, that both good Men and their Children, have ſometimes been reduced to great want. Queſt. How then is this true? Anſ. 1 Some render the laſt Clauſe thus, nor (did I ever ſee) his ſeed (to wit, forſaken, as was now ſaid) though begging Bread. So the Sence is, I have ſeen him brought to beggery, yet even then God did not forſake him. But this Sence agrees not with the Context, nor Scope, which is to ſhew the plenty and proſperity, wherewith God bleſſeth him. 2. This is to be underſtood of the ſeed of the Righteous, treading in their Fathers ſteps, from which if they degenerate, they loſe all their Priviledges, as many places of Scripture witneſs. 3. Some few Exceptions; do not deſtroy the truth of a general Propoſition. 4. Theſe temporal promiſes were more expreſs, and particular to the Jews in the times of the Old Teſtament, than to Chriſtians in the New, and therefore were more literally fulfilled. 5. He ſpeaks not of any kind of wanting or deſiring, or receiving Relief from others, for ſo David himſelf did, 1 Sam. 21. 3. and 25. 8. but of the Cuſtomary practice and trade of begging, which was threatned as a Curſe to the diſobedient, Deut. 28. Pſal. 109. 10. 6. Not begging, to wit, in vain, Or, ſo as to be forſaken, as was now expreſſed, and may very well be here underſtood, Or, ſo as not to be ſuſtained or relieved by others. 7. David ſpeaks only of his own Experience, which if ſince that time it be contradicted by other mens Experiences, it is no more than what happens in all the concernments of humane life.

26. * He is † ever merciful, and lendeth d: and his ſeed is bleſſed e.

* Pſal. 112. 9. † Heb. all the day.

d He is ſo far from begging from others, that he hath Ability as well as Inclination, to give or lend to others, as need requires. e Not only with Spiritual, but with Temporal bleſſings. So far ſhall he be from waſting his Eſtate, and undoing himſelf, and Family by his Bounty and Charity, as Covetous Worldings objected or feared.

27 * Depart from evil, And do good f: and dwell g for evermore h.

* Pſal. 34. 14.

f Having therefore theſe glorious promiſes and priviledges, let no man do any evil or unjuſt thing, to enrich or ſecure himſelf, nor abſtaining from pious and charitable Actions, for fear of undoing himſelf by them, but let every man live in the conſcionable diſcharge of all his Duties to God and Men, committing himſelf and all his Affairs to God's fatherly care and providence, and confidently expecting his Bleſſing thereupon. g (i.e.) Thou ſhalt dwell, as before, v. 3. to wit, in the Land, as is expreſſed, v. 3. and afterwards in Heaven. h Either properly: Or for a long time; of which that Word is oft uſed.

28. For the LORD loveth judgment i, and forſaketh not his Saints k, * they are preſerved for ever: but the ſeed of the wicked ſhall be cut off.

* Pſal. 102. 28.

i (i.e.) Juſt judgment, or Righteouſneſs, as that Word is oft taken, as hath been ſhewed again and again; Either, 1. In himſelf, (i.e.) He loveth to execute Judgment upon the Wicked, and for the Righteous; which he doth in the manner expreſſed in this Pſalm. Or, 2. In the Righteous themſelves, whoſe Juſtice and Piety, and Charity he ſees and loves, and will reward it. k Or, his Favourites, or they to whom he hath a good Will, Or, his bountiful Ones, who exerciſe Benignity and Charity to others.

29. * The righteous ſhall inherit the land l, and dwell therein for ever m.

* Prov. 2. 21.

l See on v. 3. m See on v. 18.

30. * The mouth of the righteous ſpeaketh n wiſdom o; and his tongue talketh of judgment o.

* Prov. 10. 31.

n And that freely, and cuſtomarily, and from his heart, as the next Verſe ſhews. Having ſhewed in divers Verſes, God's ſingular care over, and reſpect to the Righteous, he proceeds to give a character of them, and withal to aſſign one reaſon of the great Difference of God's dealings with them, and with other Men. o Either, 1. For the manner of it, with Wiſdom and Judgment. Or rather, 2. For the matter of it, Heavenly Wiſdom, and God's judgment, or Word, or Law, as it follows, v 31. When the Diſcourſes of other Men are either wicked or vain, and uſeleſs, his are ſerious and edifying, and pious concerning the word and ways of God.

31. * The law of his God is in his heart p. * none of his ‖ ſteps ſhall ſlide q.

* Pſal 40. 8. & 119. 98. Iſa. 51. 7. * Pſal. 38. 17. & 40. 2. ‖ Or, goings.

p According to God's command, Deut. 6. 6. and promiſe, Heb. 8. 10. His Thoughts and Meditations, and Affections are fixed upon it. He doth not talk Religiouſly in Deſign, or with Oſtentation, but out of the abundance of his Heart, Mat 12. 35. q This paſſage deſcribes, Either, 1. His ſafety, conſequent upon his piety; God will uphold and preſerve him, from falling into that Miſchief, which wicked men plot againſt him. Or rather, 2. His Vertue or Piety: Which is evidenced by his Words, v 30. by his heart, in the former part of this verſe, and by his Actions in theſe words. His ſteps or goings (i.e. his Actions) ſhall not (or rather, do not: For this Verb, though Future, may and ſhould be rendred by the preſent, as futures frequently are in the Hebrew Language, and as the two foregoing future Verbs are rendred, v. 30.) ſlide, or ſlip, or ſwerve, to wit, from the Rule, or from God's Law. Which is to be underſtood as that paſſage, Pſal 119. 3. They do no iniquity; and ſome ſuch Expreſſions, not ſimply and abſolutely, as if all good men were ſinleſs; which is abundantly confuted, both by many Scriptures and by univerſal experience; but comparatively, and in reſpect of his Deſign and Courſe, or Cuſtom. His Converſation is ordinarily regular and unblameable. He not only begins well, but conſtantly perſeveres in God's ways, and will not be drawn to forſake God and Religion, upon any Terms.

32. The wicked watcheth r the righteous, and ſeeketh to ſlay him.

r To find out a fit ſeaſon or occaſion to deſtroy him.

33. The LORD will not leave him in his hand s, nor condemn him t when he is judged.

s (i.e.) Not give him up to his power and rage. t (i.e.) Not give his conſent to the Sentence of Condemnation, which the wicked have pronounced againſt him, but will juſtifie him, and vindicate his innocency and deliver him: For ſuch negatives do oft imply the contrary affirmatives, as God's not holding a man Guiltleſs, commonly implies that he will ſeverely puniſh him.

34. Wait on the LORD u, and keep his * way x, and he ſhall exalt thee to inherit the land: * when the wicked are cut off, thou ſhalt ſee it y.

* Pſal 119. 32, 33, 34. * Pſal. 91. 8.

u Seeking and truſting to him, and to him only, for help and deliverance. x Continue in the practice of thy duty, or in thoſe ways which God hath preſcribed to thee in his word, and do not uſe indirect and irregular means to deliver thy ſelf. y Thou ſhalt not only eſcape the Deſtruction which they deſign for thee, but ſhalt live to ſee their ruin.

35. * I have ſeen the wicked in great power z, and ſpreading himſelf a like a ‖ green bay-tree b.

* Job 5. 3. ‖ Or, a green Tree that groweth in his own ſoil.

z Or, Formidable: Not only himſelf out of danger, as it ſeemed, but terrible to others. a And therefore firmly and deeply rooted. b Which is continually green and flouriſhing, yea even in the Winter ſeaſon. Or, like a green Tree in its own Native ſoil; where Trees flouriſh much better, than when they are tranſplanted into another ſoil.

36. Yet he paſſed away c, and lo, he was not: yea, I ſought him, but he could not be found d.

c He was gone in an inſtant, like a Tree blaſted and blown down, or cut off and rooted out, and carried away in a Moment. d There was no Monument nor remainder of him left.

37 Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace e.

e Though he may meet with Troubles in his way, yet all ſhall end well with him, he ſhall be happy at laſt.

38. But the tranſgreſſours ſhall be deſtroyed together f, the end of the wicked ſhall be cut off g.

f Or, alike, one as well as another, all without any Exception or reſpect of perſons. g (i.e.) He ſhall be cut off at at laſt, or in the End. His Proſperity ſhall end in Deſtruction. Or, the Poſterity (as this Word ſignifies, *Pſal.*109. 13. *Jer.*31.17. *Ezek.*23. 25. *Dan.*11.4.) of the wicked, &c.

39 But the ſalvation of the righteous is of the LORD h, he is their ſtrength in the time of trouble.

h And therefore it ſhall certainly come to them.

40. And the LORD ſhall help them and deliver them: he ſhall deliver them from the wicked, and ſave them becauſe they truſt in him.

PSAL. XXXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This is reckoned one of David's penitential Pſalms. It was Compoſed upon occaſion of ſome ſore Diſeaſe, or grievous Calamity; which he rightly judged to be inflicted upon him for his ſins.

* Pſal. 70. Tit. A Pſalm of David to bring * to remembrance a.

a Either, 1. To God, that by this humble and mournful Prayer, he might prevail with God, to remember and Pity him; for now he ſeemed quite to have forgotten him. Or, 2. To himſelf, that by reviewing this Pſalm afterwards, he might call to Mind his former Danger and Miſery, and God's wonderful mercy in delivering him from them; which we are very apt to forget. And that others alſo might remember and conſider what God had done to him, firſt in Chaſtening, and then in reſtoring him, and might make uſe of his Example for their benefit.

1. O LORD, rebuke me not in thy wrath, neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure b.

b I Confeſs, I both deſerve Chaſtiſement and need it, and therefore I deſire not that thou wouldeſt remove it, but onely moderate it. See the ſame Expreſſion, Pſal. 6. 1.

* Job 6. 4. 2. For * thine arrows c ſtick faſt in me, and thy hand preſſeth me ſore d.

c (i.e.) Thy Judgments inflicted upon my outward and inward Man, oft Compared to Arrows, as Deut. 32. 23. Pſal. 7. 13. and 45. 5. and 91. 5. d Or, comes down upon me, as when a ſtrong man lifts up his hand and Weapon, that it may fall down with greater Violence, and make the deeper Wound.

* Pſal. 6. 2. †Heb. Peace, Or, Health. 3. There is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh, becauſe of thine anger: * neither is there any †reſt in my bones e, becauſe of my ſin f.

e My diſeaſe or grief, hath ſeized upon all the parts of my Body, my very Bones not excepted, ſo that my Bed can give me no reſt. f Which hath provoked thee, to deal thus ſeverely with me.

* Ezra 9. 6. 4. For mine iniquities g * are gone over my head h: as an heavy burden, they are too heavy for me.

g Or, the Puniſhment of mine iniquities, as this Word is frequently uſed: Which beſt agrees both with the foregoing and following Verſes, and with the Metaphor here uſed; which in other places of Scripture is generally applyed to Afflictions, and not to ſins. h Like deep Waters wherewith I am overwhelmed and almoſt drowned, Pſal. 42. 7. and 69. 2. and 124. 4, 5.

5. My wounds ſtink, and are corrupt i: becauſe of my fooliſhneſs k.

i The Bruiſes and Sores cauſed by my Diſeaſe, are not onely painful but loathſome, to my ſelf and to others. k (i. e.) Sin, which really is, and is commonly called folly, as Pſal. 69. 5. Prov. 13. 16. and 14. 17. and 15. 2, &c.

* Heb. Cryed. ‖ Or, in black. Mal. 3. 14. 6. I am †troubled l, I am bowed down greatly; I go ‖ mourning m all the day long.

l Heb. Diſtorted, or Depreſſed; Or, as it is expreſſed by another Word, ſignifying the ſame thing, bowed down, to wit, in my Body, as diſeaſed Perſons commonly are, and withal dejected in my Mind. m Heb. In black, the ſign of Mourning, which may here ſignifie the thing, as ſigns oft do. When for my eaſe I riſe out of my Bed and walk, or rather Creep about in my Chamber, I do it with a ſad Heart, and dejected Countenance. Or, if he did walk further, his Diſeaſe had ſome Intervals and Mitigations. Or going, may be here meant of his Languiſhing, or going towards the Grave, as this ſame Word is uſed, Gen. 15. 2. Comp. with 25. 32. Joſ. 23. 14.

7. For my loins are filled with a loathſome diſeaſe n: and there is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh.

n Or, with filthineſs: Or, with ſcorching Heat. The Diſeaſe might be ſome burning Feaver, being alſo Malignant or Peſtilential, either burning inwardly, or breaking forth outwardly, in Carbuncles, or Boyls. It is true, this and the other Expreſſions may be taken Figuratively, of ſome grievous Calamity. But we ſhould not forſake the proper and the literal Sence of the Words without neceſſity, which ſeems not to be in this place.

8. I am feeble and ſore broken: I have roared o by reaſon of the diſquietneſs of my heart p.

o Like a Bear or a Lyon, through extreme Pain and Miſery. p For the great Anxiety and Torment of my Mind, cauſed by the deep Sence of my ſins, and of God's wrath, and of the ſad Iſſue of my Diſeaſe; which being added to my bodily Pains, makes them more intolerable.

9. Lord, all my deſire is before thee: and my groaning is not hid from thee q.

q I do not utter all theſe Complaints, nor rear out that thou mayſt hear and know them, for thou heareſt and knoweſt, even my loweſt Groans; yea, mine inward Deſires, and all my Neceſſities. And therefore, I pray thee, Pity and deliver me, as, I truſt, thou wilt do.

10. My heart panteth r, my ſtrength faileth me: as for the light of mine eyes, it alſo † is gone from me s. † Heb. is not with me.

r Or, goes round, Wanders hither and thither, as the Word ſignifies, is perplexed and toſſed, with many and various Thoughts, not knowing what to do, nor whither to go. s Mine Eyes are grown dim; Either, through Grief and Tears, as Pſal. 6. 7. Or through weakneſs, as 1 Sam. 14. 28, 29.

* Pſal. 31. 11. Mat. 27. 55. † Heb. ſtroke. ‖ Or, my Neighbours. 11. * My lover and my friends ſtand aloof t, from my † ſore: and ‖ my kinſmen ſtand afar off.

t Either, through Neglect and Contempt, or Diſdain of me: Or, through Delicacy and Abhorrency, from loathſome and ſadding Spectacles: Or, through Fear of Infection, or ſome other Inconveniences.

12. They alſo that ſeek after my life, lay ſnares for me u: and they that ſeek my hurt, ſpeak miſchievous things, and imagine deceits x all the day long.

u That, if my Diſeaſe do not kill me, they may deſtroy me ſome other way. x They deſign Miſchief, but cover it with fair Pretences.

13. But I, as a deaf man, heard not; and I was as a dumb man, that openeth not his mouth y.

y I carried my ſelf towards them, as if I had no Ears to hear, what they ſaid either to me, or for me, nor a Tongue to Anſwer, or reprove them for their Reproaches and Calumnies. Which he did not for want of juſt Anſwers to them, but to teſtifie his Humiliation for his ſins, and his patient Submiſſion to, and Acceptation of the Puniſhment which he had brought upon himſelf. Of which ſee an inſtance, 2 Sam. 16. 10, 11, 12. Wherein alſo he was an eminent Type of Chriſt, who when he was reviled, reviled not again, 1 Pet. 2. 23.

14. Thus I was as a man that heareth not, and in whoſe mouth are no reproofs z.

z Or, Arguments, to Convince or Confute them, or to defend my ſelf.

‖ Or, Thee do I wait for. ‖ Or, Anſwer. 15. For ‖ in thee, O LORD, do I hope a: thou wilt ‖ hear, O LORD my God.

a I bore their Carriage ſilently and patiently, becauſe I hoped and knew that thou wouldeſt anſwer for me, and plead my Cauſe better than my ſelf; which I would not prevent by my impatience, and avenging my ſelf. Or, But in thee do I hope, (i.e.) Though Friends forſake me, and mine Enemies plot and practiſe againſt me, yet I do not deſpair, becauſe I have thee on my ſide.

16. For I ſaid b, Hear me, leſt otherwiſe they ſhould rejoyce over me c: when my foot ſlippeth d, they magnifie themſelves againſt me e.

b To wit, in my Heart and Prayers, I uſed this Argument which I knew was prevalent. c In my Deſtruction, which alſo will reflect upon thee; who haſt undertaken to defend and ſave me, and for whoſe ſake I ſuffer ſo much from theſe wicked Men, v. 20. d When I fall either into any groſs ſin, or into any Miſery, or into both, as I have now done. e They triumph in the accompliſhment of their Deſigns, or Deſires.

† Heb. for Halting. Pſal. 35. 15. Mic. 4. 7. 17. For I am ready † to halt f, and my ſorrow is continually before me g.

f Just falling into utter destruction; see Jer. 20. 10. and therefore, if thou dost not help me speedily, it will be too late. g I am deeply and constantly sensible of thy just hand, and of my sins the cause of it; wherewith I shall be overwhelmed, it thou dost not prevent it.

18. For I will declare mine iniquity h; I will be sorry i for my sin k.

h Either to thee: Or publickly to the World, because my sin hath been publick and scandalous. i Heb. I will be (Or, I am: Futures being oft so taken) Solicitous or Anxious, full of grief for what is past, and of cares and fears for the future: Partly, lest I should relapse into the same folly, upon new temptations; and partly, lest thou shouldest cut me off, for my sins. Therefore pity and pardon, and save me. k Or, by reason of my sin, or upon that occasion.

† Heb. being living, are strong.

19. But mine enemies † are lively l, and they are strong: and they that hate me wrongfully are multiplied.

l Heb. Living, (i. e.) Thriving or Flourishing, or Prosperous, as Life is used, Psal. 22. 26. and 34. 12. and elsewhere.

* Psal. 35. 12.

20. They also * that render evil for good m, are mine adversaries: because I follow the thing that good is n.

21. Forsake me not, O LORD: O my God, be not far from me.

† Heb. for my help.

22. Make haste † to help me, O LORD my salvation.

m They hate and persecute me, not only without any injury or provocation on my part, but as it were in requital of the good, which I have done to them. n Because I love, and diligently practise Justice and Godliness, which they hate, and which they take to be a reproach to them, and which I did exercise, as I had opportunity, in the punishment of such as they are. Compare Joh. 15. 19. 1 Joh. 3. 12.

PSAL. XXXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was written by David, when his Mind was much discomposed and disquieted, with the Contemplation of the Prosperity of sinners, and the afflictions of the Godly; which being exemplified in himself and in his Enemies, he speaks of the case not in general, but as in his own person.

* 1 Chr. 25. 1.

To the chief musician, even to * Jeduthun a, A Psalm of David.

a One of the three chief Masters of the Sacred Musick: Of whom see 1 Chron. 16. 41, 42. 2 Chron. 5. 12.

1. I Said b, I will take heed to my ways c, that I sin not with my tongue d: I will keep † my mouth as with a bridle e, while the wicked is before me f.

† Heb. a bridle, or muzzle for my mouth.

b I fully resolved, c (i. e.) To order all my actions aright, and particularly to govern my tongue, which is very hard to do, and especially under these provocations. d That, if any evil thoughts or passions do arise in me, I will endeavour to suppress and mortifie them, and not suffer them to boil and break forth, into sinful and scandalous reflections upon God and his Providence, as they usually do upon such occasions. e (i. e.) With all possible care and diligence. The Phrase implies the great difficulty of ruling the tongue. f Either, 1. In my presence. Or rather, 2. In my thoughts, as the same Phrase is understood, Psal. 51. 3. (i. e.) Whilst I consider the flourishing estate of wicked men.

2. I was dumb with silence g, I held my peace,

even from good h, and my sorrow was † stirred i.

g I was so long, and so obstinately silent, that I seemed to my self and to others to be dumb. Two words put together, expressing the same thing, to aggravate or increase it. Or, I was dumb with quietness, (i. e.) Not out of sullenness, but with submissiveness to God's Dispensations, which is oft noted by silence. h I forbare to speak what I justly might upon that occasion, lest the Flood-gates of Speech being once opened, and Speech stirring up my passion, I should by degrees break forth into some indecent and sinful expressions, to the dishonour of God, the wounding of mine own Conscience, and the offence of others. Or, this may be a proverbial Speech signifying strict silence; Like that, Gen. 31. 29. speak to him neither good nor bad, (i. e.) Nothing at all, to wit, about that matter to perswade him to return. i My silence did not asswage my grief but increase it, as it naturally and commonly doth.

3. My heart was hot within me, while I was musing k, the fire burned l: then spake I with my tongue m.

k (i. e.) Considering in my own thoughts, the great wickedness and successfulness of mine Enemies, and other wicked men; and withal mine own and other good mens integrity, attended with great troubles and miseries in this life. l My thoughts kindled my passions. m To wit, such words, as I had purposed not to speak, v. 1. Rash and impatient words; Either, 1. Some words not here expressed: Which having uttered to men, he turneth his Speech to God, v. 4. Or, 2. Those which here follow.

4. LORD n, * make me to know o my end p, and the measure of my days, what it is q, that I may know † how frail I am r.

* Psal 119. 84.
† Or, what time I have here.

n This Verse contains either, 1. A correction of himself, for his impatient Motions or Speeches, and his Retirement to God for relief, under these perplexing and sadding thoughts. Or, 2. A declaration of the words which he spake. o Either, 1. Practically so as to prepare for it. Or, 2. Experimentally, as words of Knowledge are oft used. And so this is a secret desire of death, that he might be free from such torments, as made his life a burden to him. Or, 3. By Revelation; that I may have some prospect or fore-knowledge, when my calamities will be ended: Which argued impatience, and an unwillingness to wait long for deliverance. p (i. e.) The end of my life, as is evident from the following words. q How long or short it is, or the utmost extent or period of the days of my life. r Or, How long, (Or, How little, for the word may be, and is by divers Interpreters, taken both ways:) Time I have, or shall continue here.

* Job 4?

5. Behold, thou hast made my days as an handbreadth s, and mine age is nothing t before thee u: verily, every man x † at his best state y, is altogether * vanity z, Selah.

† Heb setled.
* Psal. 62. 9. & 144. 4

s Which is one of the least measures, (i. e.) Very short. These and the following words are either, 1. A continuance of his Complaint, that although his days were of themselves very short, yet God seemed to grudge him their natural length, and threatned to make them short, and to cut him off before his time. Or rather, 2. A consolation and correction of his last words, as if he had said; Why am I so greedy to know the end of my life, seeing I do already know this that my life cannot last very long, and therefore if my troubles be sharp, they will be but short. t Next to nothing for substance and for continuance. u (i. e.) In thy Judgment, and therefore in truth and reality: Or, if compared with thee, and with thy everlasting duration. Afflictions, and the Proſperity and Glory of ungodly Men, for both are vaniſhing and tranſitory things, and I will ſeek for Happineſs no where but in the Love and Favour of God, in ſerving and glorifying him here, and in the hope, or confident expectation of enjoying him hereafter; and, in the mean time, of receiving from him thoſe Supplies and Aſſiſtances, which my preſent condition calls for.

8. Deliver me from all my tranſgreſſions h; make me not the reproach i of the fooliſh k.

PSAL. XL.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm is a Celebration of God's great Goodneſs and Mercy vouchſafed unto him, and all his People. It is certain and evident that David ſpeaks ſome things in this Book of Pſalms, in his own Name and Perſon, and ſome things in the Name and Perſon of Chriſt, of whom he was an eminent Type; and that ſometimes he ſpeaks in both theſe Capacities in the ſame Pſalm; as hath been noted before. And this ſeems to be the Condition of this Pſalm: wherein there are ſome Paſſages which cannot belong to Chriſt, as v. 13. and ſome which do not properly belong to David, or to that time and ſtate of the Church, but only to Chriſt, and to the Times of the New Teſtament, as v. 6, 7.

To the chief muſician, A Pſalm of David.

† Heb. in waiting I waited. † Heb. a Pit of noiſe. * Pſal. 69.1,2. 1. I † waited patiently a for the LORD, and he inclined b unto me, and heard my cry.

2. He brought me up alſo out of † an horrible pit c, * out of the miry clay d, and ſet my feet upon a rock e, and eſtabliſhed my goings f.

a Heb. In waiting I waited, which doubling of the word, notes that he waited diligently and earneſtly, patiently, and perſeveringly, until God ſhould pleaſe to help him. b Or, bowed, to wit, himſelf, as this very word is rendred, Judg. 16.30. or, his Ear, as it is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 17.6. and 31.2. Such Elliſes or Defects, are frequent in Scripture, as Pſal. 3.6. and 10.1. Eccleſ. 6.3. and 7.15. c Or, out of a ſounding Pit, ſo called, Either, from the Clamours of Men, or Beaſts falling into it; Or, from the many Waters which fall down into it, not without a great noiſe. I was not only upon the brink, but in the very bottom of the Pit, (i.e.) In deſperate Dangers and Calamities, as this phraſe ſignifies, Pſal. 18.16. and 69.1,2. d In which my feet ſtuck faſt. e A place of ſtrength and ſafety. f Or, my ſteps, (i.e.) Kept me from ſtumbling or falling into miſchief.

3. And he hath put a new ſong in my mouth g, even praiſe unto our God: many ſhall ſee it h, and fear i, and ſhall truſt in the LORD k.

g Partly, by giving me new matter or occaſion for a Song: and partly, by inſpiring me with the very words of it. h (i.e.) Shall obſerve Gods wonderful Mercies vouchſafed to me. i (i.e.) Shall ſtand in awe of that God, whom by this inſtance they ſee to have ſo great Power, either to ſave or to deſtroy, and tremble at his Judgments, and give him that Reverence and Worſhip, and Obedience, which he requires. k Yet their fear ſhall not drive them from God, or bring them into deſpair, but ſhall draw them to God, and be attended with truſting in God.

4. Bleſſed is that man that maketh the LORD his truſt l: and reſpecteth not m the proud n, nor ſuch as turn aſide o to lyes p.

l (i. e.) His only truſt or refuge, as appears from the following words, I ſaid, many ſhall truſt in the Lord, and they ſhall not be loſers by it, nor diſappointed of their hope, but they are and ſhall be bleſſed. m Heb. Looketh not towards, to wit, with love and delight, and deſire to imitate them: Or, with confidence and expectation of relief from thence, as this phraſe is oft uſed, as Pſal. 25. 15. and 69. 3. and 121. 1. and 141. 8. and as the Oppoſition of this clauſe, to the foregoing ſeems to imply. n Or, the mighty, (i.e.) The great and proud Potentates of the world, to whom moſt men are apt to look and truſt, and in whom the Pſalmiſt forbids us, to put our truſt, Pſal. 146. 3. o To wit, from God, in whom alone they ought to truſt. p (i. e.) To lying Vanities, ſuch as Worldly Power and Wiſdom, and Riches, and all other Earthly things, or perſons, in which men are prone to truſt: Which are called Lyes here, and Pſal. 4. 2. and 62. 9. Mich. 1. 14. and elſewhere, becauſe they promiſe more than they can perform. See alſo, Pſal. 7. 14. and 119. 118. Hoſ. 10. 13. and 12. 1.

* Job 5. 9. & 9. 10. Pſal. 71. 15. & 92. 5. * Pſal. 139. 17, 18.

‖ Or, none can order them unto thee.

5. * Many, O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works q which thou haſt done, and * thy thoughts r which are to us-ward s: ‖ they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and ſpeak of them t, they are more than can be numbred u

q For which I and the reſt of thy People, included in the Pronoun plural, us, have abundant cauſe to praiſe thee, and to truſt in thee, as was ſaid, v. 3. And by which it will appear, that he that truſteth in thee, is in a moſt bleſſed and ſafe condition as he ſaid, v. 4. And this Verſe, wherein he paſſeth from the ſingular number to the plural, may ſeem to be interpoſed, as a wall of partition, between that which David ſpeaks in his own perſon, and that which he ſpeaks in the Perſon of the Meſſias, in the following Verſes. r (i. e.) Thy gracious Counſels or Contrivances. s (i. e.) To me and to the reſt of thy People, with whom David oft joyns himſelf in this Book. But theſe words may be, and are by ſome joyned to the following words, and the place thus rendred. It is not with us, or, in our Power (i.e.) It paſſeth our skill (and reach) to order, or, to reckon them up in order unto thee, becauſe indeed they are innumerable, and therefore cannot be digeſted into any order. t So the Particle if or when is wanting, and to be ſupplied here, as it is, Pſal. 39. 11. and in many other places. Heb. Yet, I will declare and ſpeak, to wit, ſome part of them: which accordingly he doth in the following Verſes. u Although I am not able to expreſs or reckon them all.

* Pſal. 50. 8. & 51. 16. Iſa. 1. 11. & 66. 3. Hoſ. 6. 6. Mat. 12. 7. Heb. 10. 5. * Iſa. 50. 5. † Heb. digged.

6. * Sacrifice and offering thou didſt not deſire x, * mine ears haſt thou † opened y: burnt offering and ſin-offering haſt thou not required

x Theſe and the following words, may in an improper ſence belong to the perſon and time of David: when God might be ſaid, not to deſire or require Legal Sacrifices comparatively, as negative expreſſions are frequently underſtood, as Mat. 9. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 17. and in this very caſe of Sacrifices, as Pſal. 51. 16. Jer. 7. 22, 23. Hoſ. 6. 6. So the ſence is; thou didſt deſire obedience more, or rather than Sacrifices, as was ſaid 1 Sam. 15. 22. But in a proper and literal and full ſence, they belong only to the Perſon and times of the Meſſias, in whoſe Name David uttereth theſe words. And ſo the ſence of the place is, God did not deſire or require them, for the ſatisfaction of his own Juſtice, and the expiation of Mens ſins, which could not poſſibly be done by the blood of Bulls or Goats, as is ſaid Heb. 10. 4, 5, 6. But only by the Blood of Chriſt, which was Typified by them, and which Chriſt came into the World, to ſhed in purſuance of his Fathers Will, as it here follows, v. 7, 8. So here is a prediction concerning the Ceſſation and Abolition of the legal Sacrifices, and the ſubſtitution of a better inſtead of them. y Heb. bored. The ſence is, Either, 1. Whereas many men have no Ears to hear, as is implyed, Revel. 2. 7, 11, 17. or ſtop their Ears, as Pſal. 58. 4, Zech. 7. 11. thou haſt given me open Ears to hear and obey thy Precepts, as this phraſe is uſed, Iſa. 50. 5. although indeed there is another Verb in that Text; which much alters the caſe. Or, 2. I have wholly devoted my ſelf to thy perpetual ſervice, and thou haſt accepted of me as ſuch, and ſignified ſo much by the boring of mine Ears, according to the Law and Cuſtom in that Caſe, Exod. 21. 5, 6. Deut. 15. 17. And whereas only one Ear was then bored, and here it is Ears, this may be either an Enallage of the plural number for the ſingular; whereof divers inſtances have been given: Or elſe it may be ſo expreſſed emphatically, to intimate that Chriſt was more ſtrictly obliged to a more univerſal obedience, not only active, to which the legal Servants were bound, but paſſive alſo, to be obedient even unto the Death, to which they were not obliged. The LXX Jewiſh Interpreters, whom the Apoſtle follows, Heb. 10 5. Tranſlate theſe Words; A Body haſt thou prepared me: Wherein though the words differ, the ſence is the ſame, for the Ears ſuppoſe a Body to whom they belong, and the preparing of a Body, implies the preparing or diſpoſing of the Ears, and the Obligation of the Perſon, for whom a Body was prepared to ſerve him, who prepared it; which the boring of the Ear ſignifies.

7 Then z ſaid I a, Lo, I come b: in the Volume of the book, it is written of me c:

z When I underſtood and conſidered thy mind and will therein, expreſſed v. 6. a Either within my ſelf, by a firm purpoſe: Or, unto thee by way of Promiſe or Engagement. b He may ſeem to ſpeak like a Servant, anſwering to the call of his Maſter, and ſignifying his readineſs to obey him; in which ſence it may be accommodated to David. But the Servants Anſwer is uſually expreſſed in Scripture, by another phraſe, Here am I, and never to my remembrance, in theſe words. Beſides this phraſe in that ſence, ſeems not to be proper in this place, but rather, Lo I hear, which beſt ſuits with the foregoing words, mine Ears haſt thou opened. But theſe words do moſt literally and truly belong to Chriſt, and the ſence is this: Seeing thou requireſt a better Sacrifice than thoſe of the Law, Lo, I do offer my ſelf to come, and I will in due time come, to wit, from Heaven or in the fleſh, or, into the world, as this phraſe is more fully expreſſed, and explained in divers places of Scripture, and particularly, Heb. 10. 5. where this place is explained and applyed to Chriſt. c Theſe two words, Volume and Book are indifferently uſed of any Writing, and both words ſeem here to expreſs the ſame thing, as may appear by comparing Jer. 36. where we have the very ſame words, and what is called the Roll or Volume of a Book v. 2. 4. is called ſimply, a Roll or Volume, v. 6. 20, 21. and the Book, v. 10. 13. it being uſual with the Hebrews to joyn two words together in like manner; of which we have an inſtance here above, v. 2. Miry Clay. Heb. Clay of Mire. Now this Volume of the Book is meant, Either 1. Of the Book of Predeſtination, in which Chriſt was written, as being fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, 1 Pet. 1. 20. But that is a ſecret Book not to be read by any man living, and therefore not fitly alledged as an Evidence in this matter. Or, 2. Of a legal Inſtrument, wherein the Contract was drawn between God and him, wherein he did oblige himſelf to ſerve God, and to execute his Will in all things; it being the manner of the Hebrews to write their Contracts in a little Volume or Book. But 1. We read of no ſuch uſage among the Hebrews in the Contracts, between Maſter and Servant, but only of the boring of the Servants Ear, Exod. 21. 6. So the Foundation of this alluſion is deſtroyed, 2. At leaſt there was no ſuch Contract written between God and him. And if it be ſaid, that he only ſpeaks thus by way of alluſion, that is but a ſuppoſition without ground. And when the words may be properly underſtood as they ſound, of a thing really done, why ſhould we forſake the plain ſence without neceſſity? 3. The phraſe here uſed, doth not agree to this ſence; for then he ſhould have ſaid, I am written in the Volume of the Book, (i. e.) In the Catalogue of thy Servants; for in that caſe the Perſons or their Names are conſtantly ſaid to be written, as Exod. 32. 32, 33. Pſal. 69. 28. Dan. 12. 1. Luk. 10. 20. Heb. 12. 23. Revel. 13. 8. and 20. 15. and 21. 27. and not any thing to be written of them, as it is here. Or, 3. Of the Holy Scriptures. In which ſomething indeed was written concerning David: Namely, that he was a man after God's own heart, 1 Sam. 13, 14. But it muſt be remembred, that thoſe Books were not written till after David's Death, in whoſe time here was no other Book of Scripture extant, but the five Books of Moſes, unleſs you will except the Book of Job. And therefore this is meant of the Law of Moſes, which is commonly and emphatically called the Book, and was made up in the form of a Roll or Volume, as the Hebrew Books generally were. See Ezek. 3. 1, 2, 3. Zech. 5. 1, 2. Luk. 4. 17. 20. And ſo this place manifeſtly points to Chriſt, and muſt neceſſarily be underſtood of him, and of him only, concerning whom much is ſaid, in the Books of Moſes, as is evident from Luk. 24. 27. 44. Joh. 5. 46. Act. 3. 22. and 26. 22. and 28. 23. And this ſence being plain and Natural and unforced, and exactly agreeing both with the words, and with the truth of the thing, and with the belief of all Chriſtians, I ſee no reaſon why I may not acquieſce in it.

8. * I delight to do thy will d, O my God: yea, thy law is † within * my heart e.

d This though in a general ſence, it may be true of David and of all God's people, yet if it be compared with the foregoing Verſe, and with the explication thereof in the New Teſtament, (in which thoſe Myſteries which were darkly and doubtfully expreſſed in the Old Teſtament, are fully and clearly revealed) muſt be appropriated to Chriſt, of whom it is eminently true, and is here obſerved as an Act of Heroical obedience, that he not only reſolved to do, but delighted in doing the Will of God, or what God had commanded him, and he had promiſed to do, which was to dye, and that a moſt ſhameful and painful and curſed Death. See Luk. 12. 50. Joh. 10. 18 Heb. 10. 9, 10. e (i. e.) I do not only hear and underſtand it, but I receive it with heartieſt Love and Affection, Affection, delighting both to meditate of it, and to yield Obedience to it.

* Pſal. 35. 18. 9. * I have preached righteouſneſs f, in the great congregation g: lo I have not refrained my lips h, O LORD, thou knoweſt i.

f To wit, thy Righteouſneſs, as it is expreſſed in the next Verſe, (i. e.) Thy faithfulneſs, as it is there explained: Or, Righteouſneſs properly ſo called: for both were fully declared and demonſtrated in Chriſt, the former in ſending him into the world according to his promiſe, Act. 13. 23. and the latter in inflicting death upon him for mans ſin, Rom. 3. 25, 26. g In the moſt publick and ſolemn Aſſemblies: not only to the Jews, but alſo to all other Nations; to whom Chriſt preached by his Apoſtles, as is obſerved Eph. 2. 17. h To wit, from Preaching it out of ſloth or fear, or ſelf-love, but have preached it publickly, and even to the Face of mine Enemies, though I knew my Preaching would coſt me my Life. i I call thee to witneſs the truth of what I ſay.

10. I have not hid thy righteouſneſs within my heart k, I have declared thy faithfulneſs and thy ſalvation l: I have not concealed thy loving kindneſs, and thy truth from the great congregation.

k I had it there, v. 8. but I did not ſmother or ſhut it up there, but ſpread it abroad for thy Glory, and the good of the World. l Which thou haſt wrought both for me, and by me.

11. With-hold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O LORD m: let thy loving kindneſs and thy truth continually preſerve me.

m This Prayer is uttered by David, Either, 1. In the Perſon of Chriſt; to whom it may agree. Or, 2. In his own Perſon. Having been tranſported and carried forth by the Spirit of God to the contemplation, and commemoration of the great Myſtery of the Meſſias, of whom he was an illuſtrious Type, now he ſeems to be led back by the ſame Spirit, to the conſideration of himſelf and his own particular caſe.

n Either, The puniſhment of mine iniquities, as Gen. 4. 13. 1 Sam. 28. 10, Pſal. 31. 10. Or, 2. The iniquities themſelves; This phraſe cannot be underſtood of Chriſt. For although our ſins are ſaid to be laid upon Chriſt, Iſa. 53. and upon that account he is ſaid to be made ſin for us, 2 Cor. 5. 21. yet the Scripture every where repreſents him, as one that never knew nor did any ſin, as in that place, and 1 Pet. 2. 22. and elſewhere; and even when his Puniſhment is deſcribed, yet it is expreſly noted, that he did not ſuffer for himſelf, or for his own ſins, but only for us, and for our ſins, as Iſa. 53. 4, 5. Dan. 9. 26. 1 Pet. 2. 24. And therefore it is not probable that the Holy Ghoſt would uſe ſuch an expreſſion concerning the ſinleſs Chriſt of God, as is never uſed in Scripture, but either of a mans own ſins, or of the puniſhment deſerved by his own ſins. o Mens ſins are figuratively ſaid to follow them, 1 Tim. 5. 24. and to find them out, Numb. 32. 23, and here to take hold of them, as a Serjeant takes hold of a man whom he Arreſts. p. Unto God or men, with any comfort and confidence, I am aſhamed and confounded, by reaſon of my numberleſs ſins. Or, ſo that I was not able to ſee, Either, becauſe he was as it were drowned and overwhelmed with his ſins: Or, becauſe his Eyes did fail, or were conſumed through grief, as he complains, Pſal. 6. 7. and 38. 11. Or, he means that he could not foreſee them, the Simple Verb being put for the Compound, as it is frequently among the Hebrews. They came upon him unawares, and therefore were the more grievous to him. q To wit, mine iniquities here mentioned, properly ſo called: For God's people are more apt to aggravate their ſins, than the puniſhments of them, See Ezra 9. 13, 14.

* Pſal. 71. 1. &c. 13. * Be pleaſed, O LORD, to deliver me r: O LORD, make haſte to help me.

r From my ſins, and the puniſhments due to them.

* Pſal. 35. 4. 26 & 70. 3. & 71. 13. 14. * Let them be aſhamed and confounded s together, that ſeek after my ſoul t to deſtroy it: let them be driven backward, and put to ſhame that wiſh me evil s For the diſappointment of their hopes and deſigns. t (i. e.) My Life, as Exod. 4. 19. 1 Sam. 20. 1.

15. Let them be deſolate u for a reward of their ſhame x, that ſay unto me, Aha, Aha.

u Or, amazed, or diſmayed: or overthrown. Of ſuch Imprecations I have ſpoken before. x (i. e.) Their ſinful and ſhameful Actions, as Shame is put for a ſhameful Idol, Hoſ. 9. 10. and as Fear is oft put for the evil feared.

16. Let all thoſe that ſeek thee, rejoyce and be glad in thee: let ſuch as love thy ſalvation y ſay continually, The LORD be magnified z.

17. But I am poor and needy, yet the LORD thinketh upon me: thou art my help and my deliverer, make no tarrying, O my God.

y Either, 1. Such as deſire, and rejoyce in the Salvation, and Deliverance which thou giveſt to me and to others, of thy people: which was a great eye-ſore and grief to the wicked. Or, 2. Such as expect and ſeek for their Salvation and happineſs, not from Idols, nor from their wicked courſes, nor from any Creatures, as other men do, but from thee only, and gladly accept and embrace that Salvation, which thou haſt promiſed together, with the conditions required to it, to wit, Faith and Repentance. Or, 3. Such as love thy Meſſias, upon whom both David's and other Holy Prophets, and Saints, Thoughts and Affections were much fixed, as is evident from many places of Scripture, as Joh. 8. 58. Act. 2. 30, 31, 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. who is called the deſire of all Nations, Hagg. 2. 7. and the Glory and Conſolation of Iſrael, Luk. 2. 25, 32. yea and, by the very Title here uſed, God's Salvation, Iſa. 62. 11. Luk. 2. 30. whoſe appearance or coming the Godly of all Ages, did love and long for; and of whom David had ſo lately and clearly ſpoken, v. 6, 7, &c. All which conſidered, this cannot ſeem a forced, or very far fetched Interpretation. z Let them have continual occaſion to magnifie God for his Mercies vouchſafed to them.

PSAL. XLI.

The ARGUMENT.

The Occaſion of this Pſalm was manifeſtly, ſome ſore Diſeaſe or Affliction which God had inflicted upon David, and which gave his Enemies Opportunity, to diſcover their Hatred and Malice againſt him.

To the chief Muſician; A Pſalm of David.

1. BLeſſed is he that conſidereth a || the poor b, the LORD will deliver him c, † in time of trouble.

|| Or, the weak or ſick.

† Heb. in the day of evil.

a Or, that carries himſelf wiſely and prudently, with, or towards him, not raſhly and fooliſhly, cenſures and condemns him, as my pretended Friends dealt with me, v. 8. nor inſulteth over him, which is a fooliſh, as well as wicked thing, but conſidereth that it may be his own caſe, and therefore pitieth and helpeth him; which is the likelieſt way to obtain the like Pity, for himſelf in his trouble. b Or rather, the weak, or ſick, or languiſhing perſon, as may be gathered by comparing this with v. 3. where the mercy which he is ſuppoſed to have afforded to him, is returned upon himſelf, and with v. 8. c Either, 1. The poor afflicted man. Though his Enemies conclude his caſe to be deſperate, v. 8. God will confute them, and deliver him. Or, 2. The conſiderer of the Poor, of whom alſo this ſame Pronoun, Him, is confeſſedly meant, v. 2, 3. And ſo it is a promiſe of recompence, the wiſe and merciful man ſhall find mercy.

2. The LORD will preſerve, and keep him alive d, and he ſhall be bleſſed upon the earth; and || thou wilt not deliver him into the † will of his enemies e.

|| Or, do not thou deliver.

† Heb. Soul. Pſa. 35. 25.

d Heb. quicken him, (i. e.) revive and reſtore him; Either, he will preſerve him from trouble, Or, if God ſee trouble neceſſary or fit for him, and therefore ſuffer him to fall into it, he will raiſe him out of it. e (i. e.) To Deſtruction, which they earneſtly deſire and endeavour to procure.

3 The LORD will ſtrengthen him upon the bed of languiſhing: thou wilt † make all his bed f in his ſickneſs.

f Either 1 Change or overturn his Bed of ſickneſs; which is done when a man is reſtored to health. Or rather, 2. Give him eaſe and comfort, which ſick men receive by the help of thoſe who turn and ſtir their whole Bed, to make it ſoft and eaſie for him. For the words foregoing and following theſe ſuppoſe him to be and continue in a ſtate of ſickneſs. Thus the Lord elſewhere compares himſelf to a Servant, waiting upon his people at Table, Luk. 12. 37. as here, to one that makes their Bed, Metaphors implying ſtrange condeſcenſion.

4. I ſaid

4. I said, LORD, be merciful unto me; heal my soul g, for I have sinned against thee h.

g (i. e.) Either, 1. My self, to wit, my Body. So it is a double Synecdoche. And the Soul is so taken, *Psal.*16.10. Or, 2. My Soul properly so called; which is said to be healed, when it is pardoned and purged, as 2 Chron. 30. 20. Isa. 53. 5. comp. with 1 Pet. 2. 24. Mat. 13. 15. comp. with Mark 4. 12. Jam. 5. 16. So he strikes at the root of his misery, and prays for the removal of the sin of his Soul, as the cause of the disease of his Body. h This may be added either, 1. As a Reason or Motive to God, grant this request, for I have sinned, and therefore thy grace in healing me, will be more glorious and admirable; Or, for I acknowledg that I have sinned: for the act is oft put for the declaration of it, as *Exod.*33. 13. *Psal.*51. 5. Or, 2. As a Reason moving him thus to pray, I said, Lord be merciful unto me, heal my Soul; and great Reason I had to say so, for I have sinned against thee.

5. Mine enemies speak evil of me i: When shall he die, and his name perish?

i Vent their ill wishes against me, in the following words.

6. And if he come to see me k, he speaketh vanity l: his heart gathereth iniquity to it self m, when he goeth abroad he telleth it n.

k To visit me in my sickness according to the custom. l Or, falshood, pretending sympathy with me, and friendship to me, whilst they plot mischief in their hearts against me. m Even when he is with me, and pretends hearty affection to me, his heart cannot forbear its customary practice, of meditating and devising mischief against me; for which he watcheth and seeketh for all occasions from my Speeches, or Carriage, or the circumstances of my Condition, which he observes. n Partly, to delight his Companions, and partly, to encourage them to, and direct them in their malicious Designs against me.

7. All that hate me whisper together against me o: against me do they devise † my hurt.

† Heb. Evil to me.

o (i.e.) Secretly defame me, and closely plot against me.

† Heb. a thing of Belial.

8. † An evil disease p, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth, he shall rise up no more q.

p Heb. A word or thing of Belial, (i. e.) Either, 1. Some wicked Calumny which they had raised, and which stuck close to him. Or, 2. His great Wickedness, whereof this is a sign. Or rather, 3. This sore Disease or Mischief, Either sent upon him, in way of vengeance for his horrid Crimes; Or, such as God useth to inflict upon the Sons of Belial, to shew that he is in truth such an one, whatsoever he pretends to the contrary. q Seeing God hath begun to punish him, he will make an end of him.

* Job 19.19. Jer. 20. 10. † Heb. the man of my Peace. † Heb. magnified.

9. * Yea, † mine own familiar friend r in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath † lift up his heel r against me.

r He means either Achitophel, or some other perfidious Counsellor or Courtier, who was a Type of Judas, to whom therefore it is applied, Joh. 13. 18. as David was a Type of Christ, in being thus betrayed. So these words were literally fulfilled in David, and yet the Holy Ghost which dictated them, looked further in them, even to Christ and Judas, in whom they received a further and fuller accomplishment. r A phrase implying, injury joyned with insolency and contempt, taken from an unruly Horse, which kicks at him, that owns and feeds him.

10. But thou, O LORD, be merciful unto me s, and raise me up that I may requite them t.

s They censure me grievously, and conclude my case to be desperate, but, Lord, do thou vindicate me, and confute them. t Or, and I will requite them, (i.e.) punish them for their malicious, and perfidious, and wicked practices: which, being now a Magistrate, he was obliged to revenge, *Rom.*13.4. although when he was a private person, he was so far from revenging evil, that he rendred good for it, as we see, Psal. 35. 12, 13. and elsewhere.

11. By this I know that thou favourest me u: because mine enemy doth not triumph over me x.

u Bearest a good will to me, and art resolved to make good thy promises to me, and wilt plead my righteous cause against them. x Because hitherto thou hast helped and supported me, and prolonged my days to the disappointment of their hopes, and designed triumphs. This mercy I thankfully receive as a token of further mercy. Compare, 1 Sam. 27. 37. 2 Cor. 1. 9, 10.

12. And as for me, thou upholdest me in mine integrity y: and settest me before thy face for ever z.

y As I have kept my Integrity, so thou hast kept me, in and with it. Or, for mine Integrity, because thou hast seen my innocency, notwithstanding all the calumnies of mine enemies; and thou hast promised and usest to afford thy protection to the innocent and upright. z Or, hast confirmed, or established me in thy presence (i.e. Either, under thine eye and special care: Or, to minister unto thee, not only in thy Temple, but as a King over thy People, or in that Land, where thou art peculiarly present) for ever, Either, 1. Properly: And so this was done to David, Either in his own person, partly here, and partly, in the next life: or, in regard of his Posterity, in whom the Kingdom was established for ever. Or, 2. For my whole Life, or for a long time, as that phrase is commonly used.

13. Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, from everlasting, and to everlasting a. Amen and Amen b.

a Or, from Age to Age, as long as the World lasts, and to all Eternity. b Amen signifies an hearty assent, and approbation, and withal an earnest desire, and confidence of the thing, to which it is annexed. And as the Psalms are divided into five Books, so each of them is closed with this word; the first here; the second, Psal. 72. the third, Psal. 89. the fourth, Psal. 106. the last in the end of Psal. 150. the doubling of the word shews the fervency of his spirit, in this work of praising God.

PSAL. XLII.

The ARGUMENT.

The Pen-man of this Psalm is uncertain, as not being named in the Title. It was composed, Either, 1. By David, when he was banished from the house of God, either by Saul's Tyranny, or by Absalom's Rebellion. Or. 2. By the Sons of Korah, in the time of the Captivity of Babylon. Whence some read the words of the Title of this Psalm, Maschil of the Sons of Korah. But this is not usual in this Book to name the Author of a Psalm, so obscurely and indefinitely. For the Sons of Korah were a numerous Company, and it is not likely, that either all, or divers of them did joyn in the enditing of this and the following Psalms so called. Nor is there any one Psalm where the Author is named, but he is one certain and single person. And therefore it seems more probable that David penned this, as it is confessed, he did some other Psalms which have not his Name in the Title.

To the chief Musician, || Maschil, for the Sons of Korah a.

|| Or, a Psalm giving instruction of the Sons &c. See 1 Chr. 25.

a Who were an eminent order of Singers, in the House of God: Of whom see, 1 *Chron.*6.33. and 9.19. and 26.1.

1. AS the Hart † panteth after the water brooks b, so panteth my Soul after thee c, O God.

b The Hart is naturally hot and thirsty. And this Thirst is increased; Partly, by its dwelling in desart and dry places, to which it retireth for fear of Men and wild beasts: and Partly, by its long and violent running, when it is pursued by the Hunters: And, some add, by eating of Serpents. c After the enjoyment of thee in thy Sanctuary, as it appears from v.4.

2. * My soul thirsteth d for God, for the living God e: when shall I come and appear before God f.

* Psal.63.1. & 84.2.

d Thirst is more vehement than Hunger, and more impatient of dis-satisfaction. e This he mentions as a just cause of his Thirst. He did not thirst after vain useless Idols, but after the only true and living God, who was his life, and the length of his days, as is said, Deut. 30. 20. and without whose presence and favour, David accounted himself for a dead and lost Man, *Psal.*143.7. f. In the place of his special Presence and publick Worship. See Exod. 23. 15. and 25. 30. What is called, before the Lord, 1 *Chron.*13.10. is before, or with the Ark, 2 Sam. 6. 7.

3. * My

* Psal. 80. 5. & 102. 9. * Psal. 79. 10. & 115. 2.

3. * My tears have been my meat g, day and night, while they * continually say unto me; Where is thy God h?

g Which notes both the great abundance and constant course of his tears, and the secret satisfaction, and ease which he found in giving vent to his passion this way. Possibly his tears and grief took away his apperite, and so were to him instead of food. h Of whom thou hast so often boasted, as of one so able and ready to help all that trust in him, and call upon him, and particularly, as one engaged to thee by many great and special promises. He is gone and departed from thee, and no where to be found of thee. He is either unable or unwilling to help thee, or regardless of thee.

4. When I remember these things i, I pour out my soul k in me l, for I had gone m with the multitude n, I went with them o to the house of God; with the voice of joy and praise, with a multitude that kept holy-day p.

i Either, 1. Which follow, to wit, my former freedom. Or rather, 2. Last mentioned, my banishment from God's presence, and mine enemies scoffs and triumphs upon that occasion. k This Phrase notes Either, 1. His fervent Prayer, as it is taken, 1 Sam. 1. 15. Psal. 62. 8. Or, 2. His bitter sorrows, whereby his very heart was almost melted, or dissolved, and his Spirits spent, and he was ready to faint away; as it is used, Job 30. 16. Lam. 2. 12. Comp. Psal. 22. 14. Or rather, 3. Both together; that he breathed out his sorrows and sad complaints unto God by fervent Prayers. l (i.e.) Within my own breast, between God and my own Soul; not openly, lest mine enemies should turn it into matter of rejoycing and insulting over me. m To wit, in the way to Jerusalem. And my sorrow was increased, by the remembrance of my former enjoyments. Comp. Lam. 1. 7. n According to the custom, and in the company of Israelites, who went thither in great numbers. Comp. Psal. 84. 6, 7. o Or, I led them, encouraging them by my presence and forwardness. p Or, That kept the feast, to wit, the three solemn Festival Solemnities, which they kept holy unto the Lord.

* Psal. 43. 5. † Heb. bowed down. ‖ Or, give thanks. ‖ Or, his presence is salvation.

5. * Why art thou † cast down q, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God, for I shall yet ‖ praise him ‖ for the help of his countenance.

q With excessive sorrow and despair. r Heb. for the Salvations of his Face, (i.e.) For those supports, deliverances, and comforts which I doubt not, I shall ere long enjoy, both in his Presence and Sanctuary, to which he will restore me, and from his Presence, and the light of his Countenance, which he will graciously afford to me.

6. O my God, my soul is cast down within me: therefore r will I remember thee s from the land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, from ‖ the hill Mizar t.

‖ Or, the little hill.

r That I may revive my drooping Spirits. s I will consider thy infinite Mercy and Power, and Faithfulness, and thy gracious Presence in the Sanctuary, from whence thou dost hear and answer, all those that call upon thee, in all the parts of the Land. t (i.e.) From all the places, and parts of the Land, to which I shall be driven; whether from the parts about, or beyond Jordan on the East; Or, the Hermonim, (i.e.) Either the People inhabiting Hermon; Or, the Mountain of Hermon, which was in the Northern parts, Numb. 34. 7. Deut. 3. 8. Psal. 89. 12. here called Hermonim in the plural Number, because of its great largeness, and many tops and parts of it, which are called by several Names: Or, the Hill Misar, an Hill so called, though not mentioned elsewhere, which is supposed to have been in the Southern parts of the Land: But peradventure it was in the East and beyond Jordan: and David might mention these places, because when he was banished by Absalom, he had been successively at all of them, and in all of them, had remembred God, and directed his Prayer to him.

* Jer. 4. 20. Ezek. 7. 26. * Psal. 88. 7. Jonas 2. 3.

7. * Deep calleth unto deep u at the noise of thy water-spouts: all * thy waves and thy billows x are gone over me y.

u (i.e.) One affliction comes immediately after another, as if it were called for, and invited by the former. Which he expresseth by a Metaphor taken, Either, 1. From the old Flood, when the upper deep, or Abyss of Waters (in the Clouds) called for the lower deep, or Abyss of Waters, in the Sea and Rivers, that both might unite their Forces together, to drown the World. And thus the Chaldee understands it. Or, 2. From the Sea, when its waves rage, and it is full of deep furrows, into which ships and passengers sink down, and then rise and sink again, successively and continually. But these Tempests are caused in the Sea by God's mighty Winds, rather than by his Water-spouts. Or, 3. From violent and successive showers of rain; which frequently come down from Heaven, as it were at the Noise, or Call of God's Waterspouts, to wit, the Clouds; which by their rattling noises and terrible Thunders, do in a manner invite and call forth the showers, which are contained in their bowels. x Thou hast sent one sharp tryal, or affliction upon me after another. y (i.e.) Are gone over my head, as this same Verb is used, Psal. 38. 4. They do not lightly sprinkle me, but almost overwhelm me.

8. Yet the LORD will command z his loving kindness a in the day-time, and * in the night b his song shall be with me c, and my prayer shall be unto the God d of my life e.

* Job 35. 10. Psal. 149. 5.

z (i.e.) Will effectually procure or confer upon me, as this Verb is used, Levit. 25. 21. Psal. 7. 6, &c. The Verb is Future, but some render it by the time past: The Lord hath commanded, making this rehearsal of his former experiences of God's goodness, his Argument to support himself, and to prevail with God in Prayer. Which may seem to suit best with the foregoing and following Verses. But we must remember that David's hopes and fears were strangely mixed, and his expressions of them are commonly interwoven in the same Psalm, and sometimes in one and the same Verse, as it is here v. 5. 11. And therefore there is no necessity of departing from the proper signification of the Verb. a (i.e.) His blessings, the effects of his Loving-kindness, which God is oft said to command, as Deut. 28. 8. Psal. 133. 3. b Both day and night, (i.e.) Continually. c (i.e.) I shall have constant matter of singing and praising God for his loving-kindness. d And therefore I will boldly and believingly direct my Prayers to him, of whose readiness to hear and help me, I have had such ample experience. e The giver and preserver of my life, from time to time.

9. I will say unto God f my rock g, Why hast thou forgotten me h? Why go I mourning i because of the oppression of the enemy?

f I will expostulate the Case with him. g Who hath formerly been a sure refuge to me. h Why dost thou now seem quite to forget, and neglect me? i Why dost thou leave me in this mournful state, and not succour me speedily?

10. As with a ‖ sword in my bones k, mine enemies reproach me: While they say daily unto me, Where is thy God l?

k Or, in my body, the bones being oft put for the body, whereof they are a very considerable part. Or, as a Sword, which pierceth and cutteth my flesh even to the bones, and cutteth or breaketh the very bones also. So painful and vexatious are their reproaches. l Of which see above, on v. 3.

11. Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance m, and my God n.

m Heb. the Salvations of my Face, (i.e.) Either, 1. Which are present and manifest, being before my face. Or, 2. Which will make my face to shine, and my countenance chearful, which supposeth the gladness of the heart, and the bettering of his condition. Or, 3. Of his Person; as the Face sometimes signifies, as 2 Sam. 17. 11. Isa. 3. 15. As also the Greek word signifying Face, is very frequently put for the Person, whereof the face is an eminent part. n As he formerly was, so he still is, and ever will be, and will suddenly shew himself to be my God, although for a season he may hide his face, Or, withdraw his help from me.

PSAL. XLIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm seems to have been composed by the same Author, and upon the same occasion with the former.

1. JUdge me a, O God, and plead my cause against an ‖ ungodly b nation c: O deliver me † from the deceitful and unjust d man e.

‖ Or, unmerciful. † Heb. from a man of deceit and iniquity.

2. For thou art the God of my strength, why dost thou cast me off? * Why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?

* Psal. 42. 9.

a Or, Judge, or give Sentence for me, as this Phrase is used, Psal. 26. 1. and elsewhere. b Or, unmerciful, (i.e.) Cruel or inhumane; for it is a Meiosis. c So he calls the company of his enemies for their great numbers, and because they were the far greatest part, and almost the whole body of the Nation. d Who covereth his wicked designs with fair and false pretences: Which sort of men are hateful to thee, and to all good men. e Either Saul: Or rather, Achitophel, or Absalom. For he speaks of the holy Hill of Zion, v. 3.

which was not ſo till after Saul's time. Or, Man may be put collectively, for the Men of that time.

* Pſal. 57. 3.

3. O ſend out f thy light and * thy truth g; let them lead me, let them bring me unto thy holy hill h, and to thy tabernacles i.

f (i.e.) Actually impart and diſcover them: for at preſent thou ſeemeſt to conceal and with-hold them from me. g (i.e.) Thy favour, or the light of thy countenance, and the Truth of thy Promiſes made to me, as God's Mercy and Truth oft go together, as 2 Sam. 15. 20. Pſal. 61. 7. and 89. 14. &c. Or this may be a Figure called Hendiaduo, whereby Light and Truth is put either for the Light of God's Truth; Or rather, for true Light, the Illumination of God's Spirit, and the direction of his gracious Providence, whereby he might be led (as it follows) in the right way, which would bring him to God's holy Hill. h To wit, of Zion, the place of God's Preſence and Worſhip. i (i.e.) Tabernacle. Which he calls Tabernacles, Either, 1. Becauſe there were now two Tabernacles, one at Zion, where the Ark was; and another at Gibeon, 1 Chron. 16. 37. 39. Although he here ſeems to ſpeak but of one of them, even of that which was upon God's holy Hill. Or, 2. Becauſe of the ſeveral parts of it, the moſt Holy, and the holy place, and the Church. Theſe indeed were in that of Gibeon, but not in that of Zion. Or rather, 3. By a meer Enallage of the number, the plural for the ſingular; which is frequent as in other words, ſo in thoſe which belong to this Matter, as Tabernacles, Pſal. 46. 4. and Sanctuaries, Levit. 26. 31. Pſal. 73. 17. &c. and 74. 7. Jer 51. 51. Nay the moſt holy place, though but one ſimple part, is by the Greeks called Holies. So in other Authors, we read the Rivers of Nilus, of that one River, and Right hands, for one Right hand, and many like phraſes.

PSAL. XLIV.

The ARGUMENT.

There is no certainty, either concerning the Author, or the particular occaſion of this Pſalm. This is evident, that it was compoſed with reſpect unto the Calamitous Condition of the Church and People of Iſrael, whom it ſuppoſeth to be in a ſtate of Captivity and Perſecution. But whether it was made by David, who foreſaw and foretold by the Spirit of God, their future Captivity, and framed this for their uſe in that Eſtate; or by ſome other holy Man of God, when they were actually in this Condition, is not determined, nor neceſſary to know for the underſtanding of it.

To the chief Muſician for the ſons of Korah, Maſchil.

1. WE have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didſt in their days a, in the times of old.

a They alledge their former Experiences, as Encouragements to their Faith, and Motives to God, to continue to be gracious to them.

* Exod. 15. 17. Pſal. 78. 55. & 80. 8.

2. How * thou didſt drive out the heathen b with thy hand, and plantedſt them c, how thou didſt afflict the people, and caſt them out.

b The Canaanites. c To wit, our Fathers, eaſily underſtood both from the Matter, and from v. 1. where they are expreſſed: the Pronoun being referred unto the remoter Antecedent, as it is, Gen. 10. 12. and 19. 13. Pſal. 18. 15. and oft elſewhere. So them muſt be the People, or Heathens. But becauſe the comparing of this branch of the Verſe, with the former, Plantedſt them, to which this anſwers, and with the following, they, makes it more than probable, that this, them, belongs to the Fathers, this is to be otherwiſe rendred, Either, 1. Thus, ſend them out, to wit, free or manumitted out of Egypt, of which this ſame Verb is uſed, Exod. 5. 1 and 12. 33. And then the foregoing People are the Egyptians, not the Canaanites. Which yet ſeems not to agree with the foregoing and following Paſſages, both which ſpeak of the Canaanites onely, nor with the order of the Words in this Verſe, it being improper to mention their coming out of Egypt, after their being planted in Canaan. Or rather, 2. Thus, make them ſend, or ſhoot forth, to wit, Branches, as it is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 80. 11. Ezek. 17. 6. Where this Verb is uſed. And this moſt naturally and properly, follows upon and after their Planting mentioned in the former Clauſe.

* Deut. 8. 17. Joſh. 24. 12.

3. * For they got not the land in poſſeſſion by their own ſword d, neither did their own arm ſave them: but thy right hand, and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance e, becauſe thou hadſt a favour unto them.

d (i.e.) By their Arms or Valour. e (i.e.) Thy Favour, as the next words explain it, Thy gracious and glorious preſence, which went along with us.

* Pſal. 74. 12.

4. * Thou art my King f, O God, command g deliverances for Jacob.

f Jacob's, or Iſrael's King, in a peculiar manner. The whole people ſpeak like one man, as being united together in one Body. g (i.e.) effectually procure by thy commanding word.

5. Through thee will we puſh down h our enemies; through thy name i will we tread them under that riſe up againſt us.

h Heb. Smite with the Horn, (i.e.) Subdue and deſtroy. The phraſe is taken from Deut. 33. 17. and is borrowed from horned Beaſts. Comp. 1 Kings 22. 11. i (i.e.) By the help of thy power.

6 For I will not truſt in my bow k, neither ſhall my ſword ſave me.

k But in thee only; as the next Verſe implies; and therefore do not fruſtrate my hope, and confidence fixed upon thee.

7. But thou haſt ſaved us from our enemies, and haſt put them to ſhame that hated us.

8. In God we boaſt l all the day long: and praiſe thy name for ever, Selah.

l As in a moſt ſure Rock, and our only refuge.

* Pſal. 60. 1. 10. & 74. 1. & 89. 38.

9. But * thou haſt caſt off m, and put us to ſhame n; and goeſt not forth with our armies o.

m But now thy countenance and courſe is quite changed, to us. n Made us aſhamed of our boaſting, and truſt in thee, which we have oft profeſſed, to the face of our enemies. o To lead them, and fight for them, as this phraſe ſignifies, Judg. 4. 14. 1 Sam. 8, 20. He ſeems to allude to God's marching, with and before the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſs, and afterwards, as occaſion was offered. Comp. Pſal. 68. 7.

10. Thou makeſt us to turn back from the enemy p: and they which hate us ſpoil for themſelves q.

p By withdrawing thy help and our courage according to thy threatnings, Levit. 26. 36. q (i.e.) Take away our Eſtates to their own uſe, and for their only benefit, not in compliance with thy Will, which was to puniſh us for our ſins, nor for thy Service and Glory. They minded nothing but their own advantage.

For a very ſmall, or for no Price, for a pair of Shooes, as we read, Amos 2. 6. t Thou haſt not advanced thy honour and ſervice thereby; for thy Enemies do not ſerve thee, more and better than thy people, nor yet ſo much.

* Deut. 28. 37. Pſal. 79. 4.

15. My confuſion is continually before me z, and the ſhame of my face hath covered me a.

z Before the eyes of my Mind and Body too. They viſifie me, not only behind my back, but even before my face. a (i. e.) I am filled with ſhame of my face on every ſide, being aſhamed to ſhew my face in any place or company.

16. For the voyce of him that reproacheth and blaſphemeth b; by reaſon of the enemy and avenger c.

b That doth not only reproach me, which I could better bear, but blaſpheme God and our Religion for our ſakes; which is intolerable to me. c. Who executeth both God's and his own vengeance upon me, perſecuting me with a deſpightful hatred, and with great cruelty.

17. d All this is come upon us; yet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falſly in thy covenant e.

d All the Evils before-mentioned. e Although we cannot excuſe our ſelves from many other ſins, for which thou haſt juſtly puniſhed us, yet this we muſt ſay for our ſelves, that through thy Grace we have kept our ſelves from Apoſtaſie and Idolatry, notwithſtanding all the Examples and Provocations, rewards propoſed and promiſed, or puniſhments threatned to induce us thereunto. Which we hope thou wilt graciouſly conſider, and not ſuffer us to be tempted, above what we are able to bear.

18. Our heart is not turned back f, neither have our ‖ ſteps declined from thy way g.

f To wit, from thee, or thy Worſhip and Service unto Idols, as it follows, v. 20. g Becauſe it is eaſie and ordinary falſly to pretend ſincerity of Heart, which men cannot diſcern nor confute; they prove it from the unblameableneſs of their Lives and Actions.

19. Though thou haſt ſore broken us in h the place of dragons i, and covered us with the ſhadow of death k.

h Or rather, into, as others render it; which ſeems much more emphatical. And ſo this Verb may be rendred, thou haſt humbled, or brought us down, as all the Antients rendred it. Or this is a pregnant Verb, as they call them, or one Verb put for two; of which there are many inſtances, as hath been ſhewed. So it may be rendred, thou haſt ſore broken us, caſting us into: Or, thou haſt by ſore breaking, brought us into. By inflicting upon us, one breach after another, thou haſt at laſt brought us to this paſs. i Which ſignifies a place extremely deſolate, ſuch as Dragons love, Iſa. 13. 21, 22. and 34. 13. and 35. 7. and therefore full of horror, and danger, and Miſchief. Thou haſt thrown us among people, as fierce and cruel as Dragons. k (i. e.) With deadly horrors and miſeries. See on Job 3. 5. and Pſal. 23. 4.

20. If we have forgotten the name of our God l, or ſtretched out our hands m to a ſtrange God.

l (i. e.) Either God himſelf; Or, his Worſhip and Service; which we have denied that we have done, v. 17. m In way of Prayer or Adoration, whereof this is a Geſture, Exod. 9. 29. 1 Kings 8. 22. Pſal. 143. 6.

21. Shall not God ſearch this out? for he knoweth the ſecrets of the heart n.

n We appeal to the heart-ſearching God, concerning the ſincerity of this Profeſſion of ours.

* Rom. 8. 36. 22. * Yea o, for thy ſake p are we killed all the day long; we are counted as ſheep for the ſlaughter.

o Or, But. We do not ſuffer for our Apoſtaſie, but becauſe we will not Apoſtatize from thee. p Becauſe we are thy people, and continue conſtantly and reſolutely in the profeſſion and practice of thy Worſhip, which they abhor, and from which they ſeek to draw or drive us.

23. Awake, why ſleepeſt thou O LORD? ariſe, caſt us not off for ever.

24. Wherefore hideſt thou thy face q? and forgetteſt our affliction and our oppreſſion r?

q (i. e.) Doſt not regard our Miſeries, nor affordeſt us any pity or help. r Then we have not forgotten thee. This ſeems not well to become thy faithfulneſs and goodneſs.

* Pſal. 119. 25. 25. For * our ſoul s is bowed down to the duſt t: our belly cleaveth unto the earth u.

s (i. e.) Either our Lives, or Perſons; or rather Bodies, as it is explained in the next clauſe, and as the ſoul is oft taken by a Synecdoche, as Numb. 11. 6. Pſal. 16. 10. and 106. 15, &c. t Either to the ground where we lye proſtrate at our Enemies feet: Or, to the Grave. u We are not only thrown down to the earth, but we lye there like dead Carkaſſes fixed to it, without any Ability or hope of riſing again.

26. Ariſe † for our help, and redeem us for thy mercies ſake x.

x We mentioned our ſincerity and conſtancy in thy Worſhip, only as an Argument to move thee to pity, and not as a ground of our truſt and confidence, or as if we merited Deliverance by it; but that we expect and implore only upon the account of thine own free and rich mercy.

PSAL. XLV.

The ARGUMENT.

The ſubject matter of this Pſalm is by the conſent both of Jewiſh and Chriſtian, Antient and Modern Interpreters agreed to be the Meſſias, and his Marriage with the Church of God. Of which it treats, Either, 1. Remotely, under the Type of Solomon and his Marriage with Pharaoh's Daughter, of which it is to be primarily and literally underſtood, and then mediately and ultimately of Chriſt; Or rather, 2. Immediately and directly; although the Words be ſo ordered, that they carry a manifeſt Alluſion either to that or ſome other royal Marriage. Which ſeems more than probable from the following Arguments; 1. From the great Congruity of the Matter and Style of this Pſalm, with that of the Book of Canticles; whereof this ſeems to be a kind of Abridgment, 2. From the Magnificent preface, v. 1. which ſeems too ſublime and ſpiritual for ſuch Carnal and Earthly Matters. 3. And eſpecially from the Matter of the Pſalm. For here are many things which do not agree to Solomon; ſuch as the warlike poſture and exploits, v. 3. 4, 5. and the Title of God, v. 6. which is appropriated to Chriſt, and affirmed to be incommunicable to any meer Creature, Heb 1. 8. compare with v. 5. and that numerous Poſterity, and the Amplitude of their Dominion, v. 16. and divers other Paſſages, as we ſhall ſee in the Progreſs.

To the chief Muſician upon Shoſhannim a, for the ſons of Korah, ‖ Maſchil. A ſong of loves b.

‖ Or, of Inſtruction.

a Which Title is alſo prefixed to Pſal. 69. and with ſome ſmall Addition, Pſal. 8. and with a little Variation, Pſal. 60. It ſeems to be the Name of a Song or Tune, or Inſtrument of Muſick. It properly ſignifies Lilies or Roſes; which ſome apply to the ſubject of the Pſalm, becauſe thoſe Flowers were uſed in Garlands, or otherwiſe in nuptial Solemnities, and becauſe Chriſt calls himſelf the Lily and the Roſe, Cant. 2. 1. b To wit, of Chriſt and his Church. Or, of the beloved Ones, to wit, the Virgins, who waited upon the Bride, as ſome men did upon the Bridegroom, who thence were called his Friends, Joh. 3. 29. In whoſe Name and Perſon this Pſalm may ſeem to be uttered.

1. MY heart c † is enditing d a good matter e: I ſpeak of the things which I have made f touching the king g: my tongue is the pen h of a ready writer i.

† Heb. Boyleth, or Bubbleth up. Or, will ſpeak.

c I am about to utter not vain or raſh, or fooliſh or falſe words, but ſuch as proceed from my very heart, and moſt ſerious Thoughts and cordial Affections. d Heb. Boyleth, or bubbleth up like water in a Pot over the Fire. This phraſe notes that the workings of his heart in this matter, were frequent and abundant, fervent and vehement, free and chearful, and withal kindled by God's Grace, and by the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt. e Either, 1. Pleaſant or Delightful, and fit for the Nuptial ſolemnity here expreſſed; As a Feaſt-day is ſometimes called a good day. Or, 2. Excellent, as this word is oft uſed, as Numb. 24. 5. Deut. 8. 12. Or, Holy and Spiritual, as it is moſt commonly uſed. This is no vain or carnal, or wanton Love-ſong, but ſublime and heavenly, and full of Majeſty, as is manifeſt from the body of this Pſalm. f Which I by divine Inſpiration have compoſed. g Or rather, to the King: for to him he addreſſeth his Speech in the following Verſes: and this Hebrew prefix, Lamed, generally ſignifies, to, though ſometimes it be rendred, of or concerning. h Or, as the Pen. Whereby he intimates that he was only the Pen or Inſtrument in uttering this Song, and that it had another and an higher Original, to wit, the Spirit of God, by whoſe hand this Pen was guided and managed. i Whereby he underſtands Either, 1. God's Spirit, who writ or ſpoke this by the Pen or Mouth of the Pſalmiſt, Or, 2. Himſelf, whom he ſo calls, not out of vain Oſtentation, or Self-Commendation, but to teach us that this Song was not the effect of his own deep and ſerious ſtudy, but did freely flow into him by divine Inſpiration, and did as freely and readily flow from him.

2. Thou art fairer k than the children of men l: grace is poured into thy lips m: therefore n God hath bleſſed thee for ever.

k Or, more Beautiful, (i.e.) Lovely and amiable. He ſpeaks not here ſo much of his outward Beauty, which, though it be an Ornament both to a Bridegroom and to a King, yet is not very conſiderable in either, nor is much admired, or applauded by wiſe men, as of the inward and glorious Endowments of his Mind or Soul, ſuch as Wiſdom, and Righteouſneſs and Meekneſs, &c. as the particulars of this Beauty are declared, v. 4. 7. l Than all other Men. Which is moſt true of Chriſt; but not of Solomon; whom many have excelled, if not in Wiſdom, yet in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, which is the chief part of this Beauty, and moſt celebrated in this Pſalm. m God hath plentifully poured into thy Mind and Tongue, the gift of ſpeaking, with admirable grace, (i.e.) moſt wiſely, and eloquently, and therefore moſt acceptably, ſo as to find grace with, and work grace in thy hearers. This was in the ſame ſort true of Solomon, but far more eminently and effectually in Chriſt: of which ſee Iſa. 50. 4. Luk. 4. 22. Joh. 7. 46. The former Clauſe noted his inward Perfections; and this ſignifies his ability and readineſs, to communicate them to others. n Which notes not the meritorious cauſe, for that Beauty and Grace now mentioned, are declared to be the free gifts of God, and were the effects, and not the cauſes, of Gods bleſſing him, but rather the final cauſe, or the end for which God endowed him, with thoſe excellent Qualifications; and ſo the ſenſe of the place is, becauſe God hath ſo eminently adorned and qualified thee for Rule, therefore he hath truſted and bleſſed thee, with an everlaſting Kingdom. Or, becauſe, as this Particle is uſed, Gen. 38. 26. Pſal. 42. 6. and elſewhere. And ſo God's bleſſing him with ſuch ſolid and everlaſting Bleſſings, is noted as the cauſe of this ſingular Beauty and Grace here expreſſed.

3. Gird thy ſword upon thy thigh o, O moſt mighty: with thy glory and thy majeſty p.

o Either, 1. As an Enſign of Royal Majeſty. But that is uſually and much better expreſſed in Scripture, by putting a Crown upon his head. Or rather, 2. As an Inſtrument for War and Battel, to ſmite his Enemies, as it is declared, v. 4, 5. And the Sword is here put Synecdochically for all his Arms, as it is in many other places, as appears from v. 5. where we read alſo of his Arrows. And this Sword of the Meſſias is nothing elſe, but the Word of God coming out of his mouth, which is fitly compared to a Sword, as may appear from Iſa. 49. 2. Eph. 6. 17. Heb. 4. 12. Revel. 1. 16. which is elſewhere called the Rod of his Mouth, Iſa. 11. 4. and the Rod of his Power, Pſal. 110. 2. p Or, which is thy Glory and thy Majeſty; Or, magnificence or Beauty: For theſe Words are joyned with the Sword, by way of appoſition. Which Sword or Word is the great Inſtrument of maintaining and propagating thy Honour, and Glory, and Kingdom.

† Heb. Proſper thou, Ride thou.

4. And in thy majeſty q † ride proſperouſly r, becauſe of truth and meekneſs and righteouſneſs s: and thy right hand ſhall teach thee terrible things t.

q Being thus gloriouſly, or magnificently girt and armed. r March on ſpeedily (which is ſignified by Riding) and ſucceſsfully againſt thine Enemies, (i.e.) Thou ſhalt do ſo, as it is in the laſt Clauſe, ſhall teach thee. So Imperatives are oft put for Futures, and Predictions are expreſſed in the form of Commands or Exhortations. s Or, becauſe of thy Truth, &c. (i.e.) Becauſe thou art worthy of this dominion and ſucceſs; for thou neither didſt obtain nor wilt manage thy Kingdom, by deceit, or violence and unrighteouſneſs, as the Princes of the Earth frequently do, but with truth and faithfulneſs, with meekneſs and gentleneſs towards thy People, and to all that ſhall ſubmit to thee, with impartial juſtice and equity; whereby thy Throne will be eſtabliſhed, Prov. 16. 12. and 20. 28. Or, as it is in the Hebrew, word for word, upon the Word of Truth, &c. which may ſeem beſt to ſuit with the foregoing words, which according to the Hebrew are, Proſper thou, Ride thou, and then immediately follows; upon the Word of Truth. &c. To wit, the Goſpel; which is oft called Truth, as Joh. 8. 32. Col. 1. 5. &c. and the Word of Truth, Eph. 1. 13. and may no leſs truly be called the Word of Meekneſs, becauſe it is not delivered with terror, as the Law was at Sinai, but meekly and ſweetly by Chriſt, and by his Miniſters, Mat. 21. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 25. and the Word of Righteouſneſs, becauſe it brings in everlaſting Righteouſneſs, Dan. 9. 24. and ſtrongly obligeth and exciteth all men, to the practice of Righteouſneſs and Holineſs. And ſo the Goſpel is compared, to an Horſe or Chariot, upon which Chriſt is ſaid to ride, when the Goſpel is preached, and carried about from place to place, Revel. 19. 11. And this may be here added, to ſhew the great difference between the Kingdoms of the World, that are managed with outward Pomp and Glory, and the Kingdom of Chriſt, which is a ſpiritual Kingdom, and like a Spouſe, v. 13. all glorious within, as conſiſting in ſpiritual Vertues and Graces, Truth, Meekneſs and Righteouſneſs. t (i.e.) Thou ſhalt do great and glorious Exploits, which ſhall be grievous and terrible to thine Enemies, as the next Verſe explains it, and this not by great Forces, and the aſſiſtance of others, but by thine own ſingle Power. Compare Iſa. 63. 3. Which doth by no means agree to Solomon, who was a man of Peace, and not ingaged in any martial Actions againſt his Enemies; and, if he had done any thing conſiderable in that kind, he could not do it by his own right hand, but by the help of his Souldiers. But this doth excellently agree to the Meſſias, and to him only. Obj. The things which were done by the Meſſias at his firſt coming, were rather comfortable than terrible. Anſ. They were indeed comfortable to all good men, but withal they were terrible to the ungodly, and particularly to the Body of the Jewiſh Nation, to whom Chriſt was a ſtone of ſtumbling, and rock of offence, and an occaſion of their utter deſtruction. And upon that and other Accounts, not only Chriſt's ſecond, but even his firſt coming, is repreſented as dreadful, as Joel 2. 30. Mal. 3. 2. and elſewhere. For the Phraſe, thy Right hand ſhall teach thee, it is not to be taken Properly, for ſo he taught his Hand, and not his Hand him, but the meaning is, that his Hand ſhould ſhow him, (i.e.) diſcover and work before him: for Verbal words are oft underſtood really, as Calling is put for Being, as Iſa. 1. 26. and 9. 6. ſo teaching or ſhewing, is put for doing, as Pſal. 16. laſt, and 60. 3.

5. Thine arrows u are ſharp in the heart of the kings enemies x: whereby the people fall under thee y.

u The ſame thing for ſubſtance with the Sword, v. 3. both noting the Inſtruments by which he conquers his Enemies; which is no other than his Word, which is ſharp and powerful, and pierceth the hearts of men, Heb. 4. 12. which alſo firſt wounds ſinners, and then heals them; and which is for the fall, as well as for the riſing of many, Luk. 2. 34. and for judgment, as well as for mercy, Joh. 9. 39. to ſome a ſavour of death, and to others a ſavour of life, 2 Cor. 2. 16. and therefore is fitly compared to Arrows; which title is ſometimes given to words, as Pſal. 64. 4. and frequently to God's Plagues or Judgments, Deut. 32. 23. Pſal. 18. 14. and 64. 7. ſuch as the Word becomes to ungodly men by their own fault. And theſe Metaphorical Weapons are oft aſcribed to Chriſt; who hath a Bow, Revel. 6. 2. and Weapons of Warfare, 2 Cor. 10. 4. and whoſe Mouth God is ſaid to make a Sword, and an Arrow, Iſa. 49. 2. x (i.e.) Of thine Enemies; the third Perſon being put for the ſecond, as is uſual in Prophetical Writings; which here may ſeem to have ſome Emphaſis, as deſcribing the Perſons, againſt whom he ſhot his Arrows, and the Reaſon why he did ſo, becauſe they were the Enemies of his Kingdom, and would not have him to reign over them, Luk. 19. 27. y Either, as ſlain by thine Arrows; Or, as proſtrate at thy feet, after the manner of conquered Perſons, Pſal. 18. 38. and 20. 8. According to this and many other Tranſlations, the words are tranſplaced, which in the Hebrew lye thus, Thine Arrows are ſharp, whereby the People do fall under thee, in the Heart (i.e. in the midſt, which is oft called the Heart, as Exod. 15. 8. Deut. 4. 11. And ſo it may be here; for the Army, as ſuch, hath no Heart, properly ſo called. And ſo this is fitly alledged, as a proof of the ſharpneſs and force of his Arrows, that they not only wound thoſe who march in the Front, but even thoſe who are in the midſt of the Army, where they may ſeem ſecure, and out of their reach) of the Kings Enemies. But the middle words may be, and are by many included within a Parentheſis, and ſo they may agree with our Tranſlation thus, Thine Arrows are ſharp (for the People fall under thee, which is an evidence of their ſharpneſs) in the Heart (or againſt the Heart; Or, piercing into the Heart. Which is an eaſie and uſual Ellipſis) of the Kings Enemies.

6. * Thy throne, O God z, is for ever and ever a: the ſcepter of thy kingdom is a right ſcepter b. * Pſal. 93. 2. Heb. 1. 8.

z It is moſt evident, that the ſpeech is ſtill continued to the ſame Perſon, whom he calls King, v. 1. 11. and here God. Which change of the Title was very expedient, and in ſome ſort neceſſary to give us a true underſtanding of this Pſalm, and to aſſure us that he doth not ſpeak of Solomon (to whom neither theſe nor the foregoing nor the following words agree, becauſe his Reign was peaceable and ſhort, and ſtained with many and great iniquities) but a far greater King, even of

of the Meſſias, who is not only a Man, but alſo the mighty God, as he is called, Iſa.9.6. and as the Apoſtle ſolidly proves from this place, Heb.1.8. For though the Name of Elohim, or God, be ſometimes given in Scripture to ſome Creatures, yet in thoſe caſes it is always clogged with ſome diminiſhing Expreſſion, ſignifying that they are only made or called Gods, and that only for a certain time and purpoſe, as is manifeſt from Exod. 4. 16. and 7. 1. Pſal. 82. 6. and it is no where put ſimply and abſolutely for any Perſon, but him, who is God bleſſed for ever, Rom.9.5. a To wit, Properly and in thine own Perſon, in which as he lives for ever, ſo he muſt neceſſarily reign for ever: whereas David, whoſe Throne is ſaid to be eſtabliſhed for ever, 2 Sam.7.16. was a mortal man, and therefore that Promiſe was not intended of, nor could be fulfilled in, his Perſon, without including his Poſterity. And as he here gives to the Meſſias, the Name of God, which was never given to David nor Solomon, ſo he aſcribes an everlaſting Kingdom to him, in ſuch a ſence as it was never given to them. So Dan.2.44. and 7. 14. b It is not ſtrange that thy Throne is not liable to the ſame Uncertainties, and Caſualties, with the Thrones of earthly Princes, becauſe their Scepters are commonly managed with great injuſtice and manifold iniquities, which lay the foundation of their overthrow; whereas thou ruleſt with exact Righteouſneſs and Equity, whereby thy Throne is eſtabliſhed, Prov. 16. 12.

7. Thou loveſt righteouſneſs, and hateſt wickedneſs c: therefore d God, thy God e hath anointed thee with the oyl of gladneſs f above thy fellows g.

c Thou doſt not only do that which is good, and avoid that which is evil; Which even bad Princes and men may do, and ſometimes actually do for politick, or prudential reaſons, but thou doſt this ſincerely, and from an inward Principle, even from a true love to God and Goodneſs, and from an implacable hatred againſt all wickedneſs. d So this Particle is commonly uſed. And ſo it denoteth, Either, 1. The reward of Chriſt's righteous Adminiſtration of his Kingdom. So the ſence is: Becauſe thou haſt given ſo many and great proofs of thy love to Righteouſneſs, and of thy hatred of ſin, and that not only by the conſtant courſe of thy Life, but alſo by thy Death and Paſſion, therefore God hath raiſed and exalted thee, far above all Men and Angels, to a ſtate of Joy and endleſs glory at his right Hand; which is fitly expreſſed by the Oyl of gladneſs. For anointing doth not always ſignifie the conferring of inward gifts or endowments, but ſometimes only notes the deſignation or inauguration of a Perſon, to ſome high Dignity or Employment, as Ezek. 28. 14. and elſewhere: Or, 2. The final cauſe, or end of Chriſt's Unction. So the ſence is; To that end, (i.e.) That thou mighteſt love Righteouſneſs, and hate Wickedneſs, and govern thy ſelf and thy Kingdom accordingly, God hath anointed thee, &c. (i.e.) Hath endowed thee with all the Gifts and Graces of the Holy Spirit, Acts 10. 38. in an eminent and peculiar manner, to the comfort and refreſhment of thine own, and all thy peoples hearts; and hath ſolemnly called thee to be the Prieſt and Prophet, and King of all his people. But the former ſenſe ſeems to be the trueſt, and is for ſubſtance the ſame thing, which is ſaid in other words, Phil. 2. 8, 9, 10. e According to thy humane Nature, Joh. 20. 17. though in reſpect of thy divine Nature, thou art his Fellow, Zech. 13. 7. and his Equal; Phil. 2. 6. and one with him, Joh. 10. 30. f So called here, as alſo Iſa. 61. 3. Partly, becauſe it not only makes the countenance freſh and pleaſant, Pſal. 104. 15. but alſo rejoyceth the heart, Prov. 27. 9. and partly, becauſe it was a token of gladneſs, and uſed in Feaſts, and other ſolemn occaſions of rejoycing: Of which ſee Pſal. 23. 5. *Dan.*10.3. Amos 6. 6. g (i.e.) Above all them, who partake with thee in this Unction: Either, 1. Above all that ever were anointed for Prieſts or Prophets, or Kings. Or, 2. Above all Believers, who alſo have received this ſame Unction, 1 Joh. 2. 20, 27. and are made Prieſts and Kings unto God, Revel. 1. 6.

8. All thy garments ſmell of myrrh, and aloes, and caſſia h: out of the ivory palaces i, whereby k they have made thee glad l.

h Wherewith they uſed to perfume their garments: See Gen. 27. 27. This may denote thoſe glorious and ſweet ſmelling Vertues, which as they were treaſured up inwardly in Chriſt's heart, ſo did they manifeſt themſelves outwardly and viſibly, and gave forth a grateful ſmell in the whole courſe of his Life and Actions, his Doctrine alſo was a ſweet ſavour unto God and Men, 2 Cor. 2. 14, 15. i Which may be referred: Either, 1. To the garments, which were uſually kept in, and now upon this extraordinary Solemnity were brought out of Palaces, or Houſes, or Wardrobes of Ivory, ſo called here, as alſo Amos 3. 15. not becauſe they were wholly made of Ivory, but becauſe they were adorned, or covered here and there with it. Or rather, 2. To the King himſelf, who is here ſuppoſed to reſide in his Ivory Palaces, and his garments are ſo fragrant, that they do not only perfume the whole Palaces in which he is, but the ſweet ſavour thereof is perceived by thoſe that paſs by them, or are at ſome diſtance from them. All which is poetically ſaid, and with a manifeſt Alluſion to Solomon's glorious Garments and Palaces. By theſe ivory Palaces, he may mean either, 1. His humane Nature; in which Chriſt dwelt, as in a Tabernacle, as the Greek word ſignifies, Joh. 1. 14. in which all theſe fragrant Vertues were, and from whence they were diffuſed every where. Indeed the Body is called a Temple, *Joh.*2.19. and an Houſe or Tabernacle, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2. and ſo it might be called a Palace. But why it ſhould be called Palaces, and that of Ivory, ſeems not ſo plain. Or rather, 2. Thoſe glorious and heavenly Manſions, *Joh.*14. 2. which may not unfitly be called ivory Palaces, as elſewhere in the ſame figurative manner they are ſaid to be made of, or adorned with Gold and Precious ſtones, Revel. 21. 18, 19. from which Manſions Chriſt came into the World, Joh. 3. 13. and into which Chriſt went, and where he ſetled his abode after he went out of the world, *Joh.*13.1. Acts 1.11. and from whence Chriſt poured forth all the fragrant Gifts and Graces of his Spirit, into the World and Church, Acts 2.33. Although there is no neceſſity to ſtrain every particular circumſtance in ſuch poetical deſcriptions, nor to find out ſome particular thing in Chriſt to which it agrees; for ſome expreſſions may be uſed, only as ornaments in ſuch caſes, as they are in Parables; and it may ſuffice to know and ſay, that the Glories and Excellencies of the King Chriſt are deſcribed by ſuch things, in which earthly Potentates do place their Glory. k Or from which: Either, 1. From place or Palaces. Or rather, 2. From which thing, (i.e.) From the ſweet ſmell of thy Garments, out of thoſe ivory Palaces, or from the Effuſion of the Gifts and Graces of thy Spirit, from thy Father's right hand in Heaven; which as it is a great bleſſing and comfort to thoſe who receive them, ſo doth it rejoyce the Heart of Chriſt, both as it is a demonſtration of his own Power and Glory, and as it is the happy Inſtrument of doing much good in the World, and of bringing Souls to God, which is Chriſt's great work and delight. l (i.e.) Thou art made glad; ſuch Phraſes being oft uſed indefinitely and imperſonally, as Luke 15. 32. and in many other places.

9. Kings daughters were among thy honourable women m: upon thy right hand n did ſtand o the queen in gold of Ophir p.

m (i.e.) Amongſt them that attend upon thy Spouſe, as the manner was in Nuptial Solemnities, as men attended upon the Bridegroom, whence they were called Friends, *Joh.*3. 29. In reference to Chriſt, as the Spouſe or Queen is the Church in general, ſo theſe honourable Women, are particular Believers, who are daily added to the Church, *Act.*2.47. and ſubmit themſelves to it. And although the Church is made up of particular Believers, yet ſhe is diſtinguiſhed from them, for the decency of the Parable, as the whole is oft diſtinguiſhed by our minds, from the parts of which it conſiſts, and as the Daughters of Jeruſalem, are diſtinguiſhed from the Spouſe in the Book of the Canticles, though the Spouſe be wholly made up of them. And theſe Believers may be ſaid to be Kings Daughters, Either, becauſe amongſt others many Perſons of Royal or Princely Races, did embrace the Faith, as was propheſied of them, Iſa. 49. 7. and 60. 10, 11. &c. or becauſe they are in a ſpiritual ſence, Kings unto God, Revel. 1. 6. n The moſt honourable place next to the Kings. See 1 Kings 2. 19. Mat. 26. 64. o Which is the poſture of a Servant: to ſhew that as ſhe is a Queen, ſhe is alſo his Subject to ſerve and obey him. Or, is placed or ſeated: Which ſeems more agreeable to the Perſon of a Queen, 1 Kings 2. 19. and of a Spouſe at the Nuptial Solemnity. p Clothed in the richeſt Garments made of the choiceſt Gold. By which he deſigns the Graces wherewith the Church is accompliſhed.

10. Hearken q, O daughter r, and conſider, and incline thine ear s: forget alſo thine own people, and thy fathers houſe t.

q Theſe words are ſpoken; Either, 1. In the perſon of the Attendants upon the Bride or Bridegroom. Or, 2. Of the Bridegroom. Or rather, 3. By the Prophet himſelf: who having hitherto ſpoken to the Bridegroom, or King, now addreſſeth his Speech to the Bride or Queen. r So he calls her, partly, in token of his reſpect and affection to her, and partly, becauſe ſhe is ſuppoſed to be young and beautiful, and therefore the Prophet ſpeaks like an Elder and graver perſon, and as her ſpiritual Father and Counſellor. s He uſeth ſeveral words, ſignifying the ſame thing, to ſhew his ſerious and vehement deſire of her good, and the great importance and difficulty of practiſing the following counſel. t Not ſimply, but comparatively, ſo far as they oppoſe or hinder the diſcharge of thy duty to thy Husband, or ſo far as they are corrupted in Doctrine or Worſhip, or Practice. He alludes to the Law of Matrimony, Gen. 2. 24. and to what Solomon did ſay, or ſhould have ſaid to Pharaoh's Daughter, to wean her from the Idolatry and other vices of her Father's houſe. But this, as well as the reſt of the Pſalm, reſpects Chriſt, and is a ſeaſonable and neceſſary advice and command to all perſons that deſire to come to Chriſt, whether Jews or Gentiles, that they would caſt off all their inveterate Errours and Prejudices, all thoſe ſuperſtitious or idolatrous, or wicked opinions or practices, which they had received by long and ancient, and therefore venerable Tradition from their Fathers, and intirely give up themſelves to Chriſt to be inſtructed by him, and to receive his Doctrine, though it would ſeem new to them. And by theſe words he ſeems to intimate and tacitly to foretel that not only the ſuperſtitious inventions and Traditions of men, but even the legal Worſhip appointed by Moſes, and delivered to them from their parents, ſucceſſively for many generations, ſhould be relinquiſhed by the believing Jews, and aboliſhed by Chriſt's coming.

Jews

11. So ſhall the King greatly deſire thy beauty u: for he is thy Lord x, and worſhip thou him y.

u So doing thou ſhalt be amiable and acceptable to thy Husband; which will abundantly recompenſe thee for the loſs of thy Father's houſe. x As he is thy Husband, and alſo as he is thy King, and God, as he was called, v 6. And this is added as a reaſon, not of the laſt words, why the King would deſire her Beauty; but of the advice given to her, v 10. y By which he implies that her Husband was no meer man, but God alſo, and therefore might be adored without any violation of that known and immutable Precept of worſhipping God only.

12 And the daughter of Tyre z ſhall be there with a gift a, even * the rich amongſt the people b ſhall intreat † thy favour.

* Pſal. 72. 10. †Heb. thy Face.

z (i e) The people or Citizens of Tyre; as the Daughter of Zion, or Jeruſalem, or Babel, &c. are put for their Inhabitants, 2 Kings 19. 21. Pſal. 137. 8. Zech. 9. 9. He mentioneth the Tyrians; Partly, Becauſe they did give Preſents to Solomon, 1 Kings 5. 1, &c to whom here is a continued alluſion through the whole Pſalm; and partly, becauſe they among others, and before many others, were to be converted to Chriſt, as they were. See Mat. 11. 21, 22 Mark 3. 8. and 7 24 Acts 21. 3, 4, 5. But they are here put Synecdochically for all the Gentiles, whom that City fitly repreſents, as being the Mart of the Nations, as ſhe is called, Iſa. 23. 3. And being a very rich and proud, and therefore a ſelf-conceited and a ſtiff-necked people, their Merchants being Princes, Iſa. 23. 8. they may in a peculiar manner repreſent all thoſe great and proud Princes and ſtubborn people of the Gentile-World, which ſhould be ſubdued to Chriſt by the preaching of the Goſpel. a Partly, to teſtifie their Homage, which was done by Gifts or Preſents, as appears from 1 Sam. 10. 27. 2 Sam. 8. 2, &c. and partly, to procure thine, and conſequently thy Husband's favour, as it here follows. b Of other Nations.

13. The kings daughter c is all glorious within d; her clothing is of wrought gold e.

c (i.e.) The Spouſe, ſo called; Either, becauſe ſhe was the Daughter of one King, and the Wife of another: Or, becauſe the Spouſe or Wife is ſometimes called the Husband's Daughter; Partly, becauſe ſhe is ſuppoſed to be younger than he, and partly, becauſe of that reſpect and ſubjection which ſhe oweth to him, and that fatherly care and affection which he oweth to her. See 2 Sam. 12. 3. Jer. 3. 4. So the Bridegroom calls his Spouſe his Siſter Cant. 4. 19. Thus Livia, the Wife of Auguſtus is called his Siſter in antient Coins. d Either, 1. Even in her retiring Chambers, in the Kings Palace, and not only when ſhe ſheweth her ſelf abroad. Or rather, 2. In her mind and Soul, or in ſpiritual endowments, the excellent Vertues and Graces wherewith ſhe is accompliſhed. For, 1. This is oppoſed to her outward clothing. 2. This being ſo great and ſo neceſſary a qualification of a worthy Spouſe, it is not likely it ſhould be omitted in her Deſcription and Commendation, eſpecially when the Bridegroom is commended for his inward Accompliſhments, as well as for his outward Glory, v. 4. 7. 3. The Church is this Bride, as hath been ſaid and proved before, whoſe true and chief Beauty is inward and ſpiritual, and not conſiſting in outward Pomp and Glory. e Her inward Perfections do not reſt within her, but break forth into vertuous and honourable Actions, wherewith ſhe is adorned in the view of the World. This ſuits well with the ſtyle of the holy Scriptures, wherein the Saints are oft ſaid to be cloathed with Vertues and vertuous Actions. See Pſal. 132. 9. 1 Pet. 5. 5.

14. She ſhall be brought unto the king f in raiment of needle-work: the virgins her companions g that follow her ſhall be brought unto thee.

f He alludes to the cuſtom of conducting the Bride to the Bridegrooms houſe. g (i.e.) Her Bride-maidens attending upon her, called her honourable Women, v. 9. (where ſee the Notes,) and here Virgins, becauſe of their ſpiritual Purity and Chaſtity, 2 Cor. 11. 2.

15. With gladneſs and rejoycing h ſhall they be brought: they ſhall enter into the king's palace.

h Full of joy for the Glory and Felicity of the Bride and Bridegroom, and for the Comfort and Benefit which redound theto themſelves from it.

16. In ſtead of thy fathers ſhall be thy children, * whom thou maiſt make princes in all the earth i.

* 1 Pet. 2. 9. Rev. 1. 6. & 5. 10. & 20. 6.

i Having directed his Speech to the Bride, he now returns to the Bridegroom, as may be gathered both from the Hebrew words, which are of the Maſculine Gender; and from the next Verſe, which unqueſtionably belongs unto him; yet ſo that he ſuppoſeth the Bride to be concern'd and partakes with him in the Privileges here mentioned, and the Children to be common to them both. And therefore this Verſe and Pſalm cannot be underſtood of Solomon, and his Marriage with Pharaoh's Daughter, becauſe he had no Children by her, and but very few by all his Wives and Concubines; and his Children were ſo far from exceeding their Parents in the largeneſs of their Dominions, or being made Princes in all the Earth, as is here ſaid, that they enjoyed but a ſmall part of their Fathers Dominions, and that with many Tribulations, and but for a ſhort time. But this was moſt truly and fully accompliſhed in Chriſt: who inſtead of his Fathers of the Jewiſh Nation, from whom he deſcended, and by whom he was forſaken and rejected (which here ſeems to be implyed, and elſewhere is expreſly affirmed) had a numerous Poſterity, of Gentile Chriſtians of all the Nations of the Earth, which here and elſewhere are called Princes, and Kings, becauſe of their great power with God and with Men, becauſe they ſubdued a very great part of the World, to the obedience of Chriſt, and ruled them in his Name and ſtead.

17. I will make thy name to be remembred in all generations k: therefore ſhall the people praiſe thee for ever and ever.

k As he began the Pſalm, with the Celebration of the Kings Praiſes, ſo now he endeth with it, and adds this important Circumſtance, that this Nuptial Song ſhould not only ſerve for the preſent Solemnity, as others of that kind do, but that it ſhould be remembred and ſung in all ſucceſſive Generations. Which plainly ſheweth that it was not compoſed upon ſuch a ſleight and tranſitory occaſion, as that of Solomon's Marriage with Pharaoh's Daughter: which was ſoon forgotten, and the Iſraelites had little cauſe to remember it with any ſatisfaction; but upon that great and glorious and everlaſting Marriage between Chriſt and his Church; of which this is moſt properly and literally verified.

PSAL. XLVI.

The ARGUMENT.

He inſinuates the weak condition of God's Church as to outward advantages, that they had not one Sea to oppoſe to another, but only a ſmall River; which though in it ſelf deſpicable, yet was ſufficient to refreſh and defend them in ſpight of all their Enemies. And as the Sea and Waters thereof, v. 2,3. are to be underſtood Metaphorically, as all agree, ſo alſo in all probability, are this River and Streams: Which therefore may deſign the gracious preſence and aſſiſtance, and bleſſing of the Lord, (which is very frequently deſcribed under the Name of Waters, as Iſa. 11. 9. and 12. 3. Zech. 14. 8. &c.) or the Lord himſelf, who is expreſly ſaid to be unto the City of Zion for its defence, a place of broad Rivers and Streams, Iſa. 33. 20,21. which probably alludes to this Text, or at leaſt explains it. g (i. e.) Shall not barely defend it from utter ruine, but preſerve it from danger, and give great occaſion for Rejoycing and Thankſgiving. h (i. e.) Zion or Jeruſalem ſo called, alſo Pſal. 48. 1. Iſa. 60. 14. i (i. e.) Of the Tabernacle, the plural Number for the ſingular, as Pſal. 43. 3. PSAL. XLVII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm may ſeem to have been Compoſed upon the occaſion of that great Solemnity, of carrying the Ark from the Houſe of Obed-Edom, into the City of Zion; of which ſee 2 Sam. 6. and 1 Chro. 13. and 16. But as Zion was a Type of the Church, and the Ark a Type of Chriſt, ſo this hath a further reference, even to Chriſt's aſcenſion into Heaven, and as conſequent thereunto, to the ſpreading of his Kingdom, in all the Parts and Nations of the World. Which is the chief Scope and Deſign of the Pſalmiſt, or at leaſt of the Holy Ghoſt, in this Pſalm; as will plainly appear from the Words and Matter of it.

To the chief Muſician, a Pſalm || for the ſons of Korah.

1. O Clap your hands, all ye people a, ſhout unto God b with the voyce of triumph.

a Either 1. All the Tribes of Iſrael: For the ſeveral Tribes are ſometimes called ſeveral People. See Judg. 5. 14. Ezek. 2. 3. Act. 4. 27. Or, 2. All Nations, not only Jews, but Gentiles: for all of them either had, or might have benefit by the Ark, upon their Addreſſes to God there, and eſpecially by Chriſt and his Aſcenſion. b In the Worſhip, and unto the Glory of the God of Iſrael.

2. For the LORD moſt high is terrible c, he is a great King over all the earth d.

c Or, is moſt high (in himſelf above all Gods) which conjunction is oft underſtood) Terrible to all his Enemies. d The univerſal Monarch of the whole World, and not of only Iſrael.

3. He ſhall ſubdue e the people under us f, and the nations under our feet.

e Or, lead like Sheep; Or, bring into the Fold, as divers render the Word, by comparing Iſa. 5. 17. Mic. 2. 12. He ſeems to ſpeak of ſuch a Subjugation of them, as was for the good of the People ſubdued, becauſe this is matter of rejoycing to them, v. 1. Which is true both of thoſe People whom David ſubdued, who thereby had Opportunities, Obligations and Encouragements, to own and worſhip the true God, which was the only way to their true and laſting Happineſs; and eſpecially of thoſe Gentiles, who were ſubdued to Chriſt, by the preaching of the Goſpel. f The Gentile-Converts were in ſome ſort brought under the Jews, becauſe they were ſubjected to Chriſt, and to his Apoſtles, and to the Primitive Church, which were Jews. Or, the Pſalmiſt may ſpeak this in the Name of the whole Church, which then were Iſraelites only, but afterwards were made up of Jews and Gentiles, unto which all particular Believers, were to ſubmit themſelves in and for the Lord.

4. He ſhall chooſe g our inheritance h for us, the excellency i of Jacob k whom he loved l, Selah.

g (i. e.) He will appoint and beſtow upon us. This Verb of the future Tenſe may ſeem to agree well with the Gentiles, becauſe this Bleſſing was not now preſent, but future, and ſo the Sence deſigned by the Holy Ghoſt may be this, though at preſent we are wicked and wretched Creatures, and Strangers to the Common-wealth of Iſrael, yet there is a time coming wherein God will chuſe or take us into the number of his Children by gracious Adoption. But futures are variouſly rendred; and accordingly the vulgar Latine, Syriack and Arabick render this Word, He hath choſen. The Chaldee render this and the following Words, He will take pleaſure in us, ſo as to give us our Inheritance. h Either the Land of Canaan: Or Heaven; which was typified by that Land: Or rather, God himſelf who is called his peoples Portion or Inheritance, as Pſal. 16. 5. and 73. 26. and elſewhere, or the Preſence and Worſhip and Bleſſing of God. This God had choſen for the Iſraelites, and reſolved to chuſe or ſet apart for the Gentiles. i Or, Glory; wherein Jacob gloryed and excelled all other People. See Ezek. 24. 21. Amos 6. 8. and 8. 7. k Either, 1. Of the Perſon of Jacob; Who, though he never had the Poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan, yet had the Lord and his Preſence, and Bleſſing for his Inheritance. Or rather, 2. Of the People of Jacob or Iſrael, who are frequently called Jacob, as Numb. 23. 7. 10. 23. Pſal. 14. 7. and 44. 4, &c. for theſe did actually enjoy the promiſed Inheritance of Canaan, and the preſence of God in his Sanctuary. l This he adds; partly, as the reaſon why he choſe ſuch a noble Inheritance for them, not for any peculiar worth in them, more than in other People, not only for his free Love to them, as he declareth, Deut. 7. 7, 8. and 9. 5. and partly, as an evidence of the excellency of this Inheritance, becauſe it was choſen for his beloved People.

5. * God is gone up m with a ſhout, the LORD with the ſound of a trumpet.

* Pſal. 68. 24, 25.

m This is meant literally of the Ark, wherein God was preſent, which went, or was carried up to the Hill of Zion, where the Tabernacle was erected for it, and afterwards to the Hill of Moriah into the Temple; which Solemnity was accompanied with the ſhouts and acclamations of the People, and with the ſound of Trumpets: but myſtically it reſpects Chriſt's Aſcenſion into Heaven, as may be gathered by comparing this with Eph. 4. 8. where the like words uttered ed concerning the Ark upon the ſame occaſion, Pſal. 68. 18. are directly applied to Chriſt's Aſcenſion.

6. Sing praiſes n to God, ſing praiſes: ſing praiſes unto our King o, ſing praiſes.

n Theſe words are repeated four times in this Verſe, to ſhew how vehemently deſirous the Pſalmiſt was, that God might have his due Praiſe and Glory; and of how great neceſſity and importance it was to Men, to perform this great, though much neglected, Duty. o For ſo he is in a ſpecial manner.

7. For God is the King of all the earth p, ſing ye praiſes || with underſtanding q.

|| Or, every one that hath underſtanding, or, ſing Maſchil. Pſal. 45.

p Not only ours, as I now ſaid, but alſo of all the Nations of the World; and therefore he may well require, and doth highly deſerve all our Praiſes. q Not raſhly, or formally and careleſly, but ſeriouſly conſidering the greatneſs of this King whom you praiſe, and what abundant cauſe you have to praiſe and admire him. Which is an intimation that the matter of this Pſalm is more ſublime, and important than ordinary.

8. God reigneth over the heathen r: God ſitteth upon the throne s of his holineſs.

r (i.e.) Over all heathen Nations, as being the King of all the Earth, v. 7. Which was not true in David's time, but was fulfilled by Chriſt. s To wit, as Judge and King, exerciſing Dominion, or Reigning as he now ſaid; this being only another expreſſion of the ſame thing. And this Holy Throne is either, 1. The Ark upon which God was ſaid to ſit to govern the Iſraelites. Or rather, 2. Heaven; which is oft called God's Throne, Pſal. 11. 4. Iſa. 66. 1. whence God is ſaid to behold and to rule all Nations; of which general Dominion of God he here ſpeaks. And here Chriſt ſits at his Fathers right hand, for that purpoſe.

9. || The princes of the people t, are gathered together, even the people of the God of Abraham u: for the ſhields of the earth x belong unto God: he is greatly exalted y.

|| Or, the Voluntary of the People are gathered unto the People of the God of Abraham.

t Either, 1. The heads of the Tribes of Iſrael who were gathered together to the Tabernacle, or Temple upon ſolemn Feaſts. Or rather, 2. The Princes (or, the voluntary or willing ones, as this word is rendred, (Pſal. 110. 3.) of the Gentiles, who are here known by the name of the people, v. 1, 3. who were divided in their Principles, and Intereſts, and Religions, but are now united and gathered together unto Chriſt, laying their Scepters at his Feet, and joyntly owning and promoting his Worſhip and Service. So he ſpeaks of the Converſion of the Gentiles; although he mentions only their Princes, becauſe their Converſion might ſeem to be moſt difficult in ſundry reſpects, and therefore that being affirmed, the Converſion of their people, with or after them, might very reaſonably be ſuppoſed. u So he explains the former clauſe, and ſhews what people he ſpake of, and it is obſervable, he doth not ſay the people of Abraham, leſt this ſhould be appropriated to the Iſraelites, but, the people of the God of Abraham (i.e.) which worſhip the God of Abraham, whether they be Jews or Gentiles. So this is a prophecy of the Converſion of the Gentiles; which alſo is intimated by the name here uſed, which is not his old and firſt name, Abram, but his new name Abraham, given to him to ſignifie, that he ſhould be the Father of many Nations, Gen. 17. 5. Or theſe words with the former, may be, and are by divers learned Interpreters rendred thus: The Princes of the people, (i.e. Of the Gentiles) are (i.e. ſhall be as is uſual in Prophetick ſtyle) gathered unto (which Particle is ſometimes underſtood, as Pſal. 5. 8. Jer. 26. 10. Hoſ. 2. 14.) the people of the God of Abraham, (i.e.) Unto the Jews, and ſo both Jews and Gentiles ſhall be united in one Religion; and ſo God ſhall reign over the Heathen, and be King of all the Earth, as is here ſaid, v. 7, 8. and all people ſhall clap their hands for joy, as it is, v. 1. x Either, 1. The protection of the People of all the Earth. Or rather, 2. Their Princes or Rulers, who are fitly called Shields, Hoſe. 4. 18. becauſe by their office they are or ſhould be the common Parents and Protectors of all their People, to defend them from all Oppreſſions and Injuries. Theſe, ſaith he, are the Lords, (i.e.) At his diſpoſal, or ſubject to his Dominion, both as to their Hearts and Kingdoms. And ſo this is here conveniently added, as the Reaſon of that great and improbable Event, foretold in the foregoing words, that the Princes of the people (which of all others were moſt lofty and wilful, and incorrigible) ſhould joyn and ſubject themſelves to the Lord, and to his Church. y By this means God ſhall be greatly glorified, and appear to be far above all the Princes of the World, and above all other Gods.

PSAL. XLVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was compoſed upon the occaſion of ſome eminent Deliverance vouchſafed by God, to the City of Jeruſalem, from ſome potent Enemy, and dreadful danger; Either, that in Jehoſhaphat's time, 2 Chron. 20. or that under Hezekiah, 2 Kings 18. and 19. In both which times they were holy Prophets, by ſome of whom this Pſalm might be made.

A ſong, and Pſalm a || for the ſons of Korah.

|| Or, of.

a Of which ſee on Pſal. 30. which hath the ſame Title.

1. GReat is the LORD, and greatly to be praiſed in the city of our God b, in the mountain of his holineſs c.

b In Jeruſalem, which he hath choſen for his dwelling Place. c (i. e.) In his holy Mountain, either Zion where the Ark and Tabernacle was: Or rather Moriah; where the Temple now was. Although both of them are ſuppoſed by ſome to be but one Mountain, having two Tops: and it is certain that both are frequently called by one Name, to wit, Zion.

2. * Beautiful for ſituation, the joy of the whole earth d is mount Zion, on the ſides of the north e, * the city of the great king f.

* Pſal. 50. 2. Ezek. 20. 6. Dan. 8. 9. & 11. 16. * Matth. 5. 35.

d Jeruſalem may be ſo called here, as it is alſo, Lament. 2. 15. not actually, as if all People did rejoyce in it, or for it; but fundamentally or cauſally, becauſe here was very great cauſe or ground of rejoycing for the Gentile World, if they had underſtood themſelves, or their true Intereſt; becauſe here God was graciouſly preſent and ready, to hear and anſwer the juſt Deſires and Prayers, not only of the Iſraelites, but of any ſtranger, of what Nation ſoever, according to Solomon's Prayer, 1 Kings 8. 41. &c. and here the Gentiles might find that God, whom like blind Men they groped for, as the Greek phraſe implies, Act. 17. 27. and here they might be informed of the Nature and Properties, as alſo of the Mind and Will, of the Almighty and Everlaſting God, of which they were ſo groſly ignorant, and of that Meſſias, who was the Deſire of (and conſequently matter of great Joy unto) all Nations, Hagg. 2. 7. and, 2. Prophetically, becauſe the joyful Doctrine of the Goſpel, was to go from thence unto all Nations: of which ſee Iſa. 2. 2, 3. Mich. 4. 1, 2. yet theſe words may be and are by others rendred, and underſtood thus, the Joy of the or this (for here is an Emphatical Article) whole Land. e (i. e.) Which is on the Northern part of Jeruſalem. But becauſe Joſephus and ſome others affirm, that Mount Zion ſtood Southward from Jeruſalem, this Clauſe poſſibly may be added to ſignifie that Zion is not here to be underſtood ſtrictly and properly for that Mountain, or part of the Mountain ſo called, but for that other Mountain, or part of the ſame Mountain, upon which the Temple was built, which was ſtrictly called Moriah; but is here called Zion, becauſe that Name was far better known in Scripture, as being oft put for the Temple, as Pſal. 137. 3. Iſa. 18. 7. Jer. 51. 10. Lam. 5. 18. and for the whole City, and for the Church of God, in a multitude of places of Scripture. f (i. e.) The City of God, as it was now called, v. 1. who juſtly calls himſelf a great King, Mal. 1. 14. as being, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, Revel. 19. 16.

3. God is known g in her palaces h for a refuge i.

g To his People by ſenſible and long Experience, and to all neighbouring Nations, by their own Obſervation. h (i. e.) In the Habitations, or to the Inhabitants of that City. Poſſibly he may here point at the Kings Palace, and the Temple, which was the Palace of the King of Heaven; which two Palaces God did in a ſingular manner protect, and by protecting them, he protected the whole City and People. i Under whoſe ſhadow we are more ſafe and ſecure, than other Cities are with their great Rivers and impregnable Fortifications.

4. For lo, the kings i were aſſembled, they paſſed by k together.

i Either thoſe Kings confederate againſt Jehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. 20. or the Aſſyrian Princes; whom they vain-gloriouſly called Kings, Iſa. 10. 8. k In their march towards Jeruſalem. Or, they paſſed away, (i. e.) Departed without the ſucceſs, which they deſired and confidently expected.

5. They ſaw it l, and ſo they marvelled m, they were troubled and haſted away n.

l They did only look upon it, but not come into it, nor ſhoot an Arrow there, --nor caſt a Bank againſt it, as is ſaid upon this or the like occaſion, 2 Kings 19. 32. m Not ſo much at the ſtructure, or ſtrength of the City, as at the wonderful works wrought by God on their behalf. n See 2 Kings 19. 35.

6 Fear took hold upon them there, and pain o, as of a woman in travail.

o Partly,

o Partly, at the Tidings of Tirhakah's coming againſt them, 2 Kings 19. 9. and partly, from that terrible ſlaughter of their Army, there v. 35.

7. Thou breakeſt the ſhips of Tarſhiſh with an eaſt-wind p.

p This is not reported as a Matter of Fact, for we read of no Ships in thoſe Expeditions, to which this Pſalm relates, nor did any Ships come near Jeruſalem, becauſe that was at a great diſtance from the Sea, and from any navigable River running into the Sea; but only added by way of Illuſtration, or Alluſion. The ſence is, Thou didſt no leſs violently, and ſuddenly deſtroy theſe proud and raging Enemies of Jeruſalem, than ſometimes thou deſtroyeſt the Ships at Sea, with a fierce and vehement wind, ſuch as the Eaſtern winds were in thoſe parts, Exod. 14. 21. Job 27. 21. Jer. 18. 17. Ezek. 27. 26. The words are and may be rendred thus: Thou didſt break them as (ſuch Ellipſis of the Pronoun, and of the note of ſimilitude being very frequent; as I have again, and again ſhewed) the Ships of the Sea (for Tarſhiſh, though properly the Name of a Maritime place in Cilicia, Ezek. 27. 25. Jonah 1. 3. is uſually put for the Sea, as 1 Kings 10. 22. 2 Chron. 9. 21. Pſal. 72. 10. Iſa. 2. 16. Jer. 10. 9.) are broken with an Eaſt-wind. Albeit the Enemies of Jeruſalem, which are compared to the raging waters of the Sea, in Pſal. 46. 2, 3. may as fitly be compared to Ships upon the Sea.

8. As we have heard, ſo have we ſeen q in the city of the LORD of hoſts, in the city of our God, God will eſtabliſh it for ever r, Selah.

q The predictions of the Prophets, Either, 2 Chron. 20. 14. or 2 Kings 19. 20, &c. have been verified by the Events Or, We have had late and freſh Experiences of ſuch wonderful works of God, as before we only heard of by the report of our Fathers. r From this miraculous deliverance we plainly ſee that God hath a ſingular love to it, and care of it, and therefore will defend her, in all ſucceeding Ages, againſt all her Enemies. And ſo God would have done, if Jeruſalem had not forſaken God, and forfeited his favour and protection.

9. We have thought of s thy loving kindneſs, O God, in the midſt of thy temple.

s It hath been the matter of our ſerious and deep Meditation, when we have been worſhipping thee in thy Temple. For when the Prieſts were offering Incenſe or Sacrifice, the religious people exerciſed themſelves in holy Meditation, or ſecret Prayer to God, as may be gathered from Luke 1. 10. and many other places of Scripture, and from the Nature of the thing. Or, We have ſilently, or patiently waited for, as ſome ancient and other Interpreters render it.

10. According to thy name, O God, ſo is thy praiſe t unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is full of righteouſneſs u.

t For this and ſuch like glorious actions, thou art praiſed and acknowledged, and evidently proved to be ſuch an one as thou haſt affirmed thy ſelf to be in thy word, God Almighty or All-ſufficient, the Lord of Hoſts, the King of thy Church and People, and a ſtrong Tower to all that truſt in thee, and all other things which thou art called in Scripture. Thy Name is not an empty Title, but is filled up with honourable and praiſe-worthy Works anſwerable to it. u (i. e.) Of righteous Actions; by which thou diſcovereſt thy Juſtice and Holineſs in deſtroying the wicked, and incorrigible Enemies of thy People, and in fulfilling thy Promiſes made to thy Church.

11. Let mount x Zion rejoyce, let the daughters of Judah y be glad, becauſe of thy judgments z.

x Synecdochically put for Jeruſalem. y (i. e.) The other and leſſer Cities, and Towns or Villages, (i. e. all the People) of Judah: for ſuch are commonly called Daughters in reſpect of the Mother City, to which they are Subjects: See Joſ. 15. 45. and 17. 16. Pſal. 45. 12. and 137. 8. He mentions Judah only, and not all Iſrael; Partly, becauſe they were more immediately and eminently concerned in Jeruſalem's deliverance; and principally becauſe ten of the Tribes of Iſrael were now cut off from Jeruſalem, and from the Kingdom of David's Houſe, and poſſibly carried away Captive, 2 Kings 18. 9, 10, 11. z Upon thine and their Enemies. At which they were glad not ſimply; but becauſe it was highly conducible to God's Honour, and to the preſervation and enlargement of God's Church in the World.

12. Walk about Zion, and go round about her a: tell the towers thereof b.

a He ſpeaketh, Either, 1. To the Enemies, as triumphing over them. Or rather, 2. To the People of that City and Kingdom, who had been Eye-witneſſes of this glorious work of God, as appears from the following Verſes. b He bids them mark well her Towers, Bulwarks and Palaces, here and v. 13. not with vain oſtentation, or carnal confidence, for he had ſaid that God only was their Refuge, v. 3. but with thankfulneſs to God, when they ſhould find upon enquiry, that not one of them was demoliſhed, or any way defaced by ſo potent an Enemy.

13. † Mark ye well her bulwarks, ‖ conſider c her palaces: that ye may tell it to the generation following d.

† Heb. ſet your heart to her bulwarks. ‖ Or, riſe up.

c Or, Exalt, or Admire. d That they may be excited to continue their praiſes to God for this mercy, by which they hold and enjoy all their Bleſſings, and to truſt in God in the like difficulties for the future.

14. For this God e is our God for ever and ever; he will be our guide even unto death f.

e Who hath done this great work. f (i.e.) Whilſt we have a being. Birth and Life, and the ſeveral ages of life and death, are oft aſcribed to Churches and Commonwealths, both in Scripture and other Authors. This promiſe was made to the old and earthly Jeruſalem, upon condition of their obedience, wherein they failing ſo groſly, loſt the benefit of it, but it is abſolutely made good to the New and Heavenly Jeruſalem, the Church of Chriſt.

PSAL. XLIX.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm is penned upon the ſame occaſion with Pſal. 39. and 73. to wit, upon the contemplation of the afflictions of God's People, and of the proſperity and glory of ungodly men. The deſign is to juſtifie God's Providence in this dark diſpenſation, and to ſhew that all things being conſidered, good men have no cauſe for immoderate dejection of ſpirit, nor wicked men for glorying in their preſent felicities.

To the chief muſician; a Pſalm ‖ for the ſons of Korah. ‖ Or, of.

1. HEar this, all ye people a, give ear all ye inhabitants of the world:

a Heb. All People; Jews or Gentiles: For all are concerned in this matter, as being apt to ſtumble and murmur at it.

2. Both * low and high, rich and poor together. * Pſal. 62. 9.

3. My mouth ſhall ſpeak of wiſdom, and the meditation of my heart ſhall be of underſtanding b.

b It concerns you diligently to attend to me, for I am about to ſpeak not of vulgar and trivial things, or ſuch as come ſuddenly into my mind, and ruſh as haſtily out of my mouth, but of ſuch things as are the reſult of my moſt ſerious and conſiderate thoughts, and ſuch as, if you obſerve them and lay them to heart, will make you truly wiſe, and keep you from thoſe errors and follies and miſchiefs, which the generality of mankind for want of a right underſtanding do run into.

4. * I will incline mine ear c to a parable d, I will open e my dark ſaying f upon the harp. * Pſal. 78. 2. Mat. 13. 35.

c This is another Argument to perſwade them to hearken to him. I will hearken what God by his Spirit ſpeaks to me, and that and nothing elſe will I now ſpeak to you: and therefore it is well worth your hearing. I alſo ſhall joyn with you in attending to it, that whilſt I teach you, I my ſelf may learn the ſame Leſſon. For as Miniſters now teach themſelves whilſt they teach others, ſo the holy Prophets did oft-times ſearch into, and ſtudy to find out the meaning of their own Prophecies, as appears plainly from 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. The Phraſe is thought to be taken from the Muſicians, who lay their ear cloſe to the Inſtrument when they tune it, and by their ear try how the Voice and Inſtrument agree. d Which properly is a figurative and allegorical Speech, but is oft more largely taken for any excellent and important, and withal dark or difficult, Doctrine or Sentence: See Numb. 23. 7. and 24. 3. 15. Pſal. 78. 2. Comp. with Mat. 13. 35. e (i.e.) I will not ſmother it in my own breaſt, but publiſh it to the world. f So he juſtly calls the following Diſcourſe, becauſe the thing in queſtion, is and ever hath been thought difficult, and hard to be underſtood.

5. Wherefore ſhould I fear g in the days of evil h, when the iniquity of my heels i ſhall * compaſs me about? * Hoſ. 7. 2.

g He ſpeaks in his own perſon, becauſe he had now ſaid that he would incline his ear, v. 4. (i. e.) Learn and practiſe what he was teaching others, but his meaning is more general: That there is no ſufficient cauſe, why he or any good man ſhould fear. Which is to be underſtood of exceſſive or immoderate and prevailing fear, cauſing dejection or deſpondency, or diſtruſt of God's Providence and Goodneſs, or diſcontent with his condition. In which ſence men are bid not to fear, Gen. 50. 19. Mat. 28. 5. Comp. with Mark 16. 6. Thus Gen. 45. 5. Be not grieved, to wit, inordinately: for otherwiſe they ought, and he would have had them to grieve for their ſin. Thus to lead a man into temptation, Mat. 6. 13. is to ſuffer him to be overcome by it, by comparing 1 Cor. 10. 13. And the object, or cauſe of this forbidden Fear is double, the one, the afflictions of good men, here following; the other, the proſperity of the ungodly, as it is declared v. 16. and of which he begins to treat in the very next Verſe, and continues the Diſcourſe of it to the end of the Pſalm. b Either, 1. Of ſin: when iniquity of all ſorts abounds; which is many ways grievous and vexatious to every good man. Or, 2. Of miſery; in times of great diſtreſs and calamity, either publick or private, when wicked men flouriſh, (of which he ſpeaks in all the reſt of the Pſalm) and good men are oppreſſed and perſecuted. i By which he underſtands either, 1. His afflictions: which he might juſtly call the puniſhment of his ſinful actions: for iniquity is commonly put for the puniſhment of it, and the heels are put for a mans foot-ſteps, and Metaphorically, for ones ways or actions, as Pſal. 56. 6. and 89. 51. Or, 2. The iniquity, (i.e.) The violent and injurious deſigns and practices of his ungodly and malicious Enemies, who, as he here ſaith, d'd compaſs him about. Whereby he notes their proſperous ſucceſs againſt him, and his being indangered and vexed by them, as this Phraſe implies, Job 16. 13. Pſal. 17. 9, 11. and 22. 12. and 140. 9. Habak. 1. 4. and withal their intention and endeavour to vex and perſecute and deſtroy him, as this Phraſe is uſed, Pſal. 17. 9. and 22. 12, 16. and in many other places. This ſence is favoured both by the Syriack and Arabick Interpreters: whereof the former renders the words thus, the iniquity of mine enemies hath compaſſed me, and the latter thus, when mine enemies ſhall compaſs me about: and by the main Scope of the Pſalm, which is to comfort himſelf and other good men, againſt that great ſcandal of the proſperity of the wicked, and the oppreſſions and miſeries of the righteous. But all the difficulty is, why or how he calls this, the iniquity of his heels. For the clearing whereof, it is humbly propoſed to conſideration, that this Genitive Caſe, of my heels, ſeems to note not the efficient or meritorious cauſe of this iniquity, or puniſhment of it, but the object about which this iniquity is exerciſed; as Nouns in the Genitive Caſe are frequently taken. Thus the ſpoil of the poor, Iſa. 3. 14. is not that ſpoil which was made by them, but upon them: and the violence of the Children of Judah, as it is in the Hebrew Text, Joel 3. 19. is that which was done againſt them, as we truly tranſlate it. See alſo Dan. 4. 27. Mat. 10. 1. Acts 4. 9. In like manner here, the iniquity of my heels, is the iniquity wherewith they compaſs and ſeek to trip up my heels: for we ſhall find David oft ſpeaking of the malicious practices of his Enemies, with reſpect to his Heels or Feet, or Steps. So he tells us they pierced his hands and feet, Pſal. 22. 16. they compaſſed and marked, and prepared a Net for his ſteps, Pſal. 17. 11. and 56. 6. and 57. 6. as Jeremy alſo complains of his Enemies, that they hid ſnares for his feet, Ch. 18. 22. And therefore it is not ſtrange that the iniquity of his Enemies is here noted to be exerciſed about his heels, or footſteps, as this word ſignifies, either becauſe they did malignantly obſerve all his ſteps or ways, that they might find occaſion to load him with reproaches in order to his ruine; or becauſe they purpoſed to trip up his heels, or to overthrow his goings, as he complains, Pſal. 140. 4. Beſides, the words may be rendred, the iniquity of my Supplanters, for the Hebrew word rendred Heels, may be and is by ſome learned Interpreters, taken for a Participle of that Verb, which ſignifies to ſupplant or trip up the heels or circumvent, from whence Jacob had his Name. And this Character fitly agrees to David's Enemies, who were not only moſt malicious, but alſo very deceitful and treacherous, as he every where complains.

* Job 31. 24. Pſal. 62. 10. Mark 10. 24. 1 Tim. 6. 17.

6. They that * truſt in their wealth k, and boaſt themſelves in the multitude of their riches.

k As that which can and will ſecure them from God's judgments and from the calamities of humane life, the Pſalmiſt having ſaid that he and other good men, had no ſufficient cauſe of fear from their preſent ſufferings from ungodly men; now he proceeds on the contrary to ſhew that his ungodly Enemies had no reaſon to be ſecure and confident, becauſe of their preſent riches and proſperous ſucceſs.

7. None of them can by any means redeem l his brother m, nor give to God n a ranſom for him.

l To wit, from death, as appears from v. 9, 10, &c. neither from the firſt death, nor from the ſecond, which he points at, v. 14, 19. m Whom he would do his utmoſt to preſerve in life: and conſequently not himſelf. But he ſeems to mention his Brother rather than himſelf, becauſe when his Brother is ſick, he being in health, hath the full command and free uſe of all his wealth, and ſtrength, and wit, and all other means of redeeming his Brother; which he hath not, when he himſelf is dangerouſly or deſperately ſick. n The only Lord of Life, and the Judge who hath paſſed upon him the Sentence of Death.

* Job 36. 18, 19.

8. For * the redemption of their ſoul o is precious p: and it ceaſeth for ever q.

o (i.e.) Of their life, as Soul is commonly uſed. p (i.e.) Rare, as the word is uſed, 1 Sam. 3. 1. Dan. 2. 11. hard to be obtained. But he doth not call it ſimply impoſſible, becauſe Chriſt hath purchaſed this priviledge for his true Diſciples, that in ſome ſence, they ſhall not ſee death, Joh. 8. 51. q (i.e.) It is never to be accompliſhed, to wit, by any meer man, for himſelf or for his Brother.

9. That he ſhould ſtill live for ever, and * not ſee corruption r. * Pſal. 89. 48.

r Or, the Pit, or the Grave, (i.e.) Not die, as that Phraſe is oft uſed, as hath been noted before.

10. For he ſeeth s that * wiſe men die, likewiſe the fool and the brutiſh perſon periſh t, and leave their wealth to others u. * Eccleſ. 2. 16.

s An impersonal expreſſion: Every man ſees and knows it; it is viſible and evident, both from Reaſon and from univerſal Experience. t All men die without any difference between wiſe and fools, good and bad. u He ſaith not, to Sons, or Kindred; but indefinitely, to others, becauſe he is wholly uncertain to whom he ſhall leave them, to Friends, or Strangers, or Enemies; which he mentions as a great vanity in riches. They neither can ſave them from death, nor will accompany him in, and after death, and after his death will be diſpoſed, he knows not how, nor to whom.

11. Their inward thought is x, that their houſes y ſhall continue for ever z, and their dwelling-places † to all generations; they call their lands after their own names a. † Heb. to generation and generation.

x Though they are aſhamed to expreſs it, yet it is their ſecret opinion, and hope, and wiſh. y Either, 1. Their poſterity, oft called mens Houſes, as 2 Sam. 7. 11, &c. Pſal. 113. 9. and 115. 12. Or, 2. Their Manſion-houſes, as it is explained in the next Clauſe, which alſo ſerve for this purpoſe, to preſerve a mans name for ever. z Not to them in their own perſons, but to them and theirs in ſucceeding Generations, as it follows. a Fondly dreaming by this means to immortalize their Names and Memories.

12. Nevertheleſs b * man being in honour c, abideth not d: he is like the beaſts that periſh e. * Pſal. 82. 5.

b Notwithſtanding all theſe fine fancies and devices. c Living in all the ſplendour and glory above mentioned. d The Hebrew word properly ſignifies, to lodge for a night, as Gen. 32. 21. Judg. 19. 10. and thence to abide for a long or conſiderable time, as Pſal. 25. 13. and 55. 7. Prov. 15. 31. All his dreams of perpetuating his Name and Eſtate, ſhall vaniſh and be confuted by Experience. e (i.e.) That are utterly loſt and extinct. So he is in reference to all his Wealth and Honour, of which he here ſpeaks.

13. This their way f is their folly g; yet their poſterity † approve their ſayings h, Selah. † Heb. delight in their mouth.

f (i.e.) Their counſel and contrivance to immortalize themſelves. g Though to themſelves and ſome others, it ſeem to be wiſdom, yet in truth it is apparent folly and madneſs. For they neither obtain that immortal Name which they ſeek and hope for: Nor, if they do, doth it yield them any comfort or benefit. h Heb. their mouth, (i.e.) Their counſels and ſuggeſtions which they gave them concerning theſe matters. The Mouth is oft put for the words, which come out of it, as Numb. 35. 30. Job 7. 11.

14. Like ſheep i they are laid in † the grave k, death ſhall feed on them l, and the * upright m ſhall have dominion over them in the morning n, and their || beauty o ſhall conſume p || in the grave, from their dwelling q. † Heb. Hel. * Dan. 7. 22. Mal. 4. 3. Luke 22. 30. 1 Cor. 6. 2. Rev. 2. 26. & 20. 4. || Or, Strength. || Or, the Grave being an habitation to every one of them.

i Which for a ſeaſon are fed in large and ſweet paſtures, but at the owners pleaſure are put together in cloſe and comfortleſs folds, and led away to the ſlaughters, not knowing nor conſidering whither they are going. k Or, in Hell: For the Hebrew word ſignifies both. l The firſt death ſhall conſume their bodies in the grave, and the ſecond death ſhall devour their Souls. m Good men whom here they oppreſſed and abuſed at their pleaſure. n Either, 1. Suddenly, or within a very little time, as this Phraſe is oft uſed, as Pſal. 30. 5. and 46. 5. and 101. 8. and 143. 8, &c. Or, 2. In the day of the general Judgment, and the Reſurrection of the Dead. For Death being called the night, Joh. 9. 4. and ſleep in many places, that day is fitly compared to the Morning, when men awake out of ſleep, and enter upon that everlaſting day. But whether this or the former be the true meaning of the Phraſe, it is ſufficiently evident the thing here ſpoken of, is not done in this Life, but in the next: For, 1. This Propoſition and Priviledge being general, and common to all upright perſons, is not verified here, it being the lot of many good men to be oppreſſed and killed by the wicked, as is manifeſt both from Scripture, as Pſal. 44. 22. Eccleſ. 8. 14. and 9. 2. and from the Experience of all Ages of the Church. 2. This Dominion of the juſt over the wicked happens after the wicked are laid in their Grave, as is here expreſſed, and conſequently ſuppoſeth their future Life and Reſurrection: for when one perſon rules over another, both are ſuppoſed to exiſt or have a being. Nor is there any Argument againſt againſt this ſence, but from a vain and abſurd conceit, which ſome men have entertained, that the Saints in the Old Teſtament had no firm belief nor expectation of the Recompences of the life to come. Which is againſt evident Reaſon; and againſt many clear places of the Old Teſtament, that cannot without force be wreſted to any other ſence; and againſt the expreſs Teſtimony of the New Teſtament concerning them, Heb. 11. and in many other places. o Or, their Form, or Figure, or Image, all which come to one, and ſeems to intimate, that all their Glory and Felicity which they had in this Life, was rather imaginary than real, and indeed but a ſhadow, as it is called, Eccleſ. 6 12. and 8. 13. p Heb. is to conſume, or to be conſumed, (i. e.) Shall be conſumed: the Infinitive Verb being here put for the Future, as it is Pſal 32 8. Zech. 3 4. and 12. 10. q (i e) They ſhall be hurried from their large, and ſtately and pleaſant Manſions, into a cloſe and dark Grave. But thoſe words are by divers Interpreters rendred otherwiſe, and that peradventure more truly and fitly, to this purpoſe, word for word, the Grave (or rather, Hell, as before, and as this word Sheol is confeſſedly oft uſed, in the Old Teſtament, but no where more conveniently than here) ſhall be a dwelling, or for a dwelling unto him, or them, or every one of them. Which in the Prophets phraſe is called dwelling with everlaſting Burnings, *Iſa.*33 14. and, in the phraſe of the New Teſtament, to be caſt into and abide in the lake of Fire, and Brimſtone, Revel. 20. 10.

†Heb. from the hand of the Grave. ‖Or, Hell.

15. But God will redeem r my ſoul s † from the power of ‖ the grave t; for he ſhall receive me u, Selah.

r Though no man can find out a Ranſom to redeem himſelf or his Brother, yet God can and will redeem me. s Either properly: Or, my ſelf or Life: for all comes to one. t Or, of Hell: for he ſpeaks of that Sheol in which the Wicked are left The Grave ſhall not have power to retain me, but ſhall be forced to give me up into my Fathers hands: and Hell ſhall have no power to ſeize upon me. u Or, take me, out of this vain, mortal, and miſerable Life unto himſelf, or into Heaven, as this phraſe is uſed, Gen. 5. 24. Pſal. 73. 24. Act. 7. 59.

16. Be not thou afraid x when one is made rich, when the glory of his houſe is increaſed.

x (i.e.) Diſcouraged or dejected. The proſperity of the Sinners, is oft matter of fear and dread to good men; Partly, becauſe it enables them to do more miſchief; and partly, becauſe it ſhakes their Faith in God's Providence and Promiſes, and is apt to engender Suſpicions in mens minds, as if God did not regard the Actions and Affairs of men, and made no difference between the good and the bad, and conſequently all Religion were vain and unprofitable. See Pſal. 73. 12, 13.

*Job 27. 19.

17. * For when he dieth, he ſhall carry nothing away y: his glory ſhall not deſcend after him.

y For as he will ſhortly die, ſo all his Wealth and Power, and Glory, will die with him, and thou wilt have no cauſe either to envy or fear him.

†Heb. in his Life.

18. Though † whiles he lived, he bleſſed his ſoul z: and men will praiſe thee a, when thou doſt well to thy ſelf b.

z (i.e.) He applauded himſelf as a wiſe and happy Man, comp. Luk. 12. 19. a And as he pleaſeth and flattereth himſelf, ſo he meets with Paraſites, that applaud and flatter him, for their own advantage. For he ſtill ſpeaks of the ſame Man, as is manifeſt from the foregoing and following words, though there be a ſudden change of the third, into the ſecond Perſon: which is moſt frequent in theſe Books. b When thou doſt indulge and pleaſe thy ſelf, and advance thy own worldly intereſt. For the Name of good in Scripture is oft aſcribed unto the Pleaſures and Profits of this Life, as Job 21. 13. Pſal. 4. 6. Eccleſ. 2. 24. and 4. 8. and 11. 9.

19. † He ſhall go c to the generation of his fathers d, they ſhall never ſee e light f.

c Now he returns again to the third Perſon. Such ſudden and repeated Changes, are frequent in this Book. d (i.e.) To the Grave and Hell, where he ſhall meet with his wicked Parents, who by their Counſel and Example, led him into his evil Courſes; as the Godly alſo are ſaid to be gathered to their Fathers, Gen. 15. 15. Deut. 32. 50. Judg. 2. 10. (i. e.) e Never enjoy, as ſeeing is oft taken. f Neither the Light of the Living, as it is called, Job 33. 30. Pſal. 56. 13. or of this Life, to which they ſhall never return: Nor of the next Life, to which they ſhall never be admitted, but they ſhall be caſt into utter Darkneſs, Mat. 8. 12.

*Verſ. 12. *& Eccleſ. 3. 19.

20. * Man that is in honour and underſtandeth not g, is * like the beaſts that periſh h.

g (i. e.) Hath not true wiſdom, to know and conſider what he is, and what his true Buſineſs and Intereſt in this World is, and what uſe he ſhould make of his Life, and of all his Riches and Honour, and Power, and whither he is going, and what courſe to take for the attainment of true and laſting Happineſs. h Though he hath the outward ſhape of a Man, yet in truth he is a Beaſt, or a bruiſh, ſtupid, and unreaſonable Creature, and he ſhall periſh like a brute Beaſt made to be deſtroyed, 2 Pet. 2. 12.

PSAL. L.

The ARGUMENT.

The deſign of this Pſalm, is partly to reprove and proteſt againſt the common Miſcarriages of many Profeſſors of Religion, who ſatisfied their own Conſciences, and fanſied that they pleaſed God with their external and ceremonial performances, notwithſtanding their groſs neglect of thoſe more neceſſary and fundamental duties of Piety, and Juſtice, and Charity: Partly, to inſtruct men concerning the nature of the true and acceptable Worſhip of God: and Partly, to prepare the Iſraelites for, and tacitly warn them of that Change, which would be made in the outward form and way of Gods Worſhip, under and by the Meſſiac, and of the abolition of the legal Sacrifices, which God did not appoint for his own need, nor for his Peoples perpetual uſe.

A Pſalm ‖ of Aſaph a. ‖Or, for Aſaph.

a Who was not only the chief of the ſacred Singers, 1 Chron. 15. and 16. and 25. 2. but alſo a Prophet, 1 Chron. 25. 1. and a Compoſer of ſome Pſalms, as it is apparent from 2 *Chron.*29.30. and therefore, as is moſt probable, of thoſe that go under his Name.

1. THE † mighty God, even the LORD hath ſpoken, and called the earth from the riſing of the ſun, unto the going down thereof b. †Heb. God of Gods. So Gr.

b (i. e.) All the Inhabitants of the Earth, from one end to the other. Whom he here ſummons to be Witneſſes of his Proceedings in this ſolemn Judgment, between him and his People, which is here poetically repreſented. For here is a Tribunal erected, the Judge coming to it, the Witneſſes and Delinquents ſummoned, and at laſt, the Sentence given, and Cauſe determined.

2. Out of Zion c the perfection of beauty d, God hath ſhined e.

c The place where he was ſuppoſed to reſide, and where he would now ſit in Judgment. Or, from whence he would come to a more publick and conſpicuous place, where all the World might ſee and hear the Tranſactions. d The moſt beautiful and amiable place of the whole World, becauſe of the Preſence and Worſhip, and Bleſſing of God, which was there and there only. e (i. e.) Hath appeared, or manifeſted himſelf in a glorious manner, as Judges do when they come to the Judgment ſeat.

3. Our God f ſhall come g, and ſhall not keep ſilence h: * a fire ſhall devour before him, and it ſhall be very tempeſtuous round about him i. *Pſal. 97. 3.

f Theſe words are uſed here, as they are alſo, *Heb.*12. 29. emphatically. The Prophet ſpeaks this in the Perſon of the Iſraelites and Worſhippers of God, whereof he was one, and thereby takes off their fond Pretence, as if becauſe God was their God, in Covenant with them, and nearly related to them, by Abraham his Friend for ever, he would bear with their Miſcarriages, and would not deal ſo ſeverely with them, as ſome fanſied; which alſo was their conceit, *Jer.*7.4. &c. *Mat.*3.9,10. No, ſaith he, though he be our God, yet he will come to execute Judgment upon us. g Either 1. From Heaven, his dwelling place, to Zion, to ſit in Judgment there. Or, 2. Out of Zion, to ſome other place, as was ſaid on v. 2. h So the ſence is, he will no longer forbear, or connive at the Hypocriſie and Profaneneſs of the Profeſſors of the true Religion, but will now ſpeak to them in his wrath, and will effectually reprove and chaſtiſe them. But becauſe the Pſalmiſt is not now deſcribing what God did, or would ſay againſt them, which he doth below, v. 7. &c. but as yet continues in his deſcription, of the Preparation or coming of the Judg to his Throne, it ſeems more proper to tranſlate the words, as ſome do, he will not ceaſe, (for this Verb ſignifies not only a ceſſation from Speech, but from Motion or Action, as it doth, 2 *Sam.*19.11. *Pſal.*83.1. *Iſa.*42. 14,15.) (i.e.) Not neglect or delay to come. So here is the ſame thing expreſſed, both Affirmatively and Negatively (as is frequent in Scripture, whereof divers inſtances have been formerly given) for the greater aſſurance of the truth of the thing. i This is a farther deſcription of that terrible Majeſty, wherewith God clothed himſelf, when he came to his Tribunal, in token of that juſt ſeverity, which he would uſe in his Proceedings with them. He alludes to the manner of Gods appearance at Sinai, Exod. 19. and intimates to them, that, although Zion was a place of Grace and Bleſſing to all true Iſraelites, yet God would be as dreadful there, to the Hypocrites among them, as ever he was at Sinai. See Iſa. 33. 14.

4. He ſhall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth k, that he may judge his people l.

k Either, to the Places themſelves, and ſo it is a Figure called Proſopopœia: Or, to the Inhabitants of them, all Angels and Men whom he calls in for Witneſſes and Judges, of the Equity of his preſent Proceedings. Comp. Deut. 4. 26. and 31. 28. and 32. 1. l To wit, in their Preſence and Hearing.

5. Gather m my Saints n together unto me: thoſe that have made a covenant with me by ſacrifice o.

m O ye Angels, ſummon and fetch them to my Tribunal. Which is poetically ſpoken; not as if they were actually to do ſo; but only to continue the Metaphor, and Repreſentation of the Judgment here mentioned. n The Delinquents, the Iſraelites, whom he calls Saints; Partly, becauſe they were all by profeſſion an holy People, as they are called, Deut. 14. 2. Partly, by an Irony, intimating how unworthy they were of that Name: and Partly, as an Argument or Evidence againſt them, becauſe God had choſen and ſeparated them from all the Nations of the Earth, to be an holy and peculiar People to himſelf, and they alſo had ſolemnly and frequently conſecrated and devoted themſelves to God, and to his faithful ſervice; all which did greatly aggravate their preſent Apoſtaſie. o (i.e.) Which have entred into Covenant with me, and have ratified that Covenant with me by Sacrifice, not only in their Parents, Exod. 24. 4. &c. but alſo in their own Perſons from time to time, even as oft as they offer Sacrifices to me. This Clauſe ſeems to be added here, to acquaint them with the proper nature, uſe and end of Sacrifices, which were principally appointed to be Signs and Seals of the Covenant made between God and his People; and conſequently to convince them of their great miſtake and wickedneſs in truſting to their outward Sacrifices, when they neglect the very life and ſoul of them, which was the keeping of their Covenant with God; and withal to diminiſh that overweening conceit which they had of Sacrifices, and to prepare the way for the abolition of them, as being only neceſſary to confirm the Covenant: which being once for all confirmed by the Blood of Chriſt, they might without any inconvenience be laid aſide and abrogated.

* Pſal. 97. 6. 6. And * the heavens ſhall declare his righteouſneſs p: for God is judg himſelf, Selah q.

p Which they were called to witneſs, v. 4. So was the Earth alſo. But here he mentions the Heavens only, as I humbly conceive, becauſe they were the moſt impartial and conſiderable Witneſs in the caſe; for men upon Earth might be falſe Witneſſes, either through ignorance and miſtake, or through prejudice and partiality, and paſſion: But the Angels underſtand things more thoroughly and certainly, and are ſo exactly pure and ſinleſs, that they neither can nor will tell a lye for God; and therefore their Teſtimony is more valuable. Or the meaning is, that God would convince the People of his Righteouſneſs, and of their own Wickedneſs, by terrible Thunders and Lightnings, and Storms, or other dreadful Signs wrought by him, in the Heaven or the Air: by which he did convince his People in two like Caſes, Deut. 5. 22, 23. &c. 1 Sam. 12. 17, 18, 19. q In his own Perſon, or immediately. God will not now reprove them, or contend with them by his Prieſts or Prophets, with whom they may eaſily ſtrive, as they uſed to do, but he will do it in an immediate and extraordinary manner from Heaven; and therefore they ſhall be forced to acknowledge his Righteouſneſs, and their own Unrighteouſneſs; as they muſt needs do, when the Conteſt is between them, and that God who is the great Judg of the World, and cannot poſſibly do any unrighteous thing, Job 34. 13. Rom. 3. 6. who exactly knows all their Hearts, and Works, and cannot be deceived, nor contradicted.

* Pſal. 81. 8. 7. * Hear, O my people, and I will ſpeak r; O Iſrael, and I will teſtifie againſt thee s: I am God, even thy God t.

r Having brought in God, as coming to Judgment with them, he now gives an account of the Proceſs, and of the Sentence of the Judg, whoſe words are contained in this, and the following Verſes. s I will plead with thee, and declare my Charge, or Indictement againſt thee. t Not only in general, as thou art my Creature, but in a ſpecial manner, by many ſingular Favours and Obligations, and by that ſolemn Covenant made at Sinai; whereby I avouched thee to be my peculiar People, and thou didſt avouch me to be thy God, Deut. 26. 17, 18.

* Hoſ. 6. 6. 8. I will not reprove thee * for thy ſacrifices, or thy burnt-offerings u, to have been x continually before me.

u I do not charge thee, or at leaſt this is not the principal matter of my Charge, that thou haſt neglected Sacrifices, which thou ſhouldſt have offered; for although thou haſt many times omitted thy duty in that kind, yet I have greater things than theſe to charge thee with. x Or, they have been. I confeſs thou haſt, being frequent in that Work, and haſt laid too great a ſtreſs upon it, and ſatisfied thy Conſcience with it, as if thereby thou hadſt made me amends for the Errors of thy Life.

9. * I will take no bullock out of thy houſe, nor he-goats out of thy folds y. * Mic. 6. 6. Acts 17. 25.

y But be not ſo vain and fooliſh, as to imagine that thou doſt lay any Obligations upon me by thy Sacrifices; or that I required them, becauſe I had need of them, or took any pleaſure in them for themſelves, or for my own ſatisfaction by them.

10. For every beaſt of the foreſt is mine z, and the cattle upon a thouſand hills a.

z I could command, or diſpoſe them at my pleaſure, without thy leave or aſſiſtance. a Which feed upon innumerable hills, or in vallies and fields.

11. I know b all the fowls of the mountains c: and the wild beaſts of the field are † mine. † Heb. with me.

b Where they are, and whence I can eaſily fetch them when I think good. c Not only tame and domeſtick Fowls, but even ſuch as are wild and fly up and down upon mountains; which though out of mans reach, are at God's command.

12. If I were hungry d, I would not tell thee e, * for the world is mine, and the fulneſs thereof f. * Exod. 19. 5. Deut. 10. 14. Job 41. 11. Pſal. 24. 1. 1 Cor. 10. 26, 28.

d If I wanted or deſired any thing, as I do not, being the All-ſufficient God. e That thou mighteſt ſupply my wants. f (i.e.) All thoſe Creatures wherewith it is repleniſhed.

13. Will I eat the fleſh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats g?

g If I did want any thing, haſt thou ſuch carnal and groſs conceptions of me, that I need or delight in the blood of brute Creatures?

14. * Offer unto God thankſgiving h, and pay thy vows i unto the moſt High. * Hoſ. 14. 2. Heb. 13. 15.

h If thou wouldſt know what Sacrifices I moſt prize, and indiſpenſibly require, in the firſt place, it is that of Thankfulneſs and praiſe proportionable to my great and glorious and numberleſs Favours, which doth not conſiſt barely in verbal acknowledgments, but proceeds from an heart truly and deeply affected with God's mercies, and is accompanied with ſuch a courſe of Life, as is grateful or Well-pleaſing to God: all which is plainly comprehended in Thankſgiving, as that Duty is explained in other Scripture. i Either, 1. Ceremonial vows, the Sacrifices which thou haſt vowed to God. Or rather, 2. Moral Vows: for the things here mentioned, are directly oppoſed unto Sacrifices, and preferred before them: for having diſparaged, and in ſome ſort rejected their Sacrifices and Burnt-offerings, v. 8. it is not likely that he ſhould have a better Opinion of, or value for their vowed Sacrifices; which were of an inferiour ſort. He ſeems therefore to underſtand thoſe ſubſtantial Vows and Promiſes, and Covenants, which were the very ſoul of their Sacrifices, and to which their Sacrifices were but Appurtenances and Seals, as was noted above, on v. 5. whereby they did avouch the Lord to be their God, and to walk in his ways, &c. as it is expreſſed, Deut. 26. 17. and engaged themſelves to love, and ſerve and obey the Lord according to that ſolemn Vow and Covenant, which they entred into at Sinai, Exod. 24. 3, 7, 8. which they oft renewed, and indeed did implicitly repeat in all their Sacrifices, which were appointed for this very end to confirm this Covenant.

15. And * call upon me k in the day of trouble l; I will deliver thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me m. * Job 22. 27.

k And make Conſcience of that great Duty, of conſtant and fervent Prayer to me; which is an acknowledgment of thy ſubjection to me, and of thy Truſt and dependence upon me, and therefore is pleaſing to me. l When trouble comes, do not avoid it by ſinful ſhifts, nor truſt to Creatures for relief, as Hypocrites generally do, but give Glory to me, by relying upon my Promiſes, and expect help from me, by hearty and unfeigned Prayer. m This is mentioned; Either, 1. As a priviledge thou ſhalt have occaſion to praiſe and glorifie me for thy deliverance. Or, 2. As a further Duty, thou ſhalt give me the glory of thy deliverance, by praiſing me for it, and improving it to my Service and Glory.

16. But unto the wicked n God ſaith o, What haſt thou to do to declare my ſtatutes, or that thou ſhouldeſt take my covenant in thy mouth p?

n (i.e.) The ſame ungodly and hypocritical Profeſſors, whom he calleth Saints, v. 5. in regard of their Profeſſion, and here wicked in reſpect of their practice, and the truth of the thing. o He told them what he would not reprove them, for,

for, v. 8. and why, v. 9, 10. &c. now he tells them for what he did reprove and condemn them, even for a vain and falſe Profeſſion of Religion. p With what confidence dareſt thou make mention of, or boaſt of God's Grace and Favour vouchſafed unto thee, in giving thee ſuch a Covenant and Statutes, pretending to embrace them, and to give up thy ſelf to the obſervation of them? This not only the Teachers (of whom ſome underſtand theſe Words) but all the Iſraelites in general: Of whom he rather ſeems to ſpeak.

* Rom. 2. 21, 22.

17. * Seeing thou hateſt inſtruction q, and caſteſt my words behind thee r.

† Heb. thy portion was with Adulterers.

q Seeing thy practice contradicts thy Profeſſion, and makes thee a notorious and impudent Lyar. Though with thy Mouth thou ſheweſt much Love (as is ſaid of them, Ezek. 33. 31.) to my Statutes and Counſels, yet in truth thou hateſt them, as they are Curbs to thy beloved Luſts, and Inſtruments of thy juſt Condemnation, and a manifeſt reproach to thy Converſation. Or, Seeing thou hateſt reproof, as this Word is oft rendred. And this above all other parts of God's word, is moſt hateful to ungodly Men, Prov. 9. 8. and 12. 1. and 15. 10. 12. Amos 5. 10. And therefore this is fitly alledged, as an evidence of their wickedneſs. r As men do things which they abhor or deſpiſe.

18. When thou ſaweſt s a thief, then thou conſenteds with him t, and † haſt been partaker with adulterers u.

s Or, didſt obſerve, or conſider: When he came into thy Preſence and Company, and thou didſt underſtand and conſider his ways and his ſucceſs and impunity, and he invited thee to a participation of his Profits. t Or, as many render it, then thou didſt run with him, thou didſt readily and greedily aſſociate thy ſelf with him, in his unrighteous Courſes. Thou didſt yield to his Motions, and that with great Complacency and Diligence. u By joyning with them, in their lewd and filthy practices.

19. Thou giveſt x thy mouth to evil y, and thy tongue frameth deceit z.

x Heb. thou ſendeſt forth, to wit, free; for the word is uſed of Mens diſmiſſing their Wives, or their Servants; whom they left to their Freedom. Thou haſt an unbridled Tongue, and caſteſt off all reſtraints of God's Law, and of thy own Conſcience, and giveſt thy Tongue liberty to ſpeak what thou pleaſeſt, though it be offenſive and diſhonourable to God, and injurious to thy Neighbour, or to thy own Soul. Which is juſtly produced as an evidence of their Hypocriſie. y Either to ſinful or miſchievous Speeches. z (i. e.) Uttereth lyes or fair words, wherewith to circumvent thoſe who deal with them.

20. Thou ſitteſt and ſpeakeſt a againſt thy brother b, thou ſlandreſt c thine own mothers ſon.

a Thou doſt not only ſpeak evil in a ſudden Paſſion, or upon ſome great Provocation, but this is thy conſtant and deliberate practice and buſineſs, which thou doſt purſue with great facility and complacency: all which this phraſe implies. b Strictly ſo called, as the next clauſe explains it. Which is a great aggravation of the ſin, and a proof of his inveterate and obſtinate wickedneſs. c Takeſt away his good Name, which is better than all Riches; yea, than Life it ſelf. Which is contrary to my expreſs and oft repeated commands.

21. Theſe things haſt thou done, and I kept ſilence d: thou thoughteſt that I was altogether ſuch a one as thy ſelf †: but I will reprove thee, e, and ſet them in order before thine eyes f.

d I did not expreſs my Diſpleaſure againſt thee, in ſuch grievous Judgments as thou didſt deſerve. Or, I was deaf: I carried my ſelf like one that did not hear thy ſinful Speeches, nor ſee, or take any notice of thy wicked Actions. † Thou didſt miſconſtrue and abuſe this my patience and long ſuffering, as if it had proceeded from my Ignorance, or Regardleſneſs, or Approbation of thy evil Courſes, which I ſeemed by my connivence to juſtifie or allow,; and thereupon didſt grow more audacious and impudent in ſin. See Eccleſ. 11. 9. Iſa. 26. 10. Rom. 2. 4, 5. e Not with verbal, but real Reproofs, (i. e.) By ſevere puniſhments, as this word is uſed, Job 13. 10. Pſal. 6. 1. and 38. 1. and 39. 11. and oft elſewhere. I will quickly undeceive and convince thee, of the contrary to thy coſt. f I will bring to thy remembrance, and lay upon thy Conſcience all thy ſins, in full number and in their Order, with all their circumſtances, and thou ſhalt then ſee and know that I diligently obſerved and hated them all, and that none of them ſhall go unpuniſhed.

22 Now conſider this, ye that forget God g, leſt I tear you in pieces h, and there be none to deliver i.

g Ye hypocritical and ungodly Iſraelites, who have forgotten, (as Moſes foretold you would do, Deut. 32. 18.) the God that formed you, and made you his people, and forgotten his Mercies and Judgments, by which you ſhould have been inſtructed, and the Covenant which you made with him, and by which you ſtand obliged to him. h Leſt my patience be turned into fury, and I proceed to take vengeance on you. i Or, for (as the Hebrew Particle is oft rendred) there is none that can, or will deliver you. None can reſcue you from the power of mine anger.

* Pſal. 69. 30, 31.

† Heb. that diſpoſeth his way.

23. Whoſo * offereth praiſe k, glorifieth me l: and to him † that ordereth his converſation aright m, will I ſhew n the ſalvation of God o.

k Or, Thankſgiving, as this word is rendred, v. 14. See the note there. l He and he only gives me the Honour that I require and prize, and not he who loads my Altar with a multitude of Sacrifices; whereby you vainly and falſly conceit that you pleaſe and glorifie me, although in the mean time you live in the greſs neglect of the more important Duties, of Piety and Juſtice, and Charity: whereas in truth you greatly diſhonour me, and my Worſhip and Service by your infamous lives. m Heb. that compoſeth, or diſpoſeth (which Pronoun is frequently underſtood) the way, or manner of his life, (i. e.) That lives orderly, and according to Rule: for Sinners are ſaid to walk diſorderly, 2 Theſſ. 3. 6, 7, 11. and by Chance, as it is in the Hebrew Text, Levit. 26. 21, 23. which is oppoſed to Order: and the Scripture owns no Order, but what God preſcribes or approves; and therefore this word, aright, is juſtly added in our Tranſlation. n Heb. I will make him to ſee, (i. e.) To enjoy, as that Verb is oft uſed, as we have ſhewed again and again. o (i. e.) My Salvation, that true and everlaſting Happineſs, which I have prepared for all my faithful Friends and Servants, and for them only. So falſe is that Poſition of ſome of the Jewiſh Rabbins, that every Iſraelite hath a portion in the World to come.

PSAL. LI.

To the chief muſician a, a Pſalm of David, * when Nathan the prophet came unto him b, after he * had gone in to Bathſheba.

* 2 Sam. 12. 1.

* 11. 2.

a To be ſung by him, and other ſacred Muſicians publickly in the Temple through all Ages; that his Repentance might be as manifeſt and publick as his Crime and Scandal was. b After his Conſcience was awakened by Nathan's words, 2 Sam. 12. and Nathan was gone, David falls very ſeriouſly upon the practice of ſincere Repentance, and digeſted his Meditations into this Pſalm.

1. HAve mercy upon me c, O God, according to thy loving kindneſs d: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies e, blot out f my tranſgreſſions.

2 Sam. 11. 2, 4.

c Pity and help and anſwer me, in the deſires I am now ſpreading before thee. d I pretend to no merit, but humbly implore thy free Grace and Mercy. e Thy mercies are infinite, and therefore ſufficient for my relief, and ſuch indeed do I need. f Either, 1. Out of my Conſcience and Soul, where it hath left a ſtain and filthy Character. Out of thy Book of Remembrance, and Accounts, in which all mens ſins are written, and out of which all men ſhall be judged hereafter, Revel. 20. 12. Which is ſpoken of God after the manner of men. See of this Phraſe Iſa. 43. 25. and 44. 22.

2. Waſh me throughly g from mine iniquity, and cleanſe me from my ſin.

g Heb. Multiply to waſh me. By which Phraſe he implies the greatneſs of his guilt; and the inſufficiency of all legal Waſhings, and the abſolute neceſſity of ſome other and better thing to waſh him, even of God's Grace and the Blood of Chriſt; which as Abraham ſaw by Faith, Joh. 8. 56. ſo did David, as is ſufficiently evident (allowing for the darkneſs of the Diſpenſation and Expreſſions of the Old Teſtament) from divers paſſages of the Pſalms; of which I have ſpoken in their proper places; and his earneſt and paſſionate deſire of pardon; which he deſires above all other things. Wherein he ſheweth himſelf to be a true Penitent, becauſe his chief care and deſire was to obtain God's Favour, and the forgiveneſs of his ſins, and not the prevention of thoſe external ſore Judgments, which God by Nathan threatned to bring upon him and his Houſe, 2 Sam. 12. 10, 11. about which here is not one word in this Pſalm; whereas the cares and deſires of Hypocrites, chiefly are bent towards worldly things, as we ſee in Cain, Gen. 4. 13, 16, 17. and Saul, 1 Sam. 15. 30. and others, Hoſ. 7. 14.

3. For I acknowledge h my tranſgreſſions i: and my ſin is ever before me k.

h With grief and ſhame, and abhorrency of my ſelf and of my ſins; which hitherto I have diſſembled and covered. And being thus truly penitent, I hope and beg that I may find mercy with thee. i For it was not a ſingle, but a complicated wickedneſs, Adultery, Murder, Injuſtice, Perfidiouſneſs; and frequent repetition of, and long and ſtupid continuance in abominable filthineſs, and that with publick ſcandal. k That which I had caſt caſt behind my back, is now conſtantly in my view, and fixed in my thoughts and memory.

4. Againſt thee, thee only l have I ſinned, and done this evil in thy ſight m: * that thou mighteſt be juſtified n, when thou ſpeakeſt o; and be clear when thou judgeſt p.

* Rom. 3. 4.

l Which is not to be underſtood ſimply and abſolutely, becauſe he had unqueſtionably ſinned againſt Bathſheba and Uriah, and many others who were either injured by it, or ſcandalized at it, but comparatively. So the ſence is this, though I have ſinned againſt my own Body and Conſcience, and againſt others; yet nothing is more grievous and terrible to me, than to conſider that I have ſinned againſt thee; partly, upon a general Account, becauſe this is the chief malignity, and ſinfulneſs of ſin, that it offends and injures the glorious and bleſſed God; and partly upon particular reaſons; Becauſe I ſet thee at defiance, and having uſed all wicked Arts to conceal my ſin from men, and being free from fear of puniſhment from them, I went on boldly in ſin, caſting off all reverence to thy Holy and Omniſcient Majeſty, and all dread of thy Judgments, and becauſe I ſinned againſt thee, to whom I had ſuch numerous and peculiar and eminent obligations, as thy Prophet Nathan truly ſuggeſted to me, 2 Sam. 12. 7, 8. m With groſs contempt of God, whom I well knew to be a Spectator of my moſt ſecret Actions. n The Particle, that, is not taken cauſally, or intentionally, as if this was David's deſign, but eventually, as it is Exod. 11. 9. Pſal. 30. 12. Hoſ. 8. 4. This will be the fruit or conſequent of my ſin, that whatſoever ſeverities thou ſhalt uſe towards me and mine, it will be no blemiſh to thy Benignity, or Righteouſneſs, or Fidelity, but the blame of all will reſt upon my head, as I deſire it may, and thy Juſtice will be glorified by all Men. o Heb. In thy words, (i. e.) In all thy Threatnings denounced againſt me by Nathan; and in any further ſentence which thou ſhalt ſee fit to paſs upon me. p When thou doſt plead or contend with me, or execute thy Sentence or Judgment upon me. Or, when thou art judged, as it is rendred, Rom. 3. 4. for the word may be taken paſſively, as well as actively. When any man ſhall preſume to cenſure thee, as not keeping thy Covenant and Mercy promiſed to David.

5. Behold I was ſhapen in iniquity q: and in ſin did my mother † conceive me r.

† Heb. warm me.

q This verſe is both by Jewiſh and Chriſtian, by Antient and latter Interpreters, generally and moſt truly underſtood of original ſin; Which he here mentions, as an aggravation of his crime: and the ſence of the place is this, Nor is this the only ſin which I have reaſon to acknowledge and bewail before thee; for this filthy ſtream leads me to a corrupt Fountain: and upon a ſerious review of my heart, and life, I find, that I am guilty of innumerable other ſins, and that this hainous Crime, though drawn forth by external temptations, yet was indeed the proper fruit of my own filthy and vile nature, which without the reſtraints of thy Providence or Grace, ever was, and ſtill is like to be, inclinable and ready to commit theſe and ten thouſand other ſins, as occaſion offers it ſelf. For which contrariety of my very Nature to thine, thou may'ſt juſtly loath and condemn me; and for which I humbly beg thy Pardon and Grace. r Heb. Warm, or Cheriſh me, in the Womb, before I was ſhapen, or formed there.

† Heb. the Reins.

6. Behold thou deſireſt s truth t in † the inward parts: and in the hidden part u thou ſhalt make me to know x wiſdom y.

s Or, delighteſt in: Or, requireſt: Heb. willeſt. t Either, 1. Sincerity in confeſſing my ſins; which therefore I have now acknowledged, though hitherto I have practiſed much falſhood and diſſimulation in indeavouring to conceal them from Men. Or rather, 2. Integrity or uprightneſs of heart; which ſeems to be here oppoſed to that Iniquity mentioned in the laſt verſe, in which he was, and all men are, framed and born. And this may ſeem to be added; Partly, as a proof or aggravation, of the ſinfulneſs of original corruption, becauſe it is contrary to the holy Nature and Will of God, which requireth not only unblameableneſs in mens actions, but alſo Univerſal Innocency, and rectitude of their minds and hearts: and partly as an aggravation of his actual ſin, wherein he had uſed ſuch groſs deceit and treachery. u (i. e.) In the heart, called the hidden Man of the heart, 1 Pet. 3. 4. and the ſecret part, Rom. 2. 16. which in the former branch he called the Reins, or inward Parts. x So he declares his hope, that God would pardon and cure his folly, which he had diſcovered, and make him wiſer for the future. But this ſeems not to ſuit well with the Context, which runs wholly in another ſtrain. The word therefore is, and may be rendred otherwiſe; Thou haſt made me to know. So this is another aggravation of his ſin, that it was committed againſt that Wiſdom and Knowledge, which God had not only revealed to him outwardly in his word, but alſo inwardly by his Spirit, writing it in his heart according to his Promiſe, Jer. 31. 33. Or thus, do thou make me to know, the future Verb being here taken Imperatively, and as a Prayer; as the following Futures are here tranſlated, v. 7, 8. Having now ſaid for the aggravation of his ſin, that God did deſire or require Truth in the inward parts: He takes that occaſion to break forth into Prayer, which alſo he continues in the following Verſes. Only as he prays there for Juſtification or pardon of ſin, ſo here he prays for Renovation or Sanctification. So his meaning is this, Therefore (as the Particle, and, is oft uſed, as hath been ſhewed) in the hidden part do thou make me to know wiſdom. Or thus, thou wouldeſt have me know: for futures are oft taken potentially, as Pſal. 118. 6. and Mat. 12. 25. compared with Mark. 3. 24. and elſewhere, and Verbs which ſignifie, making or cauſing are ſometime underſtood only of the Will or Command; as Jeroboam is ſaid to make Iſrael to ſin, 1 Kings. 14. 16. becauſe he commanded them to do ſo, Hoſ. 5. 11. This I propoſe with ſubmiſſion, but if this ſence be admitted, the laſt clauſe of the Verſe anſwers very well to the former, as it doth in the foregoing and following Verſes, and every where in theſe Books: For this, thou wouldeſt have me know, Anſwers to that, thou willeſt or deſireſt; and in the hidden part Anſwers to that, in the inward parts; and Wiſdom, is the ſame thing for ſubſtance with Truth, only called by another Name. y (i. e.) True Piety and Integrity, which is called Wiſdom, Job 28. 28. Pſal. 111. 10. and in many other Texts, as ſin on the contrary is commonly called, as it really is, folly. And to know wiſdom is here meant of knowing it practically and experimentally, ſo as to approve and love, and practiſe it, as words of knowledge are moſt frequently taken in Scripture, and in other Authors.

7. * Purge me with hyſſop z, and I ſhall be clean: waſh me and I ſhall be * whiter then ſnow.

* Lev. 14. 6. Numb. 19. 18. * Iſa. 1. 18.

z Or, as with Hyſſop: the note of ſimilitude being frequently underſtood. As Lepers, and other unclean Perſons are by the appointment purified by the uſe of Hyſſop and other things, Levit. 14. 6. Numb. 19. 6. ſo do thou cleanſe me, a moſt Leprous and polluted Creature, by thy Grace, and by the Vertue of that Blood of Chriſt, which is ſignified by thoſe ceremonial uſages.

8. Make me to hear joy and gladneſs a: that the bones which thou haſt broken, may rejoyce b.

a Send me glad Tidings of thy Reconciliation to me, and by thy ſpirit ſeal the pardon of my ſins to my Conſcience, which will fill me with joy. b That mine heart which hath been ſorely wounded, and terrified by thy dreadful Meſſage ſent by Nathan, and by the diſmal Sentence of thy Law denounced againſt ſuch ſinners, as I am now by this occaſion brought home to my Conſcience, may be revived and comforted by the manifeſtation of thy favour to my ſoul.

9. Hide thy face from my ſins c, and blot out d all mine iniquities.

c Do not look upon them with an eye of indignation and revenge, but forget and forgive them. d See v. 1.

10. Create in me a clean heart e, O God; and renew f ‖ a right g ſpirit h within me i.

‖ Or, a conſtant Spirit.

e Seeing I have not only defiled my ſelf by theſe actual ſins, but alſo have a moſt filthy heart corrupted, even from my Birth, v. 5. which nothing but God's Almighty and creating power can purifie, do thou effectually work in me an Holy frame of heart, whereby both my inward filth may be purged away; and I may be prevented from falling into ſuch actual and ſcandalous ſins. f That good temper which before this Apoſtaſie I had in ſome meaſure, be pleaſed graciouſly to reſtore it to me with advantage. g Heb. Firm or Conſtant, or Stedfaſt, that I may not be ſo eaſily ſhaken and caſt down by temptation, as I have been, but that my reſolution may be more fixed and unmoveable. h Temper or diſpoſition of Soul or Spirit, as the Word Spirit is very frequently uſed in Scripture. i Heb. In my inward parts. He wiſely ſtrikes at the root and cauſe of all ſinful actions.

11. Caſt me not away from thy preſence k and take not thy holy ſpirit l from me.

k (i. e.) From thy favour and care, and gracious communion with thee. l Thy ſanctifying Spirit, by which alone I can have acquaintance and fellowſhip with thee.

12. Reſtore unto me the joy of thy ſalvation m: and ‖ uphold me n with thy free o ſpirit.

‖ Or, let thy free, Or, princely Spirit uphold me.

m The comfortable ſence of thy ſaving Grace and Help, promiſed and vouchſafed to me, both for my preſent and everlaſting Salvation. n A weak and frail Creature, never able to ſtand againſt Corruption, and Temptation without thy powerful and gracious Succours. o Or, ingenuous, or liberal, or Princely. Which he ſeems to oppoſe to his own baſe and illiberal and diſingenuous and ſervile Spirit, which he had diſcovered in his wicked and unworthy Practices; and deſires a better Spirit, even the Spirit of God, which may free him from the Bondage of ſin, and inable and incline him freely and cheerfully, and conſtantly to run the way of God's precepts. See Exod. 35. 21. Pſal. 110. 3. Rom. 8. 15, 16. 2 Cor. 3. 17.

13. Then will I teach tranſgreſſors thy ways p, and ſinners ſhall be converted unto thee q.

p Either, 1. Thy Will and their Duty, and the way to their eternal Happineſs: Or rather, 2. The manner of thy dealing with ſinners; whom thou doſt ſo ſeverely chaſtiſe for their ſins, and yet ſo graciouſly receive to Mercy upon their Repentances. Both which I will ſhew them in my own Example, which I will declare unto them, although I ſhall therewith publiſh my own ſhame; which I ſhall moſt willingly bear, that I may in ſome meaſure repair the injury which I have done to thee and others, by my publick and ſcandalous crimes. q And I perſwade my ſelf that my endeavours ſhall not want ſucceſs; and that either thy juſtice and ſeverity, or thy goodneſs and clemency, will bring them to repentance.

15. O LORD, open thou my lips t, and my mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy praiſe.

t Which are ſhut with ſhame, and grief and horrour. Reſtore unto me the opportunity and Ability, and Liberty, which formerly I had of ſpeaking to thee, with freedom and boldneſs, and familiarity, as this phraſe ſignifies, Ezek. 3. 27. and 24. 27. Eph. 6. 19, 20.

PSAL LII.

To the chief muſician, Maſchil, a Pſalm of David, * when Doeg the Edomite a came and told Saul, and ſaid unto him, David is come to the houſe of Ahimelech.

* 1 Sam. 22. 9.

a So called; Either 1. Becauſe he was born or bred in Edom, Or, 2. From his treacherous and bloody diſpoſition; for which the Edomites are infamous in Scripture; as the Iſraelites are called Sodom and Gomorrha, Iſa. 1. 10.

1. WHy boaſteſt thou thy ſelf in b miſchief, O mighty man c? the goodneſs of God endureth † continually d.

† Heb. all the day.

b As if thou hadſt done a great exploit, which none elſe durſt undertake; and thereby eſtabliſhed the Crown upon Saul's head, and thy ſelf in his favour; and broken all David's Deſigns, by ſtriking a terror into all his Favourers by this ſad Example. c He ſpeaks Ironically. O valiant Captain! Oh glorious Action! To kill a few weak and unarmed Perſons in the King's preſence, and under the protection of his Guards. Surely thy Name will be famous to all Ages, for ſuch heroical Courage. d God's Love and Favour to his People, and in particular to me, is not fading and inconſtant, but everlaſting and unchangeable, and therefore not to be hindred or defeated by any wicked Deſigns or Practices. And therefore though he hath permitted thee, and may do others to rage for a ſeaſon, yet he will defend, and in due time deliver his people.

2. Thy tongue deviſeth e miſchiefs * like a ſharp raſor, working deceitfully f.

* Pſal. 57. 4. & 59. 7. & 64. 3.

e (i. e.) Expreſſeth what thy wicked Mind hath deviſed. Thus skilfulneſs is aſcribed to thoſe hands, which are governed by a skilful or prudent Man, Pſal. 78. laſt. This word implies that Doeg's words were not uttered raſhly and unadviſedly, but with premeditated malice, and a miſchievous Deſign, which he waited for an opportunity to execute; and therefore he readily took the firſt occaſion which offered it ſelf. f Wherewith a man pretending only to ſhave off the hair, doth ſuddenly and unexpectedly cut the Throat. So Doeg pretended only to vindicate himſelf from the Imputation of diſloyalty, 1 Sam. 22. 8 but really intended to expoſe the Prieſts, who were Friends to David, to the Kings fury and cruelty.

3. Thou loveſt evil more than good g: and lying h rather than to ſpeak righteouſneſs i, Selah.

g Evil and Good may be here taken; Either, 1. Morally, Thou loveſt wickedneſs and not goodneſs: for ſo comparative paſſages are oft meant, as Pſal. 118. 8. It is better to truſt in the Lord than to put confidence in Man. (i. e.) It is good to truſt God, but it is not good to truſt man; for this is abſolutely forbidden, Pſal. 146. 3. Jer. 17. 5. Or, 2. Phyſically. Thou loveſt to ſpeak or act to the hurt and ruine of others, rather than to their benefit. Thou mighteſt, without any danger to thy ſelf, have been ſilent concerning Abimelech's Fact, or have put a favourable conſtruction upon it; but thou haſt choſen rather to miſ-repreſent and aggravate it. He ſaith, thou loveſt, to imply that he did this not by any conſtraint or neceſſity, but by choice and with complacency, and out of a love to miſchief. h Whereof Doeg was guilty; Partly, in reporting that he (i. e. Abimelech) enquired of the Lord for him, (David,) 1 Sam. 22. 10. which he did not Ch. 21. where all that Hiſtory is recorded; and partly, in putting a falſe Interpretation upon what he did, in giving him Victuals and a Sword, as if he had done it knowingly, and in conſpiracy with David, and againſt Saul, as appears by comparing Doeg's anſwer with Saul's enquiry, 1 Sam. 22. 7, 8. i (i. e.) The whole and naked truth, without any ſuch lying or malicious Comment upon it, which was but an Act of Juſtice due from thee to any man, and much more on the behalf of ſo innocent and ſacred a Perſon.

4. Thou loveſt all devouring words k, ‖ O thou deceitful tongue.

‖ Or, the deceitful Tongue.

k Such as might ſwallow up and deſtroy a whole Family at once.

5. God ſhall likewiſe l † deſtroy thee for ever, he ſhall take thee away, and pluck thee m out of thy dwelling-place n, and root thee out o of the land of the living p, Selah.

† Heb. beat thee down.

l (i. e.) Totally and unavoidably, as thou didſt deſtroy the Prieſts. m (i. e.) Violently and irreſiſtibly and ſuddenly remove thee, as the Hebrew word ſignifies. n From thy Houſe and Lands, and all the wages of thy unrighteouſneſs. Or, out of his (i. e. the Lord's) Tabernacle; in which thou didſt ſeek and take the matter of thy ſlanders, and from which thou didſt cut off the Lord's Prieſts. Therefore God ſhall excommunicate thee from his Preſence, and from the Society of the Faithful.

o Though thou ſeemeſt to have taken very deep rooting, and to be the more firmly ſetled for this barbarous cruelty, yet God ſhall pluck thee up by the very roots, and deſtroy thee both root and branch. p Out of this world, as the Phraſe is taken, Iſa. 53. 8. Ezek. 32. 32. and elſewhere. Which was very terrible to him, who had all his portion in this world.

6. The righteous alſo ſhall ſee q, and fear r, and ſhall laugh at him s.

q To wit, thy remarkable downfal, and conſequently ſhall ſurvive thee in ſpight of all thy power and malice againſt them. r Both reverence God's juſt Judgment upon thee, and be afraid of provoking God to ſend like judgment upon them. s Not taking pleaſure in his ruine as ſuch, but only in the Glory of God's Juſtice vindicated thereby, Revel. 18. 20. and deriding their vain and carnal confidence in their wicked courſes.

7. Lo, this is the man t that made not God his ſtrength u: but truſted in the abundance of his riches x, and ſtrengthned himſelf in his || wickedneſs.

t Theſe are the triumphant words of the righteous. This is the great and famous man, take ſpecial notice of him, and of his doleful end. u That truſted and feared Saul more than God, and was willing to purchaſe Saul's favour with God's diſpleaſure. x Thought himſelf ſecure in his great and growing wealth, without God's protection or bleſſing.

8. But I am like * a green olive-tree y in the houſe of God z: I truſt in the mercy of God for ever and ever.

* Or rather, ſhall be.
* Pſal. 92. 13, 14.
Hoſ. 14. 6.

y When Doeg and his Brethren ſhall wither and periſh, I, who have made God my refuge, I whom he deſpiſed and perſecuted, and thought to be in a deſperate condition, ſhall be eſtabliſhed and flouriſh. z Either, 1. In God's Church, or among his People. Or, 2. In God's Tabernacle, from which Doeg ſhall be plucked away, v. 5. and from which I am now baniſhed by the tyranny and malice of this man and his confederates: But, I doubt not, I ſhall be reſtored to it, and dwell in it all the days of my life, which is the one thing that I deſire, Pſal. 27. 4.

9. I will praiſe thee for ever, becauſe thou haſt done it *: and I will wait on thy name ||, for it is good before thy ſaints †.

* (i.e.) Deſtroyed Doeg, and all mine and thine implacable Enemies, and eſtabliſhed in the Throne, and in thy Houſe; of which I am no leſs aſſured, than if it were already done. || I will continue in thy way, placing my whole truſt and confidence in thy Power and Goodneſs, and Faithfulneſs, all which are called God's Name, and not turn aſide to any crooked paths for my deliverance, as others do, Pſal. 125. 5. † (i.e.) In the Eyes of thy Saints. They, whoſe Judgments only are to be valued, approve of this practice, of truſting God, and keeping his way as the wiſeſt and ſafeſt courſe, and have ever found it ſo to be by their own Experience; however Doeg and his complices account it meer folly, and the ready way to ruine. But the laſt words of this Clauſe may very conveniently be joyned with the former Clauſe, thus, I will wait upon thy Name before thy Saints; which ſeems beſt to ſuit with the firſt Clauſe, I will praiſe thee; which ſurely was meant of praiſing God publickly, or before the Saints; and then it follows conveniently. And in the mean time I will wait on thy Name, in the preſence of thy Saints, who ſhall plainly ſee that I do ſo by the whole courſe of my life. And thoſe words, for it is good, may be incloſed within a Parentheſis, as is very uſual in Scripture, and may be referred; Either to God's Name, for thy Name is good; or to wait on it, for it is good to wait upon it.

PSAL. LIII.

To the chief muſician upon Mahalath a, Maſchil, a Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm, ſome few words excepted, is wholly the ſame with Pſal. 14. and therefore the Reader muſt reſort thither for the interpretation of it. And it is repeated; Partly, becauſe the matter of it is ſo important and neceſſary to be known and conſidered; and partly, becauſe there aroſe ſome new and ſuitable occaſion, which made David ſing it a ſecond time, and that with ſome ſmall alterations. And the Compiler or Compilers of David's Pſalms, had ſo great a reverence for their Compoſer, whom they knew to be guided by divine Inſpiration, that they would not loſe any of his Fragments, and therefore repeated this Pſalm with the variations which he had made. a This alſo ſeems to be the Name of a muſical Inſtrument, or Tune; Wherein, as in the reſt of them, it is better to confeſs our ignorance, as the Hebrew Doctors themſelves do, than to give way to vain and groundleſs Conjectures about them.

* Pſal. 10. 4. & 14. 1, &c.

1. THE * fool hath ſaid in his heart, There is no God: corrupt are they, and have done abominable iniquity: * there is none that doth good.

* Rom. 3. 12.

2. God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to ſee if there were any that did underſtand, that did ſeek God.

3. Every one of them is gone back, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doth good, no not one.

4. Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who eat up my people as they eat bread; they have not called upon God.

5. There † were they in great fear, where no fear was b: for God hath ſcattered the bones c of him that encampeth againſt thee d, thou e haſt put them to ſhame f, becauſe God hath deſpiſed them g.

† Heb. they feared a fear.

b (i.e.) Where there was no great nor ſufficient cauſe of fear: See Levit. 26. 36. Deut. 28. 65. Job 15. 21. Prov. 28. 1. They who deſigned to ſecure themſelves from all fear and danger by their contempt of God, and by the perſecution of good men, and by other wicked courſes, were by thoſe means filled with the terrors which they ſought to avoid. c Hath not only broken their bones, (i.e.) Their ſtrength and force, which is oft noted by the Bones, as Pſal. 6. 2. and 31. 10. and 51. 8. but alſo diſperſed them hither and thither, ſo as there is no hopes of a re-union and reſtauration. d (i.e.) Againſt my People, expreſſed v. 4. or Iſrael, or Zion, as it is in the next Verſe. e Thou O Zion or Jeruſalem, which they beſiege. f For the great and ſtrange diſappointment of their hopes and confidence. It was a great reproach to them, for ſuch numerous and mighty Forces, to be baffled and conquered by thoſe whom they thought to ſwallow up at a morſel. g Or, Rejected them, curſed them. Therefore it is no wonder if they could not ſtand before thee.

6. † O that the ſalvation of Iſrael were come out of Zion, when God bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob ſhall rejoyce, and Iſrael ſhall be glad.

PSAL. LV.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was certainly compoſed by David, when he was greatly diſtreſſed and perſecuted; either by Saul, or rather by Abſalom, and betrayed by ſome pretended or former Friend.

To the chief muſician on Neginoth, Maſchil, a Pſalm of David.

1. Give ear to my prayer, O God: and hide not thy ſelf a from my ſupplication.

a Turn not away thy Face and Ear, as one reſolved not to hear nor help.

2. Attend unto me, and hear me: I mourn in my complaint, and make a noiſe b.

b For my Miſery is very great, and forceth Tears and bitter Cries from me.

3. Becauſe of the voice c of the enemy, becauſe of the oppreſſion of the wicked: for they caſt iniquity upon me d, and in wrath they hate me e.

c (i.e.) Their Clamours and Threats, and Slanders and inſolent Boaſtings; all which are hateful to thee, as well as injurious to me. d The ſenſe is; Either, 1. They make me the great object of their wicked and injurious, and miſchievous Practices; Or, 2. They lay many Crimes to my charge, or falſly, as if by my wickedneſs I was the cauſe of all my Calamities. e Their Anger and Rage againſt me, is no ſudden and tranſitory Paſſion, but is boyled up into Malice and Hatred.

4. My heart is ſore pained f within me: and the terrors of death g are fallen upon me.

5. Fearfulneſs and trembling are come upon me, and horror hath † overwhelmed me.

† Heb. covered me.

f With pains, like thoſe of a travailing Woman, as the word ſignifies. My Heart, which hath commonly ſupported me in my Diſtreſſes, is now ready to ſink within me: Therefore, Lord pity and help me. g Either deadly Terrors; ſuch as ſeize upon Men in the Agonies of Death: or fear of Death; which is the more grievous to me, becauſe my Death will reflect Diſhonour upon thee, and bring many Miſeries upon the People.

6. And I ſaid, O that I had wings like a dove h; for then would I fly away and be at reſt i.

7. Lo then would I wander far off, and remain in the wilderneſs k, Selah.

h Which being fearful, and purſued by Birds of prey, flies away, and that very ſwiftly and far, and into ſolitary Places, where it hides and ſecures it ſelf in the holes of the Rocks, or in ſome other ſecret, and ſafe Place. All which fitly repreſents David's preſent Diſpoſition and Deſire. Or, that I might, or where I might be at reſt, or dwell, in ſome ſettled and ſafe Place, and be delivered from thoſe uncertainties and wandrings, to which I am now expoſed. k Where I might be free from the Company and Rage, and Treachery of my wicked Enemies; who are worſe than the wild Beaſts of the Wilderneſs.

8. I would haſten my eſcape from the windy ſtorm and tempeſt l.

l From the Force and Fury of mine Enemies, which now highly threatens me.

9. Deſtroy, O LORD, and * divide m their tongues n: for I have ſeen o violence and ſtrife p in the city q.

* Joh. 7. 40, 41, &c. Joh. 10. 19, 20, &c. Act. 23. 7, 8, &c.

m (i.e.) Deſtroy them by dividing. n (i.e.) Their Speech, as thou didſt at Babel, Gen. 11. their Votes and Opinions and Counſels, which was eminently done among Abſalom's followers, 2 Sam. 17. o Or, I do ſee or perceive, by certain and general Report. p That Injuſtice and Fraud, and Oppreſſion and Contention bear Rule there, inſtead of that publick Juſtice and Peace, which I eſtabliſhed and maintained in it. q Either, 1. In Keilah, where David thought to abide, 1 Sam. 23. Or, 2. In Gibeah, where Saul had his abode; Or rather, 3. In Jeruſalem; which is called the City by way of Eminency; and which in Abſalom's time was the chief Seat of Rebellion, and a meer ſink of all Sins. And this Circumſtance is noted as an aggravation of their Wickedneſs, that it was committed in that City, where the Throne and Seat of publick Juſtice was ſettled; & where God was in a ſpecial manner preſent and worſhipped; and where they had great Opportunities, both for the knowledge and practice of their ſeveral Duties.

10. Day and night they r go about it s upon the walls thereof t: miſchief alſo and ſorrow are in the midſt of it.

r (i.e.) The Violence and Strife laſt mentioned, v. 10. s Do encompaſs it, and are as it were the Garriſon, by which they deſign to defend it. t In the more outward Parts, as alſo in the very midſt of it, as it follows. So that all Parts were horribly corrupted.

11. Wickedneſs is in the midſt thereof: deceit and guile depart not from her ſtreets u.

u The Places of buying and ſelling, and of publick and common Converſation. So their ſins were both univerſal and impudent.

12. For it was not an enemy x that reproached me, then I could have born it y; neither was it he that hated me z, that did magnifie himſelf againſt me, then I would have hid my ſelf from him a.

x Either, 1. Not an open and profeſſed Enemy: Or rather, 2. Not an old and inveterate Enemy; as may be gathered from the following Deſcription. y With more Patience, becauſe I could expect nothing elſe from ſuch Perſons. z With a manifeſt or old Hatred. a I could and ſhould eaſily have prevented or avoided the Effects of his Hatred.

13. But it was thou, † a man, mine equal b, * my guide c, and mine acquaintance.

† Heb. a Man according to my Rank.

* Pſal. 41. 9.

b Not in Power and Dignity, which could not be, but in Reputation for his deep Wiſdom and excellent Conduct, and the great influence which he had upon me, and upon all my People. c Whoſe Counſel I highly prized, and conſtantly ſought and followed. All which agrees very well to Achitophel. See 2 Sam. 15. 12, 31. and 16. 23.

14. † We took ſweet counſel together d, and walked unto the houſe of God e in company f.

† Heb. who ſweetned Counſel.

d I imparted my ſecret Thoughts and Deſigns to thee, with great delight and ſatisfaction. e We agreed no leſs in Exerciſes of Piety, than in Acts of State and Policy. f Or, in Comfort; Or, with Conſent, as all the Ancients render it. He ſeemed as forward in Religion as I.

15. Let death ſeize upon them g, and let them go down quick into * † hell h: for wickedneſs is in their dwellings i, and among them k.

* Numb. 16. 30, 33.

g (i.e.) Him and all ſuch falſe-hearted Wretches, that pretended Religion with wicked deſign, and now have manifeſtly apoſtatized both from the profeſſion and practice of it, and fallen into all manner of wickedneſs. For ſuch are the vileſt of men, and moſt obnoxious to the Curſe of God. h Or, into the Grave, cut them off by a ſudden and violent death, as thou didſt thoſe, Numb. 16. 32. But theſe imprecations uſed by inſpired perſons in extraordinary caſes, is no Preſident for our imitation. i Or, where they ſojourn. They carry their Wickedneſs along with them, from place to place, and leave the Impreſſions and Effects of it, whereſoever they come. k Heb. In their inwards. Wickedneſs is deeply rooted in their hearts, and it breaks forth in all their Houſes and Actions.

16. As for me, I will call upon God: and the LORD ſhall ſave me l.

l Whilſt he deſtroy them. As they and I differ in the courſes of our Lives, ſo ſhall we in our ends.

17. Evening and morning, and at noon m will I pray, and cry aloud: and he ſhall hear my voice.

m The three ſtated times of Prayer amongſt the Jews. See Dan. 6. 10. Act. 3. 1. and 10. 3, 9, 30.

18. He hath delivered n my ſoul in peace o from the battel that was againſt me: for there were many with me p.

n Either, this is an Argument whereby he encourageth himſelf now to truſt God, becauſe of former deliverances: or he ſpeaks of a future Deliverance, as a thing done becauſe of the certainty of it. o Or, into Peace. He hath reſtored me from the ſtate of War, to my former Peace and Tranquillity. p For there were more with me than againſt me; even the holy Angels whom God imployed to defend and deliver me. See 2 Kings 6. 16. Pſal. 34. 7. and 57. 3. Or, for, (or rather, though as this Particle is oft rendred) there were many with me or about me or againſt againſt me, as this Particle is rendred, Pſal. 85. 3. and 94. 16. and in other places. So he ſpeaks here of his Enemies; which ſeems beſt to ſuit with the Context; for of them he ſpeaks implicitly in the foregoing words, and expreſly in the following.

19. God ſhall hear q and afflict them r, even he that abideth of old s, Selah: || becauſe they have no changes t, therefore they fear not God u.

|| Or, with whom alſo there be no changes, yet they fear not God.

q Either, 1. My Prayers againſt them, mentioned, v. 15. Or, 2. Their Reproaches, v. 12. their deceitful and treacherous Speeches, v. 21. He ſaid, God would hear his voyce, v. 17. now he adds that God will hear his voyce alſo, of which he ſpake, v. 3. r Or, teſtifie againſt them, or give an anſwer to them, not in words, but really, and by dreadful puniſhments, as this word ſignifies, Ezek. 14. 4. Which ſeems beſt to agree with the next foregoing word; God will hear and anſwer them. s Heb. He that inhabiteth Antiquity or Eternity; Who is Eternal, and therefore unchangeable, and Almighty; and conſequently as he ever was, ſo he ſtill is and will be, ready to defend his People, and to deſtroy their Enemies; and none can prevent nor hinder him, in either of thoſe Deſigns. t Either, 1. For the better: Becauſe they do not repent nor turn from their ſins. But then the next clauſe muſt be rendred, as it is in the Hebrew, and not fear God. Or rather, 2. For the worſe; for of ſuch deſtructive changes, this word when applyed to perſons, is generally uſed in Scripture, as Job 10. 17. and 14. 14, &c. Becauſe they meet with no croſſes, nor diſappointments and hitherto all their Counſels ſucceed well, and the people flow in to them Unanimouſly: as it was in the beginning and progreſs of Abſalom's Rebellion. u Their proſperous Succeſs, makes them go on ſecurely and obſtinately in their wicked courſes, without any regard to God, or dread of his Judgments: There being nothing which more hardens mens hearts, and makes them preſumptuous and incorrigible, than un-interrupted proſperity. See Pſal. 30. 6. Prov. 1. 32. Jer. 22. 21.

20. He x hath put forth his hands y againſt ſuch as be at peace with him z: † he hath broken his covenant a.

x (i. e.) They, the perſons laſt mentioned. Before the ſingular number, v. 13, 14. was ſuddenly changed into the plural, v. 15. that the puniſhment might reach not him onely, but his Partners, in thoſe treacherous and treaſonable Actions. And here is as ſudden a change, from the plural into the ſingular, and he returns to that perſon, who was the chief contriver and promoter of this Rebellion under Abſalom, even to Achitophel, of whom he ſpoke, v. 13. and though he doth not excuſe the reſt, as we have ſeen, yet he lays the chief blame upon him, and here he adds new Aggravations of his Treaſon. y In way of force or violence, as this phraſe is uſed, Gen. 37. 22. 1 Sam. 26. 9. Neh. 13. 21. Act. 12. 1. z Againſt me, who gave him no provocation nor diſturbance, but lived in great peace and ſecurity and friendſhip with him. a All thoſe ſolemn Obligations, by which he was tyed to me, both as his King, and as his Friend.

21. * The words of his mouth were ſmoother than butter, but war was in his heart b: his words were ſofter than oyl, yet were they drawn ſwords c.

* Pſal. 28. 3. & 57. 4. & 64. 3.

b He covered his Treaſonable and Bloody Deſign with fair and flattering Speeches. c Pernicious in their Deſign, and Conſequences.

22. * Caſt thy || burden d upon the LORD, and he ſhall ſuſtain thee: he * ſhall never ſuffer the righteous to be moved e.

* Pſal. 37. 5. Matth. 6. 25. Luk. 12. 22. 1 Pet. 5. 7. || Or, Gift. * Pſal. 37. 24.

d Or Portion, Heb. Gift: Whatſoever affliction God giveth, or ſendeth to thee; for even the ſufferings of good men are called God's Gifts in Scripture, Phil. 1, 29. Joh. 18. 11. So it is a Synecdochical Expreſſion. Or, whatſoever Gift thou deſireſt from him. Although the following words of the verſe ſeem to reſtrain it to Afflictions. The Sence is: All thy Affairs and Croſſes, and Cares and Fears, lay them upon the Shoulders of the Almighty, by Faith and Prayer, with a Confident expectation of a good Iſſue. He directeth this ſpeech to himſelf, or his own Soul, as he oft doth in this Book, and withal to all good men in like circumſtances. e (i. e.) To be removed, To wit, from his ſure and happy Eſtate. Or, which agrees as well with the Hebrew: He ſhall not ſuffer the righteous to be moved, or, fall for ever, as he doth wicked men. Though he may for a ſeaſon ſuffer them to be ſhaken, yet he will not ſuffer them to be utterly overwhelmed.

23. But thou, O God, ſhalt bring them f down, into the pit of deſtruction: † * bloody and deceitful men g † ſhall not live out half their days h, but I will truſt in thee i.

† Heb. Men of Bloods and deceit. * Pſal. 5. 6. † Heb. ſhall not half their days. See Prov. 10. 27.

f My wicked Enemies of whom I have hitherto ſpoken. g That colour their cruel intentions with ſpecious and deceitful pretences; which are moſt hateful to God, and all men. h Not half of what others live, and they by the courſe of Nature might live; but ſhall be cut off by God's juſt Judgment, by an untimely and violent Death. i And in this confidence I will quietly and patiently wait upon thee, for their downfal and for my deliverance.

To the chief muſician upon Jonath-elem-rechokim a, || Michtam of David, when the * Philiſtins took him in Gath b.

|| Or, a golden Pſalm of David. * 1 Sam. 21. 11.

a Which is ſuppoſed to be the name of a Song. But many render it, as the words ſignifie, concerning the dumb Dove afar off. All which agrees very well to David in his preſent circumſtances. He calls himſelf a Dove for his innocency; and folly (which is aſcribed to the Dove, Hoſ. 7. 11.) in caſting himſelf into this ſnare; and for his vexation and perſecution by his Enemies, thoſe Birds of prey; and for his ſad and mournful poſture. Silent he was, and it was his prudence ſo to be in this place and condition; and he was in a place remote enough from his Fathers houſe, and from God's Sanctuary where his heart was. b When being chaſed by Saul's reſtleſs malice, he had put himſelf into the hands and power of the Philiſtins at Gath. Where when he was, the following Meditations came into his Mind, which after his eſcape he digeſted into this order and Pſalm.

1. BE merciful unto me, O God, for man c would ſwallow me up d: he fighting daily oppreſſeth me.

c (i. e.) Men, weak and miſerable men, as the word ſignifies, whom thou canſt cruſh in an inſtant; Saul and his Courtiers, who have driven me hither; and now Achiſh and the Philiſtins, who have oft ſought my ruine, which now they have opportunity to effect. d Like wild and ravenous Beaſts, rather than Men. Heb. Hath ſwallowed me up. The thing is begun, and in a manner done, if thou doſt not miraculouſly prevent it.

2. † Mine enemies e would daily ſwallow me up: for they be many that fight againſt me f, O thou moſt High g.

† Heb. mine obſervers.

e Heb. My Obſervers, that narrowly look to all my paths, and watch for my Haltings, and for an opportunity to deſtroy me. f They truſt to their great numbers; wherein they know themſelves to be much ſuperiour to me. g Who from thine high place beholdeſt all their Plots, and canſt moſt eaſily diſturb and blaſt them.

3. What time I am afraid I will truſt in thee h.

h When I have the greateſt cauſe of Fear, I will rely upon thy providence, and promiſe for my Deliverance.

4. * In God I will praiſe his word i, in God I have put my truſt, I * will not fear * what fleſh k can do unto me.

* Ver. 10, 11. * Pſal. 118. 6. * Heb. 13. 6.

i The ſenſe is, Either, 1. I will praiſe or boaſt in the Lords word, or the Lord for his Word. Or, 2. With or by the Lord (i. e. By his favour or help) I will praiſe his word. Or rather, 3. This, as I humbly conceive: There are many things to be praiſed and celebrated in God, his Power, and Wiſdom, &c. but amongſt all and above all, I ſhall at this time praiſe him for his Word, which he hath magnified above all his Name, as is ſaid, Pſal. 138. 2. even for his promiſes of protection and deliverance, made to his people in all their exegencies, and particularly and eſpecially, for that promiſe of the Kingdom made to me; for which I will now praiſe him, becauſe I am as ſure of its accompliſhment, as if I had it already in mine hand. k Infirm and mortal men, altogether unable to oppoſe thy infinite Majeſty, called Fleſh by way of Contempt, as Pſal. 78. 39. Iſa. 31. 3. Jer. 17. 5.

5. Every day || they wreſt my words l: all their thoughts are againſt me for evil m.

|| Or, my words bring ſorrow.

l They miſconſtrue and pervert my moſt innocent Expreſſions, and turn them into matter of Calumny, wherewith they may incenſe Saul againſt me. Or, They perplex my Affairs. m It is their whole ſtudy to do me miſchief.

6. They gather themſelves together n, they hide themſelves o, they mark my ſteps p when they wait for my ſoul q.

n After they have ſeverally imployed their thoughts againſt me, they meet together to compare their thoughts, and to put them in Execution. o They lurk ſecretly; Either, that they may pry into all my moſt private Actions; Or, that they may ſurprize me with miſchief unawares; compare, Pſal. 10. 8. Prov. 1. 11. p (i. e.) All my goings and doings, that they may find ſome occaſion to reproach, or entangle and ſo deſtroy me. q Or, Life, to wit, to take it away from me.

7. Shall

7. Shall they eſcape by iniquity r? in thine anger caſt down s the people t, O God.

r Shall they ſecure themſelves by ſuch injurious and malicious Practices, whereby they do not only vex me, but provoke and deſpiſe thee? Shall they have ſucceſs inſtead of the puniſhments which thou haſt threatned, and they have deſerved? God forbid. But the words may be read without an Interrogation, By their Iniquity they hope to eſcape; Or, they do eſcape, at preſent: But Lord do not ſuffer them thus to eſcape. s This is oppoſed to their preſent exultation and triumphs over poor David, and to their hopes and confidence of ſafety and ſucceſs. t (i.e.) Theſe people, of whom I am ſpeaking, To wit, my malicious and wicked Enemies, as well thoſe followers of Saul, as theſe Philiſtins among whom I now am.

8. Thou telleſt my wandrings u, put thou my tears into thy bottle x: * are they not in thy book y?

*Mal. 3. 16.

u Here I have been hunted from place to place, and am now driven hither. x Regard, and remember, and pity them. y But why do I pray to God, to do that which I am well aſſured he is of himſelf inclined to do, and hath already done?

9. When I cry unto thee, then ſhall mine enemies turn back z: this I know: for God is for me.

z When I have no other Arms or Force, which is my preſent caſe, my Prayers ſhall be ſufficient to overthrow mine Enemies.

10. * In God will I praiſe his word: in the LORD will I praiſe his word a.

a What I have already engaged to do, v. 4. that I do again and again promiſe to do, and I cannot ſufficiently praiſe thy goodneſs in making promiſes, and thy faithfulneſs in keeping them.

11. In God have I put my truſt: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.

12. * Thy vows are upon me b, O God: I will render praiſes unto thee.

*Pſal. 61. 8.

b As I have prayed to thee, and am aſſured that thou wilt deliver me, ſo in confidence thereof I have made Vows to expreſs my gratitude to thee, and I acknowledge my ſelf obliged, and do reſolve to perform them.

13. For * thou haſt delivered my ſoul from death c: wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling d, that I may walk before God e in * the light of the living f?

*Pſal. 116. 8, 9.

*Job 33. 30.

c Which my Enemies deſigned, and my extream dangers threatned. d I am confident that thou wilt deliver, becauſe of thy promiſes, and my former experience. e (i.e.) That I may pleaſe, and ſerve, and glorifie thee, as this phraſe implies, Gen. 5. 24. Comp. with Heb. 11. 5. as alſo, Gen. 6. 9. and 17. 1. 1 Sam. 2. 30. which is the great End for which I deſire Life. f Either, 1. In Heaven. Or rather, 2. In this Life, which is here oppoſed to the Death laſt mentioned, as it is, Job 33. 30. which is called Light, Job 3. 20. as Death is called Darkneſs, Job 10. 21, 22. and oft elſewhere, and which is expreſſed, by beholding the Light, and the Sun, Eccleſ. 11. 7.

PSAL. LVII.

To the chief muſician, ‖ Al-taſchith a, Michtam of David, * when he fled from Saul in the cave b:

‖ Or, deſtroy not, a Golden Pſalm.

*1 Sam. 22. & 24. 3.

a The word ſignifies, Deſtroy not. Which ſome think to be a Preface containing the ſumm of the Pſalm, and re-minding David of his great Diſtreſs, in which he then was; which obliged him to make fervent Prayers to God, that he would not deſtroy him, nor give him up into the hands of his Enemies, who always deſigned and deſired to deſtroy him, and now ſeemed to have a fair opportunity to do it. b Either, 1. That of Adullam, 1 Sam. 22. 1. or that of En-gedi, 1 Sam. 24. 1.

1. BE merciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me c, for my ſoul truſteth in thee: yea, in * the ſhadow of thy wings d will I make my refuge, until theſe Calamities e be over-paſt.

*Pſal. 61. 4. & 73. 28.

c The Repetition implies both the greatneſs of his danger, and the fervency of his Spirit in this requeſt, and withal that his whole Truſt and hope was in God's mercy. d (i.e.) Of the Protection; to which alone I truſt, and not to the ſhadow of this dark Cave, in which I now hide my ſelf. e Or the time of theſe Calamities, which, I know, will ſhortly have an end.

2. I will cry unto God moſt high: unto God that * performeth all things for me f.

*Pſal. 138. 8.

f Heb. that perfometh (or perfecteth or finiſheth, as this word is rendred, Pſal. 138. 8. (i.e.) Will certainly perform or finiſh) for or towards, or concerning me. He doth not expreſs what he performeth, or perfecteth, or fulfilleth, but leaveth it to be underſtood, as being eaſie to be underſtood; He performeth or perfecteth, to wit, all that he hath promiſed, engageth himſelf to perform, what he hath begun to do, or what is yet to be performed; it being uſual in the Hebrew Language to underſtand a Verbal Noun after the Verb. He implies that God is not like men, who make large Promiſes, but either through Inability or Careleſneſs, or Untaithfulneſs, do not perform them, but will certainly be as good as his Word.

3. He ſhall ſend g from heaven, and ſave me ‖ from the reproach of him that would ſwallow me up h; Selah. * God ſhall ſend forth his mercy and his truth i.

‖ Or, he reproacheth him that would ſwallow me up.

*Pſal. 40. 11. & 43. 3. & 61. 7.

g Either, 1. His Angels, as Dan. 3. 28. Or, 2. His help, Or, 3. His hand; which is underſtood after this Verb. 2 Sam. 6. 6. by comp. 1 Chron. 13. 9. where it is expreſſed, Or, rather, 4. His Mercy and his Truth, as it here follows, where alſo this Verb is repeated, before thoſe Words. h (i.e.) From that ſhameful Deſtruction which they deſign to bring upon me. Or rather, as it is rendred in the Margent of our Bible, and by many others, and as it is in the Hebrew; He hath reproached; (i.e. He will certainly put to ſhame or reproach) him that would ſwallow me up, by diſappointing his expectation, and delivering me from his rage. i.e.) Shall diſcover them by their proper fruits, to wit, by affording his gracious help, in purſuance of his Promiſes.

4. My Soul is among * lions k, I lie l even among m them that are ſet on fire n, even the ſons of men o, whoſe teeth p are ſpears and arrows q, and their * tongue a ſharp ſword.

*Pſal. 35. 17. & 58. 6.

*Pſal. 55. 21.

k I live in the midſt of a generation of fierce and bloody men; which both in Scripture and other Authors, are oft called Lyons. l I have my abode and converſation. m Which Particle is eaſily borrowed out of the foregoing Clauſe. n To wit, of or from Hell, as is fully expreſſed, Jam. 3. 6. who are meer Fire-brands and Incendiaries, that are continually breathing out their wrath and threatnings, and incenſing Saul againſt me. o Whereby he explains what he meant by Lyons, and tells us they were Beaſts in the ſhape of Men. p Which may be conſidered; Either, 1. As Inſtruments of Deſtruction, as they are in Lyons. Or rather, 2. As Inſtruments of Speech, as they are in Men; for it here follows by way of Explication, as the manner is, and their Tongue. And both ſeem to ſignifie their wicked and pernicious Calumnies, of which he every where complains, and particularly in the Hiſtory, to which this Pſalm ſeems to relate, 1 Sam. 24. 10. and by which they deſigned to promote his deſtruction. q (i.e.) They grievouſly wound my Name, and are deviſed to do me miſchief.

5. * Be thou exalted r, O God, above the heavens s: let thy glory be above all the earth t

*Pſal. 7. 6. & 148. 13.

r Glorifie thy Power, and Goodneſs, and Juſtice, and Faithfulneſs by my deliverance, all which are expoſed to cenſure and reproach, whilſt thou ſuffereſt ungodly Wretches to oppreſs and triumph over the Innocent and Righteous, that put their truſt in thee. s (i.e.) Higher than the Heavens, or to the higheſt degree poſſible: Or above all the falſe Gods, which are ſuppoſed to reſide in Heaven. t (i.e.) Above all men upon Earth, ſome whereof do now audaciouſly lift up themſelves againſt thee, and above thee. Or, though (as the Hebrew Particle is commonly rendred, and it is no new thing to have the ſame Word or Particle diverſly taken in the ſame Verſe, as hath been formerly ſhewed) the whole Earth; not only amongſt thine own People, but ſo that even the Heathens, ſhall be forced to acknowledge and admire thy glorious deeds.

6. * They have prepared a net for my ſteps, my ſoul is bowed down u: they have digged a pit before me x, into the midſt whereof they are fallen themſelves y, Selah.

*Pſal. 7. 16. & 9. 15.

u Or, was bowed down: I was even ready to fall and periſh. Or, mine heart was oppreſſed and almoſt overwhelmed. x Heb. Before my face: not in my ſight, for that would have been in vain, Prov. 1. 17. but in my way, where they thought I would go. y This was fulfilled in Saul, who by purſuing fell into his hands, 1 Sam. 24. 3.

7. * My heart is ‖ fixed z, O God, my heart is fixed: I will ſing and give praiſe.

*Pſal. 108. 1. &c.

z Or, eſtabliſhed, in a full aſſurance of thy merciful help. It was ready to ſink for fear, or bowed down, v. 6. but now I have through thy Grace, conquered my fears, and am fixed in a ſtedfaſt Belief of thy Promiſes. Or, is prepared, to wit, to ſing and give praiſe, as it follows.

8. Awake up my glory a, awake pſaltery and harp: I my ſelf will awake early b.

a Either, 1. My Soul; Or rather, 2. My Tongue, the Inſtrument of Singing, which he was now about to do, v. 7, 9. b I will rouſe up and imploy all the powers of my Soul and Body, to ſet forth God's Praiſes.

9. I will praiſe thee, O LORD, among the people c: I will ſing unto thee among the nations.

c In the great Congregations, amongſt the Iſraelites of all Tribes, who are called by this Name, Deut. 33. 19. and amongſt Heathens, as I ſhall have occaſion, as he often had.

* Pſal. 36. 5. & 71. 19. & 89. 2. & 108. 4. 10. * For thy mercy is great unto the heavens d, and thy truth unto the clouds.

d (i.e.) Is moſt evident, and greatly exalted.

* Verſ. 5. 11. Be * thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

PSAL. LVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was compoſed; as very many others were, upon the occaſion of thoſe wicked Calumnies, and unjuſt Cenſures, and Sentences which were paſſed upon him by Saul and his Courtiers.

* Pſal. 57. Tit. || Or, deſtroy not, a golden Pſalm of David. To the chief muſician, * || Al-taſchith, Michtam of David.

1. DO ye indeed ſpeak righteouſneſs a, O congregation b? do ye judge uprightly, O ye ſons of men c?

a The queſtion implies a Denial: You cenſure me freely without any regard to Truth or Juſtice. b The word ſignifies a Band, or Company of men; and ſeems to point at Saul's Judges and Counſellors, who met together to conſult what they ſhould do againſt David; and probably paſſed a Sentence upon him, as guilty of Treaſon and Rebellion. c So he calls them; Either 1. In contempt and oppoſition of the Sons of God, or good men. Or, 2. By way of Admonition, to mind them that they alſo were men, and muſt give an account to God for all their hard ſpeeches, and unrighteous decrees againſt him.

* Pſal. 78. 57. 2. Yea, in heart d ye work wickedneſs, ye * weigh the violence of your hands e in the earth f.

d Or, with your heart, with free choice and conſent, and not only by conſtraint, and out of compliance with Saul. e Or, you weigh violence, or injuſtice with your hands. The Phraſe of weighing hath reſpect to their Office, which was to adminiſter Juſtice, which is uſually expreſſed by a pair of Balances. So he intimates that they did great wrong under the pretence, and with the Formalities of Juſtice, and whilſt they ſeemed exactly to weigh and conſider the true and fit proportion between the Actions, and the Recompences allotted to them, they turned the Scale; and partly, to curry favour with Saul; and partly, from their own malice againſt David; pronounced an unjuſt Sentence againſt him. f Or, in this Land, where God is preſent, and where you have righteous Laws to govern you, and you profeſs better things.

† Heb. ſpeaketh of Lyes. * Go aſtray from the Belly. 3. The wicked are eſtranged g from the womb h, † they go aſtray, * as ſoon as they be born i, ſpeaking lyes.

f To wit, from God, Eph. 4. 18. and from all Goodneſs. g Either, 1. Hyperbolically: even from their tender years. Or, 2. Strictly and properly. So the ſence is. No wonder they act ſo unrighteouſly, for their very Natures and Principles are corrupt, even from their birth: They are the wicked off-ſpring of ſinful Parents. And this hereditary and native corruption, though too common to all men, he particularly aſcribes to theſe men; Either, becauſe their immediate Parents were ſuch as did not only convey a corrupt Nature to them, but greatly improved it by wicked counſel and example: Or, becauſe they themſelves had improved that ſtock of Original corruption, and inſtead of mortifying it, had made it their great deſign, and conſtant buſineſs to gratifie and obey it. h By actual ſins, the fruit of their Original ſin. i From their childhood, as ſoon as ever they were capable of the exerciſe of Reaſon, and the practice of ſinning.

* Pſal. 140. 3. Eccl. 10. 11. † Heb. according to the likeneſs. || Or, Aſp. 4. * Their poiſon k is † like the poiſon of a ſerpent l; they are like the deaf || adder that ſtoppeth her ear:

k Their virulent and malicious diſpoſition. l Partly in it ſelf, being natural and inveterate, and incurable: and partly, in its moſt pernicious effects.

* Jer. 8. 17. 5. Which will not hearken to * the voice of charmers, || charming never ſo wiſely m.

m This ſimilitude doth neither juſtifie the practice of Charming, which, in the very word here uſed, is condemned, Deut. 18. 11. no more than thoſe which are drawn from the unjuſt Steward, Luke 16. 1, &c. and 18. 2, &c. and from a Thief. Rev. 16. 15. nor yet affirm the truth of what is reported concerning the Aſps or Adders, that are ſaid to lay one ear cloſe to the ground, and to cover the other with their tail, that ſo they may avoid the danger of Enchantment; but only was taken from the common Opinion, which he Poetically mentions to this purpoſe: As they commonly ſay of the Aſps or Adders, &c. ſuch really are theſe men: Deaf to all my Counſels, and to the Dictates of their own Conſciences, and to the Voice of God's Law. And yet of the Charming or inchanting of Serpents, mention is made both in other places of Scripture, as Eccleſ. 10. 11. Jer. 8. 17. and in all ſorts of Authors, Ancient and Modern, Hebrew and Arabick, and Greek and Latin. [Of which ſee my Latin Synopſis.] And particularly the Arabick Writers (to whom theſe Creatures were beſt known) name ſome ſorts of Serpents; among which the Adder is one, which they call Deaf, not becauſe they are dull of hearing, but, as one of them expreſly ſaith, becauſe they will not be charmed.

* Job 4. 10. 6. * Break their teeth n, O God, in their mouth: break out the great teeth o of the young lions, O LORD.

n Their power and inſtruments of doing miſchief. He mentions Teeth; Partly, becauſe the Adder's poiſon lies in its teeth; and partly, to make way for the following Metaphor. o Called the Grinders; which are more ſharp and ſtrong than the reſt, and more uſed in breaking and tearing what they are about to eat.

* Pſal. 64. 3. 7. Let them melt away as waters, which run continually p: * when he q bendeth his bow to ſhoot his arrows, let them be as cut in pieces r.

p As waters ariſing from melted Snow, or great ſhowers, or ſome other extraordinary cauſe, which at firſt run with great force and noiſe, and throw down all that ſtands in their way, but are ſuddenly gone, and run away and vaniſh, and return no more. q To wit, any or every one of mine Enemies, as appears from the foregoing and following words. r (i.e.) Like Arrows broken aſunder, whilſt a man ſhoots, which can do no hurt.

* Job 3. 16. 8. As a ſnail which melteth s, let every one of them paſs away *: like the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not ſee the ſun t.

s Which thruſts forth, and ſeems to threaten with its horns, but is quickly diſſolved: For when it goes out of its ſhell, it ſpends its vital moiſture, until by degrees it waſte away and periſh. t Which endeavouring violently and unſeaſonably to break forth from the womb is choaked in the attempt, and doth not live to ſee the light of the Sun.

† Heb. as living as wrath. 9. Before your pots can feel the thorns u, he ſhall take them x away as with a whirlwind y † both living, and in his wrath z.

u (i.e.) The heat of the fire kindled by the Thorns put under them for that purpoſe: Before your pots can be thoroughly heated. x To wit, mine Enemies: Whoſe ſudden deſtruction he deſcribes under this ſimilitude. y (i.e.) Violently and irreſiſtibly. z Heb. as Living (i.e. Alive, as he did Korah, Numb. 16. the Particle, as, being here not a Note of ſimilitude, but of truth or aſſeveration, as it is, Joh. 1. 14. and oft elſewhere, as hath been noted:) as in (which Propoſition is frequently underſtood) Wrath, (i.e.) As a man moved with great wrath, deſtroys his Enemy without mercy, and is ready to devour him alive if it were poſſible: Or, both that which is raw (as the Hebrew word Chai ſignifies, Lev. 13. 16. 1 Sam. 2. 15. to wit, the raw fleſh, which is ſuppoſed to be put into the pot, that it may be boiled) and the burning fire. There is indeed great variety of Conſtruction and Interpretation of theſe Hebrew words; which is not ſtrange, eſpecially conſidering the conciſeneſs of the Hebrew Language, and that this is a proverbial Speech; nor is it of any great importance, becauſe it is not in any great point of Faith, and becauſe the ſence of it is agreed, the only difference being about the manner and ground of the Phraſe. The learned Reader may ſee more upon this place, in my Latin Synopſis.

10. The righteous ſhall rejoyce when he ſeeth the vengeance: * he ſhall waſh his feet in the blood of the wicked ||.

* (i.e.) The Vengeance of God upon his implacable Enemies; not ſimply for himſelf, but for the bleſſed effects of it: The Vindication of God's Honour, and the deliverance of himſelf and of all good men. || (i.e.) There ſhall be ſo great a ſlaughter of his Enemies, that he might, if he ſo pleaſed, waſh his feet in their blood. See the ſame or like expreſſions, Pſal. 68. 23. Iſa. 63. 3. Revel. 14. 20.

† Heb. Fruit of the, &c. 11. So that a man ſhall ſay, Verily there is † a reward for the righteous: verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth †.

† And

† And theſe Adminiſtrations of God's Providence ſhall be ſo evident and convincing, that not only good men ſhall be ſenſible thereof, but any man that ſees them, yea, even ſech as were apt to diſpute or doubt of God's Providence, ſhall upon this eminent occaſion, break forth into ſuch Exclamations as this. Now I ſee, that Religion is not a vain and unprofitable thing, and that there is a God who doth now obſerve and govern, and when he ſees fit, judgeth the Inhabitants of the Earth, and will hereafter judge the whole World in righteouſneſs, and recompenſe every man according to his works.

PSAL. LIX.

The ARGUMENT.

The matter and deſign of this Pſalm is the ſame in general, and for ſubſtance with the former, to wit, a Declaration of the Cruelty and Treachery of his Enemies; and a Prayer to God to deliver him out of their hands.

To the chief muſician, ‖ Al-taſchith, Michtam of David: * when Saul ſent, and they watched the houſe to kill him.

‖ Or, deſtroy not, a Golden Pſalm of David.

* Pſal. 18. 48.

† Heb. ſet me on high.

a He chiefly underſtands Saul, but ſpeaks in the plural Number, out of reverence to his King, and that he might, as far as he could in truth, derive the envy and hatred of theſe odious practices, upon thoſe that were about him, as he doth, 1 Sam. 26. 19. and elſewhere.

2. Deliver me from all the workers of iniquity, and ſave me from bloody men.

3. For lo, they lie in wait for my ſoul; the mighty are gathered againſt me: not for my tranſgreſſion, nor for my ſin, O LORD b.

b Without any provocation, or cauſe given them by me. I am a ſinner before thee, O Lord, but I have done them no injury.

4. They run c and prepare themſelves d without my fault: awake † to help me e, and behold.

† Heb. to meet me.

5. Thou therefore, O LORD God of hoſts, the God of Iſrael f, awake to viſit all the heathen g: be not merciful h to any wicked tranſgreſſors i, Selah.

f A God in Covenant with all true Iſraelites, whom thou haſt promiſed to protect and bleſs. g Or, theſe Heathen, or Gentiles: who, though they are called and accounted Iſraelites by their Birth; yet in truth, and in their diſpoſitions and manners, are meer Heathens and Barbarians: In which reſpect ſuch men are elſewhere called Strangers, Pſal. 54. 3. Men of Sodom and Gomorrha, Iſa. 1. 10. and, as Ethiopians, Amos 9. 7. As among us ungodly Chriſtians are oft called Jews, or Turks, or Heathens. h For indeed thou canſt not with thine Honour, nor according to thy Word, be merciful to any ſuch incorrigible Offenders. i Or, perfidious Tranſgreſſors, ſuch as perſecute me, and other good men, out of malice, and againſt their own Conſciences, which tell them that I am innocent, and with pretences of friendſhip. He might well pray ſo vehemently againſt ſuch, not only for his own preſervation, but for the juſt and neceſſary Vindication of God's Honour, and for the publick good of Mankind; whoſe common Intereſt it was, that ſuch vile Miſcreants ſhould be taken out of the way.

6. They return at evening k: they make a noiſe like a dog l, and go round about the city m.

k After they have been buſie all day; Either in plotting againſt me, or in hunting after me, in the Evening, when they ſhould compoſe themſelves to reſt, they return to their old trade of watching for me: Which they did at this time all the night long, 1 Sam. 19. 11. l Either when he is hungry, and purſuing his prey, and howls for meat: Or, when he is enraged, and grins and ſnarles where he cannot, or dare not bite. m When they did not find him in his own houſe, they ſought for him in other houſes, and parts of the City, where they ſuppoſed him to lurk.

7. Behold, they belch out n with their mouth: ſwords o are in their lips; for * who, ſay they, doth hear p?

* Pſal. 10. 11. & 73. 11. & 94. 7.

n Or, they pour forth (to wit, words, for what elſe ſhould come out of the mouth? Even ſharp and bitter words, as the next Clauſe explains it) abundantly and vehemently, as a Fountain doth waters, as this word ſignifies: See Prov. 15. 28. Jer. 6. 7. o (i.e.) Words as keen and miſchievous as Swords, as Pſal. 55. 21. and 57. 4. p David doth not here us: Either to diſcover, and ſo to prevent our Plots, or to puniſh us for them: and God either doth not hear, or not regard what we ſay, and do againſt David: And therefore we may ſpeak and act what we think fit.

8. But thou, O LORD, * ſhalt laugh at them q, thou ſhalt have all the heathen in deriſion.

* Pſal. 2. 4. 37. 13.

q Diſappoint their high confidences, and hopeful deſigns, and then deride them, and make them ridiculous and contemptible to others.

9. Becauſe of his ſtrength r will I wait upon thee: for God is † my defence.

† Heb. my high place.

r (i.e.) Saul's ſtrength: Becauſe he is too ſtrong for me. Or rather, O my ſtrength, as it is v. 17. And all thoſe Ancient and venerable Tranſlators, the LXX. and Chaldee, and Vulgar Latin, render it, my Strength. In the Hebrew it is, his Strength, (i.e.) David's. For David ſpeaks of himſelf in the third Perſon, as he oft doth. And ſuch ſudden changes of Perſons are uſual, both in theſe Poetical Books (as hath been noted before) and elſewhere, as Dan. 9. 4. Mich. 1. 2.

10. The God of my mercy s ſhall prevent me t: God ſhall let * me ſee my deſire u upon † mine enemies.

* Pſal. 92. 11.

s (i.e.) The Giver of all that Mercy and Comfort, which I either have or hope for. Heb. of his Mercy. But here alſo there is (as appears by comparing this with v. 17.) a change of the Perſon, as there was in the foregoing Verſe. t To wit, with the Bleſſings of Goodneſs, as it is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 21. 3. Thou ſhalt help me, and that ſeaſonably, before it be too late, and ſooner than I expect. u In their diſappointment and overthrow, as it follows: Which was very deſirable to David, no leſs for the publick good, than for his own ſafety and happineſs.

11. * Slay them not x, leſt my people y forget z: ſcatter them a by thy power; and bring them down b, O LORD our ſhield.

* See Gen. 4. 14, 15.

x To wit, ſuddenly, or at once. y My Country-men; Or, thoſe over whom thou haſt appointed me to be Governour in due time. z Their former danger, and thy glorious Mercy in delivering them, and their own Duty to thee for it. Hereby it moſt plainly appears, that David in thoſe and the like Imprecations againſt his Enemies, was not moved thereunto by his private malice, or deſire of revenge, but by the reſpect which he had to God's Honour, and the general good of his People. a Heb. make them to wander. As they wandred about the City and Country to do me miſchief, v. 6. ſo let their puniſhment be agreeable to their ſin, let them wander from place to place, to wit, for meat, as it is expreſſed v. 15. that they may carry the Tokens of thy Juſtice, and their own ſhame to all places where they come. b From that Power and Dignity in which thou haſt ſet them, which they do ſo wickedly abuſe; and from the height of their carnal hopes and confidences of ſucceſs againſt me.

12. For the ſin of their mouth, and the words of their lips c, let them even be taken d in their pride e: and for curſing and lying f which they ſpeak g.

c For their ungodly and injurious, and pernicious Speeches, of which he ſpeaks v. 7. and in many other places. d As in a ſnare in order to their ruine. Let thy Judgments overtake them. e For their proud and inſolent Speeches againſt thee, v. 7. f For their Execrations and lying reports, which they have raiſed or ſpread abroad concerning me. g Which they are ready to utter upon all occations.

13. Conſume them h in wrath, conſume them, that they may not be i: and let them know k that God ruleth l in Jacob m, unto n the ends of the earth o, Selah.

h By degrees; and after thou haſt made them to wander about, v. 11. i To wit, in the Land of the Living any more: As this Phraſe is frequently underſtood; whereof divers inſtances have been given. k Experimentally, and to their coſt. l Over and above them: That though Saul be King, yet God is his Superior in Power and Authority, and all things among us ſhall be diſpoſed, not as it pleaſeth Saul, which his Paraſites are always ſuggeſting to him, but as God will; and therefore I ſhall be preſerved, and in fit time crowned, in ſpight of all that Saul or his Forces can do againſt me. m In the Land, and over the People of Iſrael, whoſe King and Governour he is in a peculiar manner. n Or, and unto: The Conjunction, and, being underſtood, as hath been noted before. Theſe words may be referred; Either, 1. To God's Ruling, let them know, that God ruleth, not only in Jacob: But alſo to the ends of the Earth. Or, 2. To mens knowing, let them, or let men know even to the the ends of the Earth, that God ruleth in Jacob. Let thy Judgments be ſo manifeſt and dreadful in the deſtruction of thy wicked Enemies, that not only Iſraelites, but even the remote Nations of the World may ſee it, and acknowledge thy Power and Providence in it. o Either of this Land: Or rather, of the World. The ſence is, That by thoſe eminent and extraordinary diſcoveries of thy Power, and Wiſdom, and Juſtice, it may be evident, both to them, and to all that hear of it, that thou art no Puny or Inferior, or Topical God, like the gods of Heathens, whoſe Government is confined to a narrow compaſs, but the high and mighty God, and the great Ruler of the whole World.

14. And at evening let them return, and let them make a noiſe like a dog, and go round about the city p.

p What was their ſin, and their choice to do with evil deſign, let it be their puniſhment to do it by conſtraint, and for meat, as it follows, v. 15.

† Heb. to Eat. ‖ Or, if they be not ſatisfied, then they will ſtay all night.

15. Let them wander up and down † for meat q; ‖ and grudge if they be not ſatisfied r.

q To get a livelihood. r When their bodies are hungry, let their minds be diſcontented. Or, as others render the words, And lodge, or be forced to lodge all night, when they are not ſatisfied. Let them go to their reſt with an empty ſtomach.

16. But I will ſing of thy power; yea, I will ſing aloud of thy mercy in the morning: for thou haſt been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble.

17. Unto thee s, O my ſtrength, will I ſing: for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

s (i.e.) To thy Honour. Or rather, of or concerning thee; as that Particle is ſometimes uſed.

PSAL. LX.

‖ Or, a Golden Pſalm. *2 Sam.8.3,13 1 Chr.18.3.12

To the chief muſician upon Shuſhan-eduth a, ‖ Michtam of David, to teach b, * when he ſtrove with Aram-naharaim c, and with Aram-Zobah d, when Joab returned, and ſmote of Edom in the valley of ſalt, twelve thouſand e.

a This, like the reſt, ſeems to be the Name of an Inſtrument, or Song, or Tune, then well known, but now quite unknown and forgotten It may be, and is by ſome rendred, The Lily, or Roſe of the Teſtimony, or Oracle: But why it was ſo called, is a matter of meer Conjecture, and of ſmall importance to us to know. b To wit, in an eminent manner: Or, for the ſpecial inſtruction of God's Church and People, in ſome points of great moment; as concerning the grievous Calamities, to which God's Church and People were obnoxious; v. 1, 2, 3. and concerning the certainty of God's Promiſes, and of their deliverance out of them, upon condition of their Faith and Obedience. Which Doctrines were of great moment, eſpecially to the Iſraelites, who were, and were likely to be exerciſed in the ſame manner, and with the ſame variety and viciſſitudes of condition, under which their Anceſtors had been. Or, whereas other Songs were to be learned only by the Levites, or by ſome of them, this poſſibly was one of them, which the People alſo were to be taught, and were to ſing upon occaſion, becauſe of the publick and general Concernment, which they all had in the Matter herein contained. c Or, the Syrians (ſo called from Aram, the Son of Sem, Gen.10.22.) of the two Rivers, or of Meſopotamia, the Country between thoſe two great and famous Rivers, Tygris and Euphrates. d Or, the Syrians of Zobah, part of Syria ſo called, 2 Sam.8.5,12. e This Report ſeems not to agree with the Hiſtories to which this Pſalm is ſuppoſed to relate, 2 Sam.8.13. and 1 Chron.18.12. neither in the Perſons ſlain, who are Edomites here and Syrians, 2 Sam.8.13. nor in their Numbers, which are here only twelve Thouſand, and there eighteen Thouſand, nor in the Perſons to whom this Victory is aſcribed, who is Joab here, David, 2 Sam.8.13. and Abiſhai, 1 Chron.18.12. But theſe Difficulties may eaſily be reſolved by theſe Conſiderations; 1. That David being King, and Joab Lord General of all his Forces, and Abiſhai his Lieutenant-General, as to a conſiderable part of his Army, the ſame Victory may well be aſcribed to any, or every one of them; as it is uſually done in like Caſes, in the Roman and Grecian Hiſtories. 2. That the Edomites and Syrians were united in this War. 3. That twelve Thouſand might be ſlain in the pitcht Battel, and the reſt by the Purſuers in their flight. 4. That theſe ſeveral places may ſpeak of ſeveral Fights. See more of this Buſineſs in the Notes on 2 Sam.8.13.

* Pſal.44.9. † Heb. broken.

1. O God, * thou haſt caſt us off f, thou haſt † ſcattered us g, thou haſt been diſpleaſed; O turn thy ſelf to us again.

f Or, rejected, or forſaken us, as to thy gracious and powerful Preſence, not only in the time of the Judges, but alſo during Saul's Reign. g Heb. broken us; Partly, by that dreadful overthrow by the Philiſtins, 1 Sam.31. and Partly, by the Civil War in our own Bowels, between me and Iſhboſheth.

2. Thou haſt made the earth to tremble h; thou haſt broken it: heal * the breaches thereof i, for it ſhaketh. * Pſal.75.3.

h A Poctical and Hyperbolical Expreſſion, ſignifying great and dreadful Changes among the People, as Hagg.2.7. comp. with Heb.12.26,27. See alſo, 1 Sam.14.15. i Reconcile all thoſe Differences, which our Civil Wars have made among us.

3. Thou haſt ſhewed k thy people hard things: thou haſt made us to drink the wine of aſtoniſhment l.

k Heb. Made them to ſee, (i.e.) To experience or feel, as Seeing is oft put, as Pſal.49.10. and oft elſewhere. l Thou haſt filled us with no leſs Horror and Trembling, than Men who are intoxicated with ſtrong and ſtupifying Drink, which they are forced to drink. Compare Iſa.51.17,21.

4. Thou haſt given m a banner n to them that fear thee o: that it may be diſplayed becauſe of the truth p, Selah.

m Either, 1. Formerly. As thou haſt ſometimes afflicted thy People, ſo at other times thou haſt delivered them. Or rather, 2. Now lately by and under me. n Which is a Sign and Inſtrument, 1. Of Union. This people who were lately divided and under ſeveral Banners, thou haſt now gathered together and united under one Banner, to wit, under my Government. 2. Of Battel. Thou haſt given us an Army, and Power to oppoſe our Enemies. We had our Banner to ſet againſt theirs. 3. Of Triumph. We have not loſt our Banner, but gained theirs, and brought it away in Triumph: Compare Pſal.20.5. Or, for, or, on the behalf of them that fear thee. An Emphatical paſſage, implying, that God gave ſo great a Bleſſing to the People of Iſrael, for the ſake of thoſe few ſincere Iſraelites which were among them. p Not for any merit of ours, but to ſhew thy Faithfulneſs, in making good thy Promiſes which thou haſt made, both to me, concerning the eſtabliſhing of this Kingdom to me, and to my ſeed for ever, and to thy People in general; whom thou haſt frequently promiſed to hear and help when they call upon thee, in times of Trouble.

5. * That thy beloved q may be delivered; ſave with thy right hand, and hear me. * Pſal.108.6, &c.

q Thy beloved People laſt mentioned.

6. God hath ſpoken r in his holineſs s, I will rejoyce t: I will divide u Shechem x, and mete out the valley of Succoth y.

r Having prayed that God would ſave and hear him, he now intimates that God had done it already, and had prevented his Prayers, and had ſpoken to him, and of him, about the ſtabliſhing of his Throne. s Or, in the Sanctuary, or Holy place, to which David uſed to reſort to ask Counſel, and from whence God uſually gave out his Oracles. Or rather, by his Holineſs, as this very word is rendred, Pſal.89.35. which carries the form of an Oath, and implies that God did not ſimply ſpeak, but ſwore by his Holineſs, as it is there expreſſed. t Therefore I will turn my Prayers into Praiſes and Rejoycings, for what God had already done, and as I am aſſured, will further do on my behalf. u Or, Diſtribute; which ſuppoſeth Poſſeſſion and Dominion. x A Place within Jordan, in Mount Ephraim. See Gen.33.18. Joſ.20.7. y A Place without Jordan. See Gen.33.17. Joſ.13.27. He mentions Shechem, and Succoth; Either, Synecdochically, for all the Land of Canaan, within and without Jordan; which, having been formerly divided between him and Iſhboſheth, was now intirely in his Poſſeſſion: Or, becauſe theſe two Places had been in Iſhboſheth's hands, and poſſibly were extraordinarily devoted to Saul's Houſe, and utterly averſe from David: Or, for ſome other Reaſon now unknown.

7. Gilead z is mine, and Manaſſeh a is mine, Ephraim alſo is the ſtrength of mine head b, * Judah is my law-giver c. * Gen.49.10.

z All their Land beyond Jordan, which was poſſeſſed by Reuben and Gad, and half of the Tribe of Manaſſeh, Numb.32.29, 39,40. Deut.3.10, &c. Joſ.13.25, &c. a The other half of that Tribe within Jordan. b Either, 1. Mine Horns wherewith I ſhall puſh mine Enemies, according to Moſes his Prophecy of that Tribe, Deut.33.17. Or, 2. The keeper of mine Head, as Achiſh ſpake, 1 Sam.28.2. A chief part of my ſtrength, either to offend mine Enemies, or to defend my ſelf. For this Tribe was very numerous, and valiant and rich. See Gen.48.19. Deut.32. 11. Pſal.78.9. c The chief Seat of my Throne and Kingdom, and of the inferior Thrones of Judgment, Pſal.122.5. the Tribe to which the Royal Scepter and Law-giver are appropriated by God's appointment, Gen.49.10.

8. Moab

8. Moab is my wash-pot d; over Edom e will I cast out my shooe f: Philistia, ‖ triumph thou because of me g.

‖ Or, Triumph thou over me, (by an Irony.)

d In which I shall wash my Feet. I shall bring them into the lowest degree of Servitude, and make them contemptible and miserable. See 2 Sam. 8. 2. e An old, and proud, and insolent, and cruel Enemy of Israel. f (i. e.) I will use them like slaves, Either holding forth my shooes, that they may pluck them off, or throwing my shooes at them; Either, in Anger, or Contempt, as the manner of many Masters was, and is in such cases. Others, I will take possession of them; which was done by trading upon their Land. Or, I will tread upon their necks, as they did in like case, Jos. 10. 24. But these Notions suit not with this phrase, of casting or throwing the shoe. g Or, over me, as thou didst in former years, use to triumph and insult over the poor Israelites. It is an ironical expression, signifying that her Triumphs were come to an end.

9. Who will bring me h into the † strong city i? * who will lead me into Edom k?

† Heb. City of strength.

* Psal. 108. 10.

h None can do it but God, as he declareth in the following Verses. i. (i. e.) The Cities; the singular number for the plural, which is usual. Having beaten his Enemies out of the Field, and into their strong Cities; from whence they hoped to renew the War, he desires God's Assistance whereby he may take their strong holds, and so secure himself from further Attempts against him. k Which was an high and rocky Country, Obad. v. 3. fortified by Nature, as well as by Art, and therefore not to be invaded, and subdued without a divine hand.

10. Wilt not thou O God, which * hadst cast us off? and thou O God, which didst not go out with our armies l?

* Psal. 44. 9. & 108. 11.

l To wit, in former times; but now hast graciously returned to us. He brings to his own and peoples minds, their former calamities, that they may be more thankful for present Mercies and Deliverances.

11. Give us help from trouble: for vain is the † help of man m.

m Though I have some reputation for Valour and Conduct, and though my people are very numerous, and now united under me, yet all this will avail little or nothing without thy Almighty help.

12. Through God * we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall tread down our enemies.

* 1 Chr. 19. 13.

PSAL. LXI.

To the chief musician upon Neginah, a Psalm of David.

The occasion of this Psalm, was some great distress of David's; Either by Saul, or by Absalom; though it might be composed some time after it was past.

1. HEar my cry, O God, attend unto my prayer.

2. From the end of the earth a will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to the rock that is higher than I b.

a Or rather, of the Land: To which David was driven by the Tyranny of his Enemies. b Convey me into some high and secure Fortress, which I could not reach without thy succour, and where mine Enemies cannot come at me. He alludes to their custom of securing themselves in Rocks, 1 Sam. 13. 6, &c.

3. For thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy.

4 I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever c: I will ‖ trust in the covert of thy wings d, Selah.

‖ Or, make my refuge.

c I shall, I doubt not, be restored to the Tabernacle from which I am now banished, and, according to the desire of my heart, worship and enjoy thee there all my days. d In the mean time, whilst I am in danger and trouble, I will cast my self upon thy protection with full confidence.

5. For thou, O God, hast heard my vows e: thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name f.

e My fervent Prayers, attended with many Vows and Promises, as was usual, especially in cases of great danger or difficulty. Gen. 28. 20. Judg. 11. 30, 31. f Thou hast allotted me my Portion, with and amongst them that fear and worship thee, who are the excellent ones, in whom is all my delight: And upon that Account I must acknowledge it to thy praise, that the Lines are fallen to me in pleasant places; Yea, I have a goodly Heritage, Psal. 16. 3, 6. Thou hast granted me this singular Mercy, to live in God's Land, and to enjoy his presence and favour, and to worship in his Tabernacle; which is the Heritage that I and all that fear thee, prize and desire above all things in the World.

6. † Thou wilt prolong the kings life g: and his years h † as many generations i.

† Heb. thou shalt add days to the days of the King.

† Heb. as Generation and Generation.

g (i. e.) My Life. He calls himself King; Either, 1. Because he was actually King, though Absalom usurped the Throne: Or, 2. Because he was designed and anointed to be King; and by calling himself King, he supports himself under his present straits, and declares his Confidence in God's promise of the Kingdom to him. Yet we must not think that David did commonly and publickly call, or own himself to be King, which had neither been true, nor convenient for his Affairs: But this Psalm, either was not composed whilst Saul lived, or, at least, was penned only for his private use and comfort, and not committed to the chief Musician; which indeed it could not be till David had the Kingdom, and the inspection of the sacred Musick and service of the Tabernacle. h (i. e.) The years of my Life and Reign. i As long as if I had a Lease of it for many Ages. Thus he speaks; Partly, because his Kingdom was not like Saul's, a matter of one Age, expiring with his Life, but Established to him and his Heirs for ever: and partly, because Christ, his Son and Heir, should actually, and in his own Person possess the Kingdom for ever.

7. He shall abide k before God l for ever: O prepare m * mercy and truth n which may preserve him.

* Prov. 20. 28.

k Or, sit, to wit, in the Throne, Jer. 13. 13. Living and Ruling as in God's presence, and serving God with his Royal Power, and worshipping him in his Tabernacle. m Or, Order or appoint, as this word signifies, Jonah 1. 17. and 4. 6. n Either, 1. The graces of Mercy or Compassion, and Truth, or Faithfulness; which are the great supporters of Thrones, Prov. 20. 28. and 29. 14. * Or rather, 2. Thy Mercy and Truth, (i. e.) The Effects of them. Thy Truth in giving me those Mercies, which thou hast promised to me, and thy Mercy in giving me such further Blessings, as I need, and thou seest fit to give me.

8. So will I sing praise unto thy name for ever, that I may daily perform my vows o.

o That so I may pay unto thee those services and sacrifices, which I vowed to thee when I was in trouble.

PSAL. LXII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was made in a time of great danger and distress, or at least with respect to it, as is manifest from v. 3, 4.

To the chief musician, † to Jeduthun a, a Psalm of David.

† Heb. upon.

a A famous Musician; of whom see, 1 Chron. 9. 16. and 16. 42. Heb. upon Jeduthun. Which might be the Name of a musical Instrument, or Tune invented by that Jeduthun, and therefore called by his Name.

1. † TRuly b my soul † waiteth c upon God: from him cometh my salvation d.

† Heb. Or, Only.

b Or, Surely. This is my certain and fixed resolution. Or, Nevertheless, as this Particle is oft rendred. So the beginning of this Psalm is abrupt, as it is in some other Psalms. This seems to be the conclusion of a long and hard conflict, which David had within himself, as he often had, what course he should take to get out of his trouble. c Heb. be silent, as it is also, Psal. 37. 7. (i. e.) Silently, quietly, and patiently, look up to God for deliverance, and that in his time and way, without Mourning or Despair, or using indirect and sinful practices. d I have no hope of deliverance, but from and by him.

2. He only is my rock, and my salvation: he is my † defence; I shall not be greatly moved e.

† Heb. high place.

e Though I may be shaken, yet I shall not be overthrown. Compare, Psal. 37. 24. 2 Cor. 4. 9.

3. How long will ye f imagine mischief against a man g? ye shall be slain all of you h: * as a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence i.

* Isa. 30. 13.

f Mine Enemies: To whom now he turneth his Speech. g (i. e.) Against me, a man like your selves, whom common Humanity obligeth you to pity; a single man, who is no fit match for you, a poor, contemptible, miserable and impotent Creature, as the word Man is oft used, as Psal. 9. 20.

and

and 82. 7, &c. a dead dog, or a flea, or a partridge, as upon the ſame account he calleth himſelf 1 Sam. 24. 14. and 26. 20. whom you cannot thus purſue, without reflecting diſparagement upon your ſelves, as he there ſaith. h The miſchief which you deſign for me, ſhall fall upon your own heads. And accordingly Saul and the generality of theſe men were ſlain, 1 Sam. 31. i (i.e.) As ſuddenly and eaſily overthrown as theſe are.

4. They only conſult to caſt him k down from his excellency l, they delight in lies m, * they bleſs with their mouth, but they curſe † inwardly, Selah.

* Pſal. 28. 3.

k To wit, the man mentioned, v. 3. (i. e.) Himſelf: Of whom he continues to ſpeak in the third Perſon. l From the hopes and attainment of that Royal Dignity, to which, God hath deſigned and anointed me. m In ſecret ſlanders and execrations covered with flatteries and fair ſpeeches, as it here follows.

5. My ſoul, wait thou only upon God: for my expectation is from him.

6. He only is my rock and my ſalvation: he is my defence, I ſhall not be moved.

7. In God n is my ſalvation and my glory o: the rock of my ſtrength, and my refuge is in God.

n Heb. Upon, or with God. It depends upon him, and his Favour, and help. o Either, 1. The matter of my glorying. Or, 2. That Honour which I either have or hope for.

8. Truſt in him at all times; ye people p, pour out your heart q before him: God is a refuge for us, Selah.

p By my example be encouraged, and learn to truſt God. q (i.e.) Make known all the deſires, and cares, and griefs of your hearts to him, freely and frequently, with confident expectation, of obtaining what you want or deſire from him.

9. * Surely men of low degree are vanity r, and men of high degree are a lye s: to be laid in the balance, they are || altogether lighter than vanity.

*Pſal. 39. 5. 11.
Rom. 3. 4.
|| Or, alike.

r (i.e.) Moſt vain, impotent and helpleſs Creatures in themſelves. This he delivers as a Reaſon or Argument, to enforce his foregoing exhortation, Truſt in God, becauſe there is no other Perſon, or thing to which you can ſafely truſt. s Becauſe they promiſe much, and raiſe mens expectations upon conſideration of their great Power and Dignity, but are not able to perform, and generally deceive thoſe who truſt in them. In which reſpect Lying is aſcribed to a Fountain, Jer. 15. 18. to Wine, Hoſ. 9. 2. to the Olive, Habak. 3. 17. when they do not give what they promiſe.

10. Truſt not in oppreſſion t, and become not vain u in robbery: * if riches increaſe, ſet not your heart upon them x.

* Job 31. 25.
Luk. 12. 15.
1 Tim. 6. 17.

t As you may not truſt any other Men, ſo neither muſt you truſt to your ſelves, nor to your own Wit or Induſtry, or Courage by which you may oppreſs others, and ſo think to ſecure and enrich your ſelves. u Lifting up, and feeding your ſelves with vain hopes, and expectations of ſafety and felicity, from thoſe riches which you take from others by Robbery or Violence. x So as to pleaſe your ſelves immoderately in them, to place your hope and truſt, and chief joy in them, or to grow proud and inſolent becauſe of them.

11. God hath ſpoken once: twice y have I heard this, that || power belongeth unto God z.

y (i.e.) Frequently, as Job 33. 14. both immediately as at Sinai, and by his Holy Prophets, from time to time. z That Power is God's Prerogative, and conſequently all Creatures, either againſt or without him, are poor impotent things, to which no man can truſt without certain diſappointment, and God alone is fit to be truſted.

12. Alſo unto thee, O LORD, belongeth a mercy; for || * thou rendreſt to every man according to his work †.

a Or, Benignity, or readineſs to do good. Thou art no leſs willing than able, to defend and preſerve all that put their truſt in thee. || Or, therefore. For the following words ſeem to be either a reaſon, or proof of, or an inference from, the two foregoing properties of God, Power and Mercy. God is almighty, therefore he can eaſily ſubdue and deſtroy all his and mine ungodly Enemies, and recompenſe unto them all their malicious and wicked practices. He is alſo mild and merciful, and therefore will pardon good mens failings, and graciouſly reward me and others, of his People according to our Integrity. † According to the Nature and quality, though not according to the proportion of their works, whether they be good or bad. And this as he is obliged to do by his holy Nature, and by that reſpect which he oweth to his own Glory, ſo he is able to do it, being omnipotent, and willing to do it to the godly (which was the only thing that might be doubted, becauſe of their manifold and great corruptions and imperfections, and Miſcarriages) becauſe he is merciful and gracious.

PSAL. LXIII.

A Pſalm of David when he was in the wilderneſs of Judah a.

a Where he hid himſelf from Saul, 1 Sam. 22. 5. and 23. 14, 15. and 26. 1, 2.

1. O God thou art my God b, early c will I ſeek thee: * my ſoul thirſteth for thee d, my fleſh longeth e for thee in a dry and † thirſty land, † where no water is f.

* Pſal. 42. 2. & 143. 6.
† Heb. weary.
† Heb. without water.

b In covenant with me. c Heb. in the Morning. Which implies the doing it with greateſt diligence and ſpeed, taking the firſt, and the beſt time for it, as Job 8. 5. Pſal. 78. 34. Prov. 1. 28. d (i.e.) For the preſence and enjoyment of thee, in thine houſe and ordinances, as the next verſe declareth it. e Or, languiſheth, or pineth away. The deſire of my Soul after thee, is ſo vehement and inſatiable, that my very Body feels the effects of it, as it commonly doth of all great Paſſions. f So called; Either, 1. Metaphorically; In a Land where I want the refreſhing waters of the Sanctuary. Or, 2. Properly: I thirſt not ſo much for water (which yet I greatly want) as for thee.

2. To ſee g thy power and thy glory h, ſo as I have ſeen thee i in the ſanctuary.

g (i.e.) To enjoy, as ſeeing is oft taken. h Either, 1. The Ark, which is called God's ſtrength and glory, 1 Sam. 4. 21. † Chron. 16. 11. Pſal. 78. 61. Or rather, 2. The powerful and glorious Effects, and Evidences of thy gracious preſence there. i Whereof I have formerly had great and comfortable experience, which makes me more ſenſible of my preſent loſs, and more thirſty after thoſe enjoyments.

3. Becauſe k thy loving kindneſs l is better than life m: my lips ſhall praiſe thee n.

k This is the reaſon of the foregoing thirſt after God. l (i.e.) The diſcoveries and influences of thy Grace and Favour, which thou uſually imparteſt to thy people in the Sanctuary. l Is more durable and comfortable, and Satisfactory than the preſent Life, with all imaginable advantages belonging to it. m Both for my former taſts and experiences of this Truth; and for the aſſurance of my reſtitution, to the ſame bleſſed enjoyments.

4. Thus o will I bleſs thee, while I live: I will lift up my hands p in thy name q.

o (i.e.) So as I have done and now do. Or, upon that occaſion, when I ſhall be reſtored. Or, for this reaſon, being ſo ſenſible of the ſweetneſs of thy favour. Or, certainly: For this particle is ſometimes uſed, as a note of Aſſeveration, as it is, Pſal. 127. 2. Iſa. 16. 6. p Towards thee in Heaven, in Prayers and Praiſes. q According to thy Command. Or, with confidence in thy name.

5. * My ſoul ſhall be ſatisfied r as with † marrow and fatneſs: and my mouth ſhall praiſe thee with joyful lips.

* Pſal. 103. 5.

r When thou ſhalt fulfil my earneſt deſire of enjoying thee in the Sanctuary: though now in my Exile I groan and pine away for want of that Mercy.

6. When * I remember thee s upon my bed t, and meditate on thee in the night-watches u.

* Pſal 42. 8. & 119. 55.

s In the mean time, whilſt I cannot enjoy thee, I will quiet and comfort my ſelf with the thoughts, and remembrance of thy kindneſs to me. t Heb. Upon my Beds, implying that he was frequently forced to change his Bed and Lodging, being driven from place to place. u In the ſeveral ſeaſons of the Night, which was divided into three or four Watches; of which ſee Exod. 14. 24. Judg. 7. 19. Mark 13. 35. When others ſleep ſecurely, my ſleep is interrupted by my perplexity and grief, for my abſence from thy houſe, and when I awake, my thoughts are fixed upon thee, &c.

7. Becauſe thou haſt been my help; therefore in the ſhadow of thy wings will I rejoyce x.

x I will reſt ſecurely and joyfully in thy protection.

8. My ſoul followeth hard after thee y: thy right hand upholdeth me z.

y (i.e.) Purſueth thee eagerly and diligently, and reſolvedly, and as it were ſtep by ſtep, when thou ſeemeſt to run away away from me: Which is the Emphaſis of this Hebrew word. My Soul and Spirit cleaveth to thee, as this Verb ſignifies, Gen. 2. 24. Jer. 13. 11. when my Body is abſent from thy Sanctuary. z I do not loſe my labour in following hard after thee; for though I am not yet reſtored to the Enjoyment of thy Preſence in thy Houſe, yet I have preſent ſupports from thee, whereby my Spirit is kept from fainting under my manifold preſſures, and is enabled with faith and patience to wait upon thee, till thou ſeeſt fit to deliver me.

9. But thoſe that ſeek my ſoul to deſtroy it a, ſhall go into the lower parts of the earth b.

a (i.e.) To take away my life. b Either, 1. Into Hell. Or rather, 2. Into their Grave, as this Phraſe is uſed, Ezek. 31. 14, 18. But how is this true, when they are ſuppoſed to be devoured by Foxes, v. 10. Anſ. This may be underſtood; Either, 1. Of divers perſons. Some of their ſlain might be buried, and others lie unburied. Or, 2. Of the ſame perſons; they did go into the Earth, but not immediately, but were firſt devoured of Foxes, and the remainders of them were buried, as is frequently done in ſuch caſes. Or, this Phraſe may note not ſo much the place, as the ſtate of the dead; this being univerſally ſaid of thoſe that die, whether they are buried or unburied, that they return to the earth or duſt, Job 1. 21. Eccleſ. 12. 7.

† Heb. they ſhall make him run out like water by the hands of the Sword.

10. † They ſhall fall by the ſword c, they ſhall be a portion for foxes d.

c (i.e.) Die in Battel, as David foretold, 1 Sam. 26. 10. and as was accompliſhed in Saul, and his followers, who were David's greateſt Enemies, 1 Sam. 31. d Their carkaſſes ſhall be unburied upon the Earth, and thereby become a pray to wild and ravenous Creatures, and eſpecially to Foxes, which were in thoſe parts in great abundance; and which did and do feed not only upon fruits, Cant. 2. 15. but alſo upon fleſh, as Experience ſheweth. Beſides ſome very Learned men think that the word rendred, Foxes, is more general, and comprehends, beſides Foxes, another ſort of Creatures, like unto them, called Thoes, which were very numerous in this Country: Of which ſee on Judg. 15. 4.

11. But the king e ſhall rejoyce in God, every one that ſweareth by him f ſhall glory g: but the mouth of them that ſpeak lyes h, ſhall be ſtopped i.

e I who am already anointed King, and who ſhall be actually King, when theſe mine Enemies are fallen by the Sword. He ſpeaks of himſelf in the third Perſon, either out of modeſty, or out of prudence, becauſe it was ambiguous, and might be underſtood; Either of himſelf, or of Saul, whereby he might avoid the envy of the Expreſſion, if this Pſalm was compoſed before he was King. f Either, 1. By the King, by whom they ſometimes did ſwear, as Gen. 42. 15. 2 Sam. 15. 21. But they did alſo ſwear by ſome other perſons, of eminent place and Authority, though under the King, as 1 Sam. 1. 26. and 20. 3. Nor is it likely, that the Pſalmiſt would juſtifie thoſe kinds of Oaths, this practice of ſwearing by ones Name, being accounted a part of that Worſhip which is proper to God, both in the Old and New Teſtament. If this were meant of the King, it might better be rendred, that ſweareth to (for ſo the Particle Beth is ſometimes uſed) him, as Subjects uſed to ſwear Homage to their Prince. So the ſence is: All thoſe that ſhall own me for their King. Or, 2. By God, who was laſt mentioned, that ſweareth by the Name of God, to wit, in Truth, and Judgment, and Righteouſneſs, as it is expreſſed, Jer. 4. 2. (i.e.) Every ſincere Servant and Worſhipper of God; Swearing being oft put for the whole Worſhip of God, whereof it is a conſiderable part, and Swearers by God for Worſhippers of him, as Iſa. 19. 18. and 45. 23. Compared with Rom. 14. 11. and Iſa. 65. 16. g Shall rejoyce in my Deliverance and Exaltation, both for their reſpect to the Honour and Service of God, which I ſhall advance, and for the Benefits which all good men, and the whole Kingdom ſhall feel by my Government, whereas in Saul's time the vileſt men were exalted, and good men oppreſſed and perſecuted, and the whole Kingdom groaned under his Tyranny. h That now make it their buſineſs to invent or ſpread lying and ſlanderous reports concerning me and others of God's People. i I ſhall ſeverely reſtrain and puniſh ſuch wicked practices.

PSAL. LXIV.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

The matter of this Pſalm plainly declares that it was made in a time when David was greatly diſtreſſed and reproached: Which he was both under Saul, and in the time of Abſalom's Rebellion.

1. HEar my voice, O God, in my prayer, preſerve my life from fear a of the enemy.

a (i.e.) From danger; The act or paſſion of Fear, being oft put for its object, Danger, as Pſal. 14. 5. 1 Pet. 3. 14. and oft elſewhere.

2. Hide me from the ſecret counſel b of the wicked; from the inſurrection of the workers of iniquity.

b (i.e.) From the ill effects of their Plots againſt me.

3. * Who whet their tongue like a ſword, and * bend their bows to ſhoot their arrows c, even bitter words d.

* Pſal. 11. 2.
* Pſal. 57. 4.

c Of which Phraſe ſee the Notes on Pſal. 58. 7. d Slanderous and pernicious ſpeeches againſt me.

4. That they may ſhoot in ſecret e at the perfect f: ſuddenly g do they ſhoot at him, and fear not h.

e Lying in ambuſh, or hiding themſelves in ſecret places, as Fowlers commonly do. f Or, upright man, (i.e.) As me, who in ſpight of all their calumnies, dare avow that my heart is perfect with God, and that I am blameleſs as to them, having given them no juſt provocation. g At the very opportunity. h Neither men, becauſe they conceal it from them, as appears from the foregoing and following words; nor God, whoſe Judgments they deſpiſe.

5. They encourage themſelves i in an evil ‖ matter; they commune † of laying ſnares privily: they ſay, Who ſhall ſee them k?

‖ Or. Speech.
† Heb. to hide Snares.

i Heb. They ſtrengthen, or fortifie themſelves, by firm reſolutions, by aſſured confidence of ſucceſs, by uniting their counſels and forces together, and by mutual encouragements and exhortations. k Their ſnares are ſo ſecretly laid, that David cannot diſcern, and therefore not avoid them.

6. They ſearch out iniquities l, ‖ they accompliſh † a diligent ſearch m, both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart is deep n.

‖ Or, we are conſumed by that which they have throughly ſearched.
† Heb. a part ſearched.

l They ſtudy diligently and conſtantly, to find out either matter, which they may lay to my charge, or new ways and means of doing me miſchief. m They have long and accurately ſearched, till at laſt they have ripened and perfected their thoughts, and found out a very cunning and deep Plot. Or, they ſay, We have accompliſhed our accurate ſearch. By long ſearching we have at laſt found what we deſired. n Mine Enemies are not only cruel and malicious, but alſo very cunning, both to contrive and conceal, and to execute their Plots.

7. But God ſhall ſhoot at them o with an arrow, ſuddenly p † ſhall they be wounded.

o Though I can neither ſearch out, or prevent their ſubtil devices, yet God can and will certainly do it. p Shortly and unexpectedly.

8. So they ſhall make their own tongue to fall upon themſelves q; all that ſee them ſhall flee away r.

q The miſchief of their hard Speeches and Threats, and crafty Counſels againſt me, ſhall be turned againſt themſelves. r Partly, through abhorrency of them; and partly, through fear of being involved in their deſtruction.

9. And all men s ſhall fear, and ſhall declare the work of God t; for they ſhall wiſely conſider of his doing u.

s (i.e.) A greater number of thoſe who ſhall ſee theſe Events. t (i.e.) This admirable work of divine Power and Wiſdom, and Faithfulneſs. u Learning wiſdom by their folly and miſery, and avoiding thoſe evil courſes, which brought them to ruine.

10. The righteous ſhall be glad in the LORD x, and ſhall truſt in him; and all the upright in heart ſhall glory y.

x Or, for the Lord, (i.e.) Not out of malice or ill will to the perſons of their Enemies, but for the Honour of God, which by this means is fully vindicated, and greatly advanced. y To wit, in God, as their ſure Rock and all-ſufficient Portion.

PSAL. LXV.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm and ſong of David.

The deſign of this Pſalm ſeems to be to declare the great and glorious work of Divine Providence, both towards his Church, and the Land of his People, and towards the reſt of Mankind.

1. PRaiſe † waiteth a for thee, O God, in Zion b: and unto thee ſhall the vow be performed c.

a Heb. is ſilent or ſilence, (i.e.) Quietly waits, as this Phraſe is uſed, alſo Pſal. 62. 1. And praiſe may be here put for the perſon or perſons, who uſe to praiſe God upon all occaſions, and who who are now prepared and ready to do so: as deceit is put for a deceitful man, as Prov. 12. 24. and sin for the sinner, Prov. 13. 6. and dreams for dreamers, Jer. 27. 9. So the meaning may seem to be this, God's people patiently and believingly wait for an opportunity, to offer their praises to God: For at present they seem to be in some straits, as divers passages of this Psalm do intimate. b Though all the people of the World have great cause to praise thee, yet none pay this Tribute, but thy people in Sion; and they indeed have many peculiar and eminent obligations, and occasions to perform this Duty. c All the thank-offerings which thy people vowed unto thee, in the time of their danger, shall be faithfully paid, to wit, in Zion: Which is to be repeated out of the first Clause of the Verse.

2. O thou that heares prayer d, unto thee shall all flesh e come.

d That useth and delighteth to hear and answer the Prayers of thy people in Zion. Which he justly mentions, as one of the chiefest of God's favours, and priviledges vouchsafed to his Church. e (i.e.) Men of all sorts and Nations, who were allured by this and other singular benefits, to joyn themselves to the Jewish Church, according to Solomon's Prediction, 1 Kings 8. 41, 42, 43. Withal this may be a tacit Prophecy of the Conversion of the Gentiles.

† Heb. words and matters of iniquities. † Heb. atone, or, expiate.

3. † Iniquities prevail against me f: as for our transgressions, thou shalt † purge them away g.

f They are a burden too heavy for me, as he complains, Psal. 38. 4. They are so many and great, that for them thou mightest justly reject my Prayers, and destroy my Person. g But this is another glorious Priviledge granted to thy People, and that in Answer to their Prayers, thou dost graciously pardon and purge away their sins.

4. Blessed is the man whom thou choosest h, and causest i to approach unto thee k, that he may dwell in thy courts l: * we shall be satisfied m with the goodness of thy house n, even of thy holy temple.

* Psal. 36. 8.

h Out of the Lump of Mankind, to be one of thy peculiar people. i (i.e.) Permittest and commandest, and by the disposal of thy Providence, and the influences of thy Graces procurest and ordereth. k To draw near to God in his House and Ordinances, by prayers and praises, and other acts of Acquaintance and Communion with him. l In the Courts of thy House. He mentioneth Courts, because the people were permitted to go no further into God's House. m For they only get that solid satisfaction which all men desire, but no other persons or people can find elsewhere. n With the spiritual and everlasting Blessings there conferred upon thy people, the Grace and Favour and Fellowship of God, Remission of sins, Renovation of heart and life, the knowledge of God, and of our selves, and of our Duty, and true Interest, Joy and Peace, and well-grounded Hopes or assurance of eternal Life: In comparison whereof all the Enjoyments of this World are but dross and dung.

5. By terrible things o in righteousness p, wilt thou answer us q, O God of our salvation: who art the confidence r of all the ends of the earth s, and of them that are afar off upon the sea t.

o Or, In a terrible manner; (i.e.) So as to strike thy people with an holy Awe and Reverence of thee, and of thy Judgments, and thine Enemies with dread and horror. Or, In a wonderful manner, as this word is rendred by the Chaldee, Deut. 10. 21. things wonderful and terrible, being put together, as expressing the same thing, Psal. 106. 22. p (i.e.) By virtue of thy Justice, or Faithfulness, or Goodness: whereby thou art inclined, and engaged to help thy people when they are in distress, and resort unto thee by prayer. q Thou wilt graciously answer and grant our prayers and desires. r (i.e.) The only object of a safe and undeceiving confidence; for there is no other person, or thing in the World, that any man living can trust to without fear and certainty of disappointment. Or, Thou art the stay and support of all Mankind, by thy powerful and gracious Providence, Psal. 104. 27. Acts 17. 28. Heb. 1. 3. Others refer this to the Calling of the Gentiles. But that seems not to suit with the following Verses, which manifestly speak of God's general Providence. s Not only of thy people Israel, but of all persons and Nations, even as far as to the end of the Earth, or of this vast Continent in which we live. t Or, in the Sea, (i.e.) in the Islands of the Sea, which are here distinguished from the Continent; and under those two Heads are comprehended all the Inhabitants of the World.

6. Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains u; being girded with power x.

u That they are not overthrown by Floods or Winds, or Earthquakes, or other natural or violent Causes: Which stability they have only from God's Providence, which sustains all persons, and all things. x This our God being able to do it, and that with one single word.

* Psal. 89. 9.

7. * Which stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves y, and the tumult of the people z.

y When the Sea is tempestuous, and threatens to swallow up Ships and Men that are in it, or to overflow the Earth. z And as he stills the Natural, so also he quiets the Metaphorical Seas, tumultuous and unruly people, for multitudes of people are oft called Seas, in Prophetical Writings, as Isa. 17. 12, 13. Jer. 51. 42. Revel. 17. 15.

8. They also that dwell in the uttermost parts a are afraid at thy tokens b: thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening c || to rejoyce.

a To wit, of the Earth, which is added to this word, v. 5. b Or, Signs: Either, 1. At the Sun and Moon and Stars, which are called Signs, Gen. 1. 14. But these are not matter of terror, but of delight to men; and the commonness and constancy of their courses, makes most men neither fear nor much regard them. Or, 2. At the great and terrible Judgments, which God inflicts upon wicked men, and particularly upon the Enemies of his people. Or rather, 3. At those terrible Thunders and Lightnings, and Earthquakes and Comets, or other strange Meteors, or Works of God in the Air: For he is here speaking of the natural Works of God. c By which he understands; Either, 1. The East, from whence the Morning or the Sun, the cause of it, goeth forth, as it is expressed, Psal. 19. 6. and the West, from whence the Evening or Night, is Poetically supposed to come forth. So the meaning is, That God gives all the people of the World, from East to West, occasion to rejoyce in the Effects of his Bounty and Goodness to them. But if the Psalmist had meant this, it is not probable that he would have expressed it in such a dark and doubtful Phrase, which is never used in that sence, but rather by those known and usual Expressions, from East to West, or, from the rising of the Sun, to the going down thereof, which Phrase he useth, Psal. 50. 1. and 113. 3. Or rather, 2. The successive Courses of the Morning and Evening; Or of the Sun and Moon which go forth at those times, thereby making the Morning and Evening; both which are said to Rejoyce Poetically, because they give men occasion of Rejoycing, which the Sun or the Morning doth, because it gives them opportunity for the dispatch of business, and for the enjoyment of manifold recreations and delights; and the Moon or Evening doth so, because it invites men to that rest and sleep, which is both refreshing and necessary for them. Thus this whole Verse speaks of the natural Works of God, the former Clause of such as are extraordinary and terrible, the latter of such as are ordinary and delightful.

9. Thou visitest d the earth e and || * waterest it f: thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God g which is full of water: thou preparest h them i corn, when thou hast so provided for it k.

|| Or, after thou hadst made it to desire rain, or thou desirest it. * Psal. 68. 9, 10.

d To wit, in Mercy, or with thy Favour, as this word is oft used. e The whole Earth, which is full of thy Bounty. So he continues to declare the general Providence of God to all men and people. Or rather, the Land, or this Land, for here is an Emphatical Article. And so he comes from God's general Providence, over all places and Nations, to his particular and special Providence over his people in the Land of Canaan, whereof he gives one eminent and considerable instance, to wit, his giving them rain and fruitful seasons, that after a time of drought and scarcity, to which it is not improbably supposed, but this Psalm relates. And this may be the particular occasion, for which the Psalmist said, that Praise waited for God in Zion, v. 1. f This is added to determine and explain the former general word, or to shew how or wherein God visited it. g Either, 1. With the Rivers which God hath made in the several parts of the Earth, to make it moist and fruitful. Although the fertility of the greatest part of the Earth, doth not depend so much upon the Rivers below, as upon the rains from above. Or, 2. With the River Jordan, which sometimes overflowed its Banks. But that overflow reached only to a small part of the Land. Or rather, 3. With showers of Rain, which he very significantly calls a River for their plenty, and the River of God, (i.e.) Of God's immediate making and providing when he sees fit; which is opposed both to those little Rivolets or Chanels, which Husbandmen or Gardiners cut for the watering of their Grounds, and to those greater Rivers, which run with a constant course, and by their little Chanels derived from them, or by their overflows do water and inrich the Earth, as Nilus did Egypt; to which these words may seem to have a special reference, especially if they be compared with Deut. 11. 10, 11, 12, &c. h By this means thou prepares the Earth, for bringing forth Corn, and ripenest the Corn in the Earth. i For them, to wit, the Inhabitants of the Earth, or Land here mentioned, for their use and benefit. k Or, disposed, or ordered, or prepared it, to wit, the Earth, which without this would be hard and barren.

10. Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly: || thou settlest l the furrows thereof: † thou makest it soft with showers, thou blessest the springing thereof m.

|| Or, thou causest rain to descend into the furrows thereof. † Heb. thou dissolvest it.

l To wit, in that condition which is fit for Fruit. Or, thou bringest down: for the Rain dissolves the high and hard clods of Earth. m When all is done, the fruitfulness of the Earth must not not be aſcribed to the Rain or Sun, or any ſecond Cauſes, but to thy Bleſſing alone.

† Heb. the year of thy Goodneſs.

11. Thou crowneſt † the year with thy goodneſs n, and thy paths o drop fatneſs p.

n Thou by thy powerful Goodneſs doſt inrich and adorn all the ſeaſons of the year with their proper fruits and bleſſings. o The Clouds, upon which God is frequently ſaid to walk or ride, as Job 36. 28. and 38. 26, 27. Pſal. 104. 3. Nahum 1. 3. Which ſence is favoured by the next Verſe, where theſe paths are ſaid to drop, &c. p Make the Earth fat and fruitful.

12. They q drop upon the paſtures of the wilderneſs r: and the little hills s † rejoyce on every ſide t.

q God's paths. r Which, though neglected by men, are furniſhed by God with food for wild beaſts, which being his Creatures, he careth for by this means. s The Hills of Canaan, which for the generality of them, were but ſmall, if compared with the great and high Mountains, in divers parts of the world. He mentions the Hills, becauſe theſe being moſt dry and parched with the Sun, moſt need, and are moſt refreſhed with the Rain. t As being moiſtened and ſatisfied with Rain in all parts and ſides of them.

13. The paſtures are cloathed with flocks, the vallies alſo are covered over with corn u; they ſhout for joy, they alſo ſing x.

u This is added as the effect of theſe comfortable Rains, that they fill the paſtures with graſs for Cattel, and the Vallies (which he mentions as the moſt fruitful places, though he doth not exclude the reſt) with Corn for the uſe of man. x (i.e.) They are abundantly ſatisfied with thy Goodneſs, and in their manner ſing forth the praiſes, and declare the Goodneſs of their Creator and Benefactor. Compare Pſal. 147. 8. ſuch paſſions or actions as theſe, are oft figuratively aſcribed to liteleſs Creatures, both in Sacred and profane Poetical Writings; which are ſaid to rejoyce or mourn, &c. when their condition is ſuch as calls for rejoycing or mourning, and would cauſe them to do ſo, if they were capable of ſuch actions.

PSAL LXVI.

To the chief muſician, a Song or Pſalm.

The Author and time of the compoſing of this Pſalm are uncertain. This is manifeſt and ſufficient for our underſtanding of it, that it was made upon the occaſion of ſome great and glorious Deliverance afforded to the Iſraelites, after and out of ſome grievous and general Calamity, and, as ſome not improbably conceive, that out of Babylon.

† Heb. all the Earth.

1. MAke a joyful noiſe unto God, † all ye lands a.

a Ye people of all Nations, who have ſeen the wonderful Power and Wiſdom, and Fidelity and Goodneſs of God in our deliverance, it becomes you to acknowledge it with admiration and rejoycing. Or, all the Land, or this Land. But the former ſence is more probable from v. 4. where this word is ſo uſed. And it is very proper for this place, and uſual in other places of Scripture, to invite the Gentile World to the contemplation and celebration of God's Works, to and for his people. See Deut. 32. 43. 1 Chron. 16. 23, 24.

2. Sing forth the honour of his name, make his praiſe glorious b.

b (i.e.) Praiſe him in an extraordinary and eminent degree, ſo as he may have much Glory from you.

‖ Or, yield feigned Obedience. † Heb. Lie.

3. Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works c! through the greatneſs of thy power ſhall thine enemies ‖ † ſubmit themſelves unto thee d.

c To wit, thine Enemies, as it follows. d Heb. Lie unto thee, (i.e.) Profeſs ſubjection to thee, not ſincerely and freely, but by conſtraint, and out of a ſervile fear.

4. All the earth ſhall worſhip thee, and ſhall ſing unto thee e, they ſhall ſing to thy Name, Selah.

e Many people of divers Nations ſhall be ſo affected with thy ſtupendious Works, that they ſhall worſhip and praiſe thee for them, and all people ſhould do ſo, and ſhall have juſt cauſe to do ſo; and the time will come when all Nations will actually do ſo, to wit, in the days of the Meſſias.

* Pſal. 46. 8.

5. * Come and ſee f the works of God, he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men g.

f Conſider them wiſely and ſeriouſly, for God's Glory, and for your own good. g To all his Enemies, whom he calls the Children of men; Partly, in way of contempt, to ſhew how unable they are, either to avoid or reſiſt the great God; and partly, in oppoſition to his own people, who are frequently called the Children of God.

6. * He turned the ſea into dry land, * they went through the flood h on foot, there did we i rejoyce in him.

* Exod. 14. 21. * Joſh. 3. 17.

h Or River, to wit, Jordan. i (i.e.) Our Nation, or our Anceſtors, in whoſe Loins we then were, and the benefit of which ancient deliverance we at this day enjoy. See the like Expreſſions, Pſal. 81. 5. Hoſea 12. 4. The whole people of Iſrael are oft conſidered as one Body, continued through all ſucceeding Generations. United in the Bond of the ſame Covenant and Worſhip, and in the poſſeſſion of the ſame Promiſes, and Privileges, and Bleſſings, and acted by one and the ſame Spirit; and therefore ſeveral and contrary things may reaſonably be aſcribed to them, in regard of their ſeveral parts and ages, and what was done in one Age, may be imputed to another by vertue of their ſtrict conjunction with the ſame Body.

7. He ruleth by his power for ever i, * his eyes behold the nations k, let not the rebellious exalt themſelves l, Selah.

* Pſal. 11. 4.

i The ſame power which God had and put forth for his people in ancient time, he ſtill hath in as great vigour as ever, and is not at all weakened by age, and is as able and ready to act for them now, as ever he was: which he hath ſhewed by this late and glorious inſtance. k He ſees all their ſecret and ſubtil devices, and can and will defeat them, when he ſees fit. l Lift up their hands againſt God, or againſt his people. Or, the rebellious, (i.e. thoſe people which rebel againſt this Almighty God and his Laws) ſhall not exalt themſelves, as they vainly hope and deſign to do, but ſhall be brought down and deſtroyed, as is hereby implied.

8. O bleſs our God, ye people m, and make the voice of his praiſe to be heard.

m Of other Nations, that have ſerved, or yet do ſerve other Gods.

† Heb. putteth

9. Which † holdeth our ſoul in life n, and ſuffereth not our feet to be moved o.

n Who by a ſucceſſion of Miracles of Mercy, hath kept us alive in the midſt of a thouſand deaths, to which we were expoſed, and hath reſtored us to life, when we were like dead men and dry bones ſcattered at the mouth of the Grave. o To wit, ſo as to fall into miſchief and utter ruine, as our Enemies deſigned.

* Pſal. 17. 3.

10. For p * thou, O God, haſt proved us, thou haſt tryed us as ſilver is tryed q.

p Or, Yet or Nevertheleſs. Though thou haſt hitherto helped us, and now delivered us, yet for a ſeaſon thou haſt ſorely afflicted us. q (i.e.) Severely, as if it were in a burning Furnace; and with a deſign to try our ſincerity, and to purge out the Droſs, or the wicked from among us.

11. Thou broughteſt us into the net r, thou laidſt affliction upon our loins.

r Which our Enemies laid for us, and which could never have taken or held us, but by the permiſſion and diſpoſal of thy Providence, which gave us into their hands.

† Heb. Moiſt. Pſal. 68. 6.

12. Thou haſt cauſed men s to ride over our heads t; we went through fire, and through water u; but thou broughteſt us out into a † wealthy place x.

s Weak and mortal, and miſerable Men, as the word ſignifies, no better nor ſtronger than we, if thou hadſt not given them power over us. t To ride upon our Shoulders. By thy permiſſion they have uſed us like Slaves, yea like Beaſts, to carry their Perſons or Burdens. Compare Iſa. 51. 23. u (i.e.) Through various and dangerous Tryals, and Calamities. See Pſal. 32. 6 and 69. 2. Ezek. 15. 7. and 30. 8. x Heb. Into a moiſt, or Well-watered place, ſuch as Canaan was, both in a proper ſence, and figuratively, as being repleniſhed with divine Graces and Bleſſings.

13. I will go y into thy houſe with burnt-offerings: I will pay thee my vows.

y Hitherto he ſpoke in the plural Number, but now he begins to ſpeak in the ſingular Number, but ſtill the Speech is continued of the ſame Perſon or Perſons: only ſometimes the whole Body ſpeaks; and ſometimes one Man ſpeaks in the Name of all the reſt.

† Heb. opened.

14. Which my lips have † uttered, and my mouth hath ſpoken when I was in trouble.

† Heb. make. † Heb. marrow.

15. I will † offer unto thee burnt-ſacrifices of † fatlings, with the incenſe of rams z: I will offer bullocks with goats, Selah.

z With the fat of Rams, which in theſe Peace-offerings was burnt upon the Altar, and ſo vaniſhed into Smoak like Incenſe, and which is no leſs pleaſing to God than Incenſe.

16. Come and hear all ye that fear God a, and a Whether Iſraelites or Gentiles proſelyted to them. Let every Iſraelite take notice of what God hath done for the Nation in general, and let the Gentiles obſerve God's goodneſs to the Children of Iſrael. b Which he hath held in Life, as he ſaid v. 9. in the greateſt dangers of Death.

I will declare what he hath done for my ſoul b.

17. I cried unto him with my mouth c, and he was extolled d with my tongue.

c With a loud Voice and great Fervency: Or it is a Pleonaſm, as Pſal. 44. 1. We have heard with our Ears. d (i. e.) Praiſed by me; to wit, for anſwering my Prayers.

* Prov. 28. 9. Iſa. 1. 15. Joh. 9. 31. Jam. 4. 3. † Heb. ſee.

18. If * I † regard e iniquity f in my heart g, the LORD will not hear me h.

e Heb. If I have or had ſeen, or looked upon, to wit, with approbation and affection, as Job 31. 26. Hab. 1. 13. Men look upon what they like, and turn away their face from what they loath or hate. f Any ſin whatſoever, and eſpecially Idolatry, which is oft expreſſed by this word, to which the Iſraelites were very prone, and to which they had moſt powerful Temptations from the Examples, and Counſels, and Promiſes, and Threats of the Idolaters, in whoſe Land and Power they had been. And ſo this is a purgation of themſelves from that Crime, ſomewhat like that Pſal. 44. 20, 21. and in general, from thoſe groſs and reigning ſins, whereof they had been guilty formerly. g If my Heart was falſe to God, and did cleave to Idols, or to any Wickedneſs, although I might for ſome prudential Reaſons forbear the groſs and outward Acts. Compare Pſal. 44. 17, 18. If I had been guilty of that Hypocriſie, wherewith mine Enemies charged me, and had been a ſecret Favourer of Wickedneſs when I pretended great Piety. Or, If I did not cry unto God with my Heart, but only howled for Corn and Wine, &c. and whilſt I cried to God with my Tongue, my Heart was ſet upon ſin, or I deſired only that which I reſolved in mine Heart, to ſpend upon my Luſts. h Or, Would not have heard me; as divers learned Interpreters tranſlate it, the Future being put Potentially, as is uſual among the Hebrews. For God heareth not ſinners, Joh. 9. 31. nor Hypocrites, Job 27. 8, 9. Prov. 15. 29.

19. But verily God hath heard me i, he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.

i Which is a publick Vindication, and a divine Teſtimony of my Integrity, againſt all my falſe Accuſers.

20. Bleſſed be God, which hath not turned away k my prayer, nor his mercy l from me.

k Or, rejected or removed, to wit, from his ſight and audience, but hath received and granted it. l Though he had now aſſerted his own Innocency, and ſincere Piety, yet he imputeth not God's hearing of his Prayers to that, but ſolely unto God's Grace and Mercy.

PSAL. LXVII.

To the chief muſician on Neginoth, a Pſalm or Song.

This Pſalm contains a Prayer for the Church of Iſrael, as alſo for the Gentile-World, whoſe Converſion he Prophetically deſcribes.

* Pſal. 4. 6. † Heb with us.

1. GOd be merciful unto us a, and bleſs us, and * cauſe his face to ſhine † upon us b, Selah.

a Thy People of Iſrael. b As thou haſt hid thy Face and Favour from us, ſo now do thou manifeſt it to us. For the phraſe ſee Numb. 6. 25, 26. Pſal. 31. 16.

2. That thy way may be known upon earth c, thy ſaving health among all nations.

c Nor do we deſire this Mercy only for our Comfort, but alſo for the advancement of thy Glory, and the propagation of the true Religion among all Nations, who by the contemplation of thy gracious and wonderful Works, to and for us, will be induced to love and ſerve thee, and to liſt themſelves among thy People. By God's way he underſtands; Either, 1. That way wherein God walks; or the manner of his dealing with his People, how gracious and bountiful a Maſter thou art to all thy Servants. Or rather, 2. That way wherein God requires Men to walk, the way of God's Precepts, the way of Truth, or the true Religion; as the way or ways of the Lord, are frequently taken, Gen. 18. 19. Judg. 2. 22. Pſal. 18. 21. and 119 1. Act. 18. 25, 26, &c. the ſame which in the next Clauſe is called his Saving Health, Heb. Salvation, and both together ſignifie the way of Salvation, which the Pſalmiſt deſires may be known among all Nations; which was expected by the ancient and godly Jews, at the coming of the Meſſias, who is called the Way, Joh. 14. 6. and God's Salvation, Luk. 2 30. And ſo the ſence of the place is this, deal ſo graciouſly with thy People Iſrael, that thereby the Gentile-World may at laſt be allured to joyn themſelves with them, and to embrace their Religion and Meſſias, according to that famous Prophecy, Zech. 8. 23. In thoſe days ten Men——out of all——Nations——ſhall take hold of the skirt of——a Jew; ſaying, We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you.

3. Let the people praiſe thee, O God, let all the people praiſe thee d.

d O haſten that time, when all the Gentiles ſhall forſake their dumb Idols, and ſerve and praiſe thee the living God, as they will have abundant cauſe to do.

4. O let the nations be glad and ſing for joy e, for thou ſhalt judg f the people righteouſly g, and † govern h the nations upon earth, Selah. † Heb. Lead.

e For thy tranſcendent Mercy to them, in reſcuing them from the Vanities and damnable Errors of their Fathers, and in bringing them to the knowledge of the true God, and of eternal Life. f (i. e.) Rule and govern them, as it is explained in the next Clauſe, and as this Phraſe is uſed. g Which is the great Commendation of any Government, and the greateſt Argument and Encouragement to the Gentiles, to put themſelves under it the rather; becauſe they had found the miſery of living under the unrighteous and tyrannical Government of the Devil, and of their idolatrous and heatheniſh Rulers. h Heb. lead; to wit, gently, as a Shepherd doth his Sheep; and not rule them with Rigour, as other Lords had done.

5. Let the people praiſe thee, O God, let all the people praiſe thee.

6. * Then ſhall the earth yield her increaſe i, and God, even our own God k ſhall bleſs us. * Pſal. 85. 12.

i When the People of the Earth ſhall be converted to the Worſhip and Service of the true God, God will take away his Curſe from the Earth, and cauſe it to yield them abundance of all ſorts of Fruits. Under which one Bleſſing, promiſed under the Law, to them that obey God, all other Bleſſings both Temporal and Spiritual are comprehended, as is very uſual in the Old Teſtament. k He who is Iſrael's God in a peculiar manner, by that everlaſting Covenant which he hath made with us.

7. God ſhall bleſs us, and all the ends of the earth ſhall fear him.

PSAL. LXVIII.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm or Song of David.

The occaſion of this Pſalm ſeems to have been David's Tranſlation of the Ark to Zion, which was managed with great Solemnity and Devotion, and celebrated with ſome Pſalms, and this among the reſt. For the firſt words are the very ſame which Moſes appointed for ſuch occaſions, Numb. 10. 35. and the following Verſes purſue the ſame Matter with the firſt. Thence he falls into a Deſcription of ſome of the excellent Properties and glorious Works of the God to whom this Ark belonged. But becauſe David very well knew that both himſelf and the Ark were Types of Chriſt, and that the Church and People of Iſrael were a Type of the Catholick Church, conſiſting of Jews and Gentiles, and that the legal Adminiſtrations and Actions were Types of thoſe of the Goſpel, he therefore by the Spirit of Prophecy, looked thorough and beyond the preſent Actions and Types, unto the great Myſteries of Chriſt's Reſurrection and Aſcenſion into Heaven, and of the ſpecial Priviledges of the Chriſtian Church, and of the Converſion of the Gentiles unto God, and therefore intermixeth ſome Paſſages, which directly and immediately belong to theſe things, although the words be ſo ordered, that they carry a manifeſt alluſion to the preſent Actions, and may in ſome ſort be applied to them, though in a more obſcure and improper and ſecundary ſenſe. Nor is it at all ſtrange, that in the ſame Pſalm there is ſuch a mixture of things, whereof ſome belong only to the Actions or Events of that time, and ſome only to Chriſt, and the Goſpel times; if it be conſidered, that the Pſalmiſt in himſelf doth frequently expreſs divers, and thoſe contrary Paſſions and Diſpoſitions, as Hope and Fear, &c. in the ſame Pſalm, and ſometimes in the ſame Verſe, and eſpecially that the ſacred Pen-Men in the compoſition of theſe Writings, were wholly Men inſpired and governed, and moved by the Holy Ghoſt, 2 Pet. 1. 21. by whom they were variouſly tranſported, as he ſaw fit, and ſometimes carried away to ſpeak of the higheſt Myſteries of the Goſpel, even ſuch things as they themſelves did not fully underſtand, as appears from 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11.

1. LEt * God ariſe a, let his enemies be ſcattered: let them alſo that hate him b flee, † before him. * Numb. 10. 35 † Heb. from his face a O that God would ariſe from his Seat, and beſtir himſelf, and go forth to fight with his Enemies, who, if he do ſo, will eaſily and ſuddenly be ſcattered. Or, God will ariſe. And ſo the other Verbs following may be rendred, as being of the Future

ture Tenſe: Shall be ſcattered, ſhall flee, &c. Although the Futures are frequently rendred Imperatively; and ſo they are truly rendred, *Numb.*10.35. whence this Verſe is taken. b All God's Enemies are here ſaid to hate God, not directly and formally, for there are few ſuch Perſons, but becauſe they hate his Laws and Government, and his People and Image, and becauſe they fight againſt him and his, which is juſtly taken for an evidence of Hatred.

2. As ſmoke is driven away c, ſo drive them away; as wax melteth before the fire, ſo let the wicked periſh at the preſence of God.

c As ſmoke at firſt mounts high, and fills a great ſpace of Air, but ſpeedily vaniſheth into Air, or is diſperſed with the Wind.

† Heb. rejoyce with Gladneſs.

3. But let the righteous be glad, let them rejoyce before God, yea, let them † exceedingly rejoyce d.

d For God's gracious appearance on their behalf, and for his ſettled Preſence with them.

‖ Or, prepare the way for him. So Gr.

4. Sing unto God, ſing praiſes to his name: ‖ extol him e that rideth upon the heavens f by his name IAH g, and rejoyce before him h.

e By praiſing him, of which this Verb is uſed, *Prov.*4. 8. Or rather, raiſe up or prepare the way for him; for ſo this word is commonly uſed, as *Iſa.*57.14. and 62.10. and elſewhere. And this doubtleſs they did for this Solemnity of bringing the Ark to Zion. Comp. *Iſa.*40. 3. f Which Phraſe is uſed below, v.33. though in differing words. Or, that did ride in the Deſart, where the Ark was carried, and God marched along with it in the cloudy Pillar. Or, that now rideth as (which Particle is frequently underſtood) in the Deſart, (i.e.) That is now carried from place to place, as it was in the Deſart. The word here rendred Heavens, doth generally ſignifie the Deſart or plain Fields, as *Numb.*33. 48.50. and 36.13. *Joſ.*5. 10. 2 *Sam.*4. 7. *Iſa.*40.3. compared with *Luk.*3.4. g Whereby he is known and diſtinguiſhed from all falſe gods. For Jah is generally conceived to be an abbreviature of the Name Jehovah, which the Heathens pronounced Jao. h Before the Ark where he is preſent, as David himſelf is ſaid to dance before the Lord, upon this occaſion, 2 Sam. 6. 14.

* Pſal.146.9. Jer.49.11.

5. * A father of the fatherleſs, and a judge of the widows i, is God in his holy habitation i.

i He now enters upon ſome of the Matters or Reaſons, for which God is to be extolled: Whereof this is one, that he is the Patron of ſuch as are injured and oppreſſed, and have not power to help themſelves. i Either in his Tabernacle: Or in Heaven. Though he dwells there, yet the Eyes of his fatherly Providence and Care run to and fro, to help his People when they are diſtreſſed.

* Pſal.113. 9. † Heb. in a Houſe. * Pſal.107.10. & 146. 7. * Pſal.107.34.

6. * God ſetteth the ſolitary † in families k: he * bringeth out thoſe which are bound with chains l, but * the rebellious m dwell in a dry land n.

k Such as are ſingle and ſolitary, he bleſſeth with a Wife and Children, as he did Abraham. Houſes are oft put for Poſterity, as *Exod.*1.21. Ruth 4.11. 2 *Sam.*7.11. l He ſetteth Captives and Priſoners at liberty, as he did the Iſraelites, &c. m Thoſe who rebel againſt God, as the Egyptians did. n Are deprived of all true Comfort, and plagued with manifold Calamities.

7. O God, when thou wenteſt forth before thy people o, when thou didſt march through the wilderneſs, Selah.

o In the cloudy Pillar, as their Captain leading them out of Egypt.

* Exod.19.18. Judg.5.4. Iſa.64.1,3.

* 8. The earth p ſhook, the heavens alſo dropped q at the preſence of God, even Sinai it ſelf was moved r at the preſence of God, the God of Iſrael.

p Either, 1. Metonymically, the Inhabitants of thoſe parts of the Earth, by comparing *Exod.*15.14. Or, 2. Properly, by comparing *Pſal.*114.5,6,7. There was a great Earthquake, as a token of God's dreadful Preſence. q (i.e.) Poured down great Showers, which accompanied thoſe mighty Thunders, as uſually it doth. r Or, dropped; which may be repeated out of the former Clauſe, was even melted or diſſolved with Fear. It is a poetical Repreſentation of the terribleneſs of God's appearance.

† Heb. ſhake or. † Heb. confirm it.

9. Thou, O God, didſt † ſend a plentiful rain s, whereby thou didſt † confirm t thine inheritance u, when it was weary x.

s Either, 1. In the Wilderneſs; where they oft wanted Water, and were by God's extraordinary care ſupplied with it. Or rather, 2. in the Land of Canaan, which he calls God's Inheritance in the next words; as alſo *Exod.*15.17. and in many other places of Scripture, in which God's people are ſaid to dwell in the next Verſe, of which, and the things done in it, he ſpeaks in the following Verſes, and which, being deſtitute of thoſe conſtant ſupplies, from the overflowings of a great River, which Egypt enjoyed, God took a ſpecial care to ſupply with Rain, as occaſion required; of which ſee *Deut.*11.10,11. t Or, ſtabliſh, or ſupport, or ſuſtain. u Either thy People: Or rather thy Land, as was now ſaid. x Dry and thirſty, and parched with exceſſive heat, and ready to faint for want of Rain; Compare Pſal. 63. 1.

10. Thy congregation y hath dwelt therein: thou, O God, haſt prepared z of thy goodneſs a for the poor b.

y Thy People of Iſrael, who are all united into one Body, under thee their Head and Governour. For though this word commonly ſignifies Living Creatures, yet ſometimes it ſignifies a Company of Men, as here below, v.31. and 2 *Sam.*23.13. compared with 1 *Chron.*11.15. and *Pſal.*74.19. Or, the proper ſignification of the word may be retained, and it may be rendred, thy Flock: For God oft compares himſelf to a Shepherd, and his People to Sheep, and particularly, he is ſaid to have led his People like a Flock, by the hand of Moſes and Aaron, *Pſal.*77.20. To wit, in the Wilderneſs: and conſequently he may be here ſaid to have brought his Sheep into, and made them to dwell in Canaan, as in a green and good Paſture, as God ſpeaks of his People under this very Metaphor, *Pſal.*23.2. z Or, prepared it, which Pronoun is oft underſtood, and here moſt eaſily out of the foregoing Clauſe of this Verſe, where it is expreſſed: Prepared it, to wit, this Land for the uſe of thy People: which God did many ways; Partly, by deſigning it for them, and expelling the old Inhabitants, to make way for them; and Partly, by furniſhing it with all ſorts of Proviſions, both for neceſſity and delight, and making it fruitful by his ſpecial Bleſſing, in giving Rain in its proper Seaſons. a By thy free and ſingular Goodneſs. Which may be referred both to the Cauſe of this Preparation, God did it not for their Righteouſneſs or Worthineſs, but out of his meer Mercy, as God oft telleth them; and to the Manner and Meaſure of it, God did wonderfully increaſe the Fruits of it, that it might ſuffice for the ſupply of ſuch a numerous People; which without his extraordinary Bleſſing it would not do, as appears by the ſtate of that Land at this day, as it is reported by Travellers and Eye-Witneſſes of it. b To wit, for thy People of Iſrael, whom he here calls Poor; Partly, to repreſs that Pride and Arrogance, to which they are exceeding prone; and to mind them of the Dependance upon God, for all that they have and hope for: and Partly, becauſe they really were, when God undertook the Conduct of them into Canaan, a very poor and beggarly People, and ſo they would have ſtill been, if God had not provided for them in a ſingular manner.

11. The Lord gave the word c, great was the † company of thoſe that publiſhed it d. † Heb. Army.

c (i.e.) The matter of the word or diſcourſe here following. He puts this triumphant Song into their mouths; he gave his people all thoſe ſucceſſes and victories, which are here celebrated. Or, gave the matter or thing, which was publiſhed. d The works of God on the behalf of his people, were ſo glorious and wonderful, that all ſorts of perſons, both men and women, that heard of them, broke forth into Songs of Praiſe to God for them. The Hebrew word is of the Feminine Gender, becauſe it was the manner of the Hebrews, that when the men returned victorious from the Battel, the women went out to meet them with Songs of Triumph, Exod. 15. 20. Judg. 11. 34. 1 Sam. 18. 6.

12. Kings of armies e † did flee apace: and ſhe that tarried at home divided the ſpoil f. † Heb. did flee, did flee.

e The Kings of Canaan, and other Nations which came forth againſt the Iſraelites, accompanied with great and numerous Armies. f The ſpoil was ſo much, that there was enough, not only for the proper uſe of thoſe who took it, but alſo to be divided to their Wives and Children, when they came home. This verſe, and that which follows, may be taken, either, 1. For the triumphant Song ſung by thoſe Publiſhers mentioned v. 11. Or, 2. For the words of David, continuing the relation of the Victories granted by God to Iſrael over their Enemies.

13. Though ye g have lien among ‖ the pots h, yet ſhall ye be i as the wings of a dove covered with ſilver, and her feathers with yellow gold k. ‖ Or, Ranges.
